IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Act of June 18, 1910, amending the long-and-short-haul clause is not unconstitutional as being a delegation to the Commission of legislative powers which Congress was incompetent to make. United States v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 Sup. Ct. 986, 991; 234 U. S. 476; 58 L. ed.—

(b) That the long-and-short-haul clause imposes upon the Commission in a proper case the duty of refusing an application for relief from the rule, does not render the statute void on the ground that in such a contingency the statute would amount to an imperative enforcement of the clause; for a general enforcement of the clause would not be repugnant to the constitution. United States v, A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 Sup. Ct. 986, 992; 234 U. S. 476; 58 L. ed.—

§2. Jurisdiction of Commission.

See Jurisdiction of commission.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Judgment of carriers in respect to circumstances and conditions is not final and is subject to authority of the Commission and of the courts to decide whether error has been committed or statute violated. Re Southern R. & S. Asso. 1 I. C. R. 278.

(aa). While the Act authorizes the Commission to permit exceptions, it does not authorize it to require exceptions. Thatcher v. Fitchberg R. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 356.

(b) Goods shipped from Cincinnati, Ohio, to points in the State of Georgia are interstate traffic and all the roads forming a part of the line over which such goods are carried to their destination are engaged in interstate commerce and are subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce. Where two or more roads forming a continuous connecting line between points in different states bill and carry interstate traffic through to certain stations on the last road forming such line, neither the roads together nor any one of them can evade the obligations of the fourth section of said Act by declaring that as to such traffic destined to such stations on such terminal road it is a local carrier. James & Mayer Bugg Co. v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 682.

(c) It is within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission to consider whether a railroad company transporting interstate freight and charging a higher rate for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction, is doing it under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (U. S. Sup.) 5 I. C. R. 391.

(d) The Supreme Court of the United States, while denying power in the Interstate Commerce Commission to enforce the provision of section 1 of the Act to Regulate Commerce,—namely, that all rate charges "shall be reasonable and just,"—by orders prescribing reasonable maximum rates, expressly recognizes the authority and duty of the Commission to enforce sections 2, 3, and 4 of the Act. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 167 U. S. 506, 42 L. ed. 256. Phillips, Bailey & Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 93.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) The construction formerly given section 4 by the Supreme Court, did not prove efficacious in correcting the evils sought to be corrected by it, so Congress under the 1910 amendment laid an absolute inhibition upon a departure from the long-and-short haul rule, except in special cases authorized by the Commission. Green v. A. & V. R. R. Co., 43 I. C. C. 662, 677.

(f) Section 15 of the Act empowers this Commission either on complaint or on its own initiative, without complaint, to establish through routes and joint rates and classifications. In view of these broad powers it is hardly conceivable that the Congress could have intended that the fourth section of the Act should be so construed and administered as to preclude relief unless all of the carriers parties to the through route involved were voluntary parties to the application requesting relief. Such construction would make unworkable and defeat the purposes of the amendment and is at variance with the broad discretion vested in the Commission and the prevailing practice of administrative tribunals. Proportional Rates to Gulf Ports for Export, 44 I. C. C. 543, 546.

(g) The Commission's administrative power under the fourth section is in some respects narrower than before its amendment by the transportation act, 1920. Observance is required of certain administrative rules which the Commission was enforcing prior to the amendment, but which in some measure lay within its sound discretion to modify or change. The Commission is now also required to accord due observance to section 500 of the transportation act, which indicates the purpose of Congress to foster and preserve rail and water transportation. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 71.

(h) The provisions of the fourth section apply where the point of origin is in an adjacent foreign country and the intermediate point and more distant point of destination are in the United States. United Paperboard Co. v. C. N. Rys., 74 I. C. C., 733, 736.

(i) After a long-and-short-haul departure is removed, it may not be lawfully restored without the special authority of the Commission, even though the departure was in existence when the fourth section was amended. Conf. Rulings 395 and 406. Intermediate Application of Class Rates, 77 I. C. C. 427, 430.

(j) Jurisdiction of Commission over intrastate rates subsequent to Federal control is prescribed by sections 3 and 13 of the act. The Commission has no authority to pass upon measure of such rates except where they are shown to be prejudicial to interstate commerce, and long-and-short-haul provision of section 4 does not apply thereto. Producers Refining Co. v. M., K. & T. Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 339, 340.

(ja) Contention that long-and-short-haul provision of section 4 of the act, as amended, denies the commission authority to grant relief "under any conditions where distances from intermediate points are not greater than short-line distances from competitive point," and that commission has so construed the statute, not sustained, following Murfreesboro Board of Trade, 55 I. C. C. 648, 73 I. C. C. 228, and Memphis Southwestern Investigation 80 I. C. C. 157. Owensboro Chamber of Commerce v. L. H. & St. L. Ry. Co. 81 I. C. C. 145, 150, 151.

(jb) Included in the fourth section of the act is a mandate that "the commission shall not permit establishment of any charge to or from more distant point that is not reasonably compensatory for services performed." Comodity Rates from Jacksonville to Miami, 83 I. C. C. 207, 210.

(k) Section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act makes it unlawful for a carrier to charge a higher rate for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line or route in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, provided, however, that upon application to the Interstate Commerce Commission the carrier may in special cases, after investigation, be authorized to charge less for longer than for shorter distances. Shortly prior to the amendment the Commission ordered certain changes in west-bound rates to points in Nevada, and thereafter transcontinental carriers made applications for authority to continue the practice of making commodity rates to the Pacific Coast lower than to Nevada points. Sacramento, Stockton, San Jose, and Santa Clara had long been designated as Pacific Coast terminals, and the applications did not propose to disturb the terminal or short haul rates to these points, and at no time in the ensuing proceedings did they ask the Commission to suspend the long and short haul clause with respect to these points; but the Commission removed these points from the class of Pacific Coast terminals and increased the west-bound rates to those points above the rates to San Francisco and other ports of call of steamship lines. HELD, that the Commission had no power to suspend the long and short haul clause in this respect without an application being made to it by the carriers for that purpose and a hearing upon that particular application as in a special case, and the order to that extent was therefore void. Merchants' & Manuf. Traffic Assn. v. United States, 213 Fed. 292.

(l) General Order No. 28 of the Interstate Commerce Commission authorizing a general increase in rates, and permitting carriers to violate the long and short haul clause in so far as necessary to permit the increase to go into effect, merely permitted such violation in cases where the greater charge for the shorter haul had been previously authorized, and did not legalize a continued violation by the carrier, which had previously violated Interstate Commerce Act, § 4, as amended. Davis v. Parrington, 281 Fed. 10.

(m) An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission relieving carriers in certain respects from the operation of the long-and-short-haul clause need not be based upon an application asking only the precise relief granted; and such an order is, therefore, not invalid because the carriers asked leave to charge on west-bound transcontinental freight to a number of coast and interior points much less than to intermountain territory, and the Commission, while permitting them to charge to ports of call as much less as the application requested, as to the other points, which were interior cities, permitted the carriers to charge only somewhat less, since such amended section not only empowers the Commission "upon application" to authorize a carrier "to charge" less for longer than for shorter distances, but empowers the Commission to prescribe from time to time the extent to which the designated carriers may be relieved from the operation of such section. U. S. v. Merchants' & M. Traffic Asso., 37 Sup. Ct. 24, 242 U. S. 178, 61 L. Ed. 233.

II. SECTION 4 AS AMENDED.

§2½. Construction in general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The phrase "under substantially similar circumstances," in the fourth section, is used in the same sense as in the second section; and under the qualified form of the prohibition in the fourth section carriers are required to judge in the first instance with regard to the similarity or dissimilarity of the circumstances and conditions that forbid or permit a greater charge for a shorter distance. Re Southern Ry. & S. S. Asso. v. 1 I. C. R. 278.

(b) The prohibition in the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act against a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, as qualified therein, is limited to cases in which the circumstances and conditions are substantially similar. Re Southern Ry. & S. S. Asso. v. 1 I. C. R. 278.

(c) The words "substantially similar circumstances and conditions" as found in the second and fourth sections of the Act to Regulate Commerce, in certain important particulars define the rights and duties of carriers and the rights of shippers as well. For example: if the carrier claims to act under the compulsion of circumstances and conditions of his own creation or connivance in the making of an exceptional rate, then these will not avail him; or if the carrier claims to act under a compulsion of circumstances and conditions in the making of an exceptional rate which he could obviate by reasonably fair and just exertion on his part, then they will not avail him. But if the carrier is in good faith acting under a compulsion of circumstances and conditions beyond his control, not of his own connivance, and which he could not obviate by any reasonably fair and just effort on his part, and to avoid large loss adopts exceptional rates on a portion of his line, not unreasonable in themselves, and forced upon him by the action of an independent state railroad, which is not subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce, and which is operating a slightly shorter and competing line with his own, these are circumstances and conditions under the operation of the statute which justify him in adopting such exceptional rates thus forced upon him on this portion of his line. Business Men's Asso. v. Cg. St. P. M. & O. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 41.

(d) The fourth section does not apply where the circumstances are dissimilar: first, competition with water carriers not subject to the act; second: competition with railroads in foreign countries or situated wholly within a single state, and not subject to the act; third, special and peculiar cases of competition between carriers which were subject to the act. Matter of alleged violations of the fourth section of the act by the Santa Fe, 7 I. C. C. 61, 63.

(e) Section four of the act applies when the traffic is over the same line and in the same direction and to transportation under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, and the shorter must be included within the longer distance; and any injustice or undue hardship which may result to carriers from compliance with the statute is removable by the Commission upon application by such carriers under the procedure authorized by the proviso clause of that section. Fewell v. R. & D. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 354, 374.

(f) The higher rate for the shorter distance point is not of itself a violation of the fourth section of the act, but only becomes such when the circumstances and conditions of the long and short hauls are similar. Rock Hill Buggy Co. v. Southern Ry., 11 I. C. C. 229, 233.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) The principal change in the law resulting from the amendment of 1910 is to the effect that carriers may not upon their own initiative (and before determination by the Commission upon proper application) deviate from the long-and-short-haul rule of section 4; that is, under the present law they must first have a determination of the question by the Commission upon its merits, whereas, prior to the amendment of 1910, they could act upon their own judgment and initiative, their action being subject to subsequent investigation and determination by the Commission. There is nothing to be found in the amendment or elsewhere in the law which justifies the Commission permitting the establishment, or after full hearing the continuance, of a rate unreasonable under the first section, or unduly discriminatory under the third or fourth sections. Rates on Boots and Shoes from Boston, Mass., 31 I. C. C. 154, 157.

(h) Section 4 of the amended act provides that when a rail carrier in competition with a water carrier shall reduce its rates to or from a competitive point, it shall not be permitted to increase such rate unless after hearing by the Commission it shall be found that such increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition. But that clause is a part of the amendment of June 18, 1910, and it applies only to rates reduced subsequent to that date. And in determining the reasonableness of a rate increased or sought to be increased which was reduced prior to that date, the Commission may consider conditions existing without regard to whether or not they are "changed conditions" as compared with the conditions when the rates were reduced. Westbound Lake and Rail Knit Goods Commodity Rates, 32 I. C. C. 54, 57.

(i) Section 4 must be construed in the light of other sections and in view also of the purpose and intent of this particular section. Reopening Fourth Section Applications, 40 I. C. C. 35, 40.

(j) The fourth section of the act to regulate commerce does not apply to intrastate shipments. Alaska Junk Co. v. Director General, 68 I. C. C. 615, 616.

(k) Interpretation of the amended fourth section of the act holding that a "reasonable compensatory" rate can not be less than a rate which, if imposed by a regulatory tribunal, would be adjudged nonconfiscatory, can not be accepted by the Commission. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 68, 69.

(l) In section 500 of the transportation act, it is expressly declared the policy of Congress to foster and preserve in full vigor both rail and water transportation. The Commission thinks the amendment was the Congress way of saying that it should follow a less liberal policy in dealing with departures from the long and short haul rule than had been followed in former years. The administrative power of the Commission at this time is in more respects narrower than before the amendment. The fourth section, as amended, requires the observance by the Commission of certain administrative rules which it was enforcing prior to the amendment, but which in some measure lay within its sound judgment to modify or change. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 70.

(m) The Commission does not agree with contention that the fourth section has not been changed in substance by the amendments in the transportation act, 1920. The amendment has made mandatory what theretofore rested in the commission's sound discretion as to compensation for the service performed to the more distant point, as to circuity, and as to potential water competition. Moreover, section 500 of the transportation act, 1920, wherein it is declared the policy of Congress to foster and preserve rail and water transportation, was Congress's way of saying that the commission should follow a less liberal policy in dealing with departures from the long-and-short-haul rule than had been followed in former years. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 70.

(n) The criterion of a reasonably compensatory rate under the amended fourth section of the act, summarized in the formula "out-of-pocket-expenses-plus-some-profit," rejected by the Commission as insufficient, standing alone. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 70.

(o) In the administration of the fourth section the words "reasonably compensatory" imply that a rate properly so described must cover and more than cover the extra or additional expenses incurred in handling the traffic to which it applies; be no lower than necessary to meet existing competition; not be so low as to threaten the extinction of legitimate competition by water carriers; and not impose an undue burden on other traffic or jeopardize the appropriate return on the value of carrier property generally, as contemplated by section 15a of the act. Where carriers apply for relief from the long and short haul clause of the fourth section and propose the application of rates which they designate as "reasonably compensatory" they should affirmatively show that the rates proposed conform to the criteria indicated above. It goes without saying that carriers should not propose rates or rate structures for approval in a fourth section application which create infractions of other provisions of the act, and particularly of section 3. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 71.

(p) The Commission's administrative power under the fourth section is in some respects narrower than before its amendment by the transportation act, 1920. Observance is required of certain administrative rules which the Commission was enforcing prior to the amendment, but which in some measure lay within its sound discretion to modify or change. The Commission is now also required to accord due observance to section 500 of the transportation act, which indicates the purpose of Congress to foster and preserve rail and water transportation. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 70, 71.

(q) It would be a vain thing to find a technical violation of the fourth section of the act and immediately enter an order relieving the carrier from the necessity of observing the section, and thus altering in no respect the existing status. Fares between New York and points west of Newark, 74 I. C. C. 516, 520.

(r) Relief from the provisions of the fourth section would be given in situations of the kind disclosed only where the evidence is clear that the lower rate to the more distant point is actually required by conditions at that point beyond the control of the petitioning carriers and the rate required is actually subnormal. Wrought Iron Pipe and Iron Pipe Fittings from and to points in the southwest. 81 I. C. C. 691, 694.

(s) The words "reasonably compensatory" imply that a rate properly so described must (1) cover and more than cover the extra or additional expenses incurred in handling the traffic to which it applies; (2) be no lower than necessary to meet existing competition; (3) not be so low as to threaten the extinction of legitimate competition by water carriers; (4) not impose an undue burden on other traffic or jeopardize the appropriate return on the value of carrier property generally, as contemplated in section 15a of the act. It may be added that rates of this character ought, wherever possible, bear some relation to the value of the commodity carried and the value of the service rendered in connection therewith. Where carriers apply for relief from the long and short haul clause of the fourth section and propose the application of rates which they designate as "reasonably compensatory" they should affirmatively show that the rates proposed conform to the criteria indicated above. Wrought Iron Pipes and Iron Pipe Fittings from and to points in the southwest. 81 I. C. C. 691, 696.

(t) Section four of the Act as amended provides that in exercising the authority conferred upon the Commission to grant relief from its provisions the Commission shall not permit the establishment of any charge to or from the more distant point that is not reasonably compensatory for the service performed. Wrought Iron Pipe and Iron Pipe Fittings from and to points in the southwest. 81 I. C. C. 691, 696.

(u) Included in the fourth section is a mandate that the Commission shall not permit the establishment of any charge to or from the more distant point that is not reasonably compensatory for the services performed. Commodity Rates from Jacksonville to Miami. 83 I. C. C. 207, 210.

(v) Since the amendment of Interstate Commerce Act, § 4, by Act June 18, 1910, a carrier no longer has the right as it did prior thereto to determine in the first instance whether a dissimilarity in conditions justifies the charge of a greater rate for a shorter haul than for a longer haul over the same route, but any such charge is illegal, unless the Commission has previously made an order consenting to the higher rate to the intermediate point. Davis v. Parrington, 281 Fed. 10.

(w) Under the long-and-short-haul clause of the 4th section, previous to 1910, the carier was permitted to judge primarily of competitive conditions and meet them at its election; though this power was primary, not absolute, since its exertion by the carrier was made the subject of both administrative control and ultimate judicial review. The amendment of June 18, 1910, stated no new rule or principle, but, by the elimination of the "substantially similar circumstances and conditions" clause, simply shifted the power conferred by the section as it originally stood. That is, it took from the carriers the deposit of public power previously lodged in them and vested it in the Commission as a primary instead of a reviewing function. Power in the carrier primarily to meet competitive conditions by charging a lesser rate for a longer than for a shorter haul, has ceased to exist. United States v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 Sup. Ct. 986, 990; 234 U. S. 476; 58 L. ed.

(a) Application made to the Commission by the Southern Ry. and Steamship Company for authority to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of property from and to Boston, Providence, New York City, etc., and points southerly therefrom. HELD, authority granted for a period of ninety days until the Commission is able to secure the facts surrounding the application. Re Southern Ry. & Steamship Association, 1 I. C. C. 15.

(b) Application of the Detroit Grand Haven & Milwaukee R. R., for relief from the long and short haul clause of section 4 on traffic across lake to Grand Haven, thence to Detroit and St. Clair. HELD, application granted for a period of ninety days until the facts may be disclosed to the Commission. Re Detroit Grand Haven & Milwaukee R. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. 17.

(c) The Commission is confined to entertaining and deciding applications presented to it under section 4 of the Act (the long and short haul section) for relief from the provisions of that section, and complaints under section 13, in relation to acts or omissions in contravention of the provisions of the Act. Re Order of Ry. Conductors v. 1 I. C. R. 18.

(d) Petition for exemption from the fourth section of the act (the long and short haul clause). HELD, the Commission will not grant a general suspension of the fourth section of the act to any road, but will give relief only as to the traffic between specified points. Re Richmond & Alleghany R. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. 22.

(e) The cases in which the Commission is authorized to make orders for suspension of operation of Act are exceptional. Jurisdiction of Commission, 1 I. C. R. 73.

(f) Petition of the Minneapolis and Northwestern Ry for a suspension of the fourth section of the act. HELD, the Act provides that suspension of the operation of the fourth section must come after investigation by the Commission and the Commission must consider in each case what effect the giving of relief will have upon all interests involved. Petition denied. Jurisdiction of the Commission, 1 I. C. C. 73.

(fa) Petition of the Minneapolis & Northwestern Ry. Co. for a suspension of the Fourth section. HELD, the Interstate Commerce law contemplates that the cases in which the Commission is authorized to make orders for suspension of its operation are exceptional cases, and that where only general reasons operate, the general law shall be left to its general course, however serious the consequences in particular cases. Any order for suspension must be based upon investigation. Incidental injuries under the act must be borne for the public good, until the Legislature provides a remedy. The mere probability that injury will result from the operation of the act will not authorize the Commission to direct a suspension. Jurisdiction of the Commission. 1 I. C. C. 73, 74.

(g) Mere probability that injury will result will not authorize Commission to direct suspension. Jurisdiction of Commission, 1 I. C. R. 73.

(h) The Interstate Commerce Law contemplates that the cases in which the Commission is authorized to make orders for suspension of its operation are exceptional cases, and that where only general reasons operate, the general law shall be left to its general course, however serious the consequences in particular cases. Jurisdiction of the Commission v. 1 I. C. R. 73.

(i) In the matter of the petitions of the L. & N. R. R., for relief under section four of the act. HELD, the order for temporary relief which was made in favor of petitioner, will be allowed to remain in force until the day originally limited for its expiration; and in the meantime its officers will have the opportunity to make thorough revision of its freight and passenger tariffs in order to bring them as nearly as may be into harmony with the general rule of the statute. Re Southern Ry. & Steamship Asso., 1 I. C. C. 278.

(ia) In the matter of the petitions of the L. & N., R. R. Co., for relief under section 4 of the act. HELD, the prohibition in the fourth section of the Act against a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, as qualified therein, is limited to cases in which the circumstances and conditions are substantially similar. The phrase "under substantially similar circumstances" in the fourth section, is used in the same sense as in the second section; and under the qualified form of the prohibition in the fourth section carriers are required to judge in the first instance with regard to the similarity or dissimilarity of the circumstances and conditions that forbid or permit a greater charge for a shorter distance. The judgment of carriers in respect to the circumstances and conditions is not final, but is subject to the authority of the Commission and of the courts to decide whether error has been committed or whether the statute has been violated. And in case of complaint for violating the section of the act, the burden of proof is on the carrier to justify any departure from tion of the act, the burden of proof is on the general rule prescribed by the statute showing that the circumstances and conditions are substantially dissimilar. The provisions of section 1, requiring charges to be reasonable and just, and of section 2, forbidding unjust discrimination, apply when charges are made under section 4, as they do in other cases. The existence of actual competition which is of controlling force in respect to traffic important in amount, may make out dissimilar circumstances and conditions, entitling the carrier to charge less for the longer than for the shorter haul over the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer, in the following cases. When the competition is with carriers by water which are not subject to the provisions of the statute; When the competition is with foreign or other railroads which are not subject to the provisions of the statute. In rare and peculiar cases of competition between railroads which are subject to the statute, when a strict application of the general rule of the statute would be destructive of legitimate competition. When a greater charge in the aggregate is made for the transportation of passengers or the like kind of property for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer distance, it is not sufficient justification therefor that the traffic which is subjected to such greater charge is way or local traffic, and that which is given the more favorable rates is not. Nor is it sufficient justification for such greater charge that the short haul traffic is more expensive to the carrier, unless when the circumstances are such as to make it exceptionally expensive, or the long haul traffic exceptionally inexpensive, the difference being extraordinary and susceptible of definite proof. Nor that the lesser charge on the longer haul has for its motive the encouragement of manufactures or some other branch of industry; Nor that it is designed to build up business or trade centers; Nor that the lesser charge on the longer haul is merely continuation of the favorable rates under which trade centers or industrial establishments have been built up; The fact that long haul traffic will only bear certain rates is no reason for carrying it for less than cost at the expense of other traffic. Re Southern Railway & Steamship Association. 1 I. C. C. 278.

(j) A complaint, in effect asking from the Commission an order requiring defendant roads to receive freight at Schenectady for transportation to Boston, for rates less than are now charged by some roads for transportation of like freights to Boston from stations nearer Boston, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions must be dismissed. Thatcher v. Fitchburg R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 356.

(ja) While the act authorizes the Commission to permit exceptions, it does not authorize it to require exceptions. Thatcher v. Fitchberg R. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 356.

(k) The Act does not authorize the Commission to require exceptions. Thatcher v. Fitchburg R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 356.

(l) The complainant, the owner of a grain elevator at Schenectady, N. Y., ships grain from his elevator to Boston, over the roads of the defendant companies. Prior to the Act to Regulate Commerce, the defendants carried complainant's shipments at the proportion of through rates from Chicago to Boston allowed to the lines from Schenectady to Boston, but since the Act took effect they have refused to accept this proportion, on the ground that it would violate the fourth section of the Act, since the rates from other points nearer Boston than Schenectady is, are greater than such proportion would be. The complaint asks that the defendants be compelled to accept such proportion of the through rate. HELD, (a) That the complaint, in effect asks from the Commission an order that shall require the defendant roads to receive freights at Schenectady for transportation to Boston, at rates less than are now charged by the same roads for the transportation of like freights to Boston from stations nearer Boston, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. (b) That such order, if issued, would require the roads to depart from the general rule laid down in the fourth section of the Act. (c) That while the Act authorizes the Commission to permit exceptions, it does not authorize it to require exceptions. (d) That the Commission has not power to make rates generally, but only to determine whether rates imposed by the railroads are in conflict with the Statute. (e) That the question whether the rates now charged complainant are excessive is not raised by the complaint. (f) That the complaint must be dismissed. Ralph W. Thatcher v. Fitchburg R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 356.

(m) The right to make greater charges for short than for long hauls is exceptional and depends in every case upon the peculiar circumstances and conditions; and a ruling in reference thereto in the case of one carrier would not be applicable to another carrier differently circumstanced. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571

(n) Where relief granted in the form desired by petitioners might be understood as deciding that the circumstances prevailing in the district about Opelika are such as to justify making that town an exception under the fourth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce, as against the local stations about it, the Commission declined to enter such an order, because the question of the exceptional circumstances and conditions authorizing such an order was not presented by the petition or proofs, and the points that would be injuriously affected by such an order are not before the Commission, and have had no opportunity to be heard. Permission was granted to amend the petition so as to set out the facts on which complainants claim for themselves lower rates than are given to towns nearer Atlanta, Montgomery and Columbus. If such an amendment is made, notice will be given to the localities to be affected and a further hearing granted. If the general subject of freight rates from points in other States to the various points on the line of defendant's roads, including Opelika, is to be brought before the Commission, the petition may be so amended as to distinctly so state, that towns interested may be advised of the relief sought affecting their interests, but if complainants shall see fit to ask for a strict enforcement of the long and short haul clause as against Columbus and Montgomery, or either, an amendment of the petition must be made, and the towns now favored with the lower charges on the shorter hauls, given an opportunity for a hearing. Harwell v. Columbus & Western R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 631.

(o) Authority from the Interstate Commerce Commission is not necessary where the circumstances and conditions are substantially different, to enable a carrier lawfully to charge more for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, under the Interstate Commerce Act, § 4 (24 Stat. at L. 379), providing that it shall be unlawful to make such charge for transportation of passengers or like kind of property under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, but that the Commission may, after investigation, authorize a less charge for longer than shorter distances. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (C. C. S. D. Cal.), 4 I. C. R 323.

(p) "It is not necessary for a carrier to apply to the Interstate Commerce Commission for relief from "the long and short haul" clause of the Act to Regulate Commerce, when the circumstances and conditions are substantially dissimilar, since the carrier, in acting upon them, would commit no breach of the law, though it would be responsible in case it were found that the circumstances and conditions were misconceived, or misjudged." Case Quoted: 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 278, Re Louisville & N. R. Co. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 332.

(q) Complainant attacked rates from Memphis, Tenn., to Summerville, S. C., higher than from Memphis through Summerville to Charleston, S. C., as unjust and unreasonable. HELD, the law does not permit a violation of the fourth section simply because of competition of carriers subject to the act without permission of the Commission under a proper proceeding, defendants ordered to discontinue such violation. Belhmer v. M. & C. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 520.

(r) Upon application by carriers to be relieved from the operation of § 4 of the Act as to the transportation of grain and feed over their lines, on the ground that through failure of crops the people of the longer distance localities were in a measure destitute, and without necessary food for themselves and animals, a temporary order of relief was granted. Application of Fremont, Elkhorn, & M. V. R. Co., et al, 6 I. C. C. 293.

(s) A temporary order of relief was granted upon an application by carriers to be relieved from the operation of the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, as to the transportation of grain and feed over their lines, so as to charge less for certain longer than for shorter distances on the ground that through failure of crops the people of such longer distance localities were in a measure destitute and without necessary food for themselves and animals. Re Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 293.

(t) The Interstate Commerce Commission may, under the proviso of the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, determine, in the exercise of a reasonable and lawful discretion, the description or exceptional character of the "special cases" in which such Commission may, after investigation, authorize common carriers to charge less for longer than for shorter distances, and the extent to which they may be relieved from the operation of such section. Re Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 323.

(u) No general rule can be laid down to guide the Interstate Commerce Commission in determining whether such a "special case" exists within the proviso of the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, as will authorize the Commission in its discretion to permit a common carrier to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of passengers or property. Re Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 323.

(v) Under the proviso to the 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce it is left to the Commission, in the exercise of a reasonable and lawful discretion, to determine the description or exceptional character of the "special cases" in which the Commission may, after investigation, authorize common carriers to charge less for longer than for shorter distances, and the extent to which such carrier may be relieved from the operation of this section of the Act. Petition of Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 323.

(w) The exceptional and special nature of the cases in which the discretion of the Commission may be exercised as to relief from the fourth section, renders the application of any general rule impracticable, and every special case must be determined upon its own facts and special circumstances and in view of the objects for which the law was enacted. Petition of the C. H. & D. R. for relief from fourth section, 6 I. C. C. 323, 327.

(x) Competition by a carrier subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce and all matters relative thereto may be presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission for determination upon application of defendant carriers for relief from the operation of § 4, under the proviso contained therein. McClelen v. Southern R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 588.

(y) Under the fourth section a carrier is not justified in charging more for the shorter than the longer distance by competition at the longer distance point of other carriers which are themselves subject to the act, in the absence of authority from the Commission under the proviso clause of said section. Board of Trade of Lynchburg, Va. v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 6 I. C. C. 632, 645.

(z) No disturbance of rates, secret or open, creates such dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions under the Interstate Commerce Act, § 4, as will justify either of two or more competing carriers in charging more for the short than for the long haul without an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Re Alleged Violation of the 4th Section of the Act to Regulate Commerce, 7 I. C. C. 61.

(aa) American carriers will be temporarily relieved from the requirements of the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, that no higher rate shall be made to intermediate than to more distant points, to enable them to compete with a Canadian railway company which is not subject to the provisions of such Act, and which has greatly lowered the price charged for passengers traveling to and from the Klondike. Re Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 593.

(aaa) The defendants are justified in maintaining rates from the Pacific Coast which are lower to Missouri River points than to Denver upon rice, hemp, baking powder, blankets, books, boot and shoe heels, chocolate, cocoa, and extracts, as exceptions to the general rule that, in the making of trans-continental rates, Denver must receive the same treatment that is accorded to cities in the Middle West and Missouri River territory. Kindel v. Atchinson, T. & S. F. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 606.

(bb) The Congress intended to say by the new fourth section that as a general rule there should be no lesser charge to the more distant points, but it was not willing to say that there should not be some exceptions to this rule. The railroads, however, were not to make these exceptions themselves, Such exceptions were to be made only upon petition to the Commission upon public justification being shown. R. R. Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 335.

(cc) The more difficult labor of the Commission latterly has been to adjust difficulties as between communities, and it has as one guide in this respect the fourth section of the Act. Congress felt the old section to be inadequate; it substituted another; it cast the burden upon the carrier of establishing its right to an exception from the general rule which it lays down and to which it expects adherence—the shorter haul shall not be charged the higher rate. R. R. Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 337.

(dd) The test which the Commission must now apply to determine whether the carrier may be given the advantage of an exception to the general rule of section 4 as amended, is the same test that it may apply with respect to any other discrimination or inequality. There is incorporated in section 4 every standard set up by Congress as a guide to this Commission which is to be found in any section of the Act. And the leeway or discretion which may properly be exercised by the Commission under any other section may properly be exercised under this section. For instance, it is for it acting within the limitations of the law to determine what is a reasonable practice for a common carrier to pursue. This calls for the widest exercise of discretion. And if its judgment is arbitrary or it transcends those limitations properly binding such a tribunal its act may be set aside. But in every decision of the Commission under any section whatsoever there enters the element of personal judgment, just as in every verdict of a jury the result is colored necessarily by the mental attitude and experience of the juror. R. R. Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 338, 339.

(ee) The Commission has not been left without a proper test to apply under section 4 as amended: the test of justness, of reasonableness, of discrimination, of preference and advantage; the test of fair play as between communities. With this construction of the statute, which is historically supported, as well as by those more or less variable measures known as the canons of statutory construction, the statute becomes both practicable and constitutional. The Commission is neither forced to disregard it as a whole nor to eliminate any of its provisions; the section does not become an absolute long-and-short-haul section, because the proviso permitting of exceptions remains; the provisional clause does not relegate the entire section to the limbo of unconstitutionality, because it may be administered in thorough harmony with the whole Act, part of which it is, and the tests and standards to be applied are not matters of fancy, but are the express and positive words in the law itself. In short, Congress has undertaken to specify distinctly one practice which it wishes especially to destroy and charges the Commission not to permit it to obtain unless such discrimination, such preference, such practice may be shown not to be a discrimination that is unjust, a preference that is undue, or a practice that is unreasonable because of peculiar facts and conditions. All the burdens of establishing these justifying conditions are cast upon the carriers; the doubts are to be resolved against them; the wish of Congress is expressed and clear. The carrier may no longer float along as under the old section, needing no other justification for its policy than its own conscience, but must set forth clearly what it is doing and convince those constituted to judge that this exceptional policy in a special case is in harmony with the intent of Congress that communities shall be treated fairly, one with relation to the other. The more distant community shall not be preferred over the nearer one because it may please the carrier to develop the one and retard the other. As it costs more to carry traffic a longer distance, so the rate to the farther point shall not be made less than the rate to the nearer point merely because of railroad policy. So far the section establishes a shipper's principle and is in sympathy with and expressive of the most primary principle of equality. The proviso, however, is primarily for the carrier's benefit; it recognizes that the railroad may engage in competition for traffic to more distant points at lower rates than may be charged to intermediate points without doing injury or injustice to such intermediate points. But to this policy a limit may be, indeed must be, put. Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 339.

(ff) There comes before the Commission upon application for permission to deviate from the prohibitive clause of the fourth section the inclusive question whether by such deviation any provision of the Act will be violated, and the burden rests upon the carrier to satisfy the Commission that no such result would be effected by the granting of such permission—that no injustice will be done to the intermediate points with relation to the more distant point. The purpose of the statute succinctly stated is to preserve harmony between communities, individuals and carriers, to allay discord and prevent so far as may be oppression and injustice. The unhampered exercise of a railroad policy may make for the material benefit of the carrier—at least for its immediate profit—but work a wrong with which the public must concern itself. To be concrete it may be (although this fact has not been established) that it is to the financial interest of the transcontinental carriers to make the same rates from the Missouri River as from Chicago, Pittsburgh and New York to the coast cities which lie on or near the ocean's edge, and compel the intermediate points to base their rates upon these coast terminals; but this decision on their part is certainly subject to review, and when Congress says that the Commission "may from time to time prescribe the extent to which such designated common carrier may be relieved from the operation of this section," it means to lodge with the Commission, if it means anything at all, the power to pass in judgment upon the effect of a railroad policy which departs from the intendment of the law. A community is entitled to something more than a reasonable rate; it is entitled to a nondiscriminatory rate. A carrier may not say, "We will give to this community a reasonable rate," and meet the full requirement of the law; it must view its rates as a whole and see to it that they effect no advantage or preference to one community over another which does not arise necessarily out of the transportation advantages which the one has over the other. Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 366.

(gg) The Commission must regard the proviso in the fourth section ("That upon application to the Interstate Commerce Commission such common carrier may in special cases, after investigation, be authorized by the Commission to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of passengers or property; and the Commission may from time to time prescribe the extent to which such designated common carrier may be relieved from the operation of this section: . . .") as subordinate to the preceding clause prohibiting the higher rate for the shorter haul, and to carry out this intent of the law a carrier must establish before the Commission in order to secure an order of exception thereunder more than merely its own desire to haul a great volume of traffic between two distant points; it must prove that by such policy it will not impose unreasonable rates upon any intermediate point, and that its policy will not work an injustice of which such intermediate point may fairly complain. Unless it does make such proof the Commission is not justified under the law in excusing it from adopting its rates to the more distant point as the basis for rates to the nearer points. Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 368.

(hh) Under the decision of the courts construing the fourth section of the Act before it was amended, it was the law that if circumstances and conditions at the more distant point were dissimilar carriers might, without restraint, depart from the long-and-short haul rule. This virtually repealed that section for the reason that it is always possible to show in the interlacing network of railways in this country, and in view of the intricate commercial conditions, that circumstances are different at one point from another. To hold that carriers may, wherever the dissimilarity exists, meet that competition or decline to meet it, partially meet it here and fully meet it there, is to hold that they may without practical restraint discriminate between different localities. The Commission was forced to and did dismiss complaint after complaint upon the ground that there was a substantial dissimilarity of conditions at the more distant point without inquiring whether in point of fact under the circumstances the discrimination against the intermediate point should have been permitted. That provision of the section authorizing the Commission to prescribe the instances in which carriers might depart from the rule of the section and the extent of that departure could be given no practical effect. This situation has been changed by the section as amended. The effect of the present section is certainly to require carriers to first obtain from the Commission leave to depart from the rule of that section, and that of itself is a most significant and important thing. There is certainly a wide difference between the situation formerly when some complainant must attack the existing rate and make good by evidence his complaint and now, when the railroad must assume the burden of its justification. It is a matter of consequence that every discrimination of this sort must be brought directly to the attention of the Commission and passed upon by that body, but something beyond this was within the legislative mind. Bearing in mind the authority which the Commission now administers in prescribing a reasonable rate and in declaring and correcting an undue preference it seems evident that the purpose of Congress was to commit to this body the duty of determining whether, if the carrier was permitted to charge a higher rate at the intermediate point, that would result in a violation of the provisions of the Act. But in so doing the Commission cannot act arbitrarily. It must investigate each case and if after such investigation it is of the opinion that a departure from the rule of the fourth section would not result in unreasonable rates or undue discrimination it must permit that departure. If, upon the other hand, it is of the contrary opinion, it must refuse the permission Such is the only possible construction which can be put upon this section in connection with the entire Act, and if any doubt as to the real purpose of Congress could exist it must be effectively put at rest by an examination of the history of the passage of this measure. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 400, 409, 410, 412, 413.

(ii) The amended fourth section provides as did the original section that the Commission may from time to time prescribe the "extent to which such designated common carrier may be relieved from the operation of this section." Congress has evidently had it in mind at all times that cases might arise where carriers should properly be permitted to charge a lower rate at the more distant point, and has intended to arm the Commission with authority to do justice in such instances by permitting a deviation from the rule of the section and prescribing the maximum difference which may be made against the intermediate point, or by fixing a rate at the more distant point below which the carrier must not go, or by defining the territory from which the higher intermediate charge may be made. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 400, 415.

(jj) Upon the mere suggestion of water competition the Commission cannot grant unlimited relief from the rule of the fourth section. In re Lumber Rates from the South, 25 I. C. C. 50, 61.

(kk) In point of law the Commission has before it, on every application by carriers for deviation from the long and short haul clause of section 4 of the Act, the reasonableness of the rates which are involved in the carrier's application. It was not the intention of Congress to permit a carrier to discriminate in favor of a more distant point to such an extent as to effect not only an undue discrimination against the nearest point, but the imposition of an excessive charge. In Re Application of the S. P. Co., 22 I. C. C. 366, 373.

(ll) The Commission, in granting exemption to carriers from the provisions of the long and short haul clause of section 4 of the Act, may accomplish the result (1) by fixing a geographical limit within which there can be no discrimination, and permitting higher rates from other territory, having regard to the extent of the competition which justifies the discrimination; or (2) it may fix the limit of the rail rate at the more distant point with reference to the rate to intermediate points, thereby prescribing a zone of rate discrimination which may be lawful and justified; or (3) where either of these methods does not seem to be practicable, it may permit the carrier to continue the rates to the more distant point, and, dealing with intermediate points alone, prescribe the reasonable rate which the carrier, as an outgrowth of its policies or its methods of making rates, may not exceed. In Re Application of the S. P. Co., 22 I. C. C. 366, 373.

(mm) While the existence of a wrong cannot, of itself, justify its continuance, and while the very purpose of the original fourth section of the Act and of the last amendment of June, 1910, was to prevent discrimination by charging a higher rate to intermediate points, still, in determining what, under all the circumstances, is just and reasonable, in pursuance of the authority delegated to the Commission by the amended section it must certainly be to some extent guided by conditions as it finds them. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 525.

(nn) The relieving power of the Commission is not to be exercised arbitrarily, but it is its duty to permit a higher intermediate charge whenever the resulting rates will not contravene the Act in that they are unjust and unreasonable or unduly discriminatory. This embraces both the preference against the intermediate point and the rate which that point is required to pay. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 530.

(oo) Where a carrier, applying for relief from the fourth section to enable it to charge a higher rate to an intermediate point, is shown to control the rate at the farther distant point and where it can determine the effect to be given to the competitive conditions at the farther point, the Commission may also determine whether the carrier is justified in giving to those competitive conditions the effect which it does give, may determine the effect which such conditions may properly have, and fix the extent to which those conditions shall be given effect. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 531.

(pp) It is possible that cases might arise where even though the long-distance rate were beyond the control of the application for relief, nevertheless some relation ought to be established between the rate to the more distant point and those to the intermediate points. The intermediate rate plus a reasonable local charge from the more remote back to the intermediate point, and should perhaps in some cases be even less. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 531.

(qq) If the applicant for relief controls the long-distance rate and can determine what effect shall be given to competitive conditions which are supposed to justify the reduction at the farther point, then the Commission may also determine whether the carrier is justified in giving to those competitive conditions the effect which it does; may determine the effect which such conditions might properly have, and may fix the extent to which those conditions shall be given effect. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 531.

(rr) Relief from the rule of section 4 granted where water competition forced below what would be otherwise reasonable the rate on wool between the Pacific coast terminals and the Atlantc seaboard, the higher rates at intermediate points being reasonable, and no undue preference being given one locality over another. In Re Transportation of Wool, Hides and Pelts, 23 I. C. C. 151, 178.

(ss) So long as every point of production is given a rate which the Commission holds to be reasonable, and so long as the effect of water competition is applied uniformly and without preference to western points of origin the Commission is inclined to grant transcontinental lines relief under the fourth section. In Re Transportation of Wool, Hides and Pelts, 23 I. C. C. 151 179.

(tt) The justification for a departure from the fourth section is very frequently based upon the competition of short-line carriers, but where no such competition or other controlling factor is shown, no such defense can successfully be maintained; in other words, a fourth section violation should not extend beyond the real necessities of the competitive or other controlling influences. Emlenton Petroleum Rates, 29 I. C. C. 519, 521.

(uu) The fourth section was intended to restrain carriers from continuing lower rates to more distant than to intermediate points except in special cases where relief from the long-and-short-haul requirement is afforded by the Commission. The fundamental reason for granting relief to any line at a given point is the meeting at that point of the competition of other carriers against which competition the petitioner is at a disadvantage. Fourth Section Violations in the Southwest, 30 I. C. C. 153, 304.

(vv) The general rule adopted by the Commission is that carriers will be allowed to continue higher rates to intermediate points than to more distant points where their lines are not less than 15 per cent longer than the short line between the same points. Rates on Tropical Fruits from Gulf Ports, 30 I. C. C. 621, 633.

(ww) The relief afforded from the fourth section should be sufficient in each instance to permit the carriers to continue to compete for the terminal traffic so long as it may be secured at rates that are sufficient to yield a revenue in excess of operating cost. The maximum of public benefit from the fourth section will result from the enforcement of conditions that will tend to preserve and promote and not to diminish or retard competition. Commodity Rates to Pacific Coast Terminals, 32 I. C. C. 611, 629.

(xx) In dealing with the through rates from points of origin to points of destination, relief from the provisions of the fourth section should be given only where evidence is clear that the lower rate to the more distant point is actually required by conditions at that point beyond the control of the petitioning carriers and that the rate required is actually subnormal. R. R. Comm'rs of Ia. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 34 I. C. C. 111, 113.

(yy) The mere allegation that the rates between any given point are fixed by other carriers has not been considered as sufficient to authorize the Commission to relieve a carrier operating the short route from the rule of the amended fourth section. In determining whether a given line or route is entitled to relief from the rule of the fourth section the Commission has, therefore, inquired as to what substantial disadvantage the petitioning line is under in meeting the rates of its competitors, and has repeatedly held that in competition between rail carriers the rates of the direct route must conform to the law. Class & Commodity Rates from Louisville, 36 I. C. C. 317, 320.

(zz) Weaker lines should be afforded a greater measure of relief in meeting rates in effect via their stronger competitiors than would be granted were conditions more equal. Bituminous Coal to Mississippi Valley Territory, 39 I. C. C. 378, 386.

(3a) Generally speaking, relief will be granted where the distance via the indirect line or route is more than 15 per cent greater than the distance via the direct line or route. Oklahoma Cottonseed Crushers' Asso. v. M., K. & T. Ry. Co., 39 I. C. C. 497, 512.

(3b) Departures from the fourth section not protected by applications are unlawful. Parkersburg Rig & Reel Co. v. T. & P. Ry., 66 I. C. C. 323, 329.

(3c) Orders of the Commission authorizing departures from the long-and-short-haul provision of section 4 of the Act, do not permit the continuance of such violations after the application for relief with respect to particular rates has been passed upon by the Commission. Butter, Eggs, and Dressed Poultry from Texas, 73 I. C. C. 466, 470.

(3d) Fourth section applications of transcontinental lines proposing to establish from and to the Pacific coast terminals lower rates than are in effect to and from intermediate points on traffic having origin or destination in defined territories lying east of the Rocky Mountains, for the purpose of meeting the low rates maintained by steamship lines operating between the Atlantic and Gulf Ports and the Pacific Ports through the Panama Canal, denied, except as to east-bound commodities moving to New York City only, via rail-and-water through Galveston, Tex., and on sulphur from Texas and Louisiana mines to California and north Pacific coast terminals. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48.

(3f) Carriers operating via in direct routes, to, from, and between points in the Southeast authorized to meet rates of direct lines between competitive points, while maintaining higher rates at intermediate points, provided that such authority shall not include intermediate points as to which the haul of the circuitous route is not longer than that of the direct line or route between the competitive points, and that the lowest combination of intermediate rates is not exceeded. Live Stock to, from and Between Points in the Southeast, 74 I. C. C. 419, 424.

(3g) It would be a vain thing to find a technical violation of the fourth section of the act, and immediately enter an order relieving the carrier from the necessity of observing the section and thus altering in no respect the existing status. Fares Between New York and Points West of Newark. 74 I. C. C. 520.

(3h) Departure from the fourth section was not protected by any application on file with the Commission and was unlawful. Wilson & Co. v. Director General, 74 I. C. C. 555.

(3i) The fact that rates contravene the long-and-short-haul provision of the fourth section of the act does not of itself establish that the higher rates to the intermediate points are unreasonable. Nivison-Weiskopf Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 107, 108.

(3j) Under the general policy of the fourth section as amended, which is to prohibit greater charges for shorter than for longer distances over the same line or route the condition that the granting of such authority shall not include intermediate points as to which the haul of the petitioning line or route is not longer than that of a direct line or route between the competitive points, should be imposed in connection with relief granted from the provisions of that section in respect of rates based on distance. Memphis-Southwestern Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 522.

(3k) Except in unusual cases, carriers are not to be granted relief from long-and-short-haul provision of section 4 of the act to meet, over unduly circuitous routes, rates of shorter lines. Ft. Worth Freight Bureau v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 237, 246.

(3ka) Fourth section relief denied where carrier did not ask for relief on ground of circuity, but simply on ground of geographical location and desirability of avoiding gateway via short route, which sometimes becomes congested. Ohio-Michigan Cases, 80 I. C. C. 663, 675.

(3kb) Rates may not be so low to a particular point as to place burden on other traffic; nor may fourth-section relief be granted unless rate structure is reasonable and nonprejudicial. Commodity rates from Jacksonville to Miami, 83 I. C. C. 207, 210

complished by the filing of these applications is to enable the applicant carriers to meet, at points served by them, competitive conditions existing at such points, thereby securing traffic which they could not otherwise obtain, and to charge higher rates at intermediate points where such competition is absent. Applications may be divided into three classes: To meet rail competition, to meet water competition and to meet market competition. The results actually accomplished by the granting of such applications have been (1) that the railroads which have been granted fourth section relief have, in most cases, accomplished their purpose of securing a portion of the traffic between the competitive points, thereby obtaining additional revenue; (2) that shippers located at competitive points have enjoyed the benefit of an additional route of an additional market, and of such other advantages as normally result from competitive service; (3) that prejudice is thereby created at intermediate points to which higher rates are permitted, but not in the opinion of the majority, undue prejudice. The effect of granting an application to meet rail competition has been taking from the competing railroad so much of the traffic between the competitive points as was thereby secured by the applicant railroad. The granting of an application to meet water competition has in some instances the effect of taking traffic from other rail carriers which might participate in a portion of the haul from an interior point to the port for movement beyond by water. The interest of localities in applications into which the element of market competition enters is much more pronounced and widespread than where that element is absent. The record establishes that in a majority of instances such applications have been filed, not as a result of any pressure from shippers or localities, but because the railroads conceived that their best interests would be served thereby. Administration of fourth section, 87 I. C. C. C. 564.

(3l) The guide to the exercise of the Commission's discretion in exempting carriers from the operation of the long and short haul provision in section 4 of the Act as amended June 18, 1910, is to be found in the other sections of the Act, thereby making the discretion to exempt carriers from the prohibition in fact not unlimited and imposing upon the Commission, not merely the right, but also the duty to grant such exemptions whenever on investigation it shall find that no violation of any section of the Act would thereby be involved. A. T. & S. F. Ry .Co. v. U. S., 191 Fed. 856, 860.

(3m) It is beyond the statutory power of the Commission to suspend the operation of section 4 without an application made to it by the carriers for that purpose, and a hearing upon that particular application as in a special case. If the Commission suspends the operation of section 4 without such application and hearing, the United States District Court will issue an interlocutory injunction restraining such an order. Merchants' & Manuf. Traffic Assn. v. United States, 213 Fed. 292, 300.

(3n) The express or implied statutory recognition of the authority on the part of carriers to primarily determine for themselves the existence of substantially similar circumstances and conditions as a basis of charging a higher rate for a shorter than for a longer distance within the purview of the 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and the right to make a rate accordingly, to continue in force until, on complaint, it was corrected in the manner pointed out by statute, ceased to exist after the adoption of the amendment to § 4. This results from the fact that by the amendment in question, the original power to determine the existence of the conditions justifying the greater charge for a shorter than was exacted for a long distance was taken from the carriers and primarily vested in the Interstate Commerce Commission, and for the purpose of making the prohibitions efficacious it was enacted that after a time fixed no existing rate of the character provided for should continue in force unless the application to sanction it had been made and granted. U. S. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 35 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113, 115, 235 U. S. 314, 236 U. S. 318, 59 L. ed.

See Infra § 9.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The fact that a railroad which is subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce makes between two points charges unreasonably low does not authorize a rival, extending between the same points, to make on its line greater charges for the shorter hauls in the same direction to intermediate points than it does to the termini. Re Chicago, St. Paul, & Kansas City R. Co. 2. I. C. R. 137.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Commission has repeatedly held that in competition between rail carriers the rates of the direct route must conform to the law. Class and commodity Rates from Louisville, 36 I. C. C. 317, 320.

(c) The Commission has frequently held that where carrier competition is the only influence which has operated to reduce rates to a competitive point the direct lines and those less than 15 per cent longer must observe the fourth section and not charge higher rates to intermediate points. Arkansas Shippers & Mfgrs. Assn. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 231, 240.

(d) The Commission is not empowered to authorize a carrier, because of circuity of route, to maintain a higher charge to an intermediate point than to a farther distant competitive point where the haul of the petitioning carrier to that intermediate point is not longer than over the direct line or route to the competitive points. Alpha Portland Cement Co. v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C., 697, 698.

(e) Under the general policy of the fourth section as amended, which is to prohibit greater charges for shorter than for longer distance over the same line or route, the condition that the granting of such authority shall not include intermediate points as to which the haul of the petitioning line or route is not longer than that of a direct line or route between the competitive points should be imposed in connection with relief granted from the provisions of that section in respect of rates based on distance. Memphis-Southwestern Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 522.

(f) Fourth section relief denied where carrier did not ask for relief on ground of circuity, but simply on ground of geographical location and desirability of avoiding gate-way via short route, which sometimes becomes congested. Ohio-Michigan Coal Cases 80 I. C. C. 663, 675.

§4¼a. State Rates.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Jurisdiction of commission over intrastate rates subsequent to Federal control is prescribed by sections 3 and 13 of the act. The commission has no authority to pass upon measure of such rates except where they are shown to be prejudicial to interstate commerce, and long-and-short-haul provision of section 4 does not apply thereto. Producers Refining Co. v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 339, 340.

III APPLICATION OF SECTION 4 TO RATES.

§4½ In general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The prohibition in section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act is limited to cases in which circumstances and conditions are substantially similar. Re Southern R. & S. Asso., 1 I. C. R. 278.

(aa) The prohibition in the fourth section of the Act against a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, as qualified therein, is limited to cases in which the circumstances and conditions are substantially similar. Re Southern Railway & Steamship Association, 1 I. C. C. 278, 291.

(ab) The phrase "under substan- substantially similar circumstances and conditions in the fourth section, is used in the same sense as in the second section, and carriers are required to judge in the first instance with regard to the similarity or dissimilarity of the circumstances and conditions that forbid or permit a greater charge for a shorter distance. Re Southern Railway & Steamship Association. 1 I. C. C. 278, 291.

(ac) When a greater charge in the aggregate is made for the transportation of passengers or the like kind of property for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer distance, it is not sufficient justification therefor that the traffic, which is subjected to such greater charge is way or local traffic and that which is given the more favorable rates is not. Nor is it sufficient justification for such greater charge that the short haul traffic is more expensive to the carrier, unless when the circumstances are such as to make it exceptionally expensive, or the long haul traffic exceptionally inexpensive, the difference being extraordinary and susceptible of definite proof. Nor that the lesser charge on the longer haul has for its motive the encouragement of manufactures or some other branch of industry; Nor that it is designed to build up business or trade centers; Nor that the lesser charge on the longer haul is merely a continuation of the favorable rates under which trade centers or industrial establishments have been built up. The fact that long haul traffic will only bear certain rates is no reason for carrying it for less than cost at the expense of other traffic. Re Southern Railway & Steamship Association. 1 I. C. C. 278, 291.

(b) The "long and short haul rule" of the statute was intended to maintain and promote, and not to destroy or neutralize, natural commercial advantages resulting from location, and competition at St. Paul with sugar from the East refined in New York, although necessitating the prevailing low rates to St. Paul on sugar from the West refined at San Francisco, does not justify the greater charge on the latter to Fargo than to St. Paul. Raworth v. Northern Pacific R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 857.

(c) The fourth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce construed, and the principles laid down in Re Petitions of Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 278, 1 I. C. C. Rep. 31, reaffirmed, except the ruling therein whereby carriers were permitted to judge for themselves in the first instance of what constitutes "rare and peculiar cases of competition between railroads which are subject to the statute, when a strict application of the general rule of the statute would be destructive of legitimate competition," which is hereby overruled. Trammell v. Clyde S. S. Co. et al 4 I. C. R. 121.

(d) The rule expressed by the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, that distance shall ordinarily limit the adjustment of rates, is not rendered inoperative by the existence at one point of converging lines subject to the Act, for the law applies to each of these lines and neither can put in rates to that point which are lower than shorter-distance charges on its line until, upon a showing of special considerations grounded in justice to its patrons and itself, it obtains permission from the regulating authority so to do. This principle applies both to lines between the same points and to lines reaching the same destination from different points of consignment. Gerke Brew. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 267.

(e) The 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce provides, that it "shall be unlawful for any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this Act, to charge or receive any greater compensation, in the aggregate, for the transportation of passengers, or of like kind of property, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, for a shorter, than for a longer distance, over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance." There is a clear distinction between the term "railroad" as used in the other parts of the Act, and the term "line" as used in the 4th section. The use of the word "line" is significant. Two carriers may use the same "road," but each has its separate "line." One railroad company may lease trackage rights to another; but the joint use of the same track does not create the same "line," so as to compel either company to graduate its tariff by that of the other. (f) The fourth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce cuts off any presumption in favor of as great compensation for short as for long distances, and is based on the assumption that ordinarily a higher charge for a shorter distance is discriminating and excessive. Cordelle Machine Shop v. Louisville & N. R. Co., et al, 6 I. C. C. 361.

(fa) Rates for the transportation of specified articles from a given point to another point in a different state, which are higher than rates on the same articles from the same point of shipment to a more distant point, violate the provision of the Act to Regulate Commerce requiring reasonable and just transportation charges, and forbidding undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage to any locality in any respect whatsoever. Johnston-Larimer Dry Goods Co. v. Atchinson, T. & S. F. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 568.

(g) Section 4 of the Act applies when the traffic is "over the same line" and "in the same direction" and to "transportation under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," and "the shorter" must be included within "the longer" distance; and any injustice or undue hardship which may result to carriers from compliance with the statute is removable by the Commission upon application by such carriers under the procedure authorized by the proviso clause of that section. Jewell v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 7. I. C. C. 354.

(h) A carrier engaged with others in the through transportation to Chicago of freight from numerous points on its road cannot lawfully call itself merely a local carrier from an intermediate point while engaged in through carriage from more distant points on its line, and thereby justify higher rates to Chicago for the shorter distance from the intermediate points than for the more distant points of shipment. Re Alleged Violations of Act to Regulate Commerce, 8 I. C. C. 290.

(i) Under section 4 of the Act the question for the Commission is one of fact, and the interests of the producing market, the consuming markets and the carriers are to be considered in determining whether upon the whole situation there is such dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as justifies the rates in question. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, Adv. S. 209, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209 cited and applied. Danville v. Southern R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 409.

(k) If a greater charge be made for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, etc., and the circumstances and conditions at the longer-distance point are substantially similar to those at the shorter-distance point, it is a violation of § 4; but if the circumstances and conditions at the longer-distance point are substantially dissimilar, within the meaning of the act, to those at the shorter distant point § 4 is not violated. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(ka) The Commission having decided in Board of Trade of Chattanooga v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. Rep. 546, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 213, that freight rates from New York and other eastern points were unlawfully higher for the shorter distance to Chattanooga than for the longer distance through Chattanooga to Nashville, and the United States Supreme Court having, in a proceeding to enforce the order of the Commission refused to direct enforcement of such order and reversed the decision of the Circuit Court and Circuit Court of Appeals in that proceeding, but "without prejudice to the right of the Commission" to proceed further and "hear and determine the matter in controversy according to law" (181 U. S. 29, 45 L. ed. 729 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512), and the case having come before the Commission for re-investigation upon complaint of the Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga against lines involved in the original proceeding and also lines reaching Chattanooga and lines reaching Nashville via Cincinnati, it is found, applying the law as construed by the United States Supreme Court, that the traffic from New York and other eastern points is carried to Nashville and Chattanooga under substantially different circumstances and conditions, and held that the higher rate to Chattanooga is not unlawful under section four of the statute and cannot be otherwise condemned merely because a lower rate is granted to Nashville, and that the rates to Chattanooga are not shown to be unreasonable within the meaning of section one of the Act. Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga v. S. Ry. Co. 10 I. C. C. 111.

(l) Complainant attacked class rates from Louisville, Cincinnati, Memphis and Nashville to Moultrie, Ga., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. Rates to Moultrie are higher than to Tifton, Valdosta, Quitman, Thomasville and Fitzgerald, points in nearby territory although the conditions surrounding the transportation are substantially similar. HELD, rates attacked unreasonable to extent they exceed rates to Tifton. Southern Grocery Company v. Georgia Northern Ry. 12 I. C. C. 230

(m) The fundamental reason for granting relief to any line at a given point is the meeting at that point of the competition of other carriers, against which competition the petitioner is at a disadvantage. Fourth Section Violations in the Southeast, 30 I. C. C. 153, 304.

(n) Where the rate per 100 lbs. is less for the longer than for the included haul there is a violation of the fourth section, notwithstanding the fact that the minimum weight prescribed for the former rate exceeding that prescribed for the latter, the carload charge at the former minimum may exceed that at the latter; for cars shipped to the intermediate point may be loaded in excess of the minimum. Fourth Section Violations in Rates on Sugar, 31 I. C. C. 511, 523.

(o) Where relief is denied under the fourth section, carriers may correct undue discrimination by increasing the rate to the more distant point, decreasing rates to intermediate points, or by simultaneous increases and reductions. Corp. Comm. of New Mexico v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C., 292, 303.

(p) Difficulty of complying with the law because of lack of uniformity in the three classifications can not be accepted as an excuse for existing violations of section 4 Memphis Freight Bureau v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co. 39 I. C. C. 224, 238.

(q) Where carrier competition is the only influence which has operated to reduce rates to a competitive point the direct lines and those less than 15 per cent longer than the direct lines must observe the fourth section and not charge higher rates to intermediate points. Rates from New Orleans and Galveston, 44 I. C. C. 727, 734.

(r) The fourth section was intended to restrain carriers from continuing lower rates to more distant points except in special cases where relief from the long-and-short haul requirements is afforded by the Commission. Such relief has been granted in cases where competition of water lines is strong, and where carriers operate circuitous routes in competition with direct lines. Dewey Bros. Co. v. P. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 46 I. C. C. 388, 395.

(s) A carrier may not cite its literal observance of the long-and-short-haul clause of the fourth section of the Act as excusing it from its legal obligation to maintain from points on connecting lines to destinations on its own lines rates which in the light of all relevant considerations are non-prejudicial to the traffic so originating on its connections Weis-Peterson Box Co. v. M. & O. R. R. 46 I. C. C. 693, 696.

(t) The fact, standing alone, that in some instances discriminatory rates, or violations of the fourth section, result from the application of different classifications, does not necessarily justify condemnation of the ratings attacked. On the other hand a finding that the ratings have been justified does not sanction any undue discrimination or excuse any violation of any provision of the Act. Showers Bros. Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 48 I. C. C. 518, 523.

(u) Interpretations of the amended fourth section of the act holding that a "reasonably compensatory" rate can not be less than a rate which, if imposed by a regulatory tribunal, would be adjudged nonconfiscatory, can not be accepted by the commission. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 68, 69.

(v) The commission does not agree with contention that the fourth section has not been changed in substance by the amendments in the Transportation Act, 1920. The amendment has made mandatory what theretofore rested in the commission's sound discretion as to compensation for the service performed to the more distant point, as to circuity, and as to potential water competition. Moreover, section 500 of the Transportation Act, 1920, wherein it is declared the policy of Congress to foster and preserve rail and water transportation was Congress's way of saying that the commission should follow a less liberal policy in dealing with departures from the long-and-short-haul rule than had been followed in former years. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74. I. C. C. 70.

(w) The criterion of a reasonably compensatory rate under the amended fourth section of the act, summarized in the formula "out-of-pocket-expenses-plus some-profit," rejected by the commission as insufficient, standing alone. Transcontinental Cases of 1922 74 I. C. C. 70.

(x) In the administration of the fourth section of the act the words "reasonably compensatory" imply that a rate properly so described must cover and more than cover the extra or additional expenses incurred in handling the traffic to which it applies; be no lower than necessary to meet existing competition; not be so low as to threaten the extinction of legitimate competition by water carriers; and not impose an undue burden on the other traffic or jeopardize the appropriate return on the value of carrier property generally as contemplated in section 15a of the act. Rates of this character ought, whenever possible, to bear some relation to the value of the commodity carried and the value of the service rendered in connection therewith. Transcontinental Cases of 1922 74 I. C. C. 71.

(y) In applying the provisions of the fourth section of the act, rates and fares of the same kind should be compared. Conf. ruling 304. Fares between New York and points west of Newark. 74 I. C. C. 519.

(z) Contention that the fourth section of the act does not apply to joint through rates from points in Canada to points in the United States, not sustained. The provisions of the fourth section apply where the point of origin is in an adjacent foreign country and the intermediate point and more distant point of destination are in the United States. Conf. Ruling, 447 United Paperboard Co. v. C. N. Rys., 74 I. C. C. 733, 736.

(aa) After a long-and-short-haul departure is removed, it may not lawfully be restored without the special authority of the commission, even though the departure was in existence when the fourth section was amended. Conf. Ruling 395 and 406. Intermediate Application of Class Rates from Lexington, Ky., 77 I. C. C. 430.

(bb) Where a departure from the fourth section was not authorized by any fourth section order nor protected by any application on file with the Commission it is unlawful. Sunderland Brothers Co v. C. B. & Q. R. R. 78 I. C. C. 295, 296

(cc) The publication of rates in connection with rule 77 of Tariff circular 18-A, authorizing publication of rates from intermediate points on one days notice, is a substantial compliance with the requirements of section 4 of the act. Montrose Oil Refining Co. v. St. L. S. F. Ry. 78 I. C. C. 572, 573.

(dd) The notation on a tariff in accordance with rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A authorizing the publication of rates from intermediate points on one days notice, is a substantial compliance with the fourth section requirements, and a request for the publication of a rate under that rule prior to the movement of shipments is not essential in order that the shipper may take advantage of such provision. Armour & Company v. Director General 80 I. C. C. 59, 60.

(ee) In exercising the authority conferred upon the Commission in section 4 it shall not permit the establishment of any charge to or from the more distant point that is not reasonably compensatory for the service performed. Memphis Southwestern investigation 80 I. C. C. 157, 168.

(ff) The words "reasonably compensatory" imply that a rate properly so described must cover and more than cover the extra or additional expense incurred in handling the traffic to which it applies; be no lower than necessary to meet existing competition; not be so low as to threaten the extinction of legitimate competition by water carriers; and not impose an undue burden on other traffic or jeopardize the appropriate return on the value of carrier property generally, as contemplated in section 15a of the act. Rates of this character ought, whenever possible to bear some relation to the value of the commodity carried and the value of the service rendered in connection therewith. Where carriers apply for relief from the long and short haul section and propose the application of rates which they designate as reasonably compensatory, they should affirmatively show that the rates proposed conform to the criteria indicated above. Memphis Southwestern Investigation 80 I. C. C. 157, 168.

(ffa) A departure from the terms of the fourth section is unlawful when unauthorized by the Commission. Lynchburg Traffic Bureau v. Pennsylvania R. R., 88 I. C. 619, 620.

(ffb) The provisions of the fourth section of the act apply where the point of origin is in an adjacent foreign country and the intermediate point and more distant point of destination are in the United States. Duluth Iron & Metal Co. v. Director General, 89 I. C. C. 343, 345.

(gg) Since Interstate Commerce Act, § 4, which originally prohibited a greater rate under substantially similar circumstances for a shorter than for a longer haul over the same line, was amended by Act June 18, 1910, which added the words "or route" after the word "line," the long and short haul clause is no longer limited to transportation over the line of a single carrier, but includes transportation under a joint rate by connecting carriers. Davis v. Parrington, 281 Fed. 10.

(hh) Carrier by water published a higher rate from San Francisco to Portland, wholly by water, than it did from San Francisco to North Portland, which route was by water to Portland, thence by rail to North Portland. This rate was published without permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission HELD, that such rate was a violation of Section 4 and was illegal. Davis v. Parrington, 281 Fed. 10.

(ii) A realignment which creates or exaggerates departures from the rules of the fourth section can not be sanctioned upon the evidence. Cement Rates from West Coplay, Pa., Unrep. Op. 1990.

§4½a. Back haul combinations.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Complainant attacked rates from St. Louis, Nashville and Chattanooga to Hampton, Fla., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. Rates attacked are the combinations of the through rates for the haul thru Hampton to Palatka and the local rates from Palatka back to Hampton. The result of this system of rate making is to enable the merchants at Palatka to compete with merchants at Hampton at their own doors on equal terms, while the latter are debarred from such competition with the former, and as to territory between the two localities, Palatka merchants are given such an advantage on rates as to enable them to undersell Hampton merchants. This system of rate making results in one of the principal evils which the act was designed to remedy. While the location of Palatka on the St. Johns river and the fact that there is more competition by rail to Palatka than at Hampton, may justify rates to Palatka somewhat lower than to Hampton the Hampton rate should not be higher than the Palatka rates by the locals from Palatka to Hampton; and in fixing the interest of the community at Hampton as well as its own interests and they must not put in rates to Hampton which prohibits its citizens from the transactions of business in competition with Palatka. HELD, the present Hampton rates are in violation of both the fourth and third sections of the act, but the Hampton rates may properly be made higher than the Palatka rates by the differentials now existing between the Palatka and Jacksonville rates. Board of Trade of Hampton, Fla., v. N. C. & St. L. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 503.

§4¾ Circuitous routes.
See Circuitous Lines.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A charge by carriers which form an indirect line over which they transport freight, of greater compensation in the aggregate for a shorter than for a longer distance which, includes the shorter is unlawful and in conflict with the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, even though a more direct line is formed and used for transportation by which the mileage to the longer-distance point by the indirect line is less than that to the shorter-distance point. Hill v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 343.

(b) Where carriers form an indirect line over which they transport freight and charge and receive greater compensation in the aggregate for a shorter than for a longer distance, the shorter being included within the longer: HELD to be unlawful and in conflict with section 4 of the Act to Regulate Commerce: and HELD, further: the fact that a more direct line, over which the mileage to a longer distance point (Macon or Americus) by the indirect line is less than the mileage to a shorter distance point (Cordele) by such indirect line, may be or is formed and used in transporting grain to or from such longer distance point (Macon or Americus), does not alter or so change the conditions of transportation over the indirect line as to take it out of the rule of the statute. S. J. Hill & Bro. v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 243, 359.

(c) The fact that one competing carrier has the long line does not create a dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions which justifies it in disregarding the rule of the fourth section, while competing short lines are bound by that rule. To permit the carrier by the long line to meet lower competitive rates at a more distant point without making as low rates from intermediate stations, while its competitors are obliged in all cases to make no higher charge from intermediate points on their lines, would place those competitors at the mercy of such long-line carrier. When a carrier comes into the field of competition, whether it be as the long line or as the short line, it comes subject to the same limitation as every other competitor. Geo. Tileston Mill Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 8. I. C. C. 346, 356.

(d) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and discriminatory rate charged on lumber from Sheridan, Ind., to Boston and Boston points higher than from Indianapolis, Ind., a farther distant point. Defendant C. I. & L., charges on lumber from Sheridan, Ind., a noncompetitive point, on its road, than from Indianapolis, Ind., although the latter is the longer distance point by its line. Indianapolis is a competitive point and numerous lines run from that city both east and west. The short lines from Sheridan to the east are through Indianapolis, and by those lines Sheridan is a longer distance point. Indianapolis takes 93% of Chicago rates to the east, and Sheridan, is charged the Chicago rates. The rates to Boston and Boston points at the time of complaint were 27 c from Sheridan and 25 c from Indianapolis; but they have since been reduced to 26½c and 24½c respectively. The circumstances and conditions governing the traffic from Sheridan are substantially and materially different from those applying on the traffic from Indianapolis. HELD that no undue discrimination results to Sheridan because by defendants indirect route the rate is 2c less from Indianapolis than it is from Sheridan. G. C. Pratt Lumber Co. v. C. I. & L. Ry. Co. 10 I. C. C. 29.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) If lines can not meet reasonable rates by direct lines they should relinquish the traffic. Export Grain Case, 37 I. C. C. 190, 192.

(f) In no case has the Commission granted fourth section relief because of market competition as to points of origin where the petitioning carrier has not been shown to be at some substantial disadvantage by reason of having a circuitous route. Proportional Rates to Ohio River Crossings, 43 I. C. C. 458, 469.

(g) There is a substantial difference between "indirect" or circuitous, as distinguished from so-called short-line routes, which are the principal or regular avenues of traffic, on the one hand and routes which include out of line or lateral departures therefrom, on the other. Grain Transit at Michigan Stations, 47 I. C. C. 104, 107.

(h) Relief should not be granted for the purpose of permitting extremely circuitous routes to compete with the direct lines. Rates Between C. F. A. Territory and Points on C. & O. Ry., 47 I. C. C. 576, 581.

(i) Carriers which have indirect routes to points reached by more direct lines or routes authorized to meet the rates established via such direct lines or routes, and to maintain higher rates to intermediate points, provided that rates to such intermediate points do not exceed the rates via the shortest route or for the same distance via the shorter route to the competitive or common point. Holmes & Hallowell Co. v. G. N. Ry. Co. 60 I. C. C. 687, 714.

(j) Carrier having circuitous routes authorized to meet the short line rates at common points while carrying higher rates to intermediate points. Hudson Mule Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 63 I. C. C. 6, 14.

(k) If a circuitous rail line or route is, because of such circuity, granted authority to meet the charges of a more direct line or route to or from competitive points and to maintain higher charges to or from intermediate points on its own line, the authority shall not include intermediate points as to which the haul of the petitioning line or route is not longer than that of the direct line or route between the competitive points. United Iron Works Inc. v. A. T. & S. F. 63 I. C. C. 184, 192.

(l) By the transportation act, 1920, it is provided that if authority is granted a circuitous line, because of such circuity, to meet the charges of a more direct line at competitive points and to maintain higher charges at intermediate points, the authority shall not include intermediate points as to which the haul of the petitioning line or route is not longer than that of the direct line or route between the competitive points. While this limitation does not apply in terms to relief granted because of market competition, the Commission has felt in exercising its discretion under the law the same principle should be applied in cases of market competition, believing that the same reason for such a limitation exist in the one case as in the other. Green coffee from Gulf ports 64 I. C. C. 26, 30.

(m) Carriers having indirect routes authorized to establish same as those in effect over the direct lines from and to the same points and to maintain higher rates at intermediate points, provided that authority granted shall not extend to intermediate points via the circuitous line to which the haul is not longer than that of the direct line or route from and to the competitive points; and that the rates from the other intermediate points shall in no case exceed the lowest combination. Chamber of Commerce of Johnson City, Tenn. v. S. Ry. Co., 64 I. C. C. 709.

(n) There is no inhibition in the act upon a circuitous carrier that may desire to meet the fares of a competitor between common termini, either freely or to a limited extent, so long as such fares are not so unduly low as to place a burden on other traffic and do not contravene the provisions of section 4. Proportional basing fares to Ogden 73 I. C. C. 434, 437.

(o) The amended fourth section of the act provides that a circuitous line or route may not, because of such circuity, be granted authority to maintain higher charges to intermediate points in its line as to which the haul over such line is not longer than that of the direct line or route between the competitive points. United Iron Works v. Director General, 74 I. C. C., 277, 283.

(p) Carriers operating via indirect routes to, from, and between points in the Southeast authorized to meet rates of direct lines between competitive points, while maintaining higher rates at intermediate points, provided that such authority shall not include intermediate points as to which the haul of the circuitous route is not longer than that of the direct line or route between the competitive points, and that the lowest combinations of intermediate rates are not exceeded. Live Stock to, from and between points in the Southeast, 74 I. C. C. 419, 424.

(q) For the purpose of the instant case a circuitous route defined as one which exceeds the short line by at least 15 per cent. Michigan R. R. Co. v. P. M. R. R. Co. 74 I. C. C. 496, 500

(r) The commission is not empowered to authorize a carrier, because of circuity of route, to maintain a higher charge to an intermediate point than to a farther distant competitive point where the haul of the petitioning carrier to such intermediate point is not longer than over the direct line or route to the competitive point. Alpha Portland Cement Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C. 697, 698.

(s) Carriers having circuitous routes between competitive points authorized to establish rates the same as maintained via the short lines or routes from and to the same points, and to maintain higher rates at intermediate points, excepting intermediate points as to which the haul of the circuitous line is not longer than that of the direct line, and which in no case exceed the lowest combinations. Texas Chamber of Commerce v. A. & S. Ry. Co. 77 I. C. C. 67, 71.

(t) Under the fourth section of the act, as amended, it is incumbent upon circuitous lines or routes that desire to meet short-line competition to show that the rates proposed are reasonably compensatory. It may not necessarily follow that the rates of the short line between two points would not be reasonably compensatory, for instance, if applied via a route more than twice as long between the same points. There would, however, be a strong presumption that if the rates for the shorter distance via the direct line or route are reasonable they would not be so for a haul of more than twice that distance. Memphis-Southwestern Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 473, 526.

(u) As a general rule, the commission has declined to grant fourth-section relief to lines of extreme circuity in order to permit them to meet short-line competition. Memphis-Southwestern Investigation 77 I. C. C. 526.

(v) Authority to continue to charge rates via unduly circuitous routes lower than to intermediate points, so as to meet direct-line competition, denied.

Memphis-Southwestern Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 526, 527.

(w) A markedly circuitous route or other adverse conditions affecting operation which place one carrier at a substantial disadvantage in meeting competition of another operating under more favorable conditions are, generally speaking, sufficient grounds for granting of relief from provisions of section 4. Memphis-Southwestern Investigation 80 I. C. C. 157, 167.

(x) Except in unusual cases, carriers are not to be granted relief from long-and-short-haul provision of fourth section of the act to meet, over unduly circuitous routes, rates of shorter lines. Fort Worth Freight Bureau v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 237, 246.

(y) Commission does not approve the meeting over unduly circuitous routes of rates over shorter lines. Fort Worth Bureau v. Director General as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 246.

§5. Intermediate Points.

See Supra § 4; Through Routes and Joint Rates § 21.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Complainant attacked rates charged on freight from San Francisco, Calif., to Denver, Colo., as compared with the rate to Kansas City, Mo., and also that the rate from San Francisco to Kansas City plus the rate from Kansas City to Denver made lower than the rate direct from San Francisco to Denver as in violation of the fourth section and amounting to unjust discrimination. The difference in classification adopted by the western classification which applies on business from the Pacific coast to all points west of the Missouri River, between raisins and dried fruits by which a higher carload rate is imposed on raisins than on other dried fruits, while by the Pacific coast eastbound classification (which applies on business over the same roads from the Pacific coast to points on the Missouri River and east thereof) such distinction is not imposed —is, in connection with the different rules of the two classifications as to mixed carloads, an unreasonable discrimination. An intermediate local rate should never exceed the through rate to the terminus of the line plus the local rate back to the intermediate point. The use by carriers of different freight classifications, the effect of which is to increase the revenue from local traffic as compared with that obtained from through traffic, is as much a violation of section 4 of the act as would be the imposition of a higher tariff upon the same class in the same classification. HELD, in the absence of competition from Canadian railways the circumstances and conditions of traffic from San Francisco to Denver are not so materially different from those of the traffic from San Francisco to the Missouri River as to justify the transcontinental roads subject to the act, in charging a greater sum for the shorter distance. Tariffs will be modified so that the rate to Denver will not exceed the rate to Kansas City. Martin v. S. P. Co. 2 I. C. C. 1.

(b) In the absence of competition from Canadian railways (which are not subject to the Interstate Commerce Act), the circumstances and conditions of the traffic from San Francisco to Denver are not so materially different from those of the traffic from San Francisco to the Missouri River as to justify the transcontinental roads subject to the Act in charging a greater sum for the shorter distance. Martin v. Southern P. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 1.

(c) The Chicago St. Paul and Kansas City Ry., operates a line of railroad from Chicago, Ill., through Dubuque, Iowa., to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., and in meeting the competition of shorter carriers from and to the points in question, maintains higher rates at intermediate points. HELD, this is a violation of the fourth section and the higher rates at intermediate points are illegal. Re Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City R. Co. 2 I. C. C. 137.

(d) The fact that a railroad which is subject to the act makes between two points charges unreasonably low does not authorize a rival, extending between the same points, to make on its line greater charges for the shorter haul in the same direction to intermediate points than it does to a terminus. Re Chicago St. Paul & Kansas City R. Co. 2 I. C. C. 137, 150.

(e) Complainant attacked as unjustly discriminatory and in violation of section four rates on grain and livestock from Iowa points to Chicago higher than from points west thereof. HELD, this is a violation of the fourth section and rates should be so adjusted as to eliminate this situation. Northwestern Iowa Grain and Stock Shippers Asso. v. C. & N. W. R. 2 I. C. C. 431.

(f) The Chicago & Northwestern R. Co. has two routes or lines between Chicago and Sioux City formed by its main line and different branch lines, and a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer distance, on either of said routes or lines is unlawful under the fourth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Northwestern Iowa Grain & Stock Shippers' Asso. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 431.

(g) A greater charge for a shorter distance is not justified by the fact that the lumber business of the roads of a connecting line, or any of them, was done in cars which carried machinery to a longer-distance point, where profitable return loads were not always to be had. James v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co., (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 609.

(h) The greater charge for the shorter distance, if included within the longer haul, over the same line and in the same direction and under substantially similar conditions, would be clearly unlawful not only because it is prohibited by the fourth section, but because it is in itself unjust discrimination. Lehmann Higginson & Co. v. S. P. Co. 3 I. C. C. 80, 87.

(i) Complainant attacked transcontinental rates from eastern territory to San Bernardino, Calif., as unreasonable as compared with the rates to Los Angeles, Calif., the rates to the former point being higher than to the latter, although intermediate. HELD, rate attacked in violation of the fourth section, defendants required to maintain same rates to both points. San Bernardino Board of Trade v. A. T. & S. F. R. 3 I. C. C. 138.

(j) Rates on interstate shipments from points on the initial carrier's line were shown to be greater for the shorter distance from Lawtey than for the longer distance over the same line in the same direction from Gainesville, and defendants were ordered to bring their rates from Lawtey and other points in that territory in conformity with the provisions of the 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce. The fact that the initial carrier's line joins its connecting line at both Callahan and Gainesville and that traffic from Lawtey, an intermediate station, may be routed through Gainesville, the longer distance point, does not authorize defendants to charge the higher rate from Lawtey when the traffic from that point and from Gainesville is in fact routed through Callahan. Perry v. Fla. Central & Peninsular R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 740.

(k) Complainants in cases No. 324 and No. 325 dismissed. In cases Nos. 314, 315, 316, 317 and 326, defendants ordered to cease and desist from charging more to shorter than to longer distance points mentioned in the complaints, or file applications for relief under the proviso clause of the fourth section and show cause thereon, within a time specified. Trammel v. Clyde S. S. Co. et al., 4 I. C. R. 121.

(l) "Blanket" class rates applying upon the Northern Pacific road for a distance of over five hundred and eighty miles found relatively unreasonable: also held, that rates to Spokane, the principal distributing center to which such blanket rates apply, are unreasonable in themselves. Defendants ordered to cease and desist from charging rates on property from eastern points to Spokane which materially exceed 82 per cent of class rates now in effect both to Spokane and Pacific coast terminals. Provision made for reopening the case if necessary, and bringing in other carriers who may be affected by the order. Merchants' Union v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 183.

(m) In the matter of carload and mixed carload rates, minimum weight of shipments entitled to carload rates, and in all other respects, defendants are required to provide for and allow the same privileges, facilities and advantages on shipments to Spokane as are provided or allowed on like shipments to Portland or other Pacific coast terminals. Merchants' Union v. Northern Pacific R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 183.

(n) Class rates in effect upon the defendant lines and the lower commodity rates to their Pacific terminals examined and discussed: held, that the only justification for a through rate less than an intermediate rate on the same article is the compulsion of rail carriers to accept the reduced compensation or suffer ocean rivals to perform the service, and where the pressure of this alternative is not felt there is no ground upon which the lower through charge can be excused. No article should be carried to terminal points on commodity rates which, if the class rates were imposed would still seek rail rather than water transportation, and any violation of this rule is unjust discrimination against the intermediate town compelled to pay the higher class rates on the same article. Merchants' Union v. Northern Pacific R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 183.

(o) Any greater charge for the transportation of like kind of property from seaboard points to Chattanooga than for the longer distance through Chattanooga to Nashville is in violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4. Chattanooga Bd. of Trade v. East Tennessee, V. & G R. Co. (Com.), 4. I. C. R. 213.

(p) The fact that two carriers have established a joint tariff rate between two points will not, under the provisions of the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act, prevent each from charging its local rates upon shipments to and between intermediate points, although the combined local rates exceed the through rate for the longer haul. United States v. Mellen (D. C. D. Kan.) 4. I. C. R. 247.

(q) No violation of the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act which will sustain an action for damages is shown by the mere fact that a larger tariff rate was collected for shipments between points on a carrier's road than the proportion of a joint through rate which such carrier received for hauling over its road similar commodities billed to points beyond its road a longer distance which included the shorter one. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne (C. C. App. 8th C.) 4 I. C. R. 257

(r) Complainant attacked rates on beer carloads from Cincinnati, O., to Middlesborough, Ky., as unreasonable and unjust compared with rates maintained to points beyond Middlesborough on the same line. HELD, This is a violation of the fourth section and should be removed. Gerke Brewing Company v. L. & N. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 267.

(s) The rule expressed by the fourth section that distance shall ordinarily limit the adjustment of rates is not rendered inoperative by the existence at one point of converging lines subject to the act, for the law applies to each of these lines, and neither can put in rates to that point which are lower for shorter distance charges on its lines, until, upon a special showing or special considerations grounded in justice to its patrons and itself it obtains permission from the regulating authority so to do. This principle applies both to lines between the same points, and to lines reaching the same destination from different points of consignment. Gerke Brewing Co. v. L. & N. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 267, 271.

(t) When rates from any causes are made greater for shorter than for longer distances the difference between such rates must in no instance be unreasonable. Gerke Brewing Company v. L. & N. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 267, 273.

(u) Complainant attacked alleged discrimination in rates to Troy, Ala., compared with rates maintained to Montgomery and Columbus from Baltimore, New York and eastern points. Troy is intermediate to the competing points via some routes. HELD, defendants required to charge to Troy the same rates applicable to Montgomery and Columbus. Board of Trade of Troy, Ala., v. A. M. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 348.

(ua) Defendants ordered to cease and desist from making higher aggregate charges on hay under similar circumstances and conditions, over their connected roads from Memphis, Tenn., to Summerville, S. C. than they charge for carrying said commodities for the longer distance from Memphis over said connecting line through Summerville to Charleston, S. C. without prejudice to defendants' right to apply to the Commission for relief under the proviso clause of the 4th section. H. W. Behlmer, v. Memphis & Charleston R. Co. et al. 6 I. C. C. 257.

(v) Complainant attacked rates as unreasonable and in violation of the fourth section from Nashville, Tenn., to Cordele, Ga., than to Albany and Americus, Ga. Traffic from Nashville via an indirect line to Albany and Americus moves through Cordele and the indirect line meets the rates of the direct line at Albany and Americus. HELD, this constitutes a violation of the fourth section and should be removed. S. J. Hill & Bro. v. N. C. & St. L. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 343.

(w) Carriers operating shorter lines between given points cannot, although they have the advantage in making rates and in carrying under them, dictate a system of charges which the operators of long lines cannot charge as to their own roads, and the latter cannot justify greater charges for shorter distances on the ground that they must confrom to such system in order to get business on such longer line. Cordele Machine Shop v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 361.

(x) Complainants attacked as unreasonable rates on cotton piece goods, molasses, sugar, rice or coffee from Galveston, Houston or other shipping points in Texas to Wichita, Kans., compared with rates to Kansas City and other Missouri River points. HELD, inasmuch as via some of the defendants, Witchita is intermediate to Kansas City, rates attacked are in violation of the fourth section, and carriers required to maintain to Wichita, Kans., rates not higher than to Kansas City, Mo. Johnston-Larimer Dry Goods Co. v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 568.

(y) The exaction, without lawful exercise, of a greater compensation in the aggregate for the shorter than for the longer haul over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer, which is forbidden by § 4 of the Act to regulate Commerce, is only a form of unjust discrimination or undue preference, to which, it seems, Congress desired to call particular attention because of its prevalence in certain sections of the country McClelen et al. v. Southern Ry. Co. et al. 6 I. C. C. 588, 599.

(z) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory rates on classes from Baltimore, Md., to Piedmont, Ala., as compared with the rates to Anniston, Ala., Piedmont being intermediate via the same line and in the same direction. HELD, the maintenance of rates to Anniston lower than to Piedmont being in violation of the fourth section are unreasonable and unjustly prejudicial to Piedmont and carriers will be required to eliminate the violation and publish same rates to Piedmont as to Anniston. McClelen v. Southern Ry 6 I. C. C. 588.

(aa) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory rates on cotton of 80c from South Canadian and Eufaula, Indian Territory to St. Louis, Mo., as compared with a rate to St. Louis from Denison, Tex., a farther distant point, points of origin being intermediate. The defendant carries and for several years has carried, cotton from the Indian territory points to St. Louis, to be forwarded to New York, and receives for its haul to St. Louis 65 c. Out if this it pay 10 c for compressing, first hauling it to Denison for that purpose. All the conditions necessary to lower rates are more favorable now than they were then. The freight could bear a higher rate then, and is carried at lower cost now, and competition for the traffic was not then more active. The earnings now derived on uncompressed cotton at the prevailing rates far exceed the earnings from other freights carried to and from the Indian territory and are excessive in comparison with defendants charges on other traffic. HELD, rates attacked unreasonable to extent they exceed 60 c from Wagoner, Eufaula and South Canadian and 65c from Stringtown, reparation awarded. Jerome Hill Cotton Co. v. M. K. & T. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 601.

(bb) A higher charge for a shorter than for a longer distance is sought to be justified by the existence of a compress at the longer distance point where cotton may be compressed and shipped thence to destination at less expense than cotton from the shorter distance can be hauled to the longer distance point, there compressed, and hauled to destination, or, as is claimed, at less cost than it can be hauled to destination directly without compressing. The rate sheet in such case fixes a rate of charges from the shorter and longer distance points on flat or uncompressed cotton only, "with option of compression en route." In some cases the carrier avails itself of this option and has the shorter distance cotton compressed, hauling it to the longer distance point for that purpose; at other times it is carried directly to destination without compressing, the charge to the shipper being the same in either case. HELD, That when under this option system of rate-making the carrier causes cotton to be compressed at its own cost and for its own benefit, any dissimilarity of circumstances resulting therefrom is of the carrier's own making, and does not take the traffic out of the general rule of the statute which forbids a greater charge for a shorter distance. Jerome Hill Cotton Co. v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 601.

(cc) Complainant attacked rates from New York, Providence and Boston to Lynchburg, Va., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with the rates to Knoxville, Tenn. Lynchburg is directly intermediate. This is a violation of the fourth section of the act without authority. HELD, rates attacked unreasonable to extent they exceed rates to Knoxville, reparation awarded. Board of Trade of Lynchburg, Va., v. Old Dominion S. S. Co. 6 I. C. C. 632.

(dd) Under the fourth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce a carrier is not justified in charging more for the shorter than for the longer distance by competition at the longer distance point of other carriers which are themselves subject to that Act, in the absence of authority from the commission under the proviso clause of said section. Trammell v. Clyde S. S. Co. (Georgia R. Commission Cases), 5 I. C. C. Rep. 324, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 120, cited and reaffirmed. Board of Trade of Lynchburg v. Old Dominion S. S. Co. 6 I. C. C. 632.

(ee) Complainant attacked rate of 34c charged on cotton seed meal from Dyersburg, Tenn., to Philadelphia, Pa., as unjust and unreasonable as compared with a rate of 29c from Memphis, Tenn., a point beyond. One of the intermediate carriers subsequent to the filing of the complaint published the rate of 26c from both Memphis and Dyersburg. HELD, the cause of the complaint being removed, reparation made, and complaint dismissed. W. H. Boyer & Company v. C. O. & S. W. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 55.

(ff) No disturbance of rates, secret or open, creates such dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions under section four of the Act to Regulate Commerce as will justify either of two or more competiting carriers subject to that Act in charging more for the shorter than for the long haul, without an order of the Commission. Matter of Alleged Violations of the Fourth Section, 7 I. C. C. 61.

(gg) Charging the same aggregate rates on like traffic for longer and shorter distances over the same line in the same direction does not contravene the Interstate Commerce Act, § 4. Milk Producers' Protective Asso. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 7. I. C. C. 92.

(hh) Complainant attacked rates from Cincinnati, O., and Louisville, Ky., to Griffin, Ga., as compared with the rates to Macon, Ga., Griffin being intermediate, as a violation of the fourth section and unjustly discriminatory and unreasonable. HELD, Griffin is entitled to Macon rates and charging any higher rate to Griffin is an unjust discrimination under section three of the act. Brewer & Hanleiter v. L. & N. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 224.

(ii) Complainant attacked rates on coal from Alabama mines to points on the Alabama & Vicksburg Ry. west of Meridian, Miss., including Vicksburg, Miss., as in violation of the fourth section, unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. Defendants and other carriers, subject to the act, are engaged in the interstate transportation of coal, wholly by railroad, from various mines in Alabama and other states to Jackson, Miss., under agreed rates which are less for each line than is charged on coal for shorter distances over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance. HELD, that the transportation by defendants of coal in carloads from such mines to Jackson and shorter distance localities is performed under substantially similar circumstances and conditions within the meaning of the fourth section. Rates per se. Coal transported from Corona, Birmingham or Blocton, Ala., to Vicksburg, Miss., must go by railroad, and the competition of such coal and coal from other Alabama mines in the Vicksburg market is with coal brought over long distances down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers from Pittsburg, Pa., and other points in the mining district. HELD, that this is not competition between rail and water lines for transportation from a particular locality, but the competition of markets or mines for the supply of coal at Vicksburg, the force and effect of which is determined by commercial considerations peculiar to the business of shippers and wholly disconnected from the circumstances and conditions under which transportation is conducted. Carriers are required to cease and desist from publishing higher rates to shorter distance stations on the A. & V. R. Co., than rates from the same mines for the longer distances to Jackson and Vicksburg W. & Fewell v. R. & D. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 354.

(jj) Defendants and other carriers, all subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce, are engaged in the interstate transportation of coal, wholly by railroad, from various mines in Alabama and other States to Jackson, Miss., under agreed rates which are less for each line than is charged on coal for shorter distances over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance. HELD, That the transportation by defendants of coal in carloads from such mines to Jackson and shorter-distance localities is performed "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," within the meaning of the fourth section of the statute. Fewell v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 354.

(kk) Rates charged over the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific and Southern Railways for the transportation of wheat in carloads to Morristown and other points in Tennessee, found to have been higher for the shorter distance from Nicholasville, Ky., than for the longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, from Cincinnati, Ohio; but by a joint tariff recently filed the rates from Nicholasville were made not higher than those from Cincinnati. HELD, That the former rates were in violation of the fourth section of the Act, but that the present charges are not, and that formal order in that respect should not be issued. Board of Railroad Comrs. v. Cincinnati N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 380.

(ll) Complainant attacked rates on wheat from Nicholasville, Ken., to Tennessee and Georgia points as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory. Comparison of wheat rates charged by defendants from Nicholasville with higher rates to the same points from St. Louis, Chicago or Milwaukee, much more distant points of shipment, or with a lower wheat rate from Louisville, Ky., to Newport News, Va., while tending to support complainants case, not found to fairly establish the fact that the rates complained of were unreasonable or that they discriminated against Nicholasville. Rates charged over the C. N. O. & T. P., and Southern Ry. for the transportation of wheat in carloads to Morristown and other points in Tennessee found to have been higher for the shorter distance from Nicholasville, than for the longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, from Cincinnati, O., but by a joint tariff recently filed the rates from Nicholasville were made not higher than those from Cincinnati. HELD, that the former rates were in violation of the fourth section, but that the present charges are not, and that formal order in that respect should not now be issued. Board of Railroad Commissioners of Kentucky v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 380.

(mm) Freight rates over the Louisville & N. R. Co., higher from New Orleans for the shorter distance to La Grange, Georgia, than for the longer distance to Hogansville, Newman, Palmetto, or Fairburn, in the same state, violates the Interstate Commerce Act § 4, as they are under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. Calloway v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 431.

(nn) The transportation of freights by defendants from New Orleans to La Grange and Fairburn, Ga., is "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," the conditions and circumstances affecting transportation by them from New Oorleans to La Grange and Hogansville, La Grange and Newman, and La Grange and Palmetto, all in Georgia, are also substantially similar; and freight rates over defendants' line which are higher from New Orleans for the shorter distance to La Grange than for the longer distance to either Hogansville, Newman, Palmetto, or Fairburn, violate section 4 of the statute. Calloway v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 431.

(oo) Complainant attacked rates from New Orleans, La., to La Grange and Fairburn, Ga., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with the rates to Hogansville, Newnan and Palmetto, the first mentioned points being intermediate. HELD, rates attacked in violation of the fourth section and unduly discriminatory which the defendants are ordered to remove. Calloway v. L. & N. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 431.

(pp) The exaction of higher rates for a shorter than for a longer haul over the same line in the same direction, the shorter haul being included within the longer, renders a carrier amenable, not only under § 4, but also under §§ 1 and 3 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, Philips, Bailey, & Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 93.

(qq) The exaction of as high rates for a shorter haul as for a longer haul over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer, is in itself a discrimination; and if not justified by a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions, is an unjust discrimination. Philips, Bailey, & Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 8 I. C. C., 93.

(rr) While it may be in this case that as high rates on sugar and molasses for the shorter haul from New Orleans to Nashville than for the longer hauls to Louisville are justified, the evidence does not show such a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as will authorize higher rates on such transportation to Nashville than are charged to Louisville. Phillips Bailey & Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 93.

(ss) Complaint attacked rates on sugar and molasses, carloads, from New Orleans, La., to Nashville, Tenn., as in violation of section 4, unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with the rates from said points of origin to Louisville. Nashville is directly intermediate to Louisville and the evidence does not show such a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as will authorize higher rates on such transportation to Nashville than are charged to Louisville. HELD, carrier ordered to cease and desist maintaining higher rates to Nashville than to Louisville. Phillips Bailey & Company v. L. & N. R. Co. 8. I. C. C. 93.

(tt) The rates enforced by the respondent company on live poultry in carloads to Chicago are higher from Marshfield than for the longer distance from Springfield and other more distant stations on its line, to and including Columbus, Kans. It meets the competition of other roads at Springfield and various junctions to the west of Springfield, yet nowhere west of Springfield does the respondent or any of its competitors make the greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance on this traffic. Such rates on live poultry from Springfield and points west thereof are not unreasonably low. The respondent makes as low a rate to St. Louis from Marshfield as from Springfield. The circumstances and conditions applying from the points involved on the traffic in question are not substantially dissimilar. The investigation covered freight articles generally, but the testimony was confined to live poultry. HELD (1), That the respondent has failed to justify such higher rate from Marshfield than from Springfield and other more westerly stations for the carriage of live poultry to Chicago, and that by keeping such higher rates in force it is acting in violation of the fourth and third sections of the Act. (2), That the respondent should not insist upon making higher charges to Chicago from Marshfield than from more distant points of shipment upon other kinds of traffic, unless it is prepared to justify such action by showing an essentially different state of facts than appears in this proceeding. Violations of Act to Reg. Comm. By St. L. & S. F. Ry. Co. 8 I. C. C. 290.

(uu) The circumstances and conditions are not substantially dissimilar, so as to justify higher rates on live poultry for a shorter than for a longer distance, where the intermediate station is a non-competitive point, and higher rates for nearer than more distant points of shipment are not charged by the road in territory subject to competition. Re Alleged Violations of Act to Regulate Commerce, 8 I. C. C., 290.

(vv) The greater charge enforced by the respondent company for the shorter distance from Marshfield, Mo., than for the longer distance from Springfield and other more westerly stations, in the transportation of live poultry in carloads to Chicago, constitutes a departure from the general rule of the fourth section, which the carrier was bound to justify in this proceeding. Violations of Act to Reg. Com. By St. L. & S. F. Ry. Co. 8 I. C. C. 290.

(ww) The higher rate from an intermediate locality to a common destination also constitutes a prejudice to that locality and shippers and traffic therefrom, and a preference to the more distant localities and shippers and traffic therefrom, which, if found to be without sufficient excuse, must be held unreasonable and undue, and therefore in contravention of the third section. Violations of Act to Reg. Com. By St. L. & S. F. Ry. Co. 8 I. C. C. 290.

(xx) Higher less than carload rates on asbestos articles from Summerdale, a station within the city limits of Chicago, than from points north of Chicago, to and including Milwaukee, are in violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce, §§ 3, 4, where through rates were not denied before Summerdale became a part of the city of Chicago by extension of the city limits, and the circumstances and conditions governing the transportation are not dissimilar. Chicago Fire Proof Covering Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 316.

(yy) Defendants offer to carry asbestos material at established through joint rates to eastern points from stations north of Chicago, including Milwaukee; and by denying such rates on like shipments from Summerdale, an intermediate station, and exacting higher rates thereon, they subject complainant to undue prejudice in its competition with other dealers for the sale of asbestos articles and shipment thereof to eastern localities. Chicago F. P. Covering Co. v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 8 I C. C. 316.

(zz) Upon complaint that defendants charge unlawful rates on asbestos articles from Summerdale, Ill., to Lima, O., and other eastern points, it appeared that Summerdale, although within the city limits of Chicago, is a station on the C. N. W. Ry., which for purposes of shipment and carriage is independent of the main depots of that company in Chicago; that it is a shorter-distance point, and Milwaukee and other places on the Milwaukee division of the C. & N. W. north of Summerdale are longer-distance points over defendants' established through line with reference to L. C. L. shipments to eastern destinations; that defendants have through rates in effect from stations north of Chicago, but on traffic from Summerdale the Penn. Co. insists upon a higher charge made by adding rates to and from the point of connection in Chicago; that these through rates were not denied to Summerdale before it became part of Chicago by extension of the city limits; and that the circumstances and conditions governing the transportation are not dissimilar. HELD, that defendants' higher less than carload rates on asbestos articles from Summerdale than from points north of Chicago to and including Milwaukee, on shipments destined to Lima, O., and other eastern points, are in violation of sections 3 and 4 of the statute. Chicago F. P. Covering Co. v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 316.

(3a) Lower rates are in effect by the defendant and other lines on flour and other traffic from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Anoka, Elk River, Princeton and Milaca, Minn., than from St. Cloud, Minn., to eastern points; and on coal and other westbound freight the rates from eastern points are higher to St. Cloud than to the other points specified. The disparity in rates against St. Cloud greatly prejudices that city, millers, merchants and consumers in that locality, and producers of grain in the section surrounding St. Cloud in comparison with the other places mentioned and competing millers and dealers therein. The defendant competes over a long line with three other rail lines between Duluth and other Lake Superior points and St. Paul and Minneapolis for traffic to and from the the east, and St. Cloud is an intermediate point on its line; but it carries only an insignificant amount of such competitive traffic. In entering upon such competition it accepted the rates of its competitors, but being engaged in the traffic it is able to control the through rates equally with the other competing lines, and of all these lines only the defendant makes a higher charge to or from any intermediate point. HELD, upon consideration of the whole situation, that defendant carries this business from and to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Anoka and Elk River "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions" with those existing in case of business to and from St. Cloud, and that the higher rates to and from St. Cloud, the intermediate point, are in violation of the fourth section. Geo. Tileston Mill Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 346.

(3b) A carrier competing over a long line is not justified in charging more for the short than the long haul to the prejudice of an intermediate point where such discrimination brings it but a small amount of competitive traffic, and it is able to control the through rate equally with its competitors who observe the rule of the 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce. George Tileston Milling Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 346.

(3c) Under all the circumstances and conditions, freight rates from northern and eastern cities, from western points of shipment, and from New Orleans to Lynchburg, Va., may properly be somewhat lower than the rates to Danville, Va.; but the present rates to Danville as compared with those in force to Lynchburg, are excessive under the 4th as well as the 3d section of the statute. The rates from northern and eastern cities and from New Orleans to Danville on sugar, molasses, rice and coffee should not exceed those to Lynchburg by more than 10 per cent. The rates between Danville and the west, including the rate on tobacco to Louisville, Ky., should not exceed those between Lynchburg and the west by more than fifteen per cent. Danville v. Southern R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 409.

(3d) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory rates to Danville, Va. The system of rate making into Southern territory under which, on traffic from St. Louis, Chicago, and other points, the rates to Danville are the sums of the locals to and from the Ohio river, and the rates to Lynchburg, Va., are made on a much lower joint rate basis, is utterably unreasonable. No opinion is expressed as to the system as a general scheme, but if the carriers desire to make rates in that manner they must so adjust their charges as not to annihilate the city of Danville. Rates to Danville must be adjusted with relation to rates to competitive localities, like Lynchburg, and the carriers from the point of origin to destination should prorate in these rates if they participate in either Lynchburg or Danville business. In determining the Danville rate from New Orleans and western points of shipment, the Southern Railway, which dominates the situation should instead of adding to the rate to Lynchburg the local back from Lynchburg, recognize that the business is through business upon which Lynchburg, a competitor of Danville, enjoys a low through rate, and upon which Danville itself is entitled to a through rate. Freight rates from northern and eastern cities, from western points of shipment, and from New Orleans to Lynchburg may properly be somewhat lower than the rates to Danville, but the present rates to Danville as compared with those in force to Lynchburg are excessive under the fourth as well as the third section of the act. The rates from northern and eastern cities to Danville and the rates from New Orleans to Danville on sugar, molasses, rice and coffee should not exceed those to Lynchburg by more than 10%. The rates between Danville and the west, including the rate on tobacco to Louisville, Ky., should not exceed those between Lynchburg and the west by more than 15%. City of Danville, Va. v. Southern Ry. Co. 8. I. C. C. 409.

(3e) The Commission has held in complaints under the fourth section, that a case for the complainant was made out by the mere showing of the higher rate to the intermediate point, and that the defendants was thereupon required to justify those rates. City of Danville v. Southern Ry. Co. 8 I. C. C. 409, 426.

(3f) The rule of section 4 of the law, forbidding the greater charge for the shorter than the longer haul, has no application to this case. That rule is based on distance and relates to the actual transportation charges and not to demurrage charges, which are in the nature of charges for storage in the cars of the carrier. (Interstate Commerce Commission v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 167 U. S. 644, 42 L. ed. 309, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep 986.) If, however, such demurrage charges when added to transportation rates result in greater aggregate charges in certain cases than in other cases involving longer hauls, this may constitute undue preference as between different localities under section 3. Pa. Millers' State Asso. v. Phila. & R. Ry. Co., 8 I. C. C. 531.

(3g) This proceeding involves the legality of greater freight charges to Denver than to San Francisco from Missouri River and points east; greater freight charges from Denver than from Missouri River and points east to San Francisco; greater freight charges to Denver than to Missouri River and points east from San Francisco; greater freight charges from Denver than from San Francisco to Missouri River and points east. Pending the controversy, numerous concessions in rates in favor of Denver were made by the carriers, among which are charges making west-bound rates apparently no higher to or from Denver than those in effect from Missouri River or points east. The circumstances and conditions affecting the transportation, including the effect of water competition in both directions between the Pacific Coast and the Atlantic Seaboard, the competition of markets, the physical condition of the lines, and the condition of the carrires themselves, considered, and upon the whole situation,—HELD, That the rates complained of are in violation of the 4th and 3d sections of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and that, as matter of general application, rates at Denver to or from the east, or to or from the Pacific Coast, ought not to be higher than those between San Francisco or other Pacific Coast terminals and the Missouri River or points east. While there are perhaps instances in both directions where higher intermediate rates may properly be maintained, no exception has been claimed as to any article west-bound. In case of east-bound traffic, defendants' contention that the rate on sugar might be higher to Denver than to Missouri River is sustained, it being found that the circumstances and conditions governing the traffic are different when it is carried to Missouri River points than when it stops at Denver. Kendel et al. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 608.

(3h) Section 4 declares that the carrier shall not make the higher charge to the nearer point under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. If the circumstances and conditions are not substantially similar, then the section does not apply, and the carrier is not bound to regard it in the making of its tariffs. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(3i) Where the circumstances and conditions at the longer-distance point are substantially dissimilar, the carrier may judge of this for itself, in the first instance, and fix the rates for the longer-distance point without violating § 4 of the act; but this does not preclude the courts or the commission from inquiring as to whether the rates to the shorter-distance points are unjust or unreasonable, or whether they constitute undue preference for, or unjust prejudice against any locality. Citing: Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 41 U. S. App. 453, 74 Fed Rep. 723, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 685, 168 U. S. 173, 42 L. ed. 425. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App XIII.

(3j) That dissimilarity exists in conditions does not of itself justify a departure from the long and short haul provision of the Interstate Commerce Act, but the dissimilarity must be so great as to justify the discrimination made. I. C. C. v. E. Tenn. Vir., & Georgia R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. XLIII.

(3k) Authority from the Interstate Commerce Commission is not necessary to entitle carriers to depart from the rule against charging more for a short than for a long haul because of a different condition arising from competition by other carriers. The court says: "If railway carriers engage in a competitive struggle for business at a place where they meet, and underbid each other or other carriers to a point which is not in itself remunerative, can they turn back on the line, and, taking advantage of the conditions existing in other localities, arising either from the fact that there is no opportunity for competition or from the fact that by concert of the carriers there is none, charge such rates for the shorter haul as shall make good their lack of profits on their whole business to the point they set before themselves as reasonable? To the proposition thus roundly stated no doubt counsel for the carriers would say that they could not contend for it. And yet this is the result reached by the not very indirect steps of the argument. And the proposition itself cannot be admitted without tearing up by the roots the whole scheme of the commerce act." I. C. C. v., E. Tenn., Vir., & Georgia R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. XLIII.

(31) Freight rates on goods shipped from Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville, and Nashville to Tifton, which are higher than rates on goods shipped to Valdosta, Ga., the longer distance point, via Tifton, violate the Act to Regulate Commerce. Mayor and Council of Tifton, Ga. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 160.

(31a) Rates on shipments which pass from New York and other eastern cities over water and rail lines to Tifton, Ga., and through Tifton to Albany, which are higher to Tifton than those to Albany, the longer distance point, violate the Act to Regulate Commerce. Mayor and Council of Tifton, Ga. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 160.

(3m) Freight passes from New York and other eastern cities over water and rail lines via. Savannah to Tifton, Ga., and through Tifton to Albany, Ga. Freight also passes by all rail routes from Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville and Nashville to Tifton and through Tifton to Valdosta, Ga. The circumstances and conditions at Tifton are substantially similar to those at Albany on traffic from the east, and the circumstances and conditions at Tifton are substantially similar to those at Valdosta on traffic from the north and west. HELD, That freight rates from New York and other eastern cities over such water and rail lines to Tifton which are higher than those to Albany, the longer distance point, are in violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce; that freight rates from Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville and Nashville which are higher to Tifton than those to Valdosta, the longer distance point, are in violation of the Act to regulate commerce; that freight rates to Tifton which are less than those to Albany or Valdosta from the points named are not authorized to be increased by this decision; that the present rates enforced for the transportation of sugar from New Orleans to Tifton are unjust and unduly prejudicial to Tifton, and such rates to be lawful should not exceed the rates on the same commodity from New Orleans to Valdosta. Mayor and Council of Tifton v. L. & N. R. R. Co. et al 9 I. C. C. 160.

(3n) Complainant attacks class and commodity rates as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory from Nashville, Tenn., Cincinnati, O. Louisville, Ky., and Evansville, Ind., to Tifton, Ga., than from the same points to Albany, Americus, Dawson, Cordele and Macon, Ga.; also rates form New York to Tifton are higher than to points beyond to which Tifton is intermediate. Freight passes from New York and other eastern cities over water and rail lines via Savannah to Tifton and through Tifton to Albany, Ga. Freight also passes by all rail routes from Cincinnati, Louisville, Nashville and Evansville to Tifton and through Tifton to Valdosta, Ga. The circumstances and conditions at Tifton are substantially similar to those at Albany on traffic from the east, and the same as to Valdosta on traffic from the north and west. HELD, rates attacked unreasonable to extent they exceeded rates in effect to points beyond such as Albany and Valdosta. Mayor and Council of Tifton, Ga., v. L. & N. R. R. 9 I. C. C. 160.

(3o) Freight rates on goods shipped from Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville, and Nashville to Tifton which are higher than rates on goods shipped to Valdosta, Ga., the longer distance point, via Tifton violate the Act to Regulate Commerce. Business Men's League of St. Louis v. Atchison T. & S. F. R. 9 I. C. C., 318.

(3p) Complainant attacked as unreasonable, commodity rates on lumber from points west of the Mississippi River in Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas to Wichita, Kans., as compared with rates on like traffic from the same points to Kansas City, Mo., Omaha and Lincoln, Neb., and Topeka, Kans., and that such rates are higher via the Santa Fe and Rock Island for the shorter distance to Wichita than for the longer distance through Wichita to the destinations named. It appeared that competitive conditions existing in Kansas City, Omaha and Lincoln produce rates lower to those points from the lumber territory and that such competitive conditions do not exist at Wichita; that there is no substantial dissimilarity in the conditions governing the transportation of lumber from such territory to Wichita and through Wichita to Topeka by the Santa Fe and Rock Island; that the rate from such lumber producing territory to Wichita is excessive to the extent of 1c per 100 pounds. HELD, rates to Wichita compared to those to Kansas City, Omaha and Lincoln are not in violation of the third and fourth sections, that all the defendants violate the third section by maintaining lower rates to Topeka than Wichita, that the Santa Fe and Rock Island violate section 4 by maintaining higher lumber rates to Wichita than to Topeka, and that the rates to Wichita is unreasonable and should be reduced 1c per 100 pounds. Mayor and Council of Wichita, Kans. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. 9 I. C. C. 569.

(3q) A charge of a higher rate on lumber from western points to Wichita, Kansas, than for the longer distance through Wichita to Topeka, Kan., violates the Interstate Commerce Act, where the circumstances and conditions at Topeka do not differ from those at Wichita. Mayor and City Council of Wichita, Kansas v. Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 569.

(3r) Except as to 140 commodities, defendant complied with order of the Commission directing that rates from the Pacific Coast should not be higher to Denver than to the Missouri River, and later, pending further investigation, the number of articles insisted upon as constituting exceptions was reduced to 32. In this case it was held by the Commission in its previous report that defendants were warranted in charging a higher rate to Denver than to the Missouri River on sugar carried from the Pacific Coast, and it is now further held that defendants are justified in maintaining rates from the Pacific Coast which are lower to Missouri River points than to Denver upon rice, hemp, baking powder, blankets, books, boots and shoe heels, chocolate, cocoa and extracts, but that as to all of the other commodities mentioned in this report the rate from Pacific Coast points should not be higher to Denver than to points on the Missouri River. Kindel et al. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. et. al. 9 I. C. C. 606.

(3s) As to traffic other than the excepted commodities herein mentioned the general rule which has been laid down in this case is that in the making of these trans-continental rates Denver must receive the same treatment that is accorded to cities in the Middle West and Missouri River territory. It has not been held that rates between New York and San Francisco in either direction must not be lower than at Denver, nor has the inherent reasonableness of the rates to Denver from any direction been considered. Kindel et al. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 606.

(3t) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates on freight articles from St. Louis, Mo., East St. Louis and Cairo, Ill., to Mobile, Ala., Meridian, Miss., lower than for the shorter distances to Tupelo, Aberdeen, Columbus, West Point and Starkville, Miss. The principal commodity involved is that of grain on which rates were reduced prior to April 1, 1901 due to a crop failure in that region, but they were subsequently advanced on Dec. 9, 1901. The rates from St. Louis, Mo., to Mobile and Meridian were affected by water competition which created substantial dissimilarity in the conditions affecting transportation, which condition was not present at intermediate points. HELD, rates attacked not unreasonable but rates on grain should be reduced. Aberdeen Commercial Asso. v. M. & O. R. R. 10 I. C. C. 289.

(3u) Prior to April 25, 1903, defendant had in effect rates per 100 lbs. on bananas in carloads from Charleston, which were 43 cents to Danville and 20 cents to Lynchburg. The rate of 20 cents to Lynchburg was 13 cents below the rate which was justified by competition from Baltimore or elsewhere. Such relation of rates was in violation of section four of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Gardner & Clark v. Southern R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 342.

(3v) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unduly prejudicial commodity rates on hay, carloads, from Pataskala, O., to Wilmington, N. C., and Greenville, N. C. Rate charged 23c to Wilmington and 36c to Greenville. The rate from Columbus, a point beyond to which Pataskala is intermediate was 17c and 25c respectively. Correct tariff rate was 22c to Wilmington and 30c to Greenville, shipments overcharged. The number of roads centering at Columbus, and the initial reduction by a rival line at that point make such a competitive condition as creates a situation which does not necessarily demand like rates. HELD, shipments overcharged, refund ordered, no unjust discrimination found. Dewey Bros Co. v. B. & O. R. R. 11 I. C. C. 475.

(3w) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory rates from Dalton, Ga., on lumber, carloads., to points in Virginia. Destination points are on the N. & W., between Bristol, Va., and Roanoke, Va., and rates to these destinations are higher than to Roanoke and Lynchburg, Va., to which they are intermediate. HELD, the facts do not, in view of the judicial interpretation of the act, furnish basis for a conclusion that the rates in question violate the socalled long and short haul clause. Prior to the complaint rates were advanced making them higher than the rate to Lynchburg a point beyond, the N. & W., being willing to apply the Lynchburg rate at intermediate points. HELD, rates attacked unreasonable to extent they exceeded rates to Lynchburg. Farrar v. Southern Ry 11 I. C. C. 640.

(3x) Complaint that rate on sugar in carloads from New Orleans, La., to McAlester, Ind. Terr., of 38 cents per 100 pounds, was unreasonable and unduly discriminatory, defendant's rate to Muskogee, Ind. Terr., a more distant point over the same line, being 35 cents, —dismissed, defendants having reduced their rate. Hale-Halsell Grocery Co. v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 136.

(3y) Complainant attacked through commodity rate charged on petroleum and its products from Oil City, Pa., to Freeport, Ill., as unreasonable. Rate charged was 25 1-3, rate to Chicago being 16c and 7c beyond, or combination of 23c. Subsequently rate charged was reduced to the combination on Chicago. HELD, complaint dismissed. National Petroleum Association v. Pennsylvania R. R. 12 I. C. C. 153.

(3z) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity through rate charged on silos, carloads from Kalamazoo, Mich., to Elkhorn, Wis. The through rate was 28c whereas the rate to Chicago was 11c and 6c beyond, or total of 17c. Defendant expressed willingness to publish the combination as a through rate and award reparation. HELD, rate attacked unreasonable to extent it exceeded 17c, reparation awarded. Kalamazoo Tank & Silo Co. v. M. C. R. R. 12 I. C. C. 155.

(4a) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity rates charged on coke from Kentucky and Virginia to Terre Haute, Ind. The rates to Chicago were on a lower basis although Terre Haute was intermediate. Subsequently the defendants published the same rate to Terre Haute as to Chicago. HELD, complaint dismissed. Manufacturers Club of Terre Haute v. L. & N. R. R. 12 I. C. C. 157.

(4b) Complainant attacked commodity rate charged of $1.05 per ton of coal, carload, from Mineral, Kans., to Freeman, Mo., while it had in force a rate of 80c per ton from Mineral to Harrisonville, Mo., a longer distance point by its line, as unreasonable and unjust. At the hearing it was agreed that defendant should make the 80c rate effective to Freeman and that complaint should withdraw its claim for reparation. HELD, complaint dismissed. George D. Hope Lumber Co. v. M. K. & T. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 191.

(4c) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity rate of 22c charged on salt, carloads, from New Orleans, La., to Cullman, Ala. Cullman is 54 miles north of Birmingham and 33 miles south of Decatur on the North & South Alabama Ry. which is controlled by the L. & N. The 22c rate is made up of the 12c rate to Birmingham and 10c beyond. Prior to 1905 the rate to Decatur was 16c and increased to 18c. Salt from New Orleans Cullman being 471 and Decatur 504 miles from New Orleans via this line. There is no competition at Cullman either by rail or water but there is water competition at Decatur, also there is carrier competition at that point. HELD, rate attacked unreasonable to extent it exceeded 20c, reparation awarded on shipments moving since the filing of the complaint. Farmers Warehouse Co. v. L. & N. R. R. 12 I. C. C. 457.

(4d) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity rates charged on coal, carloads, from Rockvale and Trinidad districts in Colorado to Coolidge, Lakin, Garden City, Cimarron and Dodge City, Kans., and unduly discriminatory as compared with rates from said mines to Hutchison, Kans., and Ardmore, Okla. Rates to the latter points were lower than to the intermediate territory as defendant claimed they were necessary to meet competition from the Pittsburg mining district in Kansas. HELD, rates attacked unreasonable to extent they exceeded from Rockvale $2.55 to Coolidge, and from Trinidad $2.30. Southwestern Kansas Farmers & Business Mens League v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 530.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(4e) A less charge for a longer haul than for a shorter one, where the latter is included within the former, is not unlawful under section 4 of the Act, if there is substantial dissimilarity of circumstance and conditions. Competition between carriers at the more distant point may create substantial dissimilarity of circumstance. A commodity may be produced at two points widely distant from each other and different carriers may serve the different points. The commodity from one point of production may meet that from the other in competition in a common territory between the two points. If the carriers serving the one point of production make a reasonable and remunerative rate therefrom to the common field of consumption, the other producing point may be given equality of rates to the common competing territory by the carriers serving such point of production, if such equalizing in rates is reasonable and remunerative. Bovaird Supply Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 13 I. C. C. 56, 62.

(4g) A movement of traffic may be affected by water competition at a more distant point and yet a rate made up of the combination of the rate by water plus the rate back be unreasonable and unjust. Nevada, Utah, Arizona and Idaho are nearer to the Pacific coast than to the Atlantic, but this does not of itself justify charging them overland rail rates which will give them none of the advantages arising out of their shorter distance to an eastern base of supplies, nor does it follow that a rate to a point on the seaboard is lower than would be justified if that point were not so situated. In short it is not sufficient to state that the terminal points are situated on the water to excuse the imposition of higher rates at intermediate points. Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 19 I. C. C. 238, 250.

(4h) Under the fourth section as amended in 1910 a carrier is not permitted to charge more for a short than for a long haul unless permission to do so is given by the Commission. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 400, 411; Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 335.

(4i) A carrier should not unduly discriminate between its nearer and farther points. It is justified in discriminating in favor of one city as against another if they are so differently circumstanced that at one point transportation forces are brought into play which are not or cannot be exercised at another point. But a carrier is not justified in deliberately adopting a policy of preference toward one city as against another. In Re Application of the S. P. Co., 22 I. C. C. 366, 375.

(4j) Where, under a complaint attacking a rate to an intermediate point higher than that to a more distant point, the Commission determines that the rate to the intermediate point is unreasonable and prescribes a reasonable rate, this form of order does not establish a relation between the long distance and the intermediate rate. If for reasons over which the carrier has no control the rate to the more distant point should be reduced, the carrier might meet this reduction without any corresponding reduction at the nearer point, and, conversely, if the rate to the more distant point were advanced, the carrier could not at the same time advance the rate to the nearer point. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n. v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 531.

(4k) The intermediate rate should not exceed the long-distance rate plus a reasonable local charge from the more remote back to the intermediate point, and should perhaps, in some cases, be even less. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 531.

(4l) The fact that a carrier, being estopped by the order of a state commission from increasing the rates to certain terminal points, the denial of its application for relief from the fourth section would leave it no alternative but to reduce rates to intermediate points to the terminal basis with consequent loss of revenue which it is no position to sustain, is not of controlling force. Rates on

Grain and Grain Products, 33 I. C. C. 613, 620.

(4m) The incorporation of rule 77, Tariff Circular 18-A, in a tariff is a recognition of the rights of intermediate points under the long-and-short-haul rule and a published guaranty that those rights will be recognized and protected upon demand. Drake Marble & Tile Co. v. C. G. W. R. R. Co. 39 I. C. C. 422, 423.

(4n) Same minimum but lower rate applied from a farther distance point thereby creating a departure from the fourth section which defendant apparently removed by reducing the rate and increasing the minimum from the intermediate point. Departure, however, still exists when the minima are considered in connection with the rates and no justification therefor shown. Karchmer Iron & Metal Co. v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 730, 731.

(4o) Where a shipper made request for application of lower rate to an intermediate point under Rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A, as provided in tariff failure of carrier to comply found in violation of tariff provision; but, since shipment was billed and moved to the farther distant point and then reconsigned to the intermediate point, combination rate legally applicable found not unreasonable or unlawful. Red Star Yeast & Products Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 61 I. C. C. 107.

(4p) Under the amended fourth section the Commission has no authority to authorize a lower charge from farther distant competitive points than from intermediate points where the haul from the intermediate points is not longer than that of the direct line or route from the farther distant competitive points. Buckeye Veneer Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 61 I. C. C. 673, 675.

(4q) In cases where Rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A or a similar rule is involved, the fact that there may have been no movement of a particular description of traffic to the intermediate point in the past affords no basis for refusal to publish thereto a rate not higher than that to the farther distant point. Macon Chamber of Commerce v. N. Y. N. H. & H. 63 I. C. C. 327, 331.

(4r) Applicable tariff provided for the application to intermediate points of rates from or to the next more distant station when rates are not specifically published, subject to the general proviso, "Except as may be otherwise specifically provided in the tariff." A commodity rate basis was provided to the points in question but no rates were shown thereunder for gasoline or wrought iron pipe. That clause was applicable when "rates" were not specifically published to or from stations less distant than those to or from which rates were provided, and the publication of a rate basis without corresponding rates did not operate to make inapplicable the intermediate clause. Standard Oil Co. v. Director General 66 I. C. C. 472, 473.

(4s) Except unusual conditions, the Commission has uniformly awarded reparation on shipments moving from intermediate points under rates were higher than from a more distant point, where the rates from the latter point was established subject to rule 77. New York & New Jersey Lubricant Co. v. Director General 68 I. C. C. 477, 478.

(4t) A lower rate to a farther distant than to an intermediate point, applicable via route other than route of movement, does not constitute a violation of the fourth section of the act. Schultz & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 647.

(4u) Frequently when a class basis of rate is displaced and commodity rates established between certain points, the higher class basis obtaining at intermediate points must be adjusted to meet the requirements of the fourth section. Certain-Teed Products Corp. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 444, 446.

(4v) Contention that there is no departure from long-and-short-haul provision of fourth section of the act where carrier is prohibited, by trackage agreement from transporting to or from intermediate local points, being required to turn over such freight to carrier owning line while reaching lower rated farther distant point with its own power, not sustained. Compensation received under joint rate for shorter distance is greater than that under single-line rate for longer distance over the same route in same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance. Axton Case, 37 I. C. C. 389; Boldt Glass Co., 60 I. C. C. 495. Hartburg Lumber Co., v. B., S. L. & W. Ry. Co., 81 I. C. C. 497 498, 499.

(4w) Contention that charging proportional rate lower than local rate to defendant's terminal, or charging a proportional rate to a terminal lower than local rate to an intermediate point, are departures from fourth section of the act, rejected as untenable. Southern Illinois Millers' Asso., 23 I. C. C. 672; Rates on Grain and Grain Products to Texarkana, Ark., 29 I. C. C. 35. Ohio Refining Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 81 I. C. C. 688, 690.

§6 Intermediate Points Off Line.

(a) A reduced rate to the terminus of a through route, under the compulsion of competition, is not unjust discrimination against a nearer town not located on the line of the through route but, reached over a lateral connecting road. Lehman v. Southern P. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 80.

(b) Where a reduced rate is made at the terminus of a through route, under the compulsion of competition, a town not located on the line of the through route, but reached over a lateral connecting road, has a disadvantage of situation entailing some additional expense, and a reasonably higher rate to such town than the forced competitive rate to the more distant terminus of the through route is not unjust discrimination. Lehman Higginson & Co. v. S. P. Co., 3. I. C. C. 80, 92.

(c) Defendant Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company's rate on butter and eggs from Granite Falls, Minn., to Chicago, Ill., is 59 cents per 100 pounds in carload lots. Defendant's rate from Pipestone, Minn., to Chicago, Ill., is 47 cents per 100 pounds in carload lots, although Granite Falls is 41 miles nearer Chicago, but on a different branch of the road. The same rates are in force over defendant Great Northern Railway Company, although Granite Falls is an intermediate point between Pipestone and Chicago on the line made by the Great Northern Railway and its connections. Held, defendant Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company's rate of 59 cents per 100 pounds on butter and eggs in carload lots from Granite Falls to Chicago is unreasonable and unjust, and should not exceed 47 cents per 100 pounds. Morse Produce Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co. et al. 12 I. C. C. 485.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) It has been held that all the coal mines are on lateral roads they must be regarded as intermediate for all practical rate-making purposes and their rates are governed by the 4th section American Coal Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 149, 156.

(e) As the lower rate in effect from the farther distant point did not apply over the route of movement, the rate charged did not involve any departure from or violation of the fourth section. Sunderland Bros. Co. v. M. P. Ry., 45 I. C. C. 193, 194.

(f) A lower rate to a farther distant than to an intermediate point, applicable via a route other than route of movement does not constitute a violation of the fourth section of the act. Schultz & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 647.

§6¼ Comparison of Rates.

See Comparative Rates.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The charging of a local rate for a shorter distance higher than a proportional rate for a longer distance over the same line or route in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, is not a violation of the fourth section. Iowa Railroad Commissioners v. Director General, 63 I. C. C. 405, 406.

(b) It is well settled that in applying the provisions of the fourth section rates and fares of the same kind should be compared with one another. Passenger Fares Between New York, N. Y., and Points West of Newark, N. J., 74 I. C. C., 516, 519.

§6½ Participation in route.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The inhibition of the long-and-short-haul clause of the fourth section is not restricted to movements over the line or lines of one carrier only, but embraces hauls over the lines of any number of carriers. Bennett & Son v. C. & O. Ry., 38 I. C. C. 310, 314.

(b) Carriers will be expected to correct a fourth section departure occurring in connection with a route not used by carriers but which is available under their joint tariffs. Galion Iron Works & Mfg. Co. v. B. & O. R. R., 47 I. C. C. 136, 140.

§6¾ Exceeding Combination of Intermediates.

See Advanced Rates, §5 (2½); Through Routes and Joint Rates, §15.

(a) Defendants ordered to cease and desist from making higher aggregate charges on hay, and other commodities carried under similar circumstances and conditions, over their connected roads from Memphis, Tenn., to Summerville, S. C., than they charge for carrying said commodities for the longer distance from Memphis over said connecting line through Summerville to Charleston, S. C., without prejudice to defendants' right to apply to the Commission for relief under the proviso clause of the fourth section. Behlmer v. Memphis & C. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 520.

(b) Charging the same aggregate rates on like traffic for longer and shorter distances over the same line, in the same direction, does not contravene the provisions of section four of the act. Milk Producers' Protective Asso. v. D. L. & W. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 92, 163.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) The fourth section of the Act is obviously violated whenever a combination of rates governed by like rules and regulations is lower than the through rate. It may, however, also be violated in cases where the regulations or commodity descriptions in the classification territories vary. If a shipment is offered for transportation in such a manner as to comply with the requirements of both classifications, there can be no question as to the application of the intermediate rates, and the Act is violated by a refusal to revise the through rate to the basis of the intermediate rate. Memphis Freight Bureau v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry., 39 I. C. C. 224, 240.

(d) The effect of a rule that where the aggregate of the intermediate rates made less than the joint through rate the former should be applied as the lawful rate is to relieve the tariff from objection on account of the provision of the fourth section which declares that any through charge greater than the aggregate of the intermediate rates subject to the Act shall be unlawful. Graham & Gila County Traffic Assn. v. A. E. R. R. Co., 40 I. C. C., 573, 583.

(e) If both intermediates are subject to the Act, through rates which exceed the aggregate of the intermediate rates are in violation of the fourth section. Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. A. H. T. Ry. Co., 41 I. C. C. 83, 124.

(f) A joint rate in excess of the combination, not protected by an appropriate fourth section application, is illegal. Heckel v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 513, 514.

(g) The Commission's jurisdiction over switching charges attaches only by reason of the fact that they are applicable in connection with interstate shipments, and in determining whether or not a fourth section departure exists, the aggregate charges for the transportation from point of origin must be considered and not merely the switching charges. Sheldon Axle & Spring Co. v. L. V. R. R. Co., 53 I. C. C. 43.

(h) The Commission has repeatedly found that a through rate which exceeds the aggregate of the intermediates over the route of movement is prima facie unreasonable. Alabama Georgia Syrup Co. v. Director General 68 I. C. C. 618, 621.

(i) The Commission has repeatedly found that no presumption of unreasonableness attaches to a joint rate applicable over a particular route because the aggregate of the intermediate rates over another route would make a lower charge. Humble Pipe Line Co. v. Director General 68 I. C. C. 651, 652.

(j) When assessment of a switching charge in connection with transit results in greater aggregate compensation to carrier than sum of intermediate rates, it can not be considered that section 4 has thereby been violated, for services performed are not the same in the two instances. Transit involves an additional service on part of carrier for which separate charges may be made; the switching charge is an additional expense incident to the transit service. Detroit Board of Trade v. W. Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 717, 720, 721.

(k) Section four of the act provides that it shall be unlawful for any common carrier to charge any greater compensation as a through rate than the aggregate of the intermediate rates subject to the provisions of the act. There is no violation of this clause unless the carrier maintains a specific through rate which is higher than the lowest aggregate of intermediate rates over the same route. The product of intermediate rates treated by a rule which results in something less than the aggregate is not the aggregate within the meaning of the section. McLeod v. T. & P. Ry., 89 I. C. C. 356, 357.

§6¾a Combinations Subject to Section 4.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) When assessment of a switching charge in connection with transit results in greater aggregate compensation to carrier than sum of intermediate rates, it can not be considered that section 4 has thereby been violated, for services performed are not the same in the two instances. Transit involves an additional service on part of carrier for which separate charge may be made; the switching charge is an additional expense incident to transit service. Detroit Board of Trade v. W. Ry. Co. 80 I. C. C. 717, 720, 721.

(b) Complainant contended that charging a proportional rate lower than the local rate to defendants terminal, or charging a proportional rate to one point lower than the local rate to another, are departures from the fourth Section. This contention is untenable. Ohio Refining Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co. 81 I. C. C. 688, 690.

§6⅞ Discrimination and Reasonableness. See Discrimination; Reasonableness of Rates

(a) The provisions of section 1, requiring charges to be reasonable and just, and of section 2, forbidding unjust discrimination, apply when exceptional charges are made under section 4, as they do in other cases. Re Southern Ry. & S. S. Asso. v. 1. I. C. R. 278.

(b) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates on lumber from Johnson City, Tenn., to Boston, Mass. Rate charged 36c, distance 911 miles, while rate from Atlanta was 34c distance 1240 miles which is alleged to be in violation of the fourth section. From Macon, Ga., to Boston the rate is the same as from Johnson City, 417 miles the shorter distance over the same line. HELD, rates attacked are considerably higher than from contiguous territory and a reasonable rate from Johnson City would be 33c. James & Abbott v. E. T. V. & G. R. R. 2 I. C. C. 609.

(c) Reduced rates at points where competition influences are controlling must not fall below some revenue from the traffic in excess of cost; and higher rates at other points, required for the necessary revenue of a carrier, must be reasonable in themselves, and also relatively reasonable in comparison with the competitive rate. Lehman v. Southern P. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 80.

(d) Complainant attacked rates to Kramer, Ga., from New York, Boston and Providence and from Louisville, Evansville and Nashville as discriminatory and unjust. The rates from interstate points to Kramer, Ga., via the C. R. & C. R. R., are made by taking the through rate to recognized basing points and adding thereto that local rate which will give the lowest combination. HELD, this operates as an unjust discrimination against Kramer. Hamilton & Brown v. C. R. & C. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. 482.

(e) Same rate for longer and shorter distance. Ordinarily longer distances warrant higher charges, but carriers may lawfully accept the same aggregate, though less profitable, rate for longer distances, provided such carriers do not "subject any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality, or any particular description of traffic, to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage." James & Mayer Buggy Co. v. Cincinnati N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 682, 685.

(f) Section 2 of the "Act to Regulate Commerce," forbidding unjust discrimination, applies even in cases where a departure from the "long and short haul rule" of the statute is shown to be authorized, and the right, if established, of making the greater charge for the shorter haul, does not justify a disparity in rates so great as to result in unjust discrimination. Raworth v. Northern Pacific R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 857.

(g) The "long and short haul rule" of the statute was intended to maintain and promote, and not to destroy or neutralize, natural commercial advantages resulting from location. Raworth v. Northern P. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 857.

(h) The facts that the rates to the longer distance point cannot be raised without a loss of the traffic involved, and that the rate to both the longer-distance point and the shorter distance point are not unreasonable in themselves, do not justify a disparity in such rates resulting in unjust discrimination as against the shorter-distance point. Raworth v. Northern P. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R., 857, 863.

(i) The Act to Regulate Commerce, § 2, forbidding unjust discriminations, applies even in cases where a departure from the "long and short haul rule" of the statute is shown to be authorized, and the right, if established, of making the greater charge for the shorter haul, does not justify a disparity in rates so great as to result in unjust discrimination. Raworth v. Northern P. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R., 857.

(j) When rates from any cause are made greater for shorter than for longer distances, the difference between such rates must in no instance be unreasonable. Gerke Brew. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 267.

(k) The law forbidding unjust discrimination applies even in cases where a departure from the long and short haul rule of the statute is shown to be authorized, and the right, if established, of making the greater charge for the shorter haul, does not justify a disparity in rates so great as to result in unjust discrimination. Freight Bureau v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 592, 612.

(l) While carriers operating shorter lines have the advantage, both in making rates and in carrying under them, they cannot dictate a system of charges which the operators of longer lines may not charge as to their own roads, though it may be true as a rule, and as claimed by defendants, that, to get business, longer lines must take it as low as rates at the time in force over more direct routes. Cordele Machine Shop v. Louisville & N. R. Co. et al. 6 I. C. C. 361.

(m) Complainant attacked rates on pig iron of $3.84 and on coal $2.30 per ton from Birmingham, Ala., to Cordele, Ga., as compared with rate of $2.00 per ton on pig iron and $1.60 per ton on coal to Macon, Ga., 65 miles beyond Cordele, Ga., as unjust and unreasonable as well as unjustly discriminatory. HELD, the defendants may lawfully accept less for their haul to Cordele as a part of the through rate to Macon than they might lawfully charge for the haul to Cordele for local delivery; but when the defendants carry a ton of pig iron to Cordele destined to Macon, and receive for their share of the through tariff $1.45 and when they carry it to Cordele for complainant they charge $3.69, this charge is exorbitant and unduly prejudicial to complainant to extent the rate to Cordele exceeds $1.60 on coal and $1.80 on pig iron. Cordele Machine Shop v. L. & N. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 361.

(n) The fourth section of the act cuts off any presumption in favor of as great compensation for short as for long distances, and is based on the assumption that ordinarily a higher charge for a shorter distance is discriminating and excessive. Cordele Machine Shop v. L. &. N. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 361, 372.

(o) Complainant attacked rates on iron and steel and steel rails from Pueblo, Colo., to San Francisco, of $1.60 per 100 pounds as compared with rates from Chicago, Ill., Mississippi River points and Missouri River points of 60, 58, and 54c per 100 pounds and from Atlantic Seaboard lower than from Chicago as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. The shipment of iron and steel from foreign countries to San Francisco at low rates by water affects the iron and steel industry at Pueblo as well as at eastern points in respect to participation in supplying that market. Rates in force from Pueblo to San Francisco prohibits the movement of iron and steel articles from the former place to the latter, while greatly lower rates from other and far more distant points prevail on such traffic to San Francisco, and the carriers cost of transportation is much less from Pueblo than from such more distant points of shipment. HELD, such rates from Pueblo are unreasonable and unjust and unduly prejudicial to the extent they exceed from Pueblo 45c on steel rails and railway fastenings and 37½c on bar iron, cast iron water pipe, pig iron, billets, blooms. rivets. nails and spikes, and rates on other iron and steel articles should not be greater than 75% of the rates from Chicago. Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. v. S. P. Co. 6 I. C. C. 488.

(p) Complainant attacked rates on coal from Cumberland, Md., to North Garden, Va., and Lynchburg, Va., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory in that the rate to North Garden is higher than to Lynchburg, North Garden being intermediate. The carriers subsequent to filing of the complaint removed this violation of the fourth section which obviated the infractions of the law complained of. HELD, the rates to North Garden are excessive in comparison with rates charged by defendants and other carriers to various points; but the Commission is not authorized to fix a reduced or lower rate of charges which carriers can be required to respect for the future, even if the ascertained facts warranted a finding as to the extent of the reduction which should be made, complaint dismissed. Montell v. B. & O. R. Co. 7 I. C C. 412.

(q) In respect to competition as justifying discrimination, the Supreme Court of the United States has only gone to the extent of holding that it "may in some cases" be such as, "having due regard to the interests of the public and of the carrier, ought justly to have effect upon rates," and that "the mere fact of competition, no matter what its character or extent," does not "necessarily relieve carriers from the restraints of the 3d and 4th sections" of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 164, 167, 42 L. ed. 422, 423. Phillips, Bailey & Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 93.

(r) The exaction of as high rates for a shorter haul as for a longer haul over the same line in the same direction, the shorter haul being included within the longer, is itself a discrimination, and, if not justified by a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions, is an unjust discrimination. Phillips, Bailey & Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 93, 106.

(s) Where carriers exact higher rates for a shorter than a longer haul over the same line in the same direction the shorter haul being included within the longer, they are amenable, not only under section 4, but also under section 1 and 3, of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Phillips, Bailey & Co. v. Louisville Nashville R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 93, 104.

(t) The higher rate from an intermediate locality to a common destination constitutes a prejudice to that locality and shippers and traffic therefrom, and preference to the more distant localities and shippers and traffic therefrom, which, if found to be without sufficient excuse, must be held unreasonable and undue, and therefore in contravention of the thir section. In the matter of alleged violations of the act by the St. L. & S. F. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 290, 301.

(u) Upon complaint that defendants charge unlawful rates on asbestos articles from Summerdale, Ill., to Lima, O., and other eastern points, it appeared that Summerdale, although within the city limits of Chicago, is a station on the C. & N. W. R. Co., which for purposes of shipment and carriage is independent of the main depots of that company in Chicago; that it is a shorter distance point, and Milwaukee and other places on the Milwaukee division of the C. &. N. W., north of Summerdale are longer distance points, over defendants established through line with reference to L. C. L shipments to eastern destinations; that defendants have through rates in effect from stations north of Chicago, but on traffic from Summerdale the Pennsylvania Company insists upon a higher charge made by adding rates to and from the point of connection in Chicago; that these through rates were not denied to Summerdale before it became part of Chicago by extension of the city limits and that the circumstances and conditions governing the transportation are not dissimilar. HELD, that defendants higher less than carload rates on asbestos articles from Summerdale than from points north of Chicago to and including Milwaukee, on shipments destined to Lima, O., and other eastern points, are in violation of section 3 and 4 of the Act. Chicago Fire Proof Covering Co. v. C. & N. W. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 316.

(v) There is no evidence of any improper desire on the part of these officials to give Atlanta a lower rate or the local shorter-distance point a higher rate. The matter is controlled by existing competitive conditions. Unless the rates complained of, as compared with each other, violate § 4 of the Act, there seems to be very little ground for claiming that they violate the undue preference provision of § 3 Citing. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 56 Fed Rep. 947, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 332. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(w) Two railroad lines serve both Los Angeles and San Bernardino, and if Los Angeles has means at its command by which it may force a rate from such lines or either of them which San Bernardino does not possess, that is an element which must be considered in determining the legality of a lower rate from the east to Los Angeles, the longer distance point; but the fact that it is a larger town with more business, and therefore that competition between the lines is fiercer there than at San Bernardino, does not justify the disparity in charges in favor of Los Angeles. The two roads cannot agree to compete here and not compete there. In their capacity of public servants ministering to the wants of these communities they must not favor one above the other simply because it is stronger to begin with. One of the underlying principles of the Act to regulate commerce is equality between great and small. Holdzkom v. Michigan Central Ry. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 42.

(x) To hold that, after substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions has been shown, the longer distance rate can not in any case or to any extent be considered by way of comparison in determining whether or not the shorter distance rate is unreasonable or unduly prejudicial, particularly when competition and other compulsory conditions are found not to justify the whole disparity between the shorter and longer distance rates would be to reject a most appropriate and necessary test of the reasonableness and justice of railway charges. In a case involving shorter distance charges higher than those to or from longer distance points the carrier cannot rightfully maintain justification for greater dissimilarity in the rates than may be the ascertained dissimilarity in conditions Marten v. L. & N. R. R. 9 I. C. C. 581, 597.

(y) The rates from New York and other eastern points to Chattanooga are not shown to be unreasonable within the meaning of section one of the Act, although they are higher than the rates from the same points through Chattanooga to Nashville, the longer distance, as the traffic from New York and other eastern points is carried to Nashville and Chattanooga under substantially different circumstances and conditions. Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga v. Southern R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 111.

(z) Complaint attacked class rates from Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville, and other Ohio and Mississippi river points to Charleston, S. C., as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory. In a similar case 9 I. C. C. 118, the Commission required correction of rates from the same points to Wilmington, N. C., but such order the United States Circuit Court declined to enforce. During the present year the rates from Chicago to Ohio river crossings have been materially reduced on shipments destined to southeastern points, resulting in reduction of through rates from Chicago to Charleston and Wilmington. HELD, in view of the decision of the Circuit Court in the Wilmington case, no enforcable order of relief can be predicated upon the facts shown in this case, complaint dismissed. Bureau of Freight of Charleston, S. C. v. N. & W. R. R. 11 I. C. C. 235.

(aa) On complaint that defendants' rates on oak lumber in carloads to Philadelphia are unlawfully higher from Afton, Va., and points east thereof, to and including Gordonsville, Va., than those for the longer distances over the same line from Staunton and Basic City, Va., it appeared that a rate of 14 cents per 100 pounds applied over the whole territory for a period of about nine years between November 1, 1892, and August 1, 1901. Effective competition was shown by defendants' witnesses at Basic City and Staunton, and complainants failed to offer any testimony. Upon the record as made in this case, HELD: That the higher rate from the Afton-Gordonsville group does not constitute unlawful discrimination. Spiegle & Co. v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 367.

(bb) Complainant attacked as unjust higher freight rates from Chicago and St. Louis to Griffin, Ga., than to Macon, Americus, Albany or Dawson, Ga. The three last named cities are situated at considerable distance from Griffin; while Griffin pays higher rates than those in force to such cities, there is no competition, between them and Griffin for trade in common territory, and Griffins real difficulty is in the relation of rates to that point and Macon and Atlanta, between which points Griffin is located and which enjoy much lower rates than either Americus, Albany or Dawson. The rates from New Orleans are for a longer distance to Griffin than to Americus, Albany or Dawson. Competition creates dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions affecting the transportation of traffic from the point of shipment mentioned to Macon and Griffin. HELD, under the construction of the law as announced by the courts, no undue prejudice against Griffin, or violation of the long and short haul clause, is shown in this case; and while the practice of making rates to Griffin by combining rates to Atlanta with local rates therefrom to Griffin may result in unreasonable charges, the evidence in this case is insufficient upon which to base a conclusion in that respect. Griffin Grocery Company v. Southern Ry. 11 I. C. C. 522.

(ccdd) Rates on flour from Louisville and Evansville by the Southern Ry. to Berry, Ala., on the line of the Southern, and by the Southern and Mobile & Ohio to Gordo, Ala., on the line of the Mobile & Ohio, are less than those of the Mobile & Ohio from Ava and Cairo, Ill., to Gordo. The rate by the Southern from St. Louis to Gordo is the same as that of the Mobile & Ohio from St. Louis and Ava, although the distance by the former is about twice that from Ava by the latter, and much greater than that from St. Louis by the Mobile & Ohio. HELD: that these facts do not warrant a conclusion that the flour rates from St. Louis, Ava and Cairo to Gordo are unreasonable. Cannon v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 537.

(ee) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity rates on flour in carloads from St. Louis, Mo., Ava and Cairo, Ill., to Gordo, Ala. 27c and 22c respectively, as compared with the rates on the same article by other lines from Evansville, Ind., and Louisville, Ky., to Gordo and other points in Alabama on the defendant and Southern Ry, Berry being a point in issue. Rates on flour from Louisville and Evansville by the Southern to Berry, Ala., on the Southern and by the Southern and M. & O., to Gordo, on the M. & O., are less than those of the M. & O., from Ava and Cairo to Gordo. The rate by the Southern from St. Louis to Gordo is the same as that of the M. & O., from St. Louis and Ava, although the distance by the former is about twice that from Ava by the latter, and much greater than that from St. Louis by the M. & O. HELD, these facts do not warrant a conclusion that the flour rates from St. Louis, Ava, and Cairo to Gordo are unreasonable. Complaint dismissed. Cannon v. M. & O. R. R. 11 I. C. C. 537.

(ff) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory rates charged on lumber from southern Georgia to Dalton, Ga., and Chattanooga, Tenn., when destined to Cincinnati. The rates on pine lumber from southern Georgia points to Chattanooga are 2c higher than to Dalton, but on shipments to Cincinnati, Chattanooga takes 2c lower than Dalton, There is also a dressing in transit privilege at Dalton, for which 2c additional is charged. The lumber shipped out of Chattanooga is mostly hardwood, the southern pine lumber brought to that point being practically consumed there. HELD, rate from Dalton to Cincinnati not discriminatory. The reasons existing for lower lumber rates from the southern pineries do not apply to the reshipment of dressed lumber from Dalton. Farrar v. Southern Ry. 11 I. C. C. 632.

(gg) Upon complaint that lumber rates from Dalton, Ga., to points in Virginia on the Norfolk and Western lines between Bristol, Tenn., and Roanoke, Va., and between Bluefield, W. Va., and Kenova, W. Va., which were advanced in 1901 and 1903, are unreasonable and unduly discriminating, and also in violation of the long and short haul clause because the rates to such intermediate points are higher than the longer distances to Roanoke or Lynchburg. HELD: That in view of judicial interpretations of the act, the facts in this case furnish no basis for a conclusion that the rates in question violate the fourth section of the law; but the rates to such intermediate points, of which complaint is made, are excessive, unreasonable, and unjust, and should not exceed those in force before the advances were made effective. Farrar v. Southern R. Co. et al. 11 I. C. C. 640.

(hh) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory rates on canned goods, grain, flour, hay and packing house products from Cincinnati, O., and Memphis, Tenn., to Helena and McRae, Ga., higher than to Cordele and Fitzgerald, Ga., towns in the section of country surrounding Helena and McRae. The Southern operates from Cincinnati and Memphis to Helena and McRae but does not reach Cordele and Fitzgerald. The Seaboard does not extend to Memphis or Cincinnati but Helna, Cordele and Fitzgerald are on its line, but not McRae. HELD, after giving consideration to the circumstances and conditions, including situation of localities, railway competition, competition of markets, and the basing point system of rate making as practiced in the south, that, the situation of Helena and McRae is not so similar to that of Cordele as to require the application of Cordele rates to the first named places, but that the rates to Helena and McRae are unreasonable and unjust and should not exceed those now in effect to Fitzgerald from such points of origin. Davenport v. Southern Ry. 11 I. C. C. 650.

(ii) Complainant attacked rates charged on beer, carloads from Milwaukee, Wis., to Woodward, Okla., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with the rates in effect to Oklahoma City, Okla., a point beyond. Prior to the time of movement the rate in effect to both points was 53c and subsequently this rate was established. HELD, rate attacked unreasonable to extent it exceeded 53c, reparation awarded. Cutter v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. 11 I. C. C. 689.

(jj) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates on butter and eggs, carloads, from Granite Falls, Minn., to Chicago, Ill. Rate charged 59c while rate from Pipestone, Minn., is 47c although Granite Falls is 47 miles nearer Chicago, but on a different branch of the road. The same rates are in force via the G. N., although Granite Falls is an intermediate point between Pipestone and Chicago on the line of the G. N., and its connections. HELD, C. M. & St. P. rate of 59c unreasonable to extent it exceeded 47c. Morse Produce Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 485.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(kk) To continue rates to the coast points that are lower than are necessitated by the actual water competition and higher rates to intermediate points and to other points over similar distances under like circumstances, is to perpetuate a discrimination that is unjust. The second and third sections of the Act forbid all unduly preferential or unjustly discriminatory rates and practices. The portion of the fourth section above quoted does not repeal or annul any part of the second and third sections of the Act to regulate commerce. If a coast point is receiving a lower rate than that to which it is lawfully entitled by the conditions there existing it is a preference at that point that results in prejudice against higher rated points whether intermediate thereto or not. Furthermore, the primary purpose of this portion of the fourth section being to preserve and promote competition by the water carriers, it must be so construed as to give effect to that purpose. Reopening Fourth Section Applications, 40 I. C. C. 35, 41.

(ll) A carrier may not cite its literal observance of the long-and-short haul clause of the fourth section of the Act as excusing it from its legal obligation to maintain from points on connecting lines to destinations on its own lines rates which in the light of all relevant considerations are nonprejudical to the traffic so originating on its connections. Weis-Peterson Box Co. v. M. & O. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 693, 696.

(mm) The fixing of maximum rates at intermediate points in fourth section proceedings can not be considered as a finding that such rates are maximum reasonable rates when considered apart from the depressed rate to the competitive points. While rates prescribed in such proceedings should be given due weight they are not controlling. Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. Director General, as Agent, 57 I. C. C. 605, 609; Montgomery Chamber of Commerce v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 610, 619.

(nn) The fact that rates contravene the long-and-short-haul provision of the fourth section of the Act does not of itself establish that the higher rates to the intermediate points are unreasonable. Nivision-Weiskopf Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 107, 108.

(oo) When the assessment of a switching charge in connection with transit results in greater aggregate compensation to the carrier than the sum of the intermediate rates, it cannot be considered that section 4 has thereby been violated, for the services performed are not the same in the two instances. Transit involves an additional service on the part of the carrier for which a separate charge may be made; the switching charge is an additional expense incident to the transit service. Detroit Board of Trade v. W. Ry. Co. 80 I. C. C. 717, 720.

(pp) When rate from more distant point has been established under rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A thus bringing rate structure into substantial compliance with fourth section requirements and in conformity with law, shippers at intermediate points have lawful right to a rate no higher than from next more distant point. By very language of the rule, carriers hold themselves out to grant same rate at intermediate points as is in effect from or to more distant point. Rates voluntarily established under the rule from more distant points are prima facie reasonable, and if reasonable from or to more distant points they must be deemed reasonable from or to intermediate points. Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Co. v. Director General as Agent, 81 I. C. C. 659, 660, 661.

(qq) All of the shipments were intrastate and the fourth section of the interstate commerce act does not apply to them. But the maintenance of a lower rate on the same commodity for a longer than for a shorter distance over the same route and in the same direction is a circumstance which has some value as evidence on an issue of unreasonableness. Jeremy Fuel & Grain Co. v. Director General, 88 I. C. C. 397, 399.

IV. COMPETITION AS JUSTIFICATION

§7. In General.

See Competition.

(a) The existence of actual competition, which is of controlling force in respect to traffic important in amount, may make out the dissimilar circumstances and conditions, entitling the carrier to charge less for the longer than for the shorter haul over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer, in the following cases: (a) When the competition is with carriers by water which are not subject to the provisions of the statute; (b) When the competition is with foreign or other railroads which are not subject to the provisions of the statute; (c) In rare and peculiar cases of competition between railroads which are subject to the statute, when a strict application of the general rule of the statute would be destructive of legitimate competition. Re Southern Ry. & S. S. Asso. 1 I. C. C. R. 278.

(b) When a greater charge in the aggregate is made for the transportation of passengers or the like kind of property for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer distance, it is not sufficient justification therefor that the traffic which is subjected to such greater charge is way or local traffic, and that which is given the more favorable rates is not. (a) Nor is it sufficient justification for such greater, charge that the short haul traffic is more expensive to the carrier, unless when the circumstances are such as to make it exceptionally expensive, or the long haul traffic exceptionally inexpensive, the difference being extraordinary and susceptible of definite proof; (b) Nor that the lesser charge on the longer haul has for its motive the encouragement of manufacturers or some other branch of industry; (c) Nor that it is designed to build up business or trade centers; (d) Nor that the lesser charge on the longer haul is merely a continuation of the favorable rates under which trade centers or industrial establishments have been built up; (e) The fact that long haul traffic will only bear certain rates is no reason for carrying it for less than cost at the expense of other traffic. Re Southern Ry. & S. S. Asso. 1 I. C. C. R. 278.

(c) That there is competition in carriage of persons or property to or from a particular place, is a circumstance that justifies a carrier, under section 4, to charge less for a long haul to or from such place, than a short one included therein. Ex parte Koehler (U. S. C. Ct. Or.) I. C. R. 317; ReSouthern R. & S. Asso. 1. I. C. R. 278.

(d) The existence of actual competition which is of controlling force may, in certain cases, make out the dissimilar conditions entitling the carrier to charge less for longer than for shorter haul. Re Southern R. & S. Asso. 1. I. C. R. 278; Exparte Koehler, (U. S. C. Ct. Or.) 1 I. C. C. 317; Harwell v. Columbus & W. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. 631.

(da) Dissimiliar circumstances and conditions may be made out by the existence of actual competition which is of controlling force in respect to traffic important in amount; and the limitations suggested by this rule are applicable, when the controlling force of water competition is invoked in respect to the second and third sections of the Act, as well as in respect to the fourth. The exceptional circumstance to be proved is actual competition, not possible competition likely to arise if rates are raised "of controlling force" not when the rail line is the controlling force, but when the competing water line is able to dictate rates which will control the traffic, unless met by the railroad "in respect to traffic important in amount" not when competition in a single direction or for the transportation of a single article or class of articles exists, but general competition of the character stated, controlling the carriage of the traffic on which the discrimination is made. Harwell v. Columbus & Western R. R. 1. I. C. C. 631, 636.

(e) Complainant attacked rates to Danville, Va., as unjust and unreasonable and unduly discriminatory. Prior to the passage of the fourth section, rates to competitive points were lower than to noncompetitive points which amount to the advantage of Danville. Upon the passage of the law, rates were published to noncompetitive points intermediate to Danville on the same or a lower basis and enabling small retail concerns to spring up at these noncompetitive towns thus to a certain extent eliminate the movement of freight from Danville. HELD, rates published in conformity with the law not unreasonable or unduly discriminatory, complaint dismissed. Crews v. R. & D. R. R. Co 1 I. C. C. 703.

(f) The competition of two roads does not alone make out the dissimilar circumstances and conditions which will authorize the making of greater charge upon the shorter haul. Re Chicago St. Paul & Kansas City R. Co. 2 I. C. C. 137, 148.

(g) Greater charge for a shorter distance,—when combined competition by rail and water do not justify it. The presence of combined rail and water competition at a longer-distance point does not justify a greater charge for a shorter distance while the carrier maintains the shorter-distance rate, where such competition is of greater force and more controlling than at the longer-distance point. James & Abbott v. East Tenn., Va. & Ga. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 609.

(h) The presence of combined rail and water competition at a longer distance point does not justify a greater charge for a shorter distance while the carrier maintains the shorter distance rate, where such competition is of greater force and more controlling than at the longer distance point. James & Abbott v. E. T. V. & G. R. R. 2 I. C. C. 609, 611.

(i) Complainant at Mankato, Minn., attacked rates from Chicago to Mankato in that they should be no higher than to Waterville, Minneapolis and points allowed like rates. HELD, that in view of the circumstances and conditions existing, a somewhat higher charge to Mankato is not unlawful, but that a difference of 20% or more on the respective classes, charged when the complaint was filed, is excessive, and that a difference of 10% on the several classes is reasonable and should not be exceeded. Mfrs. & Jobbers Union of Mankato, Minn., v. M. & St. L. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. 115

(j) Complainant attacked class rates charged from New York to Readville, Mass., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with the all rail rates from New York to Boston, Mass. The rates from New York to Boston were forced upon the all rail lines by the action of a competing all water line not having rates on file with the Commission. HELD, the circumstances and conditions in the carriage of flour are substantially dissimilar at Boston to what they are at Readville, interior town 8 miles from Boston, where no competition exists between all rail and water lines, and justifies all rail lines in meeting the rate by the water line at Boston by charging 9c per 100 pounds on flour, while the combined local rates of the two rail carriers are higher on shipments from New York to Readville than they are upon the joint through rate from New York to Boston, complaint dismissed. King & Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. 3 I. C. C. 272.

(k) The circumstances and conditions are not substantially the same, so as to require the same rates per ton per mile to be charged to an intermediate point as for a longer haul to a distributing point, where at the latter point there are competing roads. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama M. R. Co. (C. C. M. D. Ala.) 3 I. C. R. 308.

(l) Besides terminal expenses and other aggregate charges not dependent upon the distance freight is moved, there are other conditions which justify a lower proportionate charge for longer distances . Coxe Bros. & Co. v. L. V. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. 460, 471.

(m) The circumstances and conditions which make a greater charge for a shorter distance lawful relate to the nature and character of the transportation service rendered by the carrier over the same line to the longer and shorter distance points. James & Mayer Buggy Co. v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. 682, 686.

(n) There is no competition by rail over the Canadian Pacific Railway, or by water around Cape Horn, that justifies a departure from the "long and short haul" rule of the statute in the transportation of refined sugar from San Francisco to Fargo and through Fargo to St. Paul. Raworth v. Northern P. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 857.

(o) Complaint attacked rates on sugar from San Francisco, Calif., to Fargo, N. D., as compared with the rate to St. Paul Minn., as unreasonable and in violation of the fourth section. HELD, there is no competition by rail over the C. P. R., or by water around Cape Horn, that justifies a departure from the long and short haul rule of the statute in the transportation of refined sugar from San Francisco to Fargo and through Fargo to St. Paul, and carries ordered to maintain to Fargo the same rates as in effect to St. Paul. Raworth v. N. P. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. 857.

(p) The carrier has the right to judge in the first instance whether it is justified in making a greater charge for a shorter distance, under the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, in all cases where the circumstances and conditions arise wholly upon its own line or through competition for the same traffic with carriers not subject to regulation under the Act. In other cases under § 4 the circumstances and conditions are not presumptively dissimilar, and carriers must not charge less for the longer distance except upon the order of the Commission. Trammell v. Clyde Steamship Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 120, 121, 147.

(q) The competition of carriers subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce does not create circumstances and conditions which the carriers can take into account in determining for themselves in the first instance whether they are justified under the fourth section in charging more for shorter than for longer distances over their lines. Trammell v. Clyde S. S. Co. et. al. 4 I. C. R. 121.

(r) Transportation by rail from eastern points to the Pacific coast terminals, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle, Wash., is affected by the competition of controlling force and in respect to traffic important in amount, of water carriers reaching the same terminals, but such competition does not affect like transportation from said points to Spokane, Wash. HELD, defendants are justified, by reason of such dissimilarity of conditions and circumstances, in maintaining higher rates on shipments of like property from said points for the shorter distance to Spokane than for the longer distance to said Pacific terminals. The only justification for a through rate less than an intermediate rate on the same article is the compulsion of rail carriers to accept the reduced compensation or suffer ocean rivals to perform the service, and where the pressure of this alternative is not felt there is no ground upon which the lower through charge can be excused. No article should be carried to terminal points on commodity rates which, if the class rates were imposed would still seek rail rather than water transportation, and any violation of this rule is unjust discrimination against the intermediate town compelled to pay the higher class rate on the same article. Blanket class rates applying upon the N. P., for a distance of over 580 miles found relatively unreasonable; also HELD, that rates to Spokane, the principal distributing center to which such blanket rates apply, are unreasonable in themselves. Defendants ordered to cease and desist from charging rates on property from eastern points to Spokane which materially exceed 82% of class rates now in effect both to Spokane and Pacific coast terminals. Merchants' Union of Spokane Falls v. N. P. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 183.

(s) Transportation by rail from eastern points to the "Pacific Coast Terminals," Portland, Tacoma and Seattle, is affected by the competition, of controlling force and in respect to traffic important in amount, of water carriers reaching the same terminals, but such competition does not affect like transportation from said points to the city of Spokane, Washington: HELD, therefore, that defendants are justified, by reason of such dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions, in maintaining higher rates on shipments of like property from said points for the shorter distance to Spokane than for the longer distance to said Pacific terminals The competitive position and attitude of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a foreign carrier, considered in connection with existing water competition, but the separate effect of competition by the Canadian route not found or determined. Merchants' Union v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 183.

(t) The carrier has the right in the first instance to judge whether it is justified in making the greater charge for the shorter distance under the fourth section in all cases where the circumstances and conditions arise wholly upon its own lines or through competition for the same traffic with carriers not subject to the Act. In other cases under the fourth section, the circumstances and conditions are not presumptively dissimilar, and carriers must not charge less for the longer distance except upon order of the Commission. Board of Trade of Chattanooga v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 213, 221.

(u) One transportation line can not be said to meet the competition of another transportation line for the carrying trade of any particular locality, unless the latter line could and would perform the service alone if the former did not undertake it. Board of Trade of Chattanooga v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 213, 221.

(v) When great disparity exists between charges which are lower to competitive points than to intermediate points much less remote, the inference is irresistible that the lower rate must be unremunerative upon any theory, or else the larger rate gives an unwarranted return for the service rendered. Board of Trade of Chattanooga v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 213, 222.

(w) "Freight carried to, or from, a competitive point, is always carried under substantially dissimilar circumstances, and conditions, from that carried to, or from, non-competitive points. In the latter case, the railway makes its own rates, and there is no good reason why it should be allowed to charge less for a long haul than a short one. When each haul is made to, or from, a non-competitive point, the effect of such discrimination is to build up one place, at the expense of the other. Such action is willfully unjust, and has no justification, or excuse, in the exigencies, or conditions of the business of the corporation. In the former case, the circumstances are altogether different. The power of a corporation to make a rate is limited by the necessities of the situation. Competition controls the charge. It must take what it can get, or abandon the field, and let its road go to rust." "Competition may not be the only circumstance that makes the condition under which a long and short haul are performed substantially dissimilar, but certainly it is the most obvious and effective one, and must have been in contemplation of Congress in the passage of the Act to Regulate Commerce." CASE QUOTED: 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 31 Fed. Rep. 315, 319, Ex parte Koehler. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 332.

(x) Competition may constitute a circumstance or condition of dissimilarity which will prevent the operation of the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act, § 4. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. (C. C. E. D. La.) 4 I. C. R. 434.

(y) One transportation line can not be said to meet the competition of another transportation line for the carrying trade of any particular locality, unless the latter line could and would perform the service alone if the former did not undertake it. Behlmer v. M. & C. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 520, 523.

(z) The circumstances and conditions are not substantially the same so as to require the same rates per ton per mile to be charged to an intermediate point as for a longer haul to a distributing point, where at the latter point there are competing roads. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama M. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 308.

(aa) That a less amount is charged for shipments to a given place than for shipments to an intermediate point does not violate the Act to Regulate Commerce where the former place is many times larger than the latter, has more railway lines running through it, and is situated on a river open the entire year, upon which shipments would be made unless the railroad rates should be kept below the mark of profitable water carriage, as the circumstances and conditions of the two points are substantially dissimilar. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. (C. C. App. 5th C.) 5 I. C. R. 685.

(bb) While carriers operating shorter lines have the advantage, both in making rates and in carrying under them, they cannot dictate a system of charges which the operators of longer lines may not charge as to their own roads, though it may be true as a rule, that, to get business, longer lines must take it as low as rates at the time in force over more direct routes. Cordele Machine Shop v. L. N. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 361, 371.

(cc) Any dissimilarity of circumstances resulting from a carrier which has fixed rates of charges from two designated points on uncompressed cotton only with "option of compression en route," availing itself of such option and carrying cotton from the shorter-distance point to the longer-distance point for compression, does not take the traffic out of the general rule of the Act to Regulate Commerce forbidding a greater charge for a shorter distance, Jerome Hill Cotton Co. v. Missouri K. & T. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 601.

(dd) A carrier is not justified, under the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, in charging more for a shorter than for a longer distance by competition at the longer-distance point of other carriers which are themselves subject to such Act, in the absence of authority from the Interstate Commerce Commission under the proviso of such section. Lynchburg Bd. of Trade v. Old Dominion S. S. Co. 6 I. C. C. 632.

(ee) Defendants are engaged in competition with other carriers by railroad in the transportation of freight to both Griffin and Macon, Ga., but the defendants and their competitors make greatly lower rates from Louisville and Cincinnati for the longer distance to Macon than for the shorter distance to Griffin an intermediate point between Atlanta and Macon. While the rates at Atlanta and Macon are substantially the same such rates to Griffin are the rates to Atlanta to Griffin. Rates for the transportation of freight from New York and other eastern points to Griffin and Macon are practically the same. Although there is railroad competition for traffic to Griffin as well as to Macon, the carriers from Louisville and Cincinnati, while making low rates on account of such competition to Macon, refuse to establish like rates for Griffin. HELD, That if there can be exceptional instances in which competition between carriers subject to the Act may create the dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions under the 4th section, this case, where such competition is shown at both the shorter and longer distance points, is not one of them. Brewer & Hanleiter v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 224

(ff) Competition at a given point between carriers which have agreed upon rates to the competing points does not constitute a substantial dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions, within the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, making it unlawful for a carrier subject to the Act. under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, to charge more for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance; though such competition may afford a basis for relief by the Commission under the subsequent provision of the section Fewell v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 354.

(gg) Freely engaging in competition at one point, while wholly or largely suppressing it at a shorter distance locality, will not entitle carriers to make higher charges for shorter than for longer hauls over the same line in the same direction. Calloway v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 431.

(hh) It being settled that competition must be considered and may justify deviation from the rule of the fourth section, it follows that wherever competition of controlling force by existing lines is practicable it must be given effect; and that freely engaging in competition at one point, while wholly or largely suppressing it at a shorter distance locality, cannot entitle carriers to make higher charges for shorter than for longer hauls over the same line in the same direction. Calloway v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 431.

(ii) The "Plant System" of railways carries fertilizer from Savannah, Ga., to Valdosta, and also over the longer distance from Charleston to Valdosta, at no higher rate than it charges from Savannah. The Charleston rate is fixed by the competition of another and more circuitous line from that city to Valdosta, and the Plant System must meet that rate or get no fertilizer business from Charleston. HELD, That under such circumstances the Plant System may properly make the same rate from Charleston as is made by the longer line, and in so doing it does not unjustly discriminate against Savannah, though if the rate from Charleston to Valdosta were in any way subject to control, the conclusion might be otherwise. Savannah Bureau of Ft. & Trans. v. Charleston & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 458.

(jj) The circumstances and conditions governing the transportation of fertilizer from Charleston to Valdosta and various other stations are rendered substantially dissimilar from those applying in the transportation of fertilizer from Charleston over the same line to shorter-distance localities by railway competition at Valdosta and said other stations, which controls and affects the rate, and higher charges on fertilizer to such shorter-distance points are not in violation of the fourth section as interpreted by the United Ctates Supreme Court in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama M. R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed.—Savannah Bureau of Ft. & Trans. v. Charleston S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 458.

(kk) A railway system may properly make the same rate between certain points as is made by a longer and more circuitous line, and in so doing does not unjustly discriminate against a city located nearer to the point of destination because it charges no higher rate over the longer distance than it does from such city. Savannah Bureau of F & T. v. Charleston & S. R. 7 I. C. C. 458.

(ll) Competition between rival routes, which affects rates, is a fact to be considered in determining whether property transported to a competitive point for less rates than are charged for property to an intermediate point on the same line is carried under "substantially similar circumstances and conditions," as that phrase is found in § 4 of the Act to Regulate Commerce; but such competition is not applicable to § 2 of the Act. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland Ry. Co., 7 I. C. C. App. CIX.

(mm) Circumstances and conditions governing the transportation of freight articles from New Orleans to Kansas City, and to Dallas, Texas, an intermediate point on the same line, are rendered substantially dissimilar by the competition of carriers by water and rail from New Orleans to Kansas City, which controls and affects the rates, so that higher charges for the shorter distance to Dallas, which are reasonable in themselves, are not in violation of § 4 of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Dallas Freight Bureau v. Texas & P. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 33, 40.

(nn) In determining under the fourth section whether the circumstances and conditions were substantially similar, competition between railways subject to the Act, as well as competition not subject to the Act, should be considered it being a question of fact to be determined in each case by the Commission or court upon the evidence in that particular case. Dallas Freight Bureau v. T. & P. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 33, 45.

(oo) While as high rates on sugar and molasses for the shorter haul from New Orleans to Nashville as for the longer haul to Louisville will be justified, there is not such a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions shown as will authorize higher rates on such transportation to Nashville than are charged to Louisville.. Phillips, Bailey, & Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 93.

(ppqq) There may be instances where a carrier should be permitted to meet railroad competition without reference to its intermediate territory, but when the very existence of an important industry depends upon the carrier being required to treat intermediate territory as it does the more distant territory, the rule of no greater charge for the shorter distance clearly applies. Re Export and Domestic Rates on Grain, 8 I. C. C. 214.

(rr) Competition between railways does not of itself create dissimilarity in the circumstances and conditions, but it is a factor which may be taken into account in cases arising under the 4th section of the statute. George Tileston Milling Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 346.

(ss) The fact that one competing carrier has the long line does not create a dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions, which justifies it in disregarding the rule of the 4th section of the Act, while competing short lines are bound by that rule. George Tileston Milling Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 346.

(tt) To allow one carrier to meet the rates of its competitors until it is found to have done something more than meet such rates does not constitute a workable basis, for the cause which lead to rate fluctuations are so intangible, often resting upon mere suspicion, that any attempt in an individual case to determine what those causes were would ordinarily be futile; and to enforce such a rule would stifle that competition which the act was intended to secure. George Tileston Mill. Co. v. N. P. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 346, 358.

(uu) If a carrier could only reduce its rates to a competitive point at the expense of its intermediate territory, while the competitors of that carrier might meet the reduction without corresponding reductions at intermediate points, no carrier would ever openly reduce such rates. Geo. Tilleston Mill Co. v. N. P. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 346, 358.

(vv) Competition which does not reduce the rates to the longer distance point below what are reasonable can not justify higher rates to shorter distance points, and such higher rates are presumptively excessive. Board of Trade of Hampton, Fla., v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. 8 I. C. C. 503, 527.

(ww) Competition is one of the most obvious and effective circumstances that make the conditions under which a long and short haul is performed dissimilar, and as such must have been in the contemplation of Congress in the passage of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Citing: Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlanta R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(xx) If the lesser charge to the longer-distance point results from dissimilar circumstances and conditions brought about by competition, it cannot be said to be a preference which is undue or unreasonable. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(yy) All the evidence shows that the rate to Atlanta, the longer-distance point in this case, is forced on the railroad officials by competition. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(zz) In order to constitute dissimilarity under § 4 of the Act, the competition must be real, and not imaginary or trifling. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(3a) Competition will not justify the imposition, for a shorter haul, of charges so much higher than those for a longer haul that goods can be shipped to the further place and reshipped to the nearer place at less than the rate direct to the latter place, where a reasonable profit is obtained upon the longer haul. I. C. C. v. E. Tenn., Vir., & Georgia R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. App. XLIII.

(3b) In cases involving lower charges for longer than for shorter distances over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, all forms of competition must be taken into account, but the mere fact of competition at the more distant point does not of necessity justify the lower longer distance charge. In this case the construction of the third section, or undue preference clause of the statute, is also involved, and under that section at least the question is not merely does some form of competition exist at the more favored point which is not found at the other, but rather do all the circumstances and conditions, giving due regard to the interests of all parties, excuse the preference. Holdzkom v. Michigan Central Ry. Co. et. al. 9 I. C. C. 42.

(3c) The conditions affecting traffic, including carriages and buggies, from eastern points are rendered substantially different at Los Angeles than at San Bernardino, a shorter distance point on the same line, by the competition of carriers wholly by water from the Atlantic Seaboard to Port Los Angeles, a point on the Pacific Coast near Los Angeles, and the effect of such competition by water direct to San Francisco is, upon all the circumstances, properly recognized at Los Angeles by giving that city all rail rates from the east as low as those in effect to San Francisco. Holdzkom v. Michigan Central Ry. Co. et. al 9. I. C. C. 42.

(3d) Traffic brought from the east by the U. P. N. P., G. N. and C. P. Rys. to various Northern Pacific seaports can be carried from thence to Los Angeles without passing over the routes of either the S. P. or S. F. Systems, but it must pass over one of such roads to reach San Bernardino. Merchandise by these rail and water routes to Los Angeles must be transported by rail across the continent, transshipped and carried 1,200 miles by ocean, and again transshipped for another 20 mile rail haul before it reaches Los Angeles in competition with the S. P. or S. F. Ry. HELD, That while traffic may be and at times actually is carried by such circuitous rail and water routes, it is questionable whether it ought to be, and the Commission does not hold in this case that such competition in itself constitutes justification for a higher rate at an intermediate point like San Bernardino than is enforced on traffic from the east to Los Angeles. Holdzkom v. Michigan Central Ry. Co. et. al. 9 I. C. C. 42.

(3da) The Commission refused to hold that the charging of a higher rate for the transportation of goods from the east to San Bernadino than is enforced on similar traffic to Los Angeles, a more distant point, is justified by the fact that goods so transported can be brought from the east by several railroads to various northern Pacific seaports, and then carried from thence to Los Angeles without passing over the routes of the S. P. or S. F. systems, but must pass over one of such routes to reach San Bernardino, as it is questionable whether traffic ought to be carried by such circuitous railroads and water routes as is necessary to reach Los Angeles. Holdzkom v. Michigan Central R. Co. 9. I. C. C., 42.

(3ef) In consideration of fourth section violations, all forms of competition must be taken into account; but the mere fact that there is competition at the more distant point does not of necessity justify the lower rate. Holdzkom v. M. C. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 42, 51.

(3g) Complainants alleged that higher rates in force from northern and eastern markets to Dallas and Fort Worth than those in effect over lines through those Texas cities to Galveston and Houston violate section four of the statute, but the case was tried upon an erroneous theory that market and railroad competition could not work dissimilarity in the circumstances and conditions within the meaning of the statute. The testimony, which bears solely upon complainants' contention that the statute forbids higher rates on any and all freights for the shorter distance to Dallas or Fort Worth than for the longer distance to Galveston or Houston, was not sufficient to enable the Commission to determine whether the circumstances and conditions governing the transportation in question are or are not substantially similar in respect of all kinds and classes of freight traffic. HELD, That the complaint must be dismissed, but with leave to complainants to challenge the existing difference in rates as to particular articles or any class of freights by supplemental complaint or in new proceeding. Dallas Freight Bureau et. al. v. A. & N. R. R. Co. et al., 9 I. C. C. 68.

(3h) Competition, whether it be water competition, railroad competition, or market competition, provided it produces a substantial and material effect upon traffic and rate-making, may create dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions, and such competition must be taken into consideration in cases arising upon complaint under the fourth section. Decisions of U. S. Supreme Court in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45, and subsequent cases cited and applied. Dallas Freight Bureau et. al. v. A. & N. W. R. R. Co. et. al., 9 I. C. C. 68. 71.

(3i) Complainant attacked rates charged to Dallas and Fort Worth, Tex., higher than those to Galveston and Houston, Tex., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. The case was tried upon the erroneous theory that market and railroad competition could not work discriminatory. The case was tried upon conditions within the meaning of the statute. The testimony was not sufficient to enable the Commission to determine whether the circumstances and conditions governing the transportation in question are or are not substantially similar in respect of all kinds and classes of freight traffic. HELD, complaint dismissed, but with leave to reinstate by supplemental complaint. Dallas Freight Bureau v. A. & N. W. R. R. 9 I. C. C. 68.

(3ia) Where actual competition exists at the more distant point, which does not obtain at the nearer point, and which has actually produced a lower rate at the more distant point which the carrier cannot control and must meet to obtain a share of the business, the Act to Regulate Commerce does not prohibit the disparity in rates at the shorter and longer distance points, provided the longer distance competitive rate is remunerative, and the shorter distance rate reasonable. Mayor and City of Wichita v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 534.

(3j) Where actual competition exists at the more distant point which does not obtain at the intermediate or nearer point, and where such competition has actually produced a lower rate at the more distant point which the carrier cannot control and must meet to obtain a share of the business, neither the third nor the fourth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce prohibits the disparity in rates at the shorter and longer distance points, provided the longer distance competitive rate is remunerative and the shorter distance point rate is reasonable. Decisions of the United States Supreme Court in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18. Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. ed. 1047, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687, cited and applied. Mayor, Etc., of Wichita V. A.. T., & S. F. Ry. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 534, 555.

(3k) Complainant attacked commodity rates on coal from Minden, Mo., McAlester, I. T., and Russellville, Ark., to Wichita, Kans., as unlawful compared with rates from the same points to Kansas City. It appeared that the rates to Kansas City are controlled and actually forced by competitive conditions governing the transportation of coal to that city, but that such rates are remunerative and that the rates to Wichita cannot be found excessive upon the record. HELD, complaint dismissed. Mayor and City Council of Wichita, Kas. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. 9 I. C. C. 558.

(3l) The fact that lumber rates from western points to Wichita, Kansas, are higher than for the longer distance through Wichita to Kansas City, Omaha, and Lincoln, Neb., does not constitute a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, where competitive conditions exist in Kansas City, Omaha, and Lincoln which do not exist at Wichita, and which produce low rates to those points from the lumber territory in question. Mayor and City Council of Wichita, Kansas v. Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 569.

(3m) The fact that a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions between the longer and shorter distance points has been shown which justfies a lower rate to the longer distance point, does not prevent the longer distance rate from being considered by way of comparison in determining whether or not the shorter distance rate is unreasonable or unduly prejudicial, where the competition and other compulsory conditions are found not to justify the whole disparity between the shorter and the longer distance rate. S. Marten v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 581.

(3n) Complainant attacked rates on lumber from Fountain Head, Gallatin, St. Blaise, Pilot Knob and Nashville, Tenn., to Detroit, Mich., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. Rates from these points are based on the Louisville combination, rates from Nashville, the longer distance point 8c, and from the other points 10c. Rates from Nashville are affected by rates in effect on the Cumberland River to Burnside, Ky., plus rail rates beyond, which situation does not hold true from the other points of origin. HELD, there is a substantial dissimilarity in the conditions as between Nashville and the intermediate points, and the fourth section does not apply, but the dissimilarity would be offset by a difference of 1c per 100 pounds in the rates. Marten v. L. & N. R. R. 9 I. C. C. 581.

(3o) Rates on lumber from Fountain Head, Gallatin, St. Blaise, Pilot Knob and Nashville, Tenn., to Detroit, Mich., are made by adding defendant's rates to Louisville, Ky., to rates in force from Louisville to Detroit. Defendant's rates to Louisville are 10 cents per 100 pounds for the shorter distance from Fountain Head, Gallatin, St. Blaise and Pilot Knob, and 8 cents for the longer distance over the same line from Nashville. HELD, that there is a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as between Nashville and the intermediate points mentioned and that, therefore, the 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce does not apply; that a difference of one cent in the rates fully offset the difference in circumstances and conditions; and that any greater difference renders the rate from the intermediate points relatively unreasonable, in violation of section 1, and unduly discriminatory, in violation of section 3, of the statute. Marten v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 581.

(3p) The defendant does not violate the 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce by charging a higher rate from Fountain Head, Gallatin, St. Blaise, and Pilot Knob to Louisville than from the longer distance over the same line from Nashville to Louisville, as there exists a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as between Nashville and the intermediate points mentioned. S. Marten v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 581.

(3q) Although the dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions justifies the defendant in charging a higher rate on lumber from Fountain Head, Gallatin, St. Blaise, and Pilot Knob to Louisville than for the longer distance over the same line from Nashville, a difference of 1 cent in the rates is sufficient to offset the difference in circumstances and conditions, and any greater difference in the rates renders the rate from the intermediate points relatively unreasonable S. Marten v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 581.

(3qa) No undue discrimination results to Sheridan by reason of the fact that the rate from that place to Boston is 2 cents per 100 lbs. more than from Indianapolis to Boston, although the latter is the longer distance point by the defendant's line, which runs north from Indianapolis through Sheridan, connecting at various points with lines to Boston; as Indianapolis is a competitive point, and the short lines from Sheridan to the east are through Indianapolis, and by those lines Sheridan is a longer distance point. G. C. Pratt Lumber Co. v. Chicago I. & L. R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 29.

(3r) Applying the law as construed by the United States Supreme Court, the traffic from New York and other eastern points is carried to Nashville through Chattanooga under substantially different circumstances and conditions from those pertaining to traffic from the same points to Chattanooga, the shorter distance; and consequently a higher rate to Chattanooga is not unlawful under section four of the statute. Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga v. Southern R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 111.

(3s) Complainant attacked class rates from New York and other eastern points to Chattanooga, Tenn., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with the rates to Nashville, Tenn., a point beyond. In 5 I. C. C. 546, the Commission found rates charged unreasonable. The decision was appealed and the Supreme Court in 181 U. S. 29, reversed the order without prejudice to the right of the Commission to proceed further and hear and determine the matter in controversy according to law. HELD, applying the principles as laid down by the Court the traffic from New York and other eastern points is carried to Nashville and Chattanooga under substantially different circumstances and conditions, and the higher rate to Chattanooga is not unlawful under section four and can not be otherwise condemned merely because a lower rate is granted to Nashville, and the rates to Chattanooga are not unreasonable. Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga v. Southern Ry 10 I. C. C. 111.

(3t) Competition which is real and substantial and exercises a potential influence on rates to a particular point, brings into play the dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions prescribed by the statute, and justifies the lesser charge to the more distant and competitive point, and this right is not destroyed by the mere fact that incidentally the lesser charge to the competitive point may seemingly give a preference to that point and the greater rate to the non-competitive point may apparently engender a discrimination against it. Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga v. Southern Ry. 10 I. C. C. 111, 134.

(3u) The Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company is justified in making a lower rate of charges from St. Louis, Mo., East St. Louis, and Cairo, Ill., to Mobile, Ala., and Meridian, Miss., than for the shorter distance to Tupelo, Aberdeen, Columbus, West Point, and Starkville, Miss., by actual and controlling competition which creates substantial dissimilarity in the circumstances and conditions affecting transportation. Aberdeen Group Commercial Asso. v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 289.

(3vw) Defendant has had in force since April 25, 1903, rates per 100 lbs. on bananas in carloads from Charleston, S. C., which are 43 cents to Danville, Va., and 35½ cents to Lynchburg, Va., the transportation to the latter point by defendant's line being through Danville. The lower rate to Lynchburg is forced upon defendant by the competition of bananas coming from Baltimore. The 43 cent rate to Danville is not found to be unreasonable, and upon these facts the higher rate to Danville is not in violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Gardner & Clark v. Southern R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 342.

(3x) Freight rates to Charlotte, N. C., from New York and other northern and eastern points, and from Louisville, Chicago, and other western points are complained of as unjust, and those from the west as greater for the shorter distance to Charlotte than for longer distances through Charlotte to more distant localities. The freight rates to Charlotte are made by combining rates to Lynchburg and other Virginia cities with the local rates from these cities to Charlotte. Competition forces low rates to the Virginia cities, and also compels the low rates in force from the west to certain points east of Charlotte. If through rates to Charlotte lower than the combination of charges to and from the Virginia cities were established, the disadvantage now resulting to Charlotte dealers in their competition with dealers at Virginia cities would to that extent be removed, and the carriers are recommended to consider taking such action, but in the absence of a showing that the present through charges are unreasonable the Commission is without authority to require discontinuance of the charges now exacted. HELD: After citing decisions of the courts, that the facts presented do not constitute a basis for an order of relief which could be enforced and therefore the complaints must be dismissed. Charlotte Shippers' Asso. v. Southern R. Co. et. al. 11 I. C. C. 108, 109.

(3y) Defendants' rate of $1.30 per hundred pounds on buggies in carloads from Rock Hill, S. C., to Tallahassee, Fla., is not shown to be unreasonable, and under the construction placed upon section 4, or the long and short haul clause of the statute, by the United States Supreme Court, competition by the A. C. L. R. Co., justifies defendants' lower rate of $1.10 for the longer distance to Quincy, Fla. Rock Hill Buggy Co. v. Southern R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 229.

(3z) Complainant attacked rates on buggies, commodity, carloads from Rock Hill, S. C., to Tallahassee, Fla., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with the rate beyond to Quincy, Fla. Defendants rate to Tallahassee is $1.30, rate to Quincy $1.10. The rate to Quincy via defendant, Southern Ry., is forced by competition of the A. C. L., which competition is not present at Tallahassee. HELD, rate attacked not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Rock Hill Buggy Co. v. Southern Ry. 11 I. C. C. 229.

(4a) On complaint that defendants' rate on oak lumber in carloads to Philadelphia are unlawfully higher from Afton, Va., and points east thereof, to and including Gordonsville, Va., than those for the longer distances over the same line from Staunton and Basic City, Va., it appeared that a rate of 14 cents per hundred pounds applied over the whole territory for a period of about nine years between November 1, 1892, and August 1, 1901. Effective competition was shown by defendants' witnesses at Basic City and Staunton, and complainants failed to offer any testimony. Upon the record as made in the case, HELD, that the higher rate from the Afton-Gordonsville group does not constitute unlawful discrimination. George M. Spiegle & Co. v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 367.

(4b) Complainant attacked commodity rates as unreasonable on oak lumber, carloads, to Philadelphia, Pa., from Afton, Va., and points east thereof, to and including Gordonsville, Va., higher than those for the longer distances over the same line from Staunton and Basic City, Va. Between Nov. 1, 1892 and August 1, 1901, a rate of 14c applied over the whole territory. Effective competition was shown by defendants witnesses at Basic City and Staunton, and complainants failed to offer any testimony. HELD, the higher rates from the Afton-Gordonsville group does not constitute unjust discrimination. Complaint dismissed. Spiegle & Co. v. C. & O. Ry. 11 I. C. C. 367.

(4c) The competitive conditions existing at Afton, Minn., prevent the maintenance of higher coal rates than those now in effect, and consequently there is no unjust discrimination between places by reason of the fact that defendant's rate on coal is 35 cents per ton less from Superior, Wis., to Afton than from Superior to Hastings, although the traffic to Afton passes through Hastings. Hastings Malting Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 675.

(4d) Defendant's rate on anthracite coal from Superior, Wis., to Hastings, Minn., is $1.75 per net ton; on bituminous coal, $1.40 per net ton; whereas its rates from Superior to Afton, Minn., the traffic passing through Hastings, are $1.40 per net ton on anthracite and $1.05 on bituminous coal. HELD, (a) That the third and fourth sections of the Act are not violated, because competitive conditions exist at Afton which prevent the maintenance of higher coal rates than those now in effect; (b) that such coal rates to Hastings are unreasonably high and should not exceed $1.50 per net ton on anthracite and $1.25 per net ton on bituminous coal; (c) that as the Commission has not now authority to fix rates of defendant, no order will be made. Hastings Malting Co. v. Chicago, M. & S. P. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 675.

(4e) Complainant attacked commodity rates charged on hard coal from Superior, Wis., to Hastings, Minn. Rate was $1.75 per ton, on soft coal $1.40 per ton, whereas its rates from Superior, to Afton, Minn., the traffic passing through Hastings, are $1.40 per ton on hard coal and $1.05 on soft coal. HELD, the third and fourth sections not violated, because competitive conditions exist at Afton which prevent the maintenance of higher coal rates than those now in effect; rates attacked unreasonably high to extent they exceed $1.50 on hard coal and $1.25 on soft coal. Duluth, Minn., has the same coal rates to Hastings as Superior and the Minnesota Commission has ample authority to control the situation. Hastings Malting Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. 11 I. C. C. 675.

(4f) Substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions exists between Goodhue and Red Wing, Minn., and consequently the 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce is not violated by the defendant in charging a rate on grain of 15 cents per one hundred pounds from Goodhue, Minn., to Chicago, Ill., while it charges only 12½ cents per one hundred pounds from Red Wing, Minn., to Chicago, 14 miles farther off. Goodhue v. Chicago Great Western R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 683.

(4g) Defendant by charging a rate on grain of 15 cents per 100 pounds from Goodhue, Minn., to Chicago, Ill., while it charges only 12½ cents per 100 pounds from Red Wing, Minn., to Chicago, 14 miles farther off, the traffic passing through Goodhue, does not in this case violate the fourth section of the Act, because substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions exist between Goodhue and Red Wing. Neither does such rate adjustment violate the third section, as the discrimination was not shown to be undue. Decision of the United States Supreme Court in E. T. V. & G. Ry. Co. v. I. C. C., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516, cited. Goodhue v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 683.

(4h) Complainant attacked commodity rates charged on grain of 15c from Goodhue, Minn., to Chicago, Ill., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with a rate of 12½c from Red Wing, Minn., 14 miles farther distant, Goodhue being intermediate. The C. M. & St. P., main line runs through Red Wing while defendant, C. G. W., line runs west of that point but has a branch extending through Red Wing and Goodhue. This created a competitive situation at Red Wing which is not felt at Goodhue. HELD, In view of the substantial dissimilarity of conditions and circumstances, discrimination not undue, fourth section not violated according to decision of the Supreme Court in 181 U. S. 1. Village of Goodhue, Minn. v. C. G. W. Ry. 11 I. C. C. 683.

(4i) Complainant attacked rates on grain from Pine Island, Minn., to Chicago, Ill., as unreasonable compared with rates from Red Wing and Claybrook, Minn. The rates from Red Wing are fixed by competition with the C. M. & St. P., this line having the short line to Chicago and also making Red Wing intermediate to St. Paul. HELD, competitive conditions at Red Wing not prevaling at Pine Island, the latter rates caused no fourth section violation. Pine Island Farmers Elevator Co. v. C. G. W. Ry. 11 I. C. C. 687.

(4j) Rates of 21 cents from Lochland, Ky., to East St. Louis, Ill., compared with the rate of 15 cents from Louisville, 8 miles further distant, held not unlawfully discriminatory, it appearing that the rate from Louisville is fixed under competition. Durham v. Illinois C. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 37.

(4k) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity rate of 21c charged on brick machinery, carloads, from Lochland, Ky., to East St. Louis, Ill. The rate in effect at time of movement from Louisville, Ky., 8 miles beyond Lockland was 15c, not applicable at intermediate points. The rate from Louisville was fixed by competition by rail and water which did not exist at Lochland. HELD, The defendant may meet the rate at Louisville without reducing its intermediate rates to the same level, and it is not in violation of either the third or fourth sections in charging the high rate from Lochland, and rate attacked not unreasonable complaint dismissed. D. W. Durham v. Illinois Central R. R. 12 I. C. C. 38.

(4l) On complaint alleging that a rate of 21 cents per 100 pounds on brick machinery, carloads, from Lochland, Ky., to East St. Louis, Ill., compared with a rate of 15 cents for the longer distance over the same line from Louisville, Ky., to East St. Louis, was unreasonable, Lochland being 8 miles nearer the point of destination, it appeared that the rate from Louisville is fixed under competition by rail and by water, and following decisions of the court: HELD, That the higher rate from Lochland does not violate section 3 or section 4 of the statute, and, further, that the rate from Lochland is not, upon the evidence presented, unreasonable under the first section of the law. Durham v. Illinois C. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 38.

(4m) Difference in rates from New York points via water and rail through Galveston, Tex., to Wichita, Kan., and in rates to Topeka, Kan., through Wichita, HELD justified by competition for traffic to Topeka. Johnston- Larimer Dry Goods Co. v. New York & T. S. S. Co. 12 I. C. C. 58.

(4n) Competition which is real and substantial and exercises a potential influence on rates to a particular point brings into play the dissimilarity of circumstances and condition provided by the statute and justifies the lesser charge to the more distant and competitive point than to the nearer and noncompetitive place, and this right is not destroyed by the mere fact that incidentally the lesser charge to the competitive point may seemingly give a preference to that point and the greater rate to the noncompetitive point may apparently engender a discrimination against it. Tomlin Harris Machine Co. v. L. & N. R. R. 12 I. C. C. 134, 136.

(4o) The Supreme Court has held that carriers in meeting competitive rates are not justified in carrying traffic for less than cost, since they would thereby impose upon noncompetitive traffic the burden of the loss. Farmers Merchants & Shippers Club of Kansas v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 352, 360.

(4p) The Commission must in the adjustment of rates give due consideration to competition whether by rail or water or of markets, and greater charges for shorter distances than for longer ones, even over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer, made with due regard to the existence of competition at the longer distance point and the lack of it at the shorter, or having regard to the degree and potency of such competition at the respective points, is not unreasonably discriminatory and therefore not forbidden by law. Commercial and Industrial Asso. of Union Springs, Ala., v. L. & N. R. R., 12 I. C. C. 372, 374.

(4q) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity rate charged on coal, carloads, from Centerville district, Iowa to Albany, Mo. Rate attacked $1.25 per ton, the rate to St. Joseph, Mo., being $1.00. and subsequently the rate to Albany being reduced to $1.00 Distance to Albany 120 miles, and through Albany to St. Joseph 169 miles. There is practically no evidence concerning the reasonableness of the $1.25 rate per se. There is active competition at St. Joseph, both of markets and carriers, for the sale and transportation of coal to this point which is not present at Albany. HELD, rate attacked not unreasonable per se, complaint dismissed. Albany Produce Co. v. C. B. & Q. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 434.

(4r) Complaint attacked class rates from the east to Santa Barbara, Calif., as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory in that they exceed the rates to Pacific coast terminal cities. There is no real, potential compelling competition between the transcontinental rail carriers and those carrying similar traffic by water which affects directly the rail rates obtaining at Santa Barbara. Complaint dismissed. Commercial Club of Santa Barbara, Calif., v. S. P. Co. 12 I. C. C. 495.

(4s) Such competition as will justify under the long and short haul clause of the Act a preferential or discriminatory rate must be potential. Commercial Club of Santa Barbara, Calif., v. S. P. Co. 12 I. C. C. 495, 497.

(4t) A carrier may, because of commercial conditions or competition, establish at a given point an especially low rate, but it does not necessarily follow that all like traffic that moves through that point in the same direction must be given the benefit of that low rate, and while a through rate that is higher than the sum of the local rates between the same point is prima facie unreasonable, it can not be reduced to equal sums of locals except through lawful change in tariff. D. Morgan v. M. K. & T. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 525, 527.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(4u) Irrespective of the fourth section there is no unjust discrimination because of a lower rate to a more distant point on the same line if such rate is forced through competition. Nebraska Material Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 89.

(4v) While market competition must be considered as one of the circumstances affecting a rate situation, to allow market competition as a sole and controlling factor under section 4 would render it nugatory Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 367.

(4w) The purpose of Congress seems to have been to keep alive competition between carriers at competitive points upon the theory, probably, that while injustice might in some instances result, the general effect would be for the public good. Bluefield Shippers' Asso. v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 536.

(4x) Water or rail competition may relieve a carrier from the operation of section 4. National Refrigerator & Butchers' Supply Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 524, 527.

(4y) A fourth-section violation should not extend beyond the real necessities of competitive or other controlling influences. Emlenton Petroleum Rates, 29 I. C. C. 519, 521.

(4z) Though the Commission, in passing on a fourth section application finds the rates to the more distant point justified by the competition there existing, and the rates to intermediate points bearing reasonable comparison with other rates made for like distances in the same territory under fairly similar conditions, grants the application, its action is not to be construed as a finding that the rates to the intermediate points are just and reasonable. Fourth Section Violations in the Southeast, 30 I. C. C. 153, 157.

(5a) There is no warrant in law for the contention that while under the law the carriers are required to recognize the aggregate of intermediate rates as maxima this is required only where the factors entering into such aggregate have been voluntarily established. If this construction were put upon this rates higher than the aggregates of the intermediate rates where one factor of the aggregates was depressed by competition at a point, the rate so made becomes the lawful factor in making up the aggregate of the intermediate rates. Spartansburg Chamber of Commerce v. S. Ry. 34 I. C. C. 484, 494.

(5b) The statement in the Intermountain Rate cases, 234 U. S. 476, that "Power in the carriers primarily to meet competitive conditions in any point of view by charging a lesser rate for a longer than for a shorter haul has ceased to exist, because to do so, in the absence of some authority, would not only be inimical to the provision of the fourth section, but would be in conflict with the preference and discrimination clauses of the second and third sections," can be construed only as meaning that the amendment to the fourth section states no new rule or principle with regard to the conditions that must exist in order to entitle carriers to relief from the provisions of the fourth section, but simply deprives them of the right to determine for themselves in the first instance whether or not the circumstances and conditions are similar, and vests this power in the Commission for the purpose of enforcing this section of the law. Import & Domestic Rates, 36 I. C. C. 389, 399.

(5c) While it is obviously unfair to adopt the rate made to a competitive point reduced below a reasonable basis by necessity as the standard by which to measure rates to points where such necessity does not exist, it is not unfair to regard both rates to intermediate and depressed points together as parts of one system of rates. Transcontinental Rates, 46 I. C. C. 236, 246.

(5d) The esential justification for lower rates to a more distant point than to an intermediate point is the existence a the more distant point of depressed rates, which the carrier is powerless to affect, and failure to meet which would prevent the carrier from participating in the traffic to the more distant point. Transcontinental Rates, 46 I. C. C. 236, 270.

(5e) It is fundamental that if relief from the fourth section is to be granted as to any traffic there must exist at the competitive point an actual necessity for the maintenance of the lower rate at that point. This necessity should be so controlling as to prevent the carrier from securing the traffic at higher rates, Transcontinental Rates, 46 I. C. C. 236, 276.

(5g) In section four of the original act the prohibition of a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line was qualified by the words "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions." The Supreme Court in construing this language held that where there was a dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions the rule of the fourth section did not apply, and that it was for the carriers themselves to determine in the first instance whether that dissimilarity existed. It also held that all forms of competition must be considered in deciding whether circumstances and conditions were similar at the two points. Administration of Fourth Section, 87 I. C. C. 564, 566.

See Evidence § 14 (1½).

(a) Where a reduced rate is made to the terminus of a through route under the compulsion of competition, a town not located on the line of the through route, but reached over a lateral connecting road, has a disadvantage of situation entailing some additional expense, and a reasonably higher rate to such town that the forced competitive rate to the more distant terminus of the through rate is not unjust discrimination. Johnson v. C. St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 221, 239.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) When it is necessary, in order to avoid violations of the fourth section of the Act, or to properly meet cross-country competition, junction points of origin may consistently be placed in small groups. Superior Commercial Club v. G. N. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 342, 346.

§8 Markets.

See Evidence, §32; Market Competition.

(a) Complainant alleged that defendants unjustly discriminate against it by refusing to carry grain and flour from Schenectady, N. Y., to Boston and other New England points, at the proportion of all rail rates from Chicago to Boston allowed from Schenectady by the joint tariffs for such through shipments. HELD, the complaint in effect asks from the Commission an order that shall require the defendants to receive freights at Schenectady for transportation to Boston, at rates less than are now charged by the same roads for the transportation of like freights to Boston from stations nearer Boston, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. Such order, if issued, would require the roads to depart from the general rule laid down in the fourth section. While the Act authorizes the Commission to permit exceptions, it does not authorize it to require exceptions. The Commission has not the power to make rates generally, but only to determine whether rates imposed by the railroads are in conflict with the statute. The question whether the rates now charged complainant are excessive is not raised by the complaint. Complaint dismissed. Thatcher v. Fitchburg R. R. Co. 1. I. C. C. 356.

(b) The competition of markets on different lines for the sale of commodities at a given point served by both lines does not create circumstances and conditions which the carriers can take into account in determining for themselves in the first instance whether they are justified under the fourth section in charging more for shorter than for longer distances over their lines. To determine the force and effect of such competition involves consideration of commercial questions peculiar to the business of shippers, such as advantage of business location, comparative economy or production, comparative quality and market value of commodities, all of which are entirely disconnected from circumstances and conditions under which transportation is conducted. Carriers cannot create abnormal situations by making rates which equalize advantages and disadvantages of localities and thereupon claim justification for greater charges on shorter hauls on the ground that the lesser long haul charges which accomplish such equalization are necessary to secure increase in traffic over their lines. Trammell v. Clyde S. S. Co. et. al., 4 I. C. R. 120, 121 149.

(c) The competition of markets or the competition of carrying lines subject to regulation under the Act to Regulate Commerce does not justify carriers in making greater short-haul or lower long-haul charges over the same line in the same direction (the shorter being included within the longer distance), in the absence of an order of relief issued by the Commission upon application therefor and after investigation. Behlmer v. Memphis & C. R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 520, 523.

(d) The competition of markets or the competition of carrying lines subject to regulation under the Act to Regulate Commerce does not justify carriers in making greater short-haul or lower long-haul charges over the same line in the same direction (the shorter being included within the longer distance) in the absence of an order of relief issued by the Commission upon application therefor and after investigation. Behlmer v Memphis & C. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 257.

(e) Competition between markets, or between carriers subject to the regulating statute, does not create such dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as will justify carriers in charging more for the short than for the long haul, under the 4th section, without an order of the Commission. Brewer & Hanleiter v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 224, 237.

(f) That there is a greater market for the commodity at the longer than at the shorter distance point does not create a substantial dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions, within the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, forbidding any common carrier subject to the Act to make a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance. Fewell v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 354.

(g) The market competition of Macon, Georgia, with Augusta, Savannah, Brunswick, and Columbus, which have water competition, and the traffic competition between railroads centering at Macon exceeding those passing Griffin, Georgia, constitute a dissimilarity of circumstances which will justify a greater charge on the shorter haul from western points to Griffin than on the longer distance to Macon so long as neither rate is unreasonable. Brewer & Hanleiter v. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. 7. I. C. C. App. III.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(h) Ocean competition, says the carriers, brings about the lower rates from coast to coast; market competition produces the lower rates from the interior to the coast. "Market competition" is a phrase with which the railroad traffic manager too often conjures. When no other force can be found which brings about a discrimination market competition is advanced. It is both a sword and a shield; it is used to protect the carrier against attack because of undue discrimination as between communities; and it is a weapon of offense as well, by which one carrier invades the territory of another upon a different basis from that which it grants to its own immediately dependent community and forces concession from its rival carriers. Market competition is a euphemism for railroad policy. The history of the fourth section makes clear that it was born out of a desire and has been amended out of the purpose to restrict the force and effect of market competition. The examples cited before Congress by those who have advocated an absolute long- and short-haul section have largely been such as arose out of railroad policy, not such as were developed by transportation competition. Congress, however, has not seen fit to say (and perhaps most wisely so) that this economic force shall not be allowed to have its play in the making of rates. Market competition must be considered as one of those circumstances affecting a rate situation with which the Commission is called upon to deal. But may it not be said that while the language of the statute does not say that market competition shall not be allowed to justify the charging of the higher rate to the nearer point, the very spirit of the section makes against the free application of any such justifying principle? A national policy may veto a railroad policy, just as a public need may overcome and set aside a private desire. Experience has demonstrated to the national legislature that it is not safe to leave to the carriers the determination of the question what markets should be brought into competition with one another. The policy of Congress seems to be that a railroad may be compelled by transportation competition to make its rates lower than it otherwise would between two competitive points, and that this will justify a breach of the prohibition of the fourth section ; but the desire of a number of shippers to reach a market is a force to which the carrier may not yield unless it can establish clearly that the adoption of such policy will not unfairly discriminate against one community and in favor of another, and will not produce those results which the law was intended to destroy. Clearly to allow for market competition as a sole and controlling factor under the fourth section is to render it nugatory, for this would be tantamount to saying that a railroad could justify every discrimination as between communities by the assertion of nothing more than its own determination of policy. Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 367.

(i) While market competition is to be considered, it may constitute no justification for a deviation from the fourth section. In re Rates on Salt, 24 I. C. C. 192, 194; Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co. v. M. C. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 604, 606.

(j) Competition between markets of distribution does not constitute a justification for the maintenance of lower rates to a more distant than to an intermediate point. The competition of carriers serving other markets of supply does not in some instances justify the making of lower rates to more distant than to intermediate points, when it is found: (1) that one market is under a material disadvantage as against that from another, and (2) that the line seeking relief is meeting consistently at all points the competition against which relief is sought. Fourth Section

Violations in the Southeast, 30 I. C. C. 153, 279.

(k) It is well established that the Commission, in passing upon applications under the fourth section, may consider market competition. Grand Rapids Plaster Co. v. L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co., 41 I. C. C. 1, 8.

(l) While the Commission has granted relief from the operation of the long-and-short-haul provision of the amended fourth section of the Act because of market competition, this is true as to points of destination only, and in no case has the Commission granted fourth section relief because of market competition as to points of origin where the petitioning carrier has not been shown to be at some substantial disadvantage by reason of having a circuitous route. Proportional Rates to Ohio River Crossings, 43 I. C. C. 458, 468, 469.

(m) The Supreme Court has defined "competition" as a striving "for something which another is actively seeking and wishes to gain." Application of United States Steel Products Co., 77 I. C. C. 685, 687.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Upon further hearing, certain carriers authorized to reduce rates on gasoline from Somerset to San Antonio, Tex., and on gasoline and fuel oil from Grand Prairie to Dallas, Tex., to a basis lower than prescribed in the Shreveport Case, 48 I. C. C. 312, in order to meet motor truck competition and keep the traffic to their rails. Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. A. H. T. Ry. Co., 64 I. C. C. 197.

§9. Railroad Competition.

See Railroad Competition; Through Routes and Joint Rates § 6.

(a) In the absence of competition from Canadian Railways (which are not subject to the Act), the circumstances and conditions of the traffic from San Francisco to Denver are not so materially different from those of the traffic from San Francisco to the Missouri River as to justify the transcontinental roads subject to the Act, in charging a greater sum for the shorter distance. Martin v. Southern Pacific Co., 2. I. C. R. 1.

(b) Rates having been established from St. Louis to Omaha in view of the distance over the Wabash Line, the action of the Missouri Pacific in meeting the Wabash rates, although too low to be greatly desirable for its longer line, and involving loss of former revenue at intermediate points on the main line south of Omaha, by the application to the situation of the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act, cannot be properly criticised. Lincoln Board of Trade v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 98.

(c) The competition of the two roads does not alone make out the dissimilar circumstances and conditions which will authorize the making of such greater charge upon the shorter haul. Re Chicago, St. Paul, & Kansas City R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 137.

(d) The competition between two roads does not of itself justify the greater charge upon the shorter haul, nor does the fact that one company makes the charges unreasonably low between two points. Re Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co. (Com.) 2. I. C. R. 137.

(e) The competition of carriers subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce does not create circumstances and conditions which the carriers can take into account in determining for themselves in the first instance whether they are justified under § 4 in charging more for shorter than for longer distances over their lines. Trammell v. Clyde Steamship Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 120.

(f) The Interstate Commerce Commission holds that where railroads, which are subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce, compete with Canadian, or other railroads, which are not subject to the Act, such competition constitutes dissimilar circumstances and conditions; but that competition between two railroads, both of which are subject to the Act, does not constitute dissimilar circumstances and conditions. The Commission, however, also holds that it has no authority to raise railroad rates. If a railroad which is subject to the Act, is met with competition from other railroads, which are also subject to the Act, and the Commission has no authority to require such other railroads to increase their rates, even when the competition is ruinous, there is no practical difference between such a case, and the case of competition with railroads, not subject to the Act. If the general conclusion is correct, that competition will constitute dissimilar circumstances, and conditions, in the sense in which that term is used in the Act, there is no good reason for drawing the line where it has been drawn by the Commission; on the contrary, competition of carrier with carrier both subject to the Act, is as much within the terms of section 4, as competition with a carrier not subject to the Act. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 332.

(g) The fact that a competing railroad subject to the Act made a rate which was below the actual cost of transportation did not create such a dissimilarity of circumstances as would justify defendant in meeting this rate without reducing its rates at intermediate points. Matter of alleged violation of the fourth section of the act by the Santa Fe. 7 I. C. C. 61, 63.

(h) Competition between roads subject to the Act would under no circumstances afford such a dissimilarity of conditions as would justify the carrier in charging more for the shorter than for the longer haul without an application to the Commission for relief. Matter of alleged violations of the fourth section of the act by the Santa Fe. 7 I. C. C. 61, 63.

(i) If there can be exceptional instances in which competition between carriers subject to the Interstate Commerce Act may create such dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as to justify a greater charge for a short than a long haul, it is not justified where competition exists at both the shorter and the longer distance points. Brewer v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 224.

(j) Competition of carriers subject to regulations under the Act does not create such dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions under which transportation is performed as to justify such a carrier in making greater charges for the shorter than for the longer distance under the fourth section without an order of relief granted by the Commission upon application and showing by the carrier as required in the proviso to that section. Fewell v. R. & D. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 354, 374.

(k) Competition between railways subject to the act can not create the necessary dissimilarity under the fourth section. Board of Railroad Commissioners of Kentucky v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 380, 384.

(l) It being settled that competition must be considered and may justify deviation from the rule of the fourth section, it follows that wherever competition of controlling force by existing lines is practicable it must be given effect; and that freely engaging in competition at one point, while wholly or largely suppressing it at a shorter distance locally, can not entitle carriers to make a higher charge for shorter than for longer hauls over the same line in the same direction. Calloway v. L. & N. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 431, 438.

(m) Complainant attacked rates on commercial fertilizers from Savannah, Ga., as compared with Charleston, S. C., and Wilmington, N. C., to points in North Carolina South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama, as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. Defendant carries fertilizers from Savannah to Valdosta and also over the longer distance from Charleston to Valdosta, at no higher rate than it charges from Savannah. The Charleston rate is fixed by the competition of another and more circuitous line from that city to Valdosta, and defendant must meet that rate or get no fertilizer business from Charleston. HELD, that under the circumstances defendant may properly make the same rate from Charleston as is made by the longer line, and in so doing it is not unjustly discriminating against Savannah ,though if the rate from Charleston to Valdosta were in any way under control, the conclusion might be otherwise. Water competition between Charleston and Savannah compels a rate of 80c per ton on fertilizer carried by rail between those cities. Rates from Savannah to points in Georgia are fixed by the Georgia Railroad Commission. Water competition also exists between Savannah and Charleston and Jacksonville, Fla. By that mode of carriage the rate from both cities to Jacksonville are the same, and consequently also the same to points reached by rail from Jacksonville, as against the all rail lines to those points. Circumstances over which a defendant all rail line to Montgomery and other points in Alabama has no control also affect fertilizer rates from Savannah and Charleston to such Alabama points in some degree. HELD, defendants present differential of 50c more per ton from Charleston than from Savannah to points in Georgia other than common points is not unreasonable or prejudicial to Savannah. Charging the same rate from Savannah and Charleston over the defendant all rail lines to points in Florida in competition with ocean and rail competition from Savannah and Charleston not unlawful. Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transportation v. C. & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 458.

(n) Railway competition may create such dissimilar circumstances and conditions as exempt the carrier from an observance of the long and short haul provision. If the conditions and circumstances are not substantially, then the fourth section does not apply and the carrier is not bound to regard it in the making of its tariffs. If railway competition does actually control the rate at the more distant point that rate is not made under the same circumstances and conditions as is the rate at the intermediate point and the higher rate is not prohibited by the fourth section. Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transportation v. C. & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 458, 479.

(na) Competition between carriers subject to the requirement of the Interstate Commerce Act does not produce such dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions under which transportation is performed as will justify such carriers in making a greater charge for the shorter than for the longer haul without an order to that effect from the Interstate Commerce Commission granted as provided for in § 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act. Behlmer v. Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co. 8. I. C. C. App. XXXIV.

(o) There may be instances where a carrier should be permitted to meet railroad competition without reference to its intermediate territory, but when the very existence of an important industry depends upon the carrier being required to treat intermediate territory as it does the more distant territory, the rule of no greater charge for the shorter distance clearly applies. Export & Domestic Rates 8 I. C. C. 214, 268.

(p) Rates enforced by respondent company on live poultry in car loads to Chicago are higher from Marshfield, Mo. than for the longer distances from Springfield, Mo., and other more distant stations on its line, to and including Columbia, Kas. It meets the competition of other roads at Springfield and various junctions to the west of Springfield, yet nowhere west of Springfield does the respondent or any of its competitors make the greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance on this traffic. Such rates on live poultry from Springfield and points west thereof are not unreasonably low. The respondent makes as low a rate to St. Louis from Marshfield as from Springfield. The circumstances and conditions applying from the points involved on the traffic in question are not substantially dissimilar. HELD, respondent has failed to justify such higher rate from Marshfield than from Springfield and other more westerly stations for the carriage of live poultry to Chicago, and that by keeping such higher rate in force it is acting in violation of the fourth and third sections of the Act. Respondent should not insist upon making higher charges to Chicago from Marshfield than from more distant points of shipment upon other kinds of traffic, unless it is prepared to justify such action by showing an essentially different state of facts than appears in this proceeding. In the matter of alleged violations of the act by the St. L. & S. F. R Co., 8 I. C. C. 290.

(q) Competition between railways does not, in and of itself, create dissimilarity in "circumstances and conditions," but it is a factor which may and perhaps ought to be taken into account in cases arising under the fourth section of the statute. The question is largely one of fact, and is in each particular instance whether, in view of all the facts surrounding that individual instance, the circumstances and conditions are so dissimilar as to justify the greater charge for the shorter distance; and in deciding this question the interests of all parties, the carrier as well as the public, must be considered. Citing Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45. Geo.

Tileston Mill Co. v. Northern P. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 346.

(r) Allowing railway competition, such as is shown in this case, to constitute an exception to the rule of the fourth section, would permit throughout the whole country the making of higher rates to or from intermediate points, thereby disarranging business conditions and producing endless discriminations which do not now exist. Such application of the long and short haul clause was not intended by the Act, and it should not be permitted in due consideration of the interests of all parties concerned. Geo. Tileston Mill Co. v. Northern P. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 346.

(s) No reason can be assigned for permitting the defendant to disregard the fourth section in the handling of competitive traffic which is not equally applicable to each of its competitors. If the fourth section may be disregarded in case of railway competition, it is difficult to imagine a competitive condition in which it might not be equally disregarded. Geo. Tileston Mill Co. v. N. P. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 346, 358.

(t) Railway competition may create such dissimilar circumstances and conditions as exempt the carrier from an observance of the long and short haul provision. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlanta R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(u) If railway competition does actually control the rate at the more distant point, that rate is not made under the same circumstances and conditions as is the rate at the intermediate point, and the higher rate is not prohibited by § 4. Citing: Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transp. v. Charleston & S. R. Co., 7 Inters. Com. Rep. 479, 11 Ann Rep. I. C. C. pp. 37-43. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & Atlanta R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. App. XIII.

(v) Complainant attacked rates on ice from Hillsdale and other points in Michigan to Springfield, Ohio, compared with rates to Columbus, Ohio, as unreasonable. Prior to Sept. 3, 1901, the rates were higher over the line formed by defendant roads for the shorter distance to Springfield than for the longer distance to Columbus, the rates to both points having been made the same on that date; but it appeared that other and shorter delivering lines compete for the traffic to Columbus and that the short line distance to Columbus is less than the short line distance to Springfield. HELD, complaint should be dismissed. Ulrick & Williams v. L. S. & M. S. Ry., 9 I. C. C. 495.

(va) There is no unjust discrimination in charging higher rates for the transportation of ice from points in Michigan to Springfield than for the longer distance to Columbus, where other and shorter delivering lines compete for traffic to columbus, and the short line distance to Columbus is less than the short line distance to Springfield. Ulric & Williams v. Lake Shore & Michigan S. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 495.

(w) Complainant attacked rates charged on coal and pig iron from Birmingham, Ala., to Cordele, Ga., as compared with rates to Macon, Ga., a point beyond, as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory. Rates charged $1.70 to Cordele per short ton and $2.75 per long ton and to Macon, $1.60 per short ton and $1.65 per long ton. The distance from Birmingham to Macon via the shortest rail route is 254 miles and to Cordele by the shortest rail route 252 miles. Defendants meet the rates of the short lines to Macon, carrying them through Cordele. Macon has an advantage over Cordele in lying some distance nearer to the coal fields and the iron furnaces of northern Georgia and Tennessee. HELD, rate on coal not unjust or unreasonable, but rate on pig iron unreasonable to extent it exceeded $2.15. Tomlin Harris Machine Co. v. L. & N. R. R., 12 I. C. C. 134.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(x) The competition of carriers subject to the Act is a factor to be considered in passing upon an application for relief from the fourth section as amended in 1910. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 400, 414.

(y) Carriers with long lines permitted to deviate from section 4 to meet rate of direct route. Interior Iowa Cities Case, 29 I. C. C. 536, 538.

(z) Circuitous routes which are meeting competition of direct lines from same mines to same destinations will be permitted to meet rates of shorter lines in cases where they are not less than 15 per cent longer and to maintain higher rates to intermediate points. Rates on Bituminous Coal, 36 I. C. C. 401, 420.

(aa) It seems clear that ordinarily the Commission should not, by relief from the fourth section, authorize the carrier to go any further in meeting water competition than is necessary to meet the competition afforded by water routes, because to do so would give a permanent advantage to some localities to the disadvantage of competing localities. Rates on Iron and Steel Articles, 38 I. C. C. 237, 240.

(bb) It cannot be maintained that because a carrier has once chosen to make a low rate to meet water competition, it is estopped from thereafter increasing that rate, provided the new rate is just, reasonable, and nondiscriminatory, and the requirements of section 4 are observed. Lumber between Points in Western Trunk Line Territory, 38 I. C. C. 370, 376.

(cc) The mere fact of railroad competition does not justify a direct line in violating the fourth section at intermediate points. Coal to Red Wing, Minn., 41 I. C. C. 309, 313.

(dd) Fourth section violation did not arise until after the general applications had been filed; and the Commission's holding that no damages can be awarded for violations protected by application up to the time when the applications are adjudicated, is inapplicable. Reynolds Tobacco Co v. N. & W. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. 2181.

§10. Water Competition.

See Water Competition.

(a) That railroads have water competition and are compelled to meet it is not sufficient to justify the lesser charge for the greater distance, much less to justify the making of such tariffs as the petitioners seek relief from. Harwell v. Columbus & Western R. R. 1. I. C. C. 631, 637.

(b) A lower charge for a longer distance for transportation of like traffic may be justified by actual water competition of controlling force, relating to traffic important in amount; and among the circumstances and conditions that may be considered in estimating the dissimilarity created by water competition are the character of the roads, the character of the traffic, the preponderance of empty cars moving in a direction to which the traffic must be taken, and the legitimacy of the competition by the rail carrier. Lehmann Higginson v. S. P. Co., 3 I. C. C. 80, 89.

(c) The water competition which will justify a greater charge for a shorter distance by railroads must be actual. Possible competition will not justify such greater charge under the provisions of the fourth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce. San Bernardino Board of Trade v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 138, 142.

(d) The competition between all-water lines and the rail lines in the carriage of petroleum and its products from the port of New York to San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, Stockton, Marysville, San Jose, and San Diego, in the state of California, is actual, and involves the transportation of traffic important in amount, and warrants the all-rail lines in making such just and reasonable rates as will enable them to meet the low rates nad competition of the competing all-water lines and of the competing part-water and part-rail lines at said points; and in doing so they are not obliged to make their rates at intermediate points as low as the rates forced upon them by the competition. Rice v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 263

(e) Complainant attacked rates on petroleum and its products from Eastern Seaboard points to California, as unjust, unreasonable, and discriminatory. The competition between all water lines and the all rail lines in the carriage of petroleum and its products from New York to San Francisco, Oakland, Stockton, Marysville, San Jose, and San Diego, Calif., is actual and involves the transportation of traffic important in amount. The competition between the part rail and part water lines, and the part pipe and part water lines from Pennsylvania and Ohio via New York to these points of destination on the one hand and the competition of the all rail lines on the other is a competition that is actual and involves the transportation of traffic important in amount. HELD, a dissimilarity of circumstances is shown to exist at the California points named as compared to those which exist in the carriage of this traffic by the all rail lines at intermediate points along such rail lines, and it is such a dissimilarity of circumstances as is recognized by the act and warrants the all rail lines in making such just and reasonable rates as will enable them to meet the low rates and competition of the all water lines and of the competing part water and part rail lines at said California points above named, and that in doing so the said all rail lines are not obliged to make their rates at intermediate points as low as the rates forced upon them by competitors at the points above named. Complain dismissed. Rice v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 3 I. C C. 263.

(f) The Commission has repeatedly held that where the competition of an independent water line, not subject to the Act, is actual with that of a rail carrier for traffic at a point reached by it, and for traffic important in amount, that then the rail carrier if necessary to meet such competition may lower its rates at that point without doing so at other points on its line at which no such competition exists and at which other points the rail carrier could not so reduce its rates without a large loss of revenue. King & Company v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 272, 276

(g) Water competition to justify the greater charge for the shorter distance must be competition in transportation to the longer distance point, and as to freight which, if not carried over the line on which it is located, would reach such destination by water transportation. James & Mayer Buggy Co. v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 682, 686.

(h) The possible influence of water competition upon rates for the transportation of oranges and the nonexistence of such competition in the carriage of berries, because the latter cannot be carried by water in any considerable quantities, does not authorize defendants to take advantage of the situation and charge unreasonable rates on berries. Perry v. F. C. & P. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 740, 745.

(i) Water competition cannot justify charges three times as great for shorter distances as those for longer distances. Rice v. Cincinnati, W. & B. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 841.

(j) Water competition to justify the greater charge for the shorter distance must be competition in transportation to the longer distant point, and as to freight which, if not carried over the line on which located, would reach such destination by water transportation. Trammell v. Clyde Steamship Co., 4 I. C. C. 121, 152.

(k) Upon complaint alleging that rates on traffic from New York and other Atlantic seaboard points to Chattanooga are unreasonable and greater for the shorter distance to Chattanooga than for the longer distance over the same line in the same direction to Memphis and Nashville: HELD, That defendants are justified by the existence of water competition of controlling force in charging less on such traffic for the longer distance to Memphis, but that no such competition exists for such traffic to Nashville, and any greater charge for the transportation of like kind of property from said seaboard points for the shorter distance through Chattanooga than for the longer distance through Chattanooga to Nashville is in violation of the fourth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Defendants ordered to cease and desist from making such greater charge to Chattanooga with leave to file application for relief under the proviso clause of the fourth section within a specified time. Trammell v. Clyde S. S. Co., 4 Inters Com. Rep. 120; 5. I. C. C. Rep. 324, cited and affirmed. One transportation line cannot be said to meet the competition of another transportation line for the carrying trade of any particular locality, unless the latter line could and would perform the service alone if the former did not undertake it. When great disparity exists between charges which are lower to competitive than to intermediate points much less remote, the inference is irresistible that the lower rate must be unremunerative upon any theory, or else the larger rate gives an unwarranted return for the service rendered. Board of Trade of Chattanooga v. East Tenn. Va. & Ga. I. Co., 4 I. C. R. 213.

(l) Complainant attacked rates on traffic from New York and other Atlantic seaboard points to Chattanooga, Tenn., as unreasonable and greater for the shorter distance to Chattanooga than for the longer distance over the same line in the same direction to Memphis and Nashville, Tenn. HELD, defendants are justified by the existence of water competition of controlling force in charging less on such traffic for the longer distance to Memphis, but that no such competition exists for such traffic to Nashville, and no greater charge for the transportation of like kind of property from said seaboard points for the shorter distance to Chattanooga than for the longer distance through Chattanooga to Nashville is in violation of the fourth section. Defendants ordered to eliminate the fourth section violation. Board of Trade of Chattanooga v. E. T. V. & G. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 213.

(m) Active competition by water and other railroads at a terminal point, for the transportation of certain goods, renders the circumstances and conditions substantially dissimilar from those affecting an intermediate noncompeting point, and justifies a railroad company in charging a less rate to the former than to the latter point when necessary to meet such competition. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (C. C. S. D. Cal.) 4. I. C. R. 323.

(no) Water competition in favor of the more distant point does not make the circumstances and conditions substantially dissimilar, within the implied permission of the Interstate Commerce Act to charge less under such circumstances for a longer than for a shorter haul, where the competition is not with a carrier by a parallel water route between the point of shipment and destination, but between routes from different points of shipment, and the lower rate is made for the purpose of giving the shipping point the advantage in the markets at the destination point. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. (C. C. App. 5th C.) 4 I. C. R. 582, Rev'g. 332.

(pq) Water competition, to justify higher shorter distance charges under the fourth section, must be actual competition for the transportation involved, and such as to dictate the rate by rail. A railroad rate so low as to drive water transportation out of existence cannot be justified by showing the possibility of water competition; the law permits railroads to meet, not to extinguish, such competition. Brewer & Hanleiter v. L. & N. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 224, 236.

(r) Water competition to justify a greater charge by a railroad company for transportation for a shorter distance than for a longer distance, in the same direction and including the shorter distance, under the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, making such a charge unlawful unless the circumstances and conditions are substantially dissimilar, must be competition in transportation to the longer distance point as to freight which, if not carried to such longer distance point by the railroad, could reach such destination by water transportation. Fewell v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 354.

(s) Higher rates charged by defendants on fertilizer from Charleston or Savannah to intermediate points between those cities than they charge over the entire distance between Charleston and Savannah are justified by the existence of water competition. Savannah Bureau of Ft. and Trans. v. Charleston & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 458.

(t) Complainant attacked rates on sugar from Pacific coast common points to Kearney, Neb., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with the rates to Omaha, Neb., longer by 196 miles, over the same line in the same direction. Rate to Omaha was 65c to Kearney 99c. The competition of carriers by water from San Francisco to Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic seaports, and the competition of refineries on the eastern seaboard with refineries on the Pacific coast, operate, in connection with transportation rates in effect from the east and south to Omaha, to render the circumstances and conditions governing the carriage of sugar by defendants from San Francisco to Omaha, substantially dissimilar in comparison with those applying on the transportation for the shorter distance over the same line from San Francisco to Kearney, Neb., and to justify a rate of 65c to Kearney while a rate of 50c in force to Omaha; but such circumstances and conditions do not justify the present rate of 77c as compared with the rate of 50c in force to Omaha. Gustin v. B. & M. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 481.

(u) Complainant attacked through commodity rates on lumber from Wilmington, Del., to Philadelphia, Pa., Jersey City, N. J., and Boston, Mass., as unreasonable and in violation of the fourth section to the extent they exceed the rates from Wilmington to Norfolk or Portsmouth, Va., added to the rates from these points to the points of destination named. The rates to Philadelphia, Jersey City, and Boston from Norfolk or Portsmouth are made to meet water competition, and such competition also exists for traffic from Wilmington to these cities. Lumber manufacturers in Wilmington and Norfolk and vicinity compete actively with each other for the sale and shipment of lumber to the northern markets. The circumstances and conditions are substantially similar. HELD, rates attacked unreasonable to extent they exceeded Norfolk or Portsmouth combination. Hilton Lumber Co. v. Wilmington & W. R. R., 9 I. C. C. 17.

(v) Complaints attacked rates charged on buggies and carriages from Jackson, Mich., to San Barnardino, Calif., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory to the extent they exceeded the rates in effect to Los Angeles, Calif., a farther distant point, San Bernardino being intermediate. Traffic brought from the east by the U. P., N. P., G. N., and C. P., to various Northern Pacific coast points can be carried from thence to Los Angeles by water without passing over the routes of either the S. P. or the Santa Fe, but it must pass over one of such roads to reach San Bernardino. Merchandise by these rail and water routes to Los Angeles must be transported by rail across the continent, transshipped and carried 1,200 miles by sea, and again transshipped for another 20 miles rail haul before it reaches Los Angeles in competition with the S. P. or Santa Fe. The conditions affecting traffic including carriages and buggies, from eastern points are rendered substantially different at Los Angeles than at San Bernardino, a shorter distance point on the same line, by the competition of carriers wholly by water from the Atlantic Seaboard to Port Los Angeles, a point on the Pacific coast near Los Angeles, and the effect of such competition by water direct to San Francisco is, upon all the circumstances, properly recognized at Los Angeles by giving that city all rail rates from the east as low as those in effect to San Francisco. HELD, carriers, justified in maintaining rates to Los Angeles lower than to San Bernardino. Complaint dismissed. Holdzkom v. Michigan Central Ry., 9 I. C. C. 42.

(w) Complainant attacked class rates from Chicago, Ill., and New York, N. Y., to Phoenix, Ariz., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory as compared with rates to Los Angeles, Calif., a point beyond. The Santa Fe and Southern Pacific reach Los Angeles, Calif., a point to which rates from the east are affected by water competition, while Phoenix, Ariz., is not upon either of these through lines, but is connected therewith by two lateral lines, one on the north connecting with the Santa Fe at Ash Fork, and one on the south connecting with the Southern Pacific at Maricopa. HELD, the evidence in this case is insufficient to constitute the basis of a decision requiring defendant carriers to modify their long standing system of rate making, which also applies over other transcontinental lines throughout a great belt of territory and affects numerous localities and interests which have not been heard, and this being so the relief sought by complainant is for the present denied, but the case is retained for further consideration pending the investigation and disposition of other cases involving the same general question. Shippers' Union of Phoenix, Ariz. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 9 I. C. C. 250.

(x) When water competition permits the establishment of classifications and rates below the rates to noncompetitive points, such lower rates, while possessing value as standards of comparison, are not always conclusive in fixing rates to shorter distant points not affected by such competition. Shippers' Union of Phoenix v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 9 I. C. C. 250, 262.

(y) Complainant alleged defendants unjustly discriminate against St. Louis, Mo., and other jobbing houses in the Middle West by making a lower rate to Pacific coast terminals than to points upon the coast which are farther east, and through which traffic must pass in reaching the terminal points; by making a blanket rate from all territory east of the Missouri river to Pacific coast destinations; by undue and unreasonable differences between carload and less carload rates, by an unjust system of varied commodity rates, and by unreasonably refusing to permit shipment of mixed carloads. With water competition compelling low freight rates all rail from New York to San Francisco and other Pacific coast terminals, a showing that the distance is less and that graded rates were formerly in force is not sufficient to warrant an order requiring lower rates from St. Louis, Chicago, and other interior points than from New York on traffic carried by rail to Pacific coast destinations. While on traffic from the Middle West to the Pacific coast many differentials in the rates named for carloads and less carloads are too great, while varied commodity rates in the hardware schedule and perhaps in some others should be readjusted, and while in some instances greater latitude should be given in the shipment of practically the same articles in mixed carloads, the present record, which pertains almost wholly to the general aspects of the controversy, furnishes no facts from which it can be intelligently determined what ought to be done in specific instances, further hearing is ordered. HELD, complaint dismissed with complainant having the privilege of proceeding further if desired. Business Men's League of St. Louis, Mo. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 9 I. C. C. 318.

(z) Complainant attacked class rates from St. Louis, Nashville and Memphis, to Union Springs, Ala., as unreasonable as compared with rates to Columbus, Opelika, and Eufaula, Ala., although the traffic moves through Union Springs, the rates to the latter point are higher. Distances are practically the same. Rates are based on Louisville, and rates from this point are made in competition with water routes via the Ohio River, Gulf and Alabama Rivers, to Columbus, which condition does not prevail at Union Springs. HELD, rates attacked not unreasonable or discriminatory, complaint dismissed. Commercial and Industrial Asso. of Union Springs, Ala. v. L. & N. R. R. 12 I. C. C. 372.

(aa) It has frequently been found by the Commission that terminal rates when made by railroads in the face of ocean competition are justifiable under the long and short haul clause of the Act, and that the extension of such rates to a community so situated as to be in a position to move its traffic by water or by rail is not such discrimination, as against other communities not so situated, as falls within the condemnation of the law. Commercial Club of Santa Barbara, Calif. v. S. P. Co., 12 I. C. C. 495, 497.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(bb) Where rates are fixed at certain terminal points by water competition a general custom has obtained of making rates to intermediate points upon the combination of the competitive rates to the terminal rate plus the local rate back. The reasonableness of a rate so constructed necessarily depends largely upon the reasonableness of the local rate, which is added to the terminal rate and, obviously, no rate to an intermediate point constructed under those conditions and on that principle, can reasonably be higher than the sum of the terminal rate plus the local rate back. Monroe Progressive League v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 534, 536.

(cc) Water competition creates prima facie dissimilarity of conditions justifying a violation of the fourth section. Bayou City Rice Mills v. T. & N. O. R. R. Co., 18 I. C. C. 490, 492.

(dd) It is no reflection upon the traffic manager of a railroad to say that he bases his rates upon some line of policy. He deals directly and in most cases exclusively with the producer or jobber. His concern is to keep these patrons satisfied and at the same time bring to his railroad the greatest possible revenue. This is what he means by saying that he charges what the traffic will bear. He regards as reasonable whatever rate will make for the best interest for his road, and in determining this he adopts a line of policy which affects either favorably or unfavorably the industrial growth of the communities which the carrier serves. The restrictions of the Act are governmental limitations placed upon the unlimited and arbitrary discretion of traffic officials. While the latter may adopt policies which they regard as most favorable to their roads, such policies must be restricted by the inhibitions of the law which this Commission must enforce. The policy of making Reno rates base upon those extended to the more distant Pacific terminal points may not be justified upon the ground that Reno traffic will bear that imposition, but may be justified by conditions obtaining at the more distant point, which the carrier may meet without offence to any provision of the Act. It is not sufficient to state that the terminal points are situated on the water to excuse the impositions of high rates at intermediate points. Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 19 I. C. C. 238, 249. 250.

(ee) Where a higher rate to an intermediate point is justified upon the ground of water competition, the Commission has certain rules for its guidance: 1. Is it true that the long-distance rate is forced by water competition? 2. Is the long-distance rate which has been established in view of water competition less than would otherwise be reasonable? 3. Are the rates at intermediate points reasonable? 4. Do the rates unduly prefer one locality to another? And relief from the fourth section may be granted because of water competition. In Re Transportation of Wool, Hides and Pelts, 23 I. C. C. 151, 178.

(ff) Ordinarily the Commission should not, by relief from the fourth section, authorize carriers to go any further in meeting water competition than is necessary to meet the competition afforded by water routes, because to do so would give a permanent advantage to some localities to the disadvantage of competing localities. Rates on Iron and Steel Articles, 38 I. C. C. 237, 240.

(gg) That portion of the mourth section which begins, "Whenever a carrier by rail shall be in competition with a water route" was intended to act as a restraint against rail carriers reducing their rates between competitive points to such a level as to render the water service between such points unremunerative and unattractive. Should a rail carrier operating a route between competitive points in competition with a water route depress its rates ,without authority of the Commission, to a level so low as to drive the water carrier from the field, the rail carrier is prohibited from therafter increasing its rates except by permission of the Commission, and such permission can not be extended unless reasons for the proposed increases are shown other than the elimination of the water competition. Reopening Fourth Section Applications, 40 I. C. C. 35, 40.

(hh) A water service which for one cause or another has been abandoned may have been effective at some period in the past in reducing rail rates to a level lower than they otherwise would have been, but there may not be at present any likelihood of the restoration of that service although some of the facilities for the service are still in existence. The maintenance of lower rates under these circumstances to the more distant than to intermediate points may not be justified, although the lower rate when established was necessitated by the competition then existing and the higher rates to intermediate points are not unreasonable. Transcontinental Rates, 46 I. C. C. 236, 246.

(ii) Even if the elimination of competition by canal were considered as complete for the time being, it is not certain that the statutory provision prohibiting the increase of rates reduced to meet water competition, unless after hearing it is found that the proposed increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition, is applicable. Transcontinental Rates, 46 I. C. C. 236, 253.

(jj) The possibility or probability of a recurrence of water competition does not justify the continuance of depressed rates at Pacific coast terminals. When the water competition again becomes sufficiently controlling in the judgment of the carriers to necessitate the reduction of the rates to the coast cities to a lower level than can reasonably be applied at intermediate points, the carriers may bring the matter to the Commission's attention for such relief as the circumstances may justify. Competent proof must be submitted in connection with such applications of a fairly regular water service between the two coasts; the adaptability of the traffic to water competition; principal points of origin of the traffic; range of rates afforded by the water lines; principal points of consumption; and the ports upon the two seaboards at which the water carriers receive and deliver freight. Transcontinental Rates, 46 I. C. C. 236, 276, 277.

(kk) These proceedings comprise fourth section applications of the transcontinental lines proposing to establish from and to the Pacific coast terminals lower rates than are in effect to and from intermediate points on traffic having origin and destination in the so-called defined territories, lying roughly speaking, east of the Rocky Mountains. The proposed reduced rates are grounded on the low rates by steamship lines between the Atlantic and Gulf ports and the Pacific ports, and the movement of a substantial volume of traffic thereunder. Except as otherwise noted, the rates of the applicant carriers are the same over all routes and apply not only all rail, but so far as New York is concerned, also in connection with the S. P., steamship line operating between that point and New Orleans, La., and Galveston, Tex. Previous decisions involving this same question are found in 21 I. C. C. 329, 21 I. C. C. 400, 32 I. C. C. 611, 34 I. C. C. 13 and 40 I. C. C. 35. In 46 I. C. C. 236, the Commission found that due to the withdrawal of ships for use in the trans-Atlantic service water competition between the Atlantic and Pacific ports was no longer a compelling force; and the Commission found that the maintenance of lower rates to the coast than to intermediate points unduly preferred the coast. Statements show that considerably more than half the traffic in most all of the commodities involved was shipped by water. As to some commodities the movement was nearly all by water. All but a small portion of the water borne traffic originated in and east of Buffalo-Pittsburgh territory, indicating that the Pacific coast interests are making their purchases in that part of the east which is tributary to the water lines and from which they can secure low rates. At the time the application was filed all traffic from interior points that was shipped by the water lines was charged local rates to the ports. Subsequently the lines from Chicago proposed proportional rates to the Gulf for transshipment equal to the rates from Chicago to New York City. It was the declared purpose of the carriers to be conservative, and not to meet water competition except where it is a matter of serious concern, and then only within reasonable limits. If the competition further develops the rail lines plan from time to time to seek relief on additional commodities. The present application covers only carload traffic, but later applications may be filed to include some that is less than carload. None of the proposed rates meet even approximately the coast to coast rates of the water lines. They are not generally intended or expected to draw or to hold any large amount of the port to port traffic to the rail lines. They did, however, approximate the charges available from certain interior points to the Pacific coast terminals by rail to the Atlantic and Gulf ports and thence by water, plus such incidental charges as marine insurance, and unloading and transfer charges at Pacific coast terminals. The rate arrived at was to be blanketed to apply from all points east of the rate fixing point in order to accommodate those who preferred to pay a substantially higher all rate than is available in connection with the water lines. It was blanketed to apply from points west of the rate fixing point in order to keep all parties in position to do business in competition with those who could use the water routes to advantage. While on traffic to the Pacific coast it is proposed to keep the Middle West on a parity with seaboard territory, the latter would be required to pay more than the Middle West on traffic to inter-mountain territory. It is of course not necessary to have the same rate by water as by rail to afford the two sets of carriers equality of oportunity from any given point of shipment. The slower service, the necessity for making arrangements for transshipment at the ports, the irregularity of ship movements, special requirements as to marketing, and other considerations operate to the disadvantage of the water lines. Due to the transfers at ports, difficulties incident to stowage of mixed cargoes, the rolling of the ships, atmospheric conditions, and changes in temperature en route, the shipment of goods by water often damage them more than shipment by rail in carloads. Many of the same disadvantages are experienced in shipping by water in carloads as when the goods are shipped in less carloads by rail. On perhaps most of the commodities considered shippers as a rule prefer rail to water movement unless there is a differential of from 10 to 25c per 100 pounds, dependent upon the commodity in favor of the latter. A few articles, like iron and steel, require nearly as low rate by rail as by water. EASTBOUND RAIL AND WATER APPLICATION. The S. P., sought authority to establish reduced rates from California terminals to New York City only, via its rail and water line through Galveston. The commodities involved are asphalt, barley, beans, canned goods, dried fruits and rice. Most of the production of these commodities is at points not very far inland from the ports. The present rate on each of the commodities applies as a blanket from all California producing points to eastern defined territories via all routes. Apparently they are the highest rates that apply from, to, or between intermediate points. No reductions are proposed from, to, or between intermediate points, except that as the production of the commodities in question is largely near the coast the locals to the terminals plus the proposed rates beyond will automatically reduce the rail rates from any important intermediate points. The service of the S. P., is superior to that of the water lines, and the business would be confined very largely to traffic destined to New York and points to which the rates from New York are lower than from other Atlantic ports. The average rail distance from California shipping points to Galveston is less than 2,000 miles, and the distance by water between Galveston and New York is about 2,160 miles, so that more than half of the route is by water. MINOR APPLICATIONS. In addition to the general westbound application and the S. P., eastbound application, there are embraced in the present report minor applications, each confined to a single commodity. No. 11957 covers an application to apply on sisal and ixtle, carloads, from El Paso, Tex., and Gulf Ports to Pacific terminals, rates less than are applicable to or from intermediate points. Minimum weight proposed 30,000 pounds. No. 11940 covers rates on crude sulphur from Louisiana and Texas producing points to California and north Pacific coast terminals. Nos. 11948, 12094 and 12118 cover import rates on green coffee, originating in South America, of 80c to California terminals and 90c to the north Pacific coast terminals from New York, New Orleans, and Galveston, only, without reducing the rates from and to intermediate points. THE GENERAL WESTBOUND APPLICATION. So far as revenue is concerned the Commission is satisfied that, taking the additional business by itself, the proposed rates generally and easily cover the extra out of pocket cost involved. Were the rate level alone to be considered, it would be difficult to condemn the proposed terminal rates in the general westbound application. The rail lines, by hauling the business overland, would deprive themselves of revenue they are now receiving for the haul from point of production to the ports, based largely on local rates presumed to be reasonable and fully compensatory. HELD, the carriers have failed to make the necessary affirmative showing as to the collateral losses of revenue which would result from the proposed terminal rates. The intermountain country will continue under the handicap that in purchasing in the same region it must pay more freight on articles purchased in Pittsburgh than in Chicago and more on articles purchased in Chicago than in Kansas City. Their markets are restricted whereas the Pacific coast purchasers may disregard distance in their choice of an eastern market. HELD, the general westbound application of these transcontinental carriers for authority to depart from the long and short haul provision of the fourth section should be denied. EASTBOUND RAIL AND WATER APPLICATION. The indications are that a granting of the application would be a benefit rather than a detriment to the intermediate points, for it would afford them, like the terminals, a rail route at only slightly higher rates than those applying by water. If there should be a reduction in the port to port factors, the intermediate points, like the terminals, could use them just as they use the present factors. HELD, this application has been justified, rates proposed and resulting charges will be reasonably compensatory. SISAL AND IXTLE. The Commission can not believe that the 2c excess in the rates from the Gulf over the rate requested will prove material. HELD, application denied. SULPHUR. It would appear that the terminal rates proposed full offset the advantages of carriage by rail. HELD, proposed rates reasonably compensatory, application approved. GREEN COFFEE. It is conceded that the rates would apply only upon ocasional or even sporadic movements, when the necessity arose for drawing upon stocks at the ports for immediate use rather than awaiting the normal deliveries from Brazil by water. They do not contemplate the meeting of water competition generally. This green coffee traffic does not constitute a special case within the meaning of section 4. HELD, applications denied. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48.

(ll) To meet competition of the intercoastal steamship lines the transcontinental rail lines here seek authority to maintain lower rates on wool from the Pacific coast terminals than from intermediate points to eastern defined territories. The rail rates from interior western points to interior eastern points, for instance from Boise, Idaho, to Detroit, Mich., are slightly less than to Boston. To points east of Chicago, Ill., they are based on the Chicago or Mississippi River combination, except where the combination of rates to and from the Pacific coast terminals results in lower through rates. The rates from intermountain territory are made very largely on the latter basis. The rail lines move empties westbound in large numbers to the Pacific northwest to handle the eastbound lumber, canned salmon, etc. To California the traffic eastbound and westbound is more evenly balanced. It is apparent, therefore, that any additional traffic that would be developed by the proposed rates would require the haulage of more empties from the east and it is extremely doubtful whether, in view of this additional empty haul and the comparatively light loading, there could be much, if any, profit over and above the out of pocket costs in the proposed rates. The westbound empty car movement is given by the rail lines as a reason why their westbound applications should be granted; it may constitute a reason for not granting the eastbound applications. Wool is the only article now moving in transcontinental traffic on which the rates do not conform to the long and short haul rule under an order granting relief from the fourth section. Even during the war, when the intercoastal competition had practically ceased, the lower rates from the terminals than from intermediate points were continued. HELD, carriers have failed to justify the present or proposed departures from the long and short haul rule and the fourth sections will be denied. Transcontinental Wool Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 99.

(mm) Wherever a carrier by railroad shall in competition with a water route or routes reduce the rates on the carriage of any species of freight to or from competitive points it shall not be permitted to increase such rates unless after hearing by the Commission it shall be found that such proposed increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition. Administration of Fourth Section, 87 I. C. C. 564, 605.

(nn) The specific purpose of the last paragraph of section four is to insure and preserve water competition; to prevent competition that kills. A reduction made under the authority of a fourth section order after full hearing must have been found by the Commission to have been reasonably necessary in order to preserve competition between the rail and the water carrier. A reduction so made is not within the prohibition declared by the last paragraph. Transportation conditions are not static; the oppressor of today may tomorrow be the oppressed. And in order to preserve competition between rail and water carriers it is necessary that the Commission's power to approve a modification of rates be as broad as it is to approve a modification in order to prevent unjust discrimination. Even a liberal reading of section four would not require that the prohibition contained in the last paragraph be extended to reductions made with the approval of the Commission. Administration of Fourth Section, 87 I. C. C. 564, 606.

(oo) In the absence of proof of damare, an unauthorized departure from the long and short haul rule of the fourth section does not warrant an award of reparation. National Hay & Milling Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. 89 I. C. C 1, 2.

V. PROCEDURE

§10½. In general.

See Procedure Before Commission.

(a) Application for exceptions under Act will only be granted after investigation upon verified petition. Re Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 16.

(b) Notice must be published by petitioner in not less than two newspapers along the line for at least ten days prior to presentation of petition, stating nature of relief applied for and time of presentation of application; proof of each publication must be filed with petition. Re Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 16. Rule 2, Appendix I., 1 I. C. R. 841.

(c) Where in a proceeding against several connecting roads for violation of section 4, one claims that its only participation consisted in sharing in low charges on long haul, complaint should not be dismissed as against it. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(d) The desire to have the Act construed will not support proceedings under the 4th section. Boston & A. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(e) The sole grievance of petitioning road for a 4th section exception being that defendant company accepted through traffic at lower rates than itself, the petitioner has no standing to maintain the proceeding. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(fg) Complainant must not necessarily have pecuniary interest to be entitled to be heard. Boston & A. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(h) Complainant attacked rates from Boston, Mass., to Detroit, Mich., as in violation of the fourth section in that the rates to the long haul points are lower than to the short haul points. HELD, where in a proceeding against several connecting railroads for charging more for a short than for the long haul, one of the companies claims that its only participation in the alleged offense consisted in its sharing in the low charges on the long haul, which were not in themselves alleged to be illegal, the complaint should not be dismissed as against such company, where its interest and the liability of the low rates on long haul traffic to be affected by changes made in the higher rates on short haul traffic is so great that in case such company had not been made a party, and should ask to be made a party, it would be proper to so order. Where, in a proceeding by one rail road company against other companies, for charging more for a short haul than for the long haul, it appears that the rates alleged to be illegal are local rates; that the petitioner does not pay or participate in paying them; that they are not competitive rates to those imposed on the petitioners road; and there is not any allegation that such rates are excessive or unjust, and the sole grievance of the petitioner is that the defendant companies accept through traffic at lower rates than are made by the petitioner and its connections, such petitioner has no standing to maintain in the proceeding. A desire to obtain a construction of the Act is not sufficient to support such proceeding. The right to make greater charges for short than for long hauls is exceptional and depends in every case upon the peculiar circumstances and conditions; and a ruling in reference thereto in the case of one carrier would not be applicable to another carrier differently circumstanced. If several railroad companies join in making the joint tariff which constitutes the lesser charge on the longer haul, while one or more of this number makes the greater charge on the shorter haul, the case is within the fourth section; and those who make such greater charge are called upon to justify it. By the word "line" in the Act, a physical line is meant, not a business arrangement, and one piece of road may be part of several lines. HELD, further, that such peculiar facts are not found to exist as will justify the greater charge over the shorter line. Boston & Albany R. R. v. Boston & L. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 571.

(i) Complainant alleged defendant violated the fourth section by charging more for a shorter haul than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction. Defendant has a line of railroad extending from New Albany, Ind., to Michigan City, passing through Indianapolis and Frankfort. At Indianapolis the road is crossed by east and west lines which give a rate on wheat to New York of 23c. At Frankfort it is crossed by another road which makes a rate to New York of 25c. At South Wanatah it is crossed by the N. Y. C. & St. L., and at Michigan City it intersects the M. C. Defendant wishes to participate in the grain carrying trade to New York, and the M. C. will receive from it at Michigan City grain taken up at Indianapolis and prorate it with the 23c rate on a mileage basis. The N. Y. C. & St. L., will receive from it at South Wanatah the grain taken up at Frankfort and prorate with it the 25c rate on a mileage basis. Defendant has been in the practice of taking wheat at Indianapolis on these terms; and it received a carload from complainants at Frankfort and charged the 25c rate. The Indianapolis shipments are carried through Frankfort on their way to Michigan City, and the whole distance from Indianapolis to New York by Michigan City is greater than from Frankfort to New York by South Wanatah. It appeared that by the direct line Indianapolis is nearer to New York than Frankfort is by its direct line ,and is given lower rates for that reason. Defendant receives a greater compensation for its haul from Indianapolis to Michigan City than it does for its haul from Frankfort to South Wanatah and consequently does not on its own line charge more for the shorter haul. Defendant does not, and can not, control the fixing of rates by the crossing and intersecting lines, and has no option but to accept those rates which are fixed and prorate upon them, or to cease to take grain altogether. HELD, these facts show no violation by defendant of the long and short haul clause. Its own charges are the greater for the longer distance; and if the whole charge to New York is the greater for the shorter distance, it is only because the M. C. charges less on its own line than does the N. Y. C. & St. L.—defendant having no control over either. If it is desired to test the reasonableness of the through rate from Frankfort to New York, all the roads responsible for it should be made defendants. It is not enough to make the initial road defendant, unless that road has authority to make the rate for them all. Complaint not sustained. Allen and Allen v. L. N. A. & C. R. R. 1 I. C. C. 621.

(j) Applications under section 4 (Long and Short Haul section) to be made by verified petition, stating extent of relief desired and points between which authority is asked to charge less. Rule 2, Appendix 1, 1 I. C. R. 841.

(k) Carriers alleging justification of a departure from the "long and short haul rule" of the statute must, in their answers to complaints, clearly advise complainants of the facts and circumstances relied on as constituting such justification. Raworth v. Northern P. R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 857.

(l) In a case of alleged violation of the 4th section, or long and short haul clause of the Act to Regulate Commerce it is for the tribunal appointed to enforce the provisions of the statute, whether the Commission or the court, to consider whether the traffic was or was not transported over the longer and shorter distances "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions;" and in this case the question, which is one of fact, was peculiarly within the province of the Commission. C., N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Inters. Com. Commission, 5 I. C. R. 391.

(m) Under § 4 of the Act the question for the Commission is one of fact, and the interests of the producing market, the consuming market and the carriers are to be considered in determining whether upon the whole situation there is such dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as justifies the rates in question. Danville v. Southern R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 409

§11. Complaints and orders.

See Procedure Before Commission § 11.

(a) Where, in a proceeding against several connecting railroad companies for charging more for a short than for the long haul, one of the companies claims that its only participation in the alleged offense consisted in its sharing in the low charges on the long haul, which were not in themselves alleged to be illegal, the complaint should not be dismissed as against such company, where its interest and liability of the low rates on long haul traffic to be affected by changes made in the higher rates on short haul traffic is so great that in case such company had not been made a party, and should ask to be made a party, it would be proper to so order. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(b) Where complaint alleges that a greater charge, in the aggregate, for the transportation of a like kind of property, is made for a shorter than for a longer distance, over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer, and that an unlawful preference is thereby given one locality over another. HELD, Complaint is sufficient to put the carriers on proof that the services were rendered under such dissimilar circumstances as to justify the greater charge. San Bernardino Board of Trade v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 138.

(c) When a carrier on complaint under the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, avers substantial dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions as justifying its greater charge for shorter hauls, it is concluded by its pleading, and must affirmatively show that the circumstances and conditions, of which it is entitled to judge in the first instance, are in fact substantially dissimilar; but upon an application for relief under the § 4 proviso the carrier is not limited by such a rule of evidence, and may present to the Commission every material reason for an order in its favor. Trammell v. Clyde Steamship Co. (Com.), 4 I. C. R. 120.

(d) When a carrier on complaint under the fourth section avers substantial dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions as justifying its greater charge for shorter hauls, it is concluded by its pleading and must affirmatively show that the circumstances and conditions of which it is entitled to judge in the first instance are in fact substantially dissimilar; but upon an application for relief under the fourth section proviso the carrier is not limited by such a rule of evidence, and may present to the Commission every material reason for an order in its favor. There seems to be no limitation upon the power of the Commission to grant relief under that proviso when, after investigation, the Commission is satisfied that the interests of commerce and common fairness to the carrier requires that an exception should be made. Trammell v. Clyde S. S. Co. et al, 4 I. C. R. 121.

(e) When a carrier on complaint under the fourth section avers substantial dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions as justifying its greater charge for a shorter haul, it is concluded by its pleading and must affirmatively show that the circumstances and conditions of which it is entitled to judge in the first instance are in fact substantially dissimilar; but upon an application for relief under the fourth section proviso the carrier is not limited by such rule of evidence, and may present to the Commission every material reason for an order in its favor. Behlmer v. Memphis & C. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 520.

(f) When a carrier on complaint under the fourth section avers substantial dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions as justifying its greater charge for a shorter haul, it is concluded by its pleading and must affirmatively show that the circumstances and conditions of which it is entitled to judge in the first instance are in fact substantially dissimilar; but upon an application for relief under the fourth section proviso the carrier is not limited by such a rule of evidence, and may present to the Commission every material reason for an order in its favor. H. W. Behlmer v. Memphis & Charleston R. Co., et al, 6 I. C. C. 257.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) Where the rates of carriers are not in unlawful violation of the provisions of section 4 of the Act, it is not the practice of the Commission to enter an order fixing an absolute rate for the shorter haul, but only to require the carriers guilty of the violation to cease and desist from charging a higher rate for the shorter than for the longer haul, and it is, therefore, necessary that connecting carriers joining in the rates attacked should be made parties. Moise Brothers Co. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 16 I. C C. 550, 551.

(h) A carrier which is party to a through rate to a longer distance point should be made a party to a complaint alleging a violation of section 4. Moise Bros. Co. v. C. R. I. & P. Co., 16 I. C. C. 550, 552.

(i) The statute does not in terms define the proceeding in which the Commission may inquire into alleged violations of the fourth section of the Act and grant relief as specified in the proviso, but it is clear that any order which the Commission makes in that respect must be at all times subject to modification by it, and it seems equally clear that when complaint is made of a violation of the fourth section the Commission may, by order in that proceeding, grant appropriate relief against any violation of the Act which is found to exist, including a violation of the fourth section, nor is it significant that the complaint was pending at the time of the amendment of the section. It should be noted that this is not a new and additional authority, but is simply the exercise of the jurisdiction provided for in the fifteenth section for the correction of unjust discrimination. There is no essential difference between this order and an order which the Commission might make under the third section. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 400, 426.

(j) The Chamber of Commerce of a city is a proper party to be heard upon the application of carriers to be relieved from the operation of the fourth section in fixing rates to such city. Grand Junction Chamber of Commerce v. D. & R. G. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 115, 117.

(k) The filing by a carrier of an application for relief from section 4, does not preclude the determination of a complaint, under section 3, involving the same general territory. Mayor & Council of Boston v. A. C. L. R R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 50.

(l) In an order prescribing the maintenance of certain interstate rates it is not appropriate to incorporate an injunction to observe the fourth section as carriers are presumed to obey the law. Greater Des Moines Committee v. C. St. P. M. & O. Ry. Co., 42 I. C. C. 65, 75.

(m) The correction of fourth section departure renders any finding with respect to it unnecessary. Scott Paper Co. v. A. C. R. R., 44 I. C. C. 503, 504.

(n) Complaints allege that rates "are unjust and unreasonable in violation of section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act, in violation of the aggregate of intermediate rates." Contention that since this presents an issue under the fourth section it is incumbent upon complainant to prove damage in order to entitle it to reparation. HELD, the commission must look to the substance of a complaint rather than to its form. The fourth section makes it unlawful "to charge any greater compensation as a through rate than the aggregate of the intermediate rates," although such a through rate might otherwise be reasonable per se. By its averment that these rates were unreasonable complainant alleges a violation of section 1 of the Act. Standard Rail & Steel Co v. M. P. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C. 219, 220.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Having explained and excused a violation of section 4, the issue as to the reasonableness of the intermediate rate must take same course as any other issue involving reasonableness of rates. Moise Bros. Co. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 550, 553.

(b) In deciding questions under the fourth section, each case must stand upon its own facts, and no situation can furnish an exact precedent for another. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 526.

(c) Rates over, for the most part, identical routes and for almost exactly the same distance, which differ by one-eighth, require explanation. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 528.

(d) The amendment to section 4 of the Act of 1910 placed the burden of justifying a higher rate to an intermediate point included within a longer haul, upon the carriers. Transcontinental Rates, Westbound, 26 I. C. C. 456, 460.

(e) A rate otherwise reasonable is not shown to be unduly low by the presence in the carrier's tariffs of a higher rate for a shorter distance involving a fourth section violation. Adjustment should be made with respect to the latter rate. Iowa-Minnesota Cement Rates, 28 I. C. C. 477, 482.

(f) In determining fourth section violations rates of the same character should be compared with one another; proportional rates should not be compared with local rates. Rates on Grain and Grain Products to Texarkana, 29 I. C. C. 35, 36.

(g) The reasonableness of proposed increased rates cannot be established simply by pointing to fourth section violations which are thereby obviated. Rates between Shreveport and Texarkana, 32 I. C. C. 180, 182.

(h) The burden of showing that an adjustment in violation of the fourth section results in reasonable and nondiscriminatory rates is upon the carriers. Drewes Sugar Co. v. S. P. Co., 44 I. C. C. 533, 541.

(i) An application on behalf of railroads for relief from the provisions of the fourth section must be supported by competent proof as to the then existing competition by water alleged to make necessary the relief sought. Transcontinental Rates, 46 I. C. C. 236, 244.

(j) A carrier, to obtain relief from the fourth section must make a showing with respect to the depressed character of the lower rates which it desires to maintain for longer than for shorter hauls, nor was it shown that the rates which it proposes to continue to intermediate points are not unreasonable relatively or per se. Where a carrier's entire justification consists of a comparison of the distance over its line with that of the short line, such a comparison is not of itself sufficient to establish a special case warranting relief from the provisions of the fourth section. Standard Oil Company (Ky.) v. Y. & M. V. R. R. Co., 48 I. C. C. 493, 495.

(k) Doubtless there are many subnormal rates in the country as to which the Commission has never been petitioned for fourth section relief, so that the mere fact that no such relief has been granted as to a particular rate does not prove that that rate is normal. Procter & Gamble Co. v. A. C., 61 I. C. C. 700, 706.

§12. (1) Burden of Proof.

See Burden of Proof I.

(a) The judgment of carriers in respect to the circumstances and conditions is not final, but is subject to the authority of the Commission and of the courts to decide whether error has been committed, or whether the statute has been violated. And in case of complaint for violating the fourth section of the Act, the burden of proof is on the carrier to justify any departure from the general rule prescribed by the statute by showing that the circumstances and conditions are substantially dissimilar. Re Southern Ry. & S. S. Asso. v. 1 I. C. R. 278, 291.

(aa) Where substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions is set up by defendant carriers in justification of departures from the long and short haul rule of the statute, the burden is upon them to establish such dissimilarity. Board of Trade of Tory, A. A. v. A. M. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 348, 354.

(b) If several railroad companies join in making the joint tariff which constitutes the lesser charge on the longer haul, while one or more of their number makes the greater charge on the shorter haul, the case is within the fourth section of the Act; and those who make such greater charge are called upon to justify it. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(c) In this case the complaint is that the defendant violates the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Law by charging more for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction. The facts are that defendant has a line of railroad extending from New Albany, Indiana, to Michigan City, passing through Indianapolis and Frankfort. At Indianapolis the road is crossed by east and west lines which give a rate on wheat to New York of twenty-three cents a hundred pounds. At Frankfort it is crossed by another road which makes a rate to New York of twenty-five cents. At South Wanatah defendant's road is crossed by the New York, Chicago & St. Louis; and at Michigan City it intersects the Michigan Central. Defendant wishes to participate in the grain carrying trade to New York; and the Michigan Central wil receive from it at Michigan City grain taken up at Indianapolis, and prorate with it the twenty-three cent rate on a mileage basis. The New York, Chicago & St. Louis will receive from it at South Wanatah the grain taken up at Frankfort and prorate with it the twenty-five cent rate on a mileage basis. Defendant has been in the practice of taking wheat at Indianapolis on these terms; and it received a car load from complainants at Frankfort and charged the twenty-five cent rate. The Indianapolis shipments are carried through Frankfort on their way to Michigan City, and the whole distance from Indianapolis to New York by Michigan City is greater than from Frankfort to New York by South Wanatah. It appeared by the evidence, however, I. That by the direct line Indianapolis is nearer to New York than Frankfort is by its direct line, and is given lower rates for that reason; II. That defendant receives a greater compensation for its haul from Indianapolis to Michigan City than it does for its haul from Frankfort to South Wanatah, and consequently does not on its own line charge more for the shorter haul; III. That defendant does not, and cannot, control the fixing of rates by the crossing and intersecting lines, and has no option but to accept those rates which are fixed and prorate upon them, or to cease to take grain altogether. HELD, (a) These facts show no violation by defendant of the long and short haul clause of the Act. Its own charges are the greater for the longer distance; and if the whole charge to New York is the greater for the shorter distance, it is only because the Michigan Central charges less on its own line than does the New York, Chicago & St. Louis—defendant having no control of either. (b) If it is desired to test the reasonableness of the through rate from Frankfort to New York, all the roads responsible for it should be made defendants. It is not enough to make the initial road defendant, unless that road has authority to make the rate for them all. (c) The conclusion is that the complaint is not sustained. Allen v. Louisville, N. Albany & Chicago R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 621.

(d) A carrier making higher rates upon shorter hauls upon the same line in the same direction has the burden of proving their reasonableness. Spartanburg Board of Trade v. Richmond & D. R. Co. (Com.) 2. I. C. R. 193; Re Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 137.

(e) The same section of the Act which forbids the making of a greater charge for the shorter haul expressly declares that it is not to be construed as authorizing the carrier to charge as much for such shorter haul; and when the charge is challenged the carrier must support it by proof that it is reasonable. It assumes the responsibility of doing this in every instance when it makes charges which are alike for distances which greatly vary. Re Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City R. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 137, 147.

(f) Where on a question of rates it appears that higher rates are made upon the shorter hauls on the same line and in the same direction, the carrier making them must take the burden of proof to show their reasonableness. Spartanburg Board of Trade v. Richmond & Danville R. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 193.

(g) Where complaint alleges that a greater charge, in the aggregate, for the transportation of a like kind of property is made for a shorter than for a longer distance, over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer, and that an unlawful preference is thereby given one locality over another. HELD, complaint is sufficient to put the carriers on proof that the services were rendered under such dissimilar circumstances as to justify the greater charge. San Bernardino Board of Trade v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 138, 141.

(h) In cases of complaints for violation of the fourth section of the Act the burden of proof is on the carrier to justify any departure from the general rule prescribed by the statute by showing that the circumstances and conditions attending the long and short hauls respectively are substantially dissimilar. Raworth v. N. P. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 857, 859.

(i) When a carrier on complaint under the fourth section avers substantial dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions as justifying its greater charge for shorter hauls, it is concluded by its pleading and must affirmatively show that the circumstances and conditions of which it is entitled to judge in the first instance are in fact substantially dissimilar; but upon an application for relief under the fourth section proviso the carrier is not limited by such a rule of evidence, and may present to the commission every material reason for an order in its favor. Behlmer v. M. & C. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 520, 524.

(j) The greater charge enforced by a railroad company for a shorter distance than for longer distances, in the transportation of live poultry in carloads, constitutes a departure from the general rule of the 4th section, which the carrier is bound to justify. Re Alleged Violations of Act to Regulate Commerce, 8 I. C. C. 290.

(k) Under section four of the Act the question for the Commission is one of fact, and the interests of the producing market, the consuming market and the carriers are to be considered in determining whether upon the whole situation there is such dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as justifies the rates in question. City of Danville v. Southern Ry. Co., 8 I. C. C. 409, 426.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(l) In a case wherein a violation of the long-and-short-haul provision of the fourth section was alleged, it was not shown that any traffic moved to the lower rated points during the time when the rate to the intermediate point was higher; and the circumstance of an experimental shipment made by complainant fails, of itself, to prove undue discrimination against the intermediate point. Kenner Truck Farmers' Ass'n v. I. C. R. R. Co., 32 I. C. C. 1, 4.

(m) The reasonableness of proposed increased rates cannot be established simply by pointing to fourth section violations which are thereby obviated. Rates between Shreveport and Texarkana, 32 I. C. C. 180, 182.

(n) The burden of showing that an adjustment in violation of the fourth section results in reasonable and nondiscriminatory rate is upon the carriers. Drewes Sugar Co. v. S. P. Co., 44 I. C. C. 533, 541.

(o) An application on behalf of railroads for relief from the provisions of the fourth section must be supported by competent proof as to the then existing competition by water alleged to make necessary the relief sought. Transcontinental Rates, 46 I. C. C. 236, 244.

(p) A carrier, to obtain relief from the fourth section must make a showing with respect to the depressed character of the lower rates which it desires to maintain for longer than for shorter hauls, nor was it shown that the rates which it proposes to continue to intermediate points are not unreasonable relatively per se. Where a carrier's entire justification consists of a comparison of the distance over its line with that of the short line, such a comparison is not of itself sufficient to establish a special case warranting relief from the provisions of the fourth section. Standard Oil Company (Ky.) v. Y. & M. V. R. R. Co., 48 I. C. C. C. 493, 495.

(q) While petitioner seemingly needs some relief from the requirements of the fourth section, the burden is on it to make an affirmative showing, as a condition precedent, that the proposed rates are reasonably compensatory. Rates may not be so low to a particular point as to place a burden on other traffic; nor may fourth section relief be granted unless the rate structure is reasonable and non-prejudicial. Commodity Rates from Jacksonville to Miami, 83 I. C. C. 207, 210.

§12. (2) Circumstances of Probative Force.

See Evidence II.

(a) The "circumstances and conditions" touching transportation to and from Mexico through El Paso, Texas, by Texas & Pacific R. Co., are so substantially different from those surrounding transportation to other points as to justify the establishment of lower rates than charged at points where the distance and haul are shorter. Re Texas etc. R. Co. (U. S. C. Ct. La.) 1 I. C. R. 30.

(b) Carriers are required to judge in the first instance with regard to the similarity or dissimilarity of the circumstances or conditions that forbid or permit a greater charge for a shorter distance. Re Southern R. & S. Asso. 1 I. C. R. 278.

(c) The fact that long haul traffic will only bear certain rates is not reason for carrying it for less than cost at expense of other traffic. Re Southern R. & Steamship Asso. 1 I. C. R. 278.

(d) It is not a justification for charging more for a shorter than for a longer distance that the traffic which is subjected to such greater charge is way or local traffic; nor that the shorter haul traffic is more expensive to the carrier; nor that the lesser charge has for its motive the encouragement of manufacturers or some other branch of industry; nor that it is designed to build up trade centers; nor that the lesser charge for the longer haul is merely a continuation of favorable rates under which trade centers or industries have been built up. Re Southern R. & Steamship Asso., 1 I. C. R. 278.

(e) The right to make greater charges for short than for long hauls depends upon peculiar circumstances and conditions in each case. Boston & A. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(fg) The question of a greater charge in the aggregate for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction is not to be determined by the proportions allotted to different roads on the line, but by the rate as an entirety. Imperial Coal Co. v. P. & L. E. R., 2 I. C. C. 436, 445.

(hi) Nor is such greater charge justified by the fact that the lumber business of the roads of a connecting line or any of them was done in cars which carried machinery to the longer distance point, when profitable return loads were not always to be had. James & Abbott v. East Tenn., Va. & Ga. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 609.

(jk) Nor does the fact that the freight is lumber which has paid a local rate over the roads of the defendants or of other railroad companies to the longer-distance point justify such greater charge for a shorter distance. James & Abbott v. East Tenn., Va. & Ga. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 609.

(l) A difference in the bulk and value of lumber does not justify a greater charge for a shorter distance, when the carriers in their published rate sheets put the lumber in the same class and at the same rate. James v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co., (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 609.

(m) Besides terminals expenses and other aggregate charges not dependent upon the distance freight is moved, there are other conditions which justify a lower proportionate charge for longer distances. Cope Brothers & Co. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 460.

(n) The circumstances and conditions which make a greater charge for a shorter distance lawful relate to the nature and character of the transportation service rendered by the carrier over the same line to the longer and shorter distance points. The James & Mayer Buggy Co. v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 682.

(na) That a shipper was not informed of the through tariff rates when making shipments between local points will not avail him as a basis for an action for violation of the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act of 1887 where he made no inquiry and no false statements were made to him, and the shipping point was a non-competing one where no publication of the joint rate was required, under the order of the Commission made June 21, 1887. Chicago & N. R. Co. v. Osborne 4 I. C. R. 257.

(o) The charges accepted for a longer haul may be referred to for the purpose of considering the reasonableness of charges made for the shorter haul. I. C. C. v. E. Tenn., Va. & Ga. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. app. XLIII.

(p) In a case involving shorter distance charged thigher than those to or from longer distance points, the carrier cannot rightfully claim justification for greater dissimilarity in the rates than may be indicated by the ascertained dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions. S. Marten v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 581.

(q) The fact that a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions between the longer and the shorter distance points has been shown, which justifies a lower rate to the longer distance point, does not prevent the longer distance rate from being considered by way of comparison in determining whether or not the shorter distance rate is unreasonable or unduly prejudicial, where the competition and other compulsory conditions are found not to justify the whole disparity between the shorter and the longer distance rate. S. Marten v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 581.

(r) To hold that, after substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions has been shown, the longer-distance rate cannot in any case or to any extent be considered by way of comparison in determining whether or not the shorter-distance rate is unreasonable or unduly prejudicial, particularly when, as in this case, competition and other compulsory conditions are found not to justify the whole disparity between the shorter and longer-distance rates, would be to reject a most appropriate and necessary test of the reasonableness and justice of railway charges. In a case involving shorter-distance charges higher than those to or from longer-distance points the carrier cannot rightfully claim justification for greater dissimilarity in the rates than may be indicated by the ascertained dissimilarity in circumstances and conditions. Martin v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 581.

(s) In a proceeding based on an infraction of section 4 of the Act, a merely theoretical or paper rate that has not been used and was unknown to the defendant until casually discovered will not be accepted as affording a just basis for an order for reparation on shipments made to an intermediate point at a slightly higher rate. Mo. & Kan. Shippers' Association v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 483.

(t) A rate otherwise reasonable is not shown to be unduly low by the presence in the carrier's tariffs of a higher rate for a shorter distance involving a fourth section violation. Adjustment should be made with respect to the latter rate. Iowa-Minnesota Cement Rates, 28 I. C. C. 477, 482.

(u) In determining fourth section violations rates of the same character should be compared with one another; proportional rates should not be compared with local rates. Rates on Grain and Grain Products to Texarkana, 29 I. C. C. 35, 36.

(v) In making readjustments same rule or principle should govern as to circuitous versus short routes as apply in like cases to named routes. Fourth Section Violations in the Southeast, 32 I. C. C. 61, 67.

(w) Relief afforded from fourth section should be sufficient to permit carriers to continue to compete for terminal traffic so long as it may be secured at rates that will yield a revenue in excess of operating cost. Commodity Rates to Pacific Coast Terminals, 32 I. C. C. 611, 629.

(x) Departure from the long-and short-haul rule does not prove a higher rate to an intermediate point unreasonable and the subsequent reduction of the rate also is insufficient. American Refining Co. v. T. & P. Ry., 39 I. C. C. 559, 560.

(y) In determining whether a departure from the fourth section exists like rates should be compared with one another. This means that the mere fact that a local rate to an intermediate point is higher than the proportional rate to a more distant point does not of itself constitute a departure from the fourth section. The underlying reason for this conclusion is that the movement on the local rate is an independent movement from the local point of origin to the local destination, while the movement on the proportional rate is a part of a through movement and the total rate applied for the through movement is greater than the rate applied to the shorter local movement included within the longer. However, the fourth section is violated if the through movement is greater than the rate applied to the shorter local movement included within the longer. However the fourth section is violated if the application of a local rate on a shipment from the same point of origin as that on which a proportional rate would apply results in a higher through charge to an intermediate point than to a more distant point. Royal Milling Co. v. G. N. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 263, 269, 270.

(z) In applying the provisions of the fourth section of the Act, rates and fares of the same kind should be compared. Conf. Ruling 304. Fares between New York and Points West of Newark. 74 I. C. C. 516, 519.

See Reparation.

(a) Complainant asks reparation on account of rates on ice from Hillsdale and other points in Michigan which, prior to September 3, 1901, were higher over the line formed by defendant roads for the shorter distance to Springfield than for the longer distance to Columbus, the rates to both points having been made the same on that date; but it appeared that other and shorter delivering lines compete for the traffic to Columbus and that the short line distance to Columbus is less than the short line distance to Springfield. Upon all the facts and circumstances, HELD, that complaint should be dismissed. Ulrick & Williams v. L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co., et al, 9 I. C. C. 495.

(b) Defendant's rate on horses and mules in less than carloads from Bayou Sara, La., to St. Louis, Mo., is double first class rate of $1.80 per 100 lbs. upon an estimated weight of 2,000 lbs. for the first animal, 1,500 lbs. for the second, and 1,000 lbs. for each additional animal. The distance covered is 667 miles. This rate when applied to the transportation of a single animal is not unreasonable, but it is unreasonable for a shipment of four animals, amounting in that case to $99, while the charge upon a carload of 25 animals is only $100. Defendant's less than carload tariff would be rendered more just by reducing the charge to 90 cents per 100 lbs., the first class rate increasing the estimated weight of the first animal to 4,000 lbs., and leaving the weights for the additional animals as they now are, at 1,500 lbs. for the second and 1,000 lbs. each for all others included in the shipment. No order issued, but complainant may apply to Commission for reparation if compelled to pay rates in excess of those indicated. Barlow v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co., et al, 10 I. C. C. 333.

(c) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory rates charged on bananas, carloads, from Charleston, S. C., to Danville, Va., as compared with the rate to Lynchburg, Va. Defendant has had in force since April 25, 1903, rates per 100 pounds on bananas in carloads from Charleston 43c to Danville 35½c to Lynchburg the transportation to the latter point by defendants line being through Danville. The lower rate to Lynchburg is forced upon defendant by the competition of bananas coming from Baltimore. The 43c rate to Danville is not found unreasonable. HELD, rate attacked to Danville not in violation of the Act. Prior to April 25, 1903, rates from Charleston to Danville were 43c and to Lynchburg, 20c. The rate to Lynchburg was 13c below the rate which was justified by competition from Baltimore or elsewhere. HELD, this was in violation of Act, reparation awarded to extent of 13c. Gardner and Clark v. Southern Ry., 10 I. C. C. 342.

(d) Prior to April 25, 1903, defendant had in effect rates per 100 lbs. on bananas in carloads from Charleston which were 43 cents to Danville and 20 cents to Lynchburg. The rate of 20 cents to Lynchburg was 13 cents below the rate which was justified by competition from Baltimore or elsewhere. Such relation of rates was in violation of sections three and four of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and complainants upon the shipments made at the 43-cent rate to Danville are entitled to recover reparation to the extent of 13 cents per 100 lbs., such excess amounting upon complainants' shipments to $130. Gardner & Clark v. Southern R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 342.

(e) Complainant attacked as unreasonable class C rate on hay from Piqua, Neosha Falls, Hartford, Burlington and Bristol, Kan., to Kansas City, Mo., in that it exceeded the rate to a point beyond, St. Joseph, Mo. The Commission is unable to accept a paper rate, for the longer haul, that has not been used and was unknown to either the defendant or the complainant until casually discovered after it had been the published rate for some years, as affording a just basis for an order of reparation on shipments made to an intermediate point at a slightly higher rate. This view of the matter is supported by the uncontradicted evidence of the defendant, tending to show that the class C rate of 10c to St. Joseph was not a compensatory rate and by the complete failure of complainant to show that the rate to Kansas City was itself excessive. HELD, rate attacked not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Missouri & Kansas Shippers' Asso. v. M. K. & T. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 483.

(f) In a proceeding based on an infraction of section 4 of the Act, a merely theoretical or paper rate that has not been used and was unknown to the defendant until casually discovered will not be accepted as affording a just basis for an order for reparation on shipments made to an intermediate point at a slightly higher rate. Missouri & Kansas Shippers' Asso. v. M. K. & T. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 483, 484.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) A departure from the provisions of the fourth section of the Act, protected by appropriate application, does not of itself afford a basis for an award of damages. Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 610, 611.

(h) Where a departure from the requirements of the long and short haul provisions of the fourth section of the Act exists it is well settled that whether the higher rate from the intermediate point is protected by an appropriate fourth section application filed with us or whether it is unprotected in order to support an award of reparation the complainant must show that the higher rate charged from the intermediate point and paid and borne by complainant was unreasonable or that it was damaged as a result of a violation of section 3. Park v. L. & N. Ry., 55 I. C. C. 703, 705.

(i) Where a departure from the long-and-short haul provision of the Act exists, whether the higher rate from the intermediate point is protected by an application filed with the Commission or not, to support an award of reparation complainant must show that the higher rate charged from the intermediate point and paid and borne by complainant was unreasonable or that it was damaged as a result of a violation of section 3. Park v. L. & N. R. R., 55 I. C. C. 703, 705.

(j) Where rate from an intermediate point was increased, resulting in a departure from the fourth section and carrier endeavored to increase rates from farther distant points to maintain parity formerly existing but increases were suspended and subsequently sanctioned, reparation will be denied on shipments moving during interim if shipper does not make such "reasonable request" for the lower rate as contemplated by rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 59 I. C. C. 199.

(k) In the absence of proof of damage to the shipper, the fact that carriers have charged rates which contravene the long-and-short-haul rule of the fourth section is not of itself a sufficient basis for an award of reparation. Indian Refining Co. v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 246, 247.

(l) When a fourth section departure is protected by an appropriate application no damages can be awarded up to the time when the Commission passes upon the fourth section application unless a case of undue prejudice is made out which might carry with it an award of damages or unless the rate charged from the intermediate point is found unreasonable. Buckeye Veneer Co. v. Director General, 61 I. C. C. 673, 676.

(m) The Commission found that when a rate to a farther distant point, lower than to an intermediate point was published subject to the provisions of Rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A, which provides for the publication of rates to intermediate points on one day's notice, substantial compliance with the long-and-short-haul provision of the fourth section of the Act was thus affected and reparation awarded on shipments which had moved, even though there had been no previous request for the establishment of the lower rate to the intermediate point. Macon Chamber of Commerce v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co., 63 I. C. C. 327, 331.

(n) The Commission has found that when a rate to farther distant point, lower than to an intermediate point, was published subject to the provisions of rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A, a substantial compliance with the long-and-short-haul clause of the fourth section is thus effected, and reparation has been awarded on shipments which had moved even though there had been no previous request for the establishment of the lower rate to the intermediate point Maine Spinning Co. v. Director General, 78 I. C. C. 279, 281.

(o) The fact that a carrier has charged rates in violation of the long and short haul provision of section 4 is not of itself a sufficient basis for an award of reparation. Oregon Fruit Co., 50 I. C. C. 719. Milwaukee Western Fuel Co. v. Director General, 78 I. C. C. 597, 598.

(p) The notation on a tariff in accordance with rule 77, is a substantial compliance with the fourth section requirements, and that a request for the publication of a rate under that rule prior to the movement of shipments is not essential in order that the shipper may have the advantage of such provision. Therefore, damages such as required in a violation of the fourth section do not have to be shown in such cases. Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Co. v. Director General, 81 I. C. C. 659, 660.

(pa) Notation on tariff in accordance with rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A is substantial compliance with fourth section requirements, and request for publication of a rate under that rule prior to movement is not essential in order that shipper may have advantage of such provision. Producers Refining Co., 69 I. C. C. 403. Therefore, damage such as required in violation of fourth section does not have to be shown in such cases. The commission has also awarded reparation on such shipments moving from intermediate points under rates that were higher than from more distant point, where rate from latter point was established subject to rule 77. N. Y. & N. J. Lubricant Co., 68 I. C. 477. Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 81 I. C. C. 659, 660.

(q) The Commission has awarded reparation on shipments moving from intermediate points under rates that were higher than from a more distant point, where the rate from the latter point was established subject to rule 77. Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Co. v. Director General, 81 I. C. C. 659, 660.

(qa) In the absence of proof of damage to the shipper the fact that the carriers have charged or received rates which violate the long and short haul rule of the fourth section is not of itself a sufficient basis for an award of reparation. Lynchburg Traffic Bureau v. Pennsylvania R. R., 88 I. C. C. 619, 620.

(r) The collection by a carrier of a rate in excess of the rate charged by it for a longer haul over the same route without permission of the Commission first having been obtained, is the collection of an illegal rate, and the excess of such rate over the longer haul may be recovered by an action in the court without resorting first to proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission, since the question is clearly not administrative, and the remedy by action in court exists under Interstate Commerce Act, § 9. Davis v. Parrington, 281 Fed. 10.

(s) In actions by shippers to recover excessive freight rates collected in violation of the long and short haul clause of Interstate Commerce Act, sec. 4, it was proper to measure the damages by the difference between the rate collected for the shorter haul and the tariff rate for the longer haul. Davis v. Parrington, 281 Fed. 10.

(t) In an action to recover damages for violation of Section 4 damages need not be proven except that the charges collected by the carrier exceeded the published tariff for the longer haul. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. Great Northern Ry. Co., (Minn., 1922), 191 N. W. 42.

(u) No reparation can be awarded on account of violation of the fourth section protected by applications unless damages proved by reason of violations of the first or third section. Cumberland

Grocery Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. 1826. Harward-Yancey-Young Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. 1827.

§14. Form and effect of fourth section application.

See Infra § 16.

(a) Applications to the Commission for special exception under the Act will be granted only after investigation of the facts, upon a verified petition formally presenting the case. Re Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 16.

(b) Where, in a proceeding by one railroad company (here, the Boston & Albany R. R. Co.) against other companies, for charging more for a short than for the long haul, it appears that the rates alleged to be illegal are local rates; that the petitioner does not pay or participate in paying them; that they are not competitive rates to those imposed on the petitioner's road; and there is no allegation that such rates are excessive or unjust, and the sole grievance of the petitioner is that the defendant companies accept through traffic at lower rates than are made by the petitioner and its connections,—such petitioner has no standing to maintain in the proceeding. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(c) An offer of defendant carriers, made during the pendency of a case, to reduce the rates complained of, provided the Commission would relieve such carriers from the operation of the fourth section by granting an order permitting such reduced rates to be less than the charges of such carriers to intermediate points, is not an application for an order of relief under the fourth section. Such an order can only be granted upon the application and investigation required by law. Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. v. Southern Pacific Co., 6 I. C. C. 488.

(d) An application to the Interstate Commerce Commission for relief from the operation of § 4 of the Act to Regulate Commerce is not necessary in order to entitle the carrier to adjust its rates with reference to the dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions, including the existence of competition, and to justify such rates in the courts when complained of. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland Ry. Co., 7 I. C. C. App. CIX.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) The factor of $1.85 assessed from Enola to Carney's Point is alleged to violate the long and short haul clause of the fourth section in that it exceeded the rate of $1.80 applied from more distant points. The latter rate was published under authority of rule 77 of our Tariff Circular 18-A, and was thus in substantial compliance with the requirements of the fourth section. E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 461, 462.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where a new tariff is filed, and is protested on the ground that the tariff carries rates forbidden by the fourth section or any other section of the Act, the averment, if confirmed by tariff check, is good ground for suspending the tariff. But where a system of rates is in vogue which in general make-up the Commission does not find ground to disturb, particular rates violative of the fourth section are to be treated as any other infraction of the Act. Greater Des Moines Committee v. C. St. P. M. & O. Ry. Co., 42 I. C. C. 65, 75.

(a) Tariffs not conforming to fourth section criticised. Re Tariffs of the Columbus & Western Railway, 2 I. C. R. 11.

(b) Complainant attacked certain class and commodity rates from Cincinnati, O., and Louisville, Ky., to Gallatin, Tenn., the shorter distance, which were higher than those in effect over the same line to Nashville, Tenn., the longer distance, the shorter being included within the longer distance, as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory. Defendant instructed its agents to disregard the regular published tariff rates to Gallatin and to charge the lower combination of rates to and from Nashville. It also had this rule of applying combination rates when less than tariff rates in force at other stations on its line. Instructions to that effect were issued in a separate printed circular, and did not appear, nor were they referred to in any way, upon its regular published tariffs. HELD, that this practice is unlawful, and that, to be in compliance with the act, any rule which operates to alter, modify, or change established rates must be fully and clearly set forth upon the published tariffs of rates and charges to be affected thereby. Spillers & Company v. L. & N. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 364.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Where a tariff provides for the publication, upon reasonable request, of rates from an intermediate point not exceeding those from more distant points, there is a substantial compliance with the requirements of the fourth section. National Pickle & Canning Co. v. P. M. R. R., 44 I. C. C. 502.

(d) Contention that the maintenance of higher rates from intermediate than from farther distant points were unlawful at the time of passage of the amended fourth section and could not be protected by applications filed with the Commission, not sustained, as the higher rates were the lawful rates notwithstanding the fact that through inadvertance lower rates were maintained from the farther distant points. Park v. L. & N. R. R., 55 I. C. C. 703, 705.

(e) Rates in a tariff published in accordance with rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18 A are in substantial compliance with the fourth section of the Act. Morris & Co. v. Director General, 64 I. C. C. 435, 436.

(f) Tariff providing that upon reasonable request therefor rates would be established from intermediate points not exceeding those from more distant points on one day notice is a substantial compliance with the requirements of the fourth section. Cincinnati Abattoir Co. v. Director General, 66 I. C. C. 65, 66.

(g) The notation on a tariff in accordance with rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A, providing for the publication of rates from intermediate points on one day's notice, is a substantial compliance with the fourth section requirements, and that a request for the publication of a rate under that rule prior to the movement of shipments is not essential in order that the shipper may take advantage of such provision. Armour & Co. v. Director General, 78 I. C. C. 373.

(h) Tariff carried rule providing that "rates * * * will, in absence of specific commodity rates, apply from or to directly intermediate points." Shipments moved from certain branch line points in California to San Francisco, Calif., during Federal control, and commodity rate from next more distant point applied. Lower commodity rate from point farther distant available. HELD: Since points of origin were "directly intermediate" to point taking lower commodity rate, and language of tariff did not limit application of intermediate rule to "next more distant point," such lower rate was applicable. Rate charged found illegal and reparation awarded. Pacific Rice Mills Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 78 I. C. C. 459.

(i) Notation in tariff that upon reasonable request therefor rates will be established from intermediate points not to exceed those from more distant points on one day's notice, in accordance with rule 77 of Tariff Circular 18-A, is substantial compliance with requirements of long-and-short-haul provision of fourth section of the act. IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) In an action to recover damages under Section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act it is not necessary to show shipments over the longer haul upon which charges were paid as per the published tariff. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. Great Northern Ry. Co., (Minn. 1922), 191 N. W. 42.

(b) Section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act declares a published tariff of a carrier unlawful which charges more for a shorter haul than for a longer, the shorter haul being a part of the line of route of the longer, therefore the maximum rate that can be collected by the carrier for the shorter haul would be the established tariff for the longer haul, and what is received in excess thereof may be recovered in an action as for money had and received for the shipper's use. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. Great Northern Ry. Co., (Minn. 1922), 191 N. W. 42.

(c) A state court has jurisdiction of an action to recover damages for violation of Section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. Great Northern Ry. Co., (Minn. 1922), 191 N. W. 42.

I. THE CARMACK AND CUMMINS AMENDMENTS.

See Act to Regulate Commerce.

§1. Constitutionality.

See Constitutional Law; Interstate Commerce §5.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Cummins Amendment makes it unlawful for a carrier to fix a period for giving notice of claims shorter than 90 days, for filing of claims shorter than four months, and for institution of suits shorter than two years. The Cummins Amendment, 33 I. C. C. 682, 691.

(b) The Commission has no power to order the payment of loss and damage claims without litigation if the carriers choose to require consignees to sue on their claims. New York Merchantile Exchange v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 36 I. C. C. 156, 160.

(c) The Carmack amendment, making the initial carrier liable for the loss of goods occuring on the lines of connecting carriers, is not unconstitutional as denying the right of contract, since the right to freedom of contract is not unlimited and the regulation imposed is not an unwarranted abridgement thereof but is merely a denial of such right to the extent of forbidding or regulating every contract which is reasonably calculated to injuriously affect the public interect. A. C. L. R. R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 202, 31 Sup. Ct. 164, 55 L. ed. 167.

(d) The Carmack amendment requiring carriers in interstate commerce as a condition of continuing in that traffic to obligate themselves to carry to the point of destination, using the lines of the connecting carriers as their own agencies, is not beyond the scope of the power of regulation. A. C. L. R. R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 203, 31 Sup. Ct. 164, 55 L. ed. 167.

(e) The Carmack amendment is not in violation of the third amendment of the constitution in taking the property of the initial carrier to pay the debt of an independent connecting carrier whose negligence may have been the sole cause of the loss, since the resulting liability of the initial carrier is that of a principal for the negligence of its own agent. A. C. L. R. R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 206, 31 Sup. Ct., 164, 55 L. ed. 167.

(f) The Carmack amendment of the Hepburn Act of 1906 (Sec. 20 of the Interstate Commerce Act) is constitutional. Galveston H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wallace, 223 U. S. 481, 491, 32 Sup. Ct. 205, 56 L. ed. 516.

(g) The constitutional power of Congress to regulate commerce among the states and with foreign nations comprehends power to regulate contracts between the shipper and the carrier of an interstate shipment by defining the liability of the carrier for loss, delay, injury or damage to such property. Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 33 Sup. Ct. 148, 149, 226 U. S. 491.

§2. Construction in general.

See Act to Regulate Commerce II; Released Rates.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Neither the first nor the second Cummins amendment invalided rates based on actual differences in value. The plain and unmistakable purpose of both amendments was to make unlawful and void, except as otherwise provided therein, all attempted limitations of liability for loss, damage, or injury to property transported, without respect to the manner or form in which they are sought to be made. U. S. Industrial Alcohol Co. v. Director General, 68 I. C. C. 389, 391.

(aa) The Cummins Amendment leaves date from which the several periods of time for giving notice and filing of claims and institution of suits for carriers to determine. The Cummins Amendment, 33 I. C. C. 682, 691.

(b) Provisions of Cummins Amendment are confined to instances of loss, damage, or injury caused by carriers or its agents. The Cummins Amendment 33 I. C. C. 682, 691, 697.

(c) When goods are not hidden from view, and the carrier is advised as to their character, all contracts or agreements purporting to limit the liability of carrier for loss and damage are made void. The Cummins Amendment, 33 I. C. C. 682, 695.

(d) As to goods concealed from view, etc., the statute clearly prescribes right of carriers under direction or approval of Commission to provide for a graduation of rates in accordance with declared value of property. The Cummins Amendment, 33 I. C. C. 682, 696.

(e) A rule relieving carrier from responsibility for loss due to frost or overheating when protective service is furnished by shipper does not violate the Cummins Amendment. Miller & Co. v. N. P. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 154, 157.

(f) Carmack Amendment operated to render void to extent stated any attempted limitation of initial carrier's liability. Louisiana State Rice Milling Co. v. M. L. & T. R. R. & S. S. Co., 34 I. C. C. 511, 512.

(g) The prime, if not the only purpose of the Carmack Amendment was to make the initial carrier receiving property for interstate transportation liable to the lawful holder of a receipt or bill of lading issued therefor on account of any loss, damage, or injury to such property caused by it or by any other common carrier over whose lines the same might pass. Prior to that time the shipper or consignee was put to the trouble and expense of attempting to locate among those composing the through line of movement the particular carrier responsible for any loss or damage occurring to the shipment and of endeavoring to collect from it. It was generally difficult and often impossible to definitely ascertain the particular carrier in the through line which had caused the loss or damage, and it was the adequate opportunity afforded under these conditions for enforcing justice that led to the enactment of this amendment of the law. It did not undertake directly to prescribe or limit the conditions or provisions of the bill of lading but operated to render void to the extent stated any attempted limitation of the liability of the initial carrier to the shipper. Louisiana State Rice Milling Co. v. M. L. & T. R. R. & S. S. Co., 34 I. C. C. 511, 512.

(h) The Cummins Amendment, has in effect abolished in interstate commerce the whole system of released rates based on agreed valuations as distinguished from actual value. Iowa Railroad Com'rs. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 36 I. C. C. 79, 81.

(i) Where the actual value is less than the contract limit the shipper, of course, is protected, but the carrier has never been liable for more than the actual value. Iowa Railroad Commissioners v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 36 I. C. C. 79, 82.

(j) A carrier is, strictly speaking, not an insurer at all, but a bailee for hire which, in that capacity, has statutory as well as common-law obligations for the safety of property committed to its charge. Cases may arise where elements other than the amount of damages which might be recovered, as, for example the degree of care required and the value of the service to the shipper, would have a substantial bearing upon the reasonableness of rates graded according to value as well as of other rates. Iowa Railroad Commissioners v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 36 I. C. C. 79, 84.

(k) Under the Carmack Amendment, the initial carrier would have been liable, not only for the negligent acts and omissions of its employes, but for those of connecting carriers resulting in any loss or damage to the goods en route and also for any loss or damage resulting from the failure of the final carrier to notify the consignee of the arrival of the goods at destination, and for its failure, on the consignee's refusing to accept them, to store the goods for the account of the shipper or to execise proper care in holding them for him. Adam's Express Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 33 Sup. Ct., 148, 57 L. Ed., 314, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 257; Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 57 L. Ed. 683; Galveston, H. & S. Ry. Co. v. Wallace, 223 U. S. 481, 32 Sup. Ct. 205, 56 L. Ed. 516; Atlantic Coast Line Ry. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 31 Sup. Ct. 164, 55 L. Ed. 167, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 7; Earnest v. D. L. & W. R. Co., 149 App. Div. 330, 134 N. Y. Supp., 323; Coovert v. Spokane, P. & S. Ry. Co., 80 Wash. 87, 141 Pac. 324; Norfolk & W. R. Co.. v. Stuart Draft Co. 109 Va. 184, 63 S. E. 415; Wien v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 152 N. Y. Supp. 154, 156.

(l) Contention that the deduction of an arbitrary amount for natural shrinkage and unavoidable waste in transit is illegal and deprives the shipper of his property without due process of law was fully considered and rejected in the Brouch Grain Co. Case, 41 I. C. C. 717. Claims for Loss and Damage of Grain, 48 I. C. C. 530, 573.

(m) By the second Cummins Amendment, the provisions of the first Cummins Amendment, which invalidated all limitations of the carrier's liability for loss, damage or injury to property transported, were made inapplicable to baggage and to property except ordinary live stock, as to which "the carrier shall have been or shall hereafter be expressly authorized or required by order of the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish and maintain rates dependent upon the value declared in writing by the shipper or agreed upon in writing as the released value of the property." In connection with the quoted exception, the Commission was empowered "to make such order in cases where rates dependent upon and varying with declared or agreed values would, in its opinion be just and reasonable under the circumstances and conditions surrounding the transportation." It is thus seen that the second Cummins Amendment placed rates and ratings dependent upon the value "declared in writing by the shipper" and those predicated on the value "agreed upon in writing as the released value of the property" in the same category. Both are unlawful until expressly authorized or required by the Commission. Silk Assn. of America v. Penn. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 50, 51.

(n) The law does not require common carriers to define their liability for general damages by tariff publication. Deposit of $10 for each live poultry car ordered, Deposit for Live Poultry Car Ordered, 66 I. C. C. 653, 656.

(na) The second Cummins amendment, approved August 9, 1916. did not invalidate rates based on actual difference in value. It permitted the establishment and maintenance of rates dependent upon the value declared or agreed upon in writing as the released value, in respect of all property except ordinary live stock, and provided that such declaration or agreement should have no other effect than to limit liability or recovery to an amount not exceeding the value so declared or released. The establishment and maintenance of rates on ordinary live stock based on declared or released value were prohibited. North Packing and Provision Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 69 I. C. C. 237.

(o) The Carmack Amendment superseded all regulations and policies of the different states relative to the responsibility of a carrier issuing a bill of lading for loss of or damage to freight delivered by it to a connecting carrier. Gamble-Robinson Commission Co. v. Union Pac. Ry. Co. (Ill., 1914), 104 N. E. 666, 668.

(p) Section 6 of the Interstate Commerce Act requires interstate carriers to publish the rates between points on its own route and points on the route of other carriers when a through route and rate have been established; and if no joint rate over the through routes has been established, the several carriers are required to publish the separately established rates, fares and charges applied to the through transportation. Section 15 of the Act provides that where there are two or more through routes and through rates established, the person making the shipment shall have the right to designate which of the through routes his property shall be carried over, and that the shipper shall have the right, where competing lines of railway constitute portions of a through line or route, to determine over which of the competing lines his freight shall be transported. The Carmack amendment makes the initial carrier liable for loss or damage on the lines of the connecting carrier. HELD, the right of routing so conferred, together with the liability imposed on the initial carrier, did not violate the constitutional rights of contract of the carrier; for if it has not contracted with a connecting carrier it cannot be required to accept for through carriage, and if it does not accept for through carrier it does so under contract with the connecting carrier. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Hayes, (Ind., 1913), 102 N. E. 34, 38.

(q) By the proviso in the Carmack Amendment that "nothing in this section shall deprive any holder of such * * * bill of lading of any remedy or right of action which he has under existing law," the remedy and right of action thereunder are made concurrent with the remedy and right of action under the general law then existing. Any other construction will wholly destroy and nullify this proviso. But for the existence of this proviso it might, with some reason, be contended that the shipper's remedy and right of action was also exclusively controlled by the Interstate Commerce Act as amended; but the proviso is as much a part of the Interstate Commerce Act as any other part thereof. By this proviso the distinction between what is purely abstract liability, or substantive cause of action, and what is purely remedy and right of action is clearly recognized. Right of action and substantive liability, or cause of action, may erroneously be confounded. The meaning of the expression "right of action" as used in this proviso must be determined in the light of the company in which it is found, viz., "remedy or right of action." The maxim, "Noscitur a sociis," is applicable 36 Cyc. 1118. "Right of action" is one thing; "cause of action" is another. Right of action pertains to remedy and relief through judicial procedure. Cause of action is based on the substantive law of legal liability. 1 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law & Prac. 1038; 1 R. C. L. 313; Pomeroy's Remedies, §§346-353; 1 Cyc. 642. Elliott v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., (So. Dak., 1915), 150 N. W. 777, 779.

(r) Where a shipment is an interstate shipment, the validity of the contract made between the shipper and the carrier in case of loss is therefore, under the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, a federal question, to be determined under the general common law, and is not within the field of state law or regulation. American Brake Shoe & F. Co. v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 223 Fed. 1018, 1020.

(s) It is contended for defendant that the liability of the initial carrier for loss occurring while the shipment is in charge of the connecting carrier is not the same as the liability of the initial carrier for loss while the shipment is in its charge and is not the common-law liability of a carrier. In support thereof counsel refers to that portion of section 20 of the Act to Regulate Commerce commonly called the Carmack amendment, which reads as follows "Any common-carrier * * * shall be liable to the lawful holder thereof for any loss, damage or injury to such property caused by it or by any common carrier, railroad or transportation company to which such property may be delivered or over whose lines such property may pass." Defendant's position is that the words "caused by it" appearing in the quotation impose upon the shipper the burden of established that the loss was in fact caused by the carrier, and reliance is placed upon the case of Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 33 Sup. Ct. 148, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 257. The United States Supreme Court, in the case of Cincinnati, New Orleans & Tex. Pac. Ry. Co. v. Rankin, 241 U. S. 319, 36 Sup. Ct. 555, 60 L. ed. 1022, decided May 22, 1916, after referring to the case of Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, passing upon the words "caused by it," as they appear in section 20 of the Interstate Commerce Act, says: "Properly understood, neither this nor any other of our opinions holds that this amendment has changed the common-law doctrine heretofore approved by us in respect to the carrier's liability for loss occurring on its own line." The trial court properly concluded that the Carmack amendment to the twentieth section of the Act to Regulate Commerce did not change the common-law rule or restrict the liability of the carrier. The amendment merely imposed a liability upon the initial carrier for a loss occurring on the line of the connecting carrier. It was not intended to restrict, nor did it limit, the liability of any carrier. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Collins Produce Co., 235 Fed. 857.

(t) The Carmack Amendment, providing that a carrier receiving property for interstate transportation shall be liable for "any loss, damage or injury to such property caused by it," is not a limitation of the carrier's pre-existing common-law liability. John Lysaght v. Lehigh Valley R. R., 254 Fed. 351.

(u) By the Carmack Amendment, Congress superseded the diverse and conflicting rules of the states and prescribed one uniform rule as to the right of a carrier of an interstate shipment to limit its liability for loss or damage. Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 33 Sup. Ct. 148, 152; 226 U. S. 491.

(v) The provisions of the Carmack amendment relating to the exemption of liability manifests the purpose of Congress to bring contracts for interstate shipments under one uniform rule or law, and therefore withdraws them from the influence of state regulation. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 394; 227 U. S. 639.

(w) The Carmack amendment, making the initial carrier liable for loss or damage occurring on the line of the connecting carrier, applies where the shipper routes the shipment over a connecting line which the initial carrier would not have selected and with which it has no arrangement for through rates and joint rates. N. & W. Ry. Co. v. Dixie Tobacco Co., 33 Sup. Ct. 609, 610; 228 U. S. 593.

(x) Since the Act to Regulate Commerce and its amendments have gone into effect, cases for loss or damage must be decided in view of the provisions of the commerce act and its requirement that the carrier shall file its tariffs and rates, which shall be open to inspection, and shall prescribe rates applicable to all shippers alike, thus to effect one of the main purposes of the law often declared by this court, to require like treatment of all shippers and the charging of uniform rates equally applicable to all under like circumstances. Pierce Co. v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 35 Sup. Ct. Rep. 351, 353, 236 U. S. 278, 59 L. ed.

(y) Interstate shipments come under the domain of congressional legislation. As a matter of fact, Congress has now legislated on so many phases of the law of interstate shipments that it may be said that, generally speaking, the power of the state with respect to such shipments is totally at an end. Where, therefore, a bill of lading is issued it must be interpreted in the light of the federal legislation. Northern Pacific Ry. Co. v. Wall, 36 Sup. Ct. 493, 495, 241 U. S. 87, 60 L. ed. 905. Cleveland C. P. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Dettlebach, 239 U. S. 588, 593, 36 Sup. Ct. 177, 60 L. ed. 453.

(z) Damages for the loss of the market because of unreasonable delay in transportation occurring anywhere en route are comprehended by the provision of the Carmack amendment. New York, P. & N. R. Co. v. Peninsula Produce Exch., 36 Sup. Ct. 230; 240 U. S. 34, 60 L. ed. 511.

(aabb) The measure of the carrier's liability as warehouseman under a bill of lading for an interstate shipment, pursuant to the Interstate Commerce Act, which, in accordance with the carrier's published regulations, provided that every service to be performed under it should be subject to the conditions specified, among which was an express condition governing the carriers responsibility as warehouseman for property not removed within forty-eight hours after notice of arrival—is not to be tested by the exceptional rule of the local law, placing the burden upon a warehouseman, in case of loss by fire, to show that it was not negligent. Southern R. C. v. Prescott, 36 Sup. Ct. 469, 470; 240 U. S. 632, 60 L. ed. 836.

(cc) The liability of a carrier which holds goods as a warehouseman for loss by fire is not governed by the state law but by federal law. Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, 36 Sup. Ct. 469, 473; 240 U. S. 632, 60 L. ed. 836.

(ddee) The arrival of an interstate shipment at destination, the payment of the freight by the consignee, his signature to a receipt for the shipment, and his removal of a part thereof, leaving the rest, with the carrier's permissioin, to await his convenience in removal, did not discharge the carrier's liability under the bill of lading issued pursuant to the Act, nor create a new obligation as warehouseman, governed by the local law, which casts upon the warehouseman, in case of loss by fire, the burden of showing that it was not negligent, where a bill of lading in accordance with the published regulations, provided that every service to be performed under it should be subject to the conditions specified, among which was an express condition governing the carrier's responsibility as warehouseman for property not removed within forty-eight hours after notice of arrival. Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, 36 Sup. Ct. 569, 470; 240 L. ed. 836.

(ff) The laws in force at the time and place of the making of a contract, and which affect its validity, performance, and enforcement, enter into and form a part of it, as if they were expressly referred to or incorporated in its terms. Van Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 550, 18 L. ed. 408, 409; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 317, 21 L. ed. 357, 358; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 601, 24 L. ed. 793, 796. A bill of lading is a contract and within this rule. The Carmack amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act, directs a carrier receiving property for interstate transportation to issue a through bill of lading therefor, although the place of destination is on the line of another carrier; subjects the receiving carrier to liability for any injury to the property caused by it or any other carrier in the course of the transportation and requires a connecting carrier on whose line the property is injured to reimburse the receiving carrier where the latter is made to pay for such injury. Thus under the operation of the amendment, the connecting carrier becomes the agent of the receiving carrier for the purpose of completing the transportation and delivering the property Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 196, 206, 55 L. ed. 167, 178, 182, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Wallace, 223 U. S. 481, 491, 56 L. ed. 516, 523 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205. This bill of lading was issued under that statute and should be interpreted in the light of it. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Dettlebach, 239 U. S. 588, 593, ante, 177, 36 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Wall., 36 Sup. Ct. 493, 495, 241 U. S. 87, 60 L. ed .905.

(gg) The rights and liabilities of the parties to an interstate shipment depend upon federal legislation, the bill of lading, and common-law rules as accepted and applied in federal tribunals. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. v. Rankin 36 Sup. Ct. 555, 241 U. S. 319, 60 L. ed. 1022.

(hh) The Carmack amendment does not apply to any cause of action arising long before its passage. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. v. Sealy, 39 Sup. Ct. 97.

(ii) The value of a hog expressed to Alabama from an adjoining state having been agreed on and rate fixed according to value, the Second Cummins Amendment specifically provides that a special contract may not be made releasing the carrier from any common-law duties or restricting the valuation, and this leaves the carrier as an insurer, charged in a suit for its death from overheat and lack of water, with the burden of showing that it properly fed, watered and cared for the hog while in its custody, though it was in transit less than the time limit fixed by the Federal law at which a penalty is fixed for failure to water. American Ry. Express Co. v. Duunaway & Lambert, (Ala., 1921), 88 Sou. 60.

(jj) And this Amendment does not apply to a shipment to a foreign country and the Cummins Act, extending the liability, does not apply to such a shipment before its enactment. McCaslin v. Southern Pac. Co., (Calif. 1922), 203 Pac. 742.

(kk) Under the first Cummins Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act making carriers liable for the full actual loss or damage notwithstanding any limitation or liability or of the amount of recovery or agreement as to value, and the second Cummins Amendment providing that the foregoing provision shall not apply to property concerning which the carrier shall be expressly authorized or required by the interstate commerce commission to maintain rates dependent on declared value in which case the declaration or agreement shall have no other effect than to limit liability and recovery to an amount not exceeding the declared value, a provision in the bill of lading that the amount of loss or damage shall be computed on the basis of the value at the place and time of shipment does not apply when the value at the time and place at which the goods should have been delivered is less than the value at the place and time of shipment. Crutchfield and Woolfolk v. Hines, Director General of Railroads, (Mass. 1921) 131 N. E. 340.

(ll) A clause in a bill of lading for an interstate shipment of hogs limiting liability for loss in transit to their value at the time and place of shipment being void as violating the Cummins Amendment. The amount of recovery is governed by the common-law rule, viz. the value of the hogs at the point of destination when they should have been delivered. Davis v. Hunter, (Ind. 1923), 138 N. E. 785.

(mm) The Cummins Amendment does not apply to a shipment from San Salvador transhipped at the Panama Canal and transported to Hoboken, N. J., where the shipment while on the pier is confused with another shipment resulting in a misdelivery. South & Central American Commercial Co. Inc. v. Panama R. Co., (New York, 1923), 142 N. E. 666.

(nn) This Law prohibits a limitation of liability except where its provisions are followed, and an express company to show valid limitation of liability must bring itself within these provisions and amendments thereof by showing that it was expressly required or authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to maintain rates dependent on value, and that the value of the property was declared in writing by shipper. Kristianson v. American Ry. Express Co. (S. C. 1921), 151 S. E. 899.

(oo) The express provision of the Cummins Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act that an interstate carrier shall be liable for the full actual loss, damage or injury to property caused by it, notwithstanding any limitation of liability or limitation of the amount of recovery, and that any limitation of liability is unlawful and void, cannot be defeated by construction based on the convenience of the clause, nor on any argument based upon the history of the statute, or of the Carmack Amendment (Comp. St. §§ 8604a, 8604aa), nor on the policy of the later Cummins Amendment (Comp. St. §8604a). Adams Express Co. v. Darden, 286 Fed. 61.

§2¼. Construction of bill of lading. See Bill of Lading.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Bills of lading act, 39 Stat L., 538, authorizes common carriers to insert in bills of lading words "shipper's weight, load and count," or other words of like import, to indicate that goods were loaded by shipper and description made by him; and if such notation be true carrier is absolved from liability for damage caused by improper loading, or by nonreceipt or misdescription of goods. San Francisco Dairy Produce Exch. v. Am. Ry. Exp. Co., 78 I. C. C. 737, 739.

(b) In view of the uniform bill of lading prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, all interstate shipments are deemed to be under the rights and liabilities thereof. New England Fruit & Produce Co. v. Hines Director General of Railroads Conn. 1922) 116 Atl. 243.

(c) Where a carrier maintains two rates, one which applies when the shipment is made at unlimited liability and the other which applies when the uniform bill of lading is issued, an amendment to the bill of lading carried in the tariffs of the carrier, but which is only referred to by a rider pasted on the bill of lading actually used, becomes part of the contract of shipment when the rate paid is that which applies, if the uniform bill of lading is used. Thomas Canning Co. v. So. Pack. Co., (Mich. 1922) 189 N. W. 210, 212.

(d) Under the Federal Bills of Lading Act, where a carrier loads package freight, like cotton in bales, it is required to state in the bill of lading only the number of packages and such marks or description as will serve to identify them, and a further statement in an order bill for baled cotton of the weight of the shipment is voluntary and gratuitious, and where qualified by the words "subject to correction" does not render the carrier liable to a holder of the bill, under section 22, for a shortage in the weight. Lehigh, Ellis & Co. v. Payne Agt. 274, Fed. 443.

(e) Where an interstate carrier had on file two tariffs, one for shipments under the uniform bill of lading, and the other fixing a 10 per cent higher rate for shipments subject to the carrier's common-law and statutory liability, a shipment of imported goods on which the freight was charged at the former rate was subject to the uniform bill of lading provisions, though no bill of lading was in fact issued. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Lazarus, 278 Fed. 900.

§2¼a. Bill of Lading Act.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Under the Federal Bills of Lading Act, § 9, providing that delivery is justified to a person in possession of an order bill by the terms of which the goods are delivered to his order, or which has been indorsed to him, the act of the terminal carrier, after a shipment reached its destination, in striking out the original destination and substituting another, and delivering the shipment to another railroad for transportation to such new destination, on request of the party holding the bill of lading, constituted in legal contemplation a "delivery." Pere Marquette Ry. Co. v. J. F. French & Co., 41 Sup. Ct. 195.

(b) Under the Federal Bills of Lading Act, § 9, delivery to the person holding an order bill of lading properly indorsed is justified, regardless of the capacity in which he holds possession of the bill, or whether he holds it lawfully or unlawfully, so long as the carrier has no notice of any infirmity of title. Pere Marquette Ry. Co. v. J. F. French & Co., 41 Sup. Ct. 195.

(c) Under the Federal Bills of Lading Act, § 11, making a carrier delivering goods without taking up and canceling the order bill of lading liable to purchasers of the bill of lading in good faith, where a bank, to which a draft was sent for collection accompanied by an order bill of lading, delivered the bill without payment of the draft, and the buyers obtained delivery from the carrier without surrendering the bill, refused the goods, and returned the bill of lading, the shippers who took back the draft and bill of lading from the bank to which they had sold them, with knowledge of the facts, were not bona fide purchasers. Pere Marquette Ry. Co. v. J. F. French & Co., 41 Sup. Ct. 195

§2½. The Cummins amendment.

See Bills of Lading IV: Cars and Car Supply VII; Export Rates and Facilities § 4; Released Rates.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Cummins amendment removed the effect of the Croninger Case, 226 U. S. 491, in states where contracts of limited liability had been held void and increased the liability of carriers in states where limitations on amount of the recovery had been held valid. National Society of Record Assos. v. A. & R. R. R. Co., 40 I. C. C. 347, 352.

(b) The purpose of the amendment of August 9, 1916, as stated in the report of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, was "to restore the law of full liability as it existed prior to the Carmack Amendment of 1906, so that when property is lost or damaged in the course of transportation under such circumstances as to make the carrier liable recovery is had for full value or on the basis of full value." It is clearly the purpose of the Cummins Amendment, as amended, to invalidate all limitations of liability for loss, damage or injury to ordinary live stock caused by the initial carrier to which shipment may be delivered or which may participate in transporting it, notwithstanding any representation or agreement or release as to value. Express Rates, Practices, Accounts and Revenues, 43 I. C. C. 510, 513.

(c) The Act, as amended, fixes upon the carrier liability for the full actual loss, damage, or injury caused by it to ordinary live stock and invalidates any limitation or attempted limitation of that liability, wherever or in whatever form it is found. Released Rates, 43 I. C. C. 510, 513.

(d) The Act, as amended, fixes upon the carrier liability for the full actual loss, damage, or injury caused by it to ordinary live stock and invalidates any limitation of that liability, wherever or in whatever form it is found. Ordinary live stock is excepted from the property as to which the Commission is empowered to authorize or require the establishment of rates dependent upon declared or released value. If rates on ordinary live stock dependent upon declared value could lawfully be maintained without authorization by the Commission, there might and probably would be instances in which conflict would arise as between the liability imposed by the Act upon the carrier and the prohibitions of section 10 of the Act affecting shippers. The Commission can not, in view of the provisions of the law, authorize or sanction such rates upon ordinary live stock; neither can they lawfully be maintained upon any other character of traffic except under authorization duly granted by the Commission. Under such authority both shipper and carrier are fully protected and the full spirit of the law is observed. The shipper or lawful holder of the receipt or bill of lading for ordinary live stock should be free to press his claim for recovery in full for loss, damage, or injury caused by the carrier, and rates for the transportation of such live stock may not be stated in a manner to require a representation of the value. This is not saying that value may not be considered and duly weighed as an element in determining what reasonable rates shall be established. Express Rates, Practices, Accounts and Revenues, 43 I. C. C. 510, 513, 514.

(e) A tariff provision, which seeks to limit carriers' liability for loss or damage due to cold or heat, not the direct result of the negligence of the carrier, not found to be in violation of the Cummins Amendment to section 20 of the Act. Northern Potato Traffic Association v. C. & A. R. R., 44 I. C. C. 426, 437.

(f) While limitations in bills of lading must be strictly adhered to and may not lawfully be waived, the provisions of the Cummins amendment do not evidence any intent on the part of Congress to erect a statute of limitations barring the payment of seasonably filed claims after any given period. Decker & Sons v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 453, 458.

(g) The Cummins Amendment does not apply to transportation from a point in the United States to a point in a nonadjacent foreign country. In the Matter of Bills of Lading, 64 I. C. C. 347, 354.

(h) Section 20 of the Act refers only to transportation from any point in the United States to a point in an adjacent foreign country. Waco Chamber of Commerce v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 708, 709.

(i) The Cummins Amendment which abrogates the right of a carrier to limit liability does not affect causes of actions which arose prior to its enactment. Southern Ry. Co. v. Bynum, (Ala., 1915) 69 Southern, 820, 821.

(j) A live stock contract made prior to the Cummins amendment is not covered by that statute. Hudson v. Chicago St. P. M. & O. Ry. Co., 226 Fed. 38, 44.

§3. Effect of State Legislation.

See State Rates and Regulations.

(a) A statute forbidding common carriers within the state, on land or in boats or vessels on the waters entirely within the body of the state, to limit or restrict their liability as it exists at common law, applies to shipments, purely domestic beginning and ending in the state. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sherwood (Tex.), 4 I. C. R. 240.

(b) A state statute prohibiting carriers from limiting their liability for loss by fire cannot be made to apply to property being transported under a bill of sale from a point in one state to a point in another state, both foreign to the state enacting the statute, although the carrier's charter was granted by such state and the point where the loss occurs is actually within its boundaries. Thomas v. Wabash St. L. & P. R. Co., (C. C. S. D. Ill.) 4 I. C. R. 802.

(c) Act March 4, 1891, making it unlawful to make any contract limiting the period in which suit may be brought to less than two years, and prescribing that no period of less than ninety days shall be required in which to give notice of damages, is not void as an interference with interstate commerce, although it may affect contracts for interstate shipments. Armstrong v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 247.

(d) Neither the common-law rule nor a state statute denying validity to a contract exempting a common carrier from liability can be regarded as a regulation of commerce, although applied to an interstate shipment. Solan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., (Iowa) 5 I. C. R. 468.

(e) The prohibition of act March 4, 1891, against the entering into a contract limiting the time in which to sue to a shorter period than two years is binding in interstate as well as domestic shipments as it is not an attempt to regulate interstate commerce. Reeves v. Texas & Pacific R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 639.

(f) A state statute prohibiting a carrier from contracting for an exemption from the negligence of a connecting carrier, when the first carrier undertakes to transport property to a point beyond its own route, is not an unconstitutional regulation of commerce among the states. The court says the act in no way operates as a regulation of trade and business among the states; no burden or restriction on transportation is imposed. Carriers are left free to make their own contracts in regard to compensation for their services for transportation between the states subject to congressional regulations. The statute merely prohibits a carrier who by contract undertakes to transport property to a point beyond its own route from relieving itself of responsibility for neglect to properly perform its duty. It only imposes the duty and liability which the law from considerations of public policy imposes upon all common carriers in the transportation of property over their own lines, though they may extend into other states. McCann & Smitzer v. Eddy, et al, Receivers of Mo., Kan., & Tex. Ry. Co., 7 I. C. C. app. XXI.

(g) Railroad companies engaged in interstate commerce are subject to a state statute making railroad companies liable for injuries to employees on account of the negligence of others having control or direction of them, so long as Congress does not deal with that subject. The court says: Undoubtedly the whole subject of the liability of interstate railroad companies for the negligence of those in their service may be covered by national legislation enacted by Congress under its power to regulate commerce among the states. But as Congress has not dealt with that subject, it was competent for the state to declare than an employee of any railroad corporation doing business there, including those engaged in commerce among the states, should be deemed, in respect to his acts within that state, the superior, not the fellow servant, of other employees placed under his control. Peirce v. Van Dusen., 7 I. C. C. app. XCVIII.

(h) A state statute prohibiting contracts to exempt a railroad company from liability as a common carrier is not a regulation of commerce, or void as to interstate business. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. Co., v. Solan, 8 I. C. C. app. VI.

(i) The statute of Virginia providing that when a common carrier accepts for transportation anything directed to a point of destination beyond its own lines he shall be deemed thereby to assume an obligation for its safe carriage to such point of destination, unless at the time of such acceptance such carrier be released or exempted from such liability by a contract in writing signed by the owner,—is not a regulation of interstate commerce, and not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. The court said: It is manifest that the statute in question does not attempt to substantially regulate or control contracts as to interstate shipments, but simply establishes a rule of evidence ordaining the character of proof by which a carrier may show that, although it received goods for transportation beyond its own lines, nevertheless, by agreement, its liability was limited to its own line. That this is the sole purpose of the statute seems too plain for anything but statement. It leaves the carrier to make such limitations as to liability on an interstate shipment beyond its own line as it may deem proper, provided only the evidence of the contract is in writing and signed by the shipper. The distinction between a law which forbids a contract to be made, and one which simply requires the contract when mad to be embodied in a particular form, is as obvious as is the difference between the sum of the obligations of a contract and the mere instrument by which their existence may be manifested. Richmond & Alleghany R. R. Co. v. Patterson Tobacco Co., 8 I. C. C. app. VII.

(j) The state may prohibit a carrier from limiting its common-law liability. Ohio & Miss. Ry. Co., 8 I. C. C. app. XXIII.

(k) The Missouri statute of 1889, making a railroad company issuing bills of lading for the transportation of property liable for damages to the property caused by the negligence of another railroad company over whose lines the property passes, does not curtail the power of the company to restrict its liability, by contract, to its own line, by a restriction in unambiguous terms put into the portion of its agreement reciting the contract to carry and such statute is not, as affecting interstate transportation, repugnant to the Federal Constitution. The court treats the case as involving the right of the state to legislate as to the mere form of contracts for interstate carriage within a decision in Richmond & A. R. Co. v. R. A. Patterson Tobacco Company, 169 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed. 759. Miss., Kans., & Texas Ry. Co. v. McCann & Smitzer, 8 I. C. C. app. LXXIX.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(l) Since the Railroad Commission Act of California has been modeled upon the Interstate Commerce Act, decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, construing the Interstate Act will have persuasive authority. Southern Pac. Co. v. Superior Court, (Cal., 1915), 150 Pac., 397, 403.

(m) The Carmack amendment does not prevent the shipper from enforcing the liability created by the law of his state against a carrier for loss of goods in an interstate shipment. Latta v. C. St. P. M. & O. Ry. Co., 172 Fed. 850, 855.

(n) Until Congress has legislated upon the subject, the liability of a carrier exercising its calling within a particular state, although engaged in the business of interstate commerce, for loss or damage to an interstate shipment, may be regulated by the law of the state. Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 33 Sup. Ct. 148, 149; 226 U. S. 491.

(o) The effect of the Carmack Amendment was to give to the Federal jurisdiction control over interstate commerce, and to make supreme the Federal legislation regulating liability for property transported by common carriers in interstate commerce. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Robinson, 34 Sup. Ct. 556, 558, 233 U. S. 173, 58 L. ed.—.

(p) With respect to the specific effect of the Carmack Amendment, it has been held, in a series of recent cases, that the special regulations and policies of particular states on the subject of the carrier's liability for loss or damage to interstate shipments, and the contracts of carriers with respect thereto, have been superseded. M. K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Harris, 34 Sup. Ct. 790, 793; 234 U. S. —, 58 L. ed. —.

(q) A state statute allowing a reasonable attorney's fee of not over $20 to the successful plaintiff in an action in which an attorney is actually employed, to recover upon a claim not exceeding $200 not paid within 30 days after demand, for services rendered, material furnished stock killed or injured, or for overcharges on freight or express or for lost or damaged freight, is not void as conflicting with the Carmack Amendment; since such state statute neither enlarges nor limits the responsibility of the carrier for the loss of property intrusted to it, and only incidentally affects the remedy for enforcing that responsibility, imposes not a penalty but a compensatory allowance for the expense of employing an attorney, and, in fact and effect, merely authorizes a moderate increment of the recoverable costs of suit in the large class of cases within its scope, among which are only incidentally included claims for freight lost or damaged in interstate commerce. M. K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Harris, 34 Sup. Ct. 790, 793; 234 U. S. —; 58 L. ed. —.

(r) Congress has so far occupied the field of transportation that a state statute providing for a penalty of $50 against a terminal carrier for failure to pay promptly a claim for damages to an interstate shipment unless the carrier proves that the shipment never came into its possession or succeeds in shifting the blame for the loss within a prescribed period of 40 days, is unconstitutional. C. & W. C. R. Co. v. Varnville F. Co., 35 Sup. Ct. 715; 237 U. S. 597, 59 L. ed. 1137.

§4. Jurisdiction of Commission.

Se Reparation, §3.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) While the Act to regulate commerce contains no provision which expressly or by proper implication gives this Commission jurisdiction in cases merely showing delay or negligence in the receipt, forwarding or delivery of property offered for transportation, including the furnishing of cars, the regulating statute does prohibit any unjust discrimination or wrongful prejudice in the provision of cars or other transportation facilities, as well as in the fixing and application of transportation charges. Richmond Elevator Co. v. Pere Marquette R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 629.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) The liability of common carriers for loss of or damage to shipments rests upon definite legal principles, and the enforcement of such liability is not within the jurisdiction of the Commission. This liability should be kept separate from the freight charges. Lost or Damaged Freight Replacements, 43 I. C. C. 257, 258.

(d) Complainant alleged that it had been damaged 7½c per bushel on 133 bu. of corn lost in transit because the carrier paid it only 82c per bushel for the corn lost instead of 89½c. HELD, that the Commission was without jurisdiction it being a matter for the courts. Complaint dismissed. Buss Co. v. N. Y. C. R. R., 45 I. C. C. 161.

(e) But the Commission is without jurisdiction to prescribe uniform liability clauses to be contained in leases or contracts for the construction, maintenance, and use of industrial or private side tracks, limiting liability for loss and damage caused by fire from locomotives operating over such tracks. National Industrial Traffic League v. A. & R. R. R. Co., 61 I. C. C. 120.

(f) Contention that the commission is without jurisdiction to award damages for loss, damage, delay, or conversion of property, HELD Where there was clearly a violation of the act, and shipper elected to prosecute its claim before the commission it may award reparation for whatever damages resulted as a consequence of such unlawful act. Danzer & Co. v. G. & S. I. R. R. Co., 69 I. C. C. 59, 60, 61.

(g) Sale lost due to misrouting and shipment was sold at auction by carrier and proceeds applied in partial satisfaction of transportation charges. Reparation awarded in difference between fair market value of shipment at destination and freight charges. Danzer & Co. v. G. & S. I. R. R. Co., 69 I. C. C. 59, 61

(h) If a carrier is shown to have been negligent in failing to place shipments in public storage, the Commission has no jurisdiction to award damages resulting therefrom. Claims for such damages are cognizable by the courts. Huffman Bros. Motor Co. v. N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C. 671, 672.

(i) Jurisdiction of commission does not extend to claims arising from anticipated delay of passenger trains. Hohlfelder v. D. & R. G. W. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 587, 588.

(j) A consignee's claim against a carrier for the conversion of coal, which is dependent on the validity of a rule adopted by the company affecting the reconsignment rights of the consignee, was within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission under the Interstate Commerce Law, and the state circuit court had no jurisdiction of a counter-claim therefor. Waters v. Becker. (Wisc. 1921). 186 N. W. 167.

(k) Both the adjustment of rates upon the class of articles, based upon differences in valuation, as well as the acceptance of stipulations in the carrier's bill of lading which affect the liability declared by the Carmack amendment, are administrative duties of the Commission. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 395; 227 U. S. 639.

(l) The Commission is without jurisdiction to award tort damages. Mattison v. P. Co., 23 I. C. C. 233, 235; Ralston Townsite Co. v. M. P. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 354, 355; Wood-Mosiac Flooring & Lumber Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 458, 459; Kay Co. v. D. & R. G. R. R. Co., 21 I. C. C. 239, 240; Buffalo Hardwood Lumber Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. §5. Jurisdiction of State Courts.

See Courts §11 V.

(a) The remedy of a party for injury to goods shipped resulting from delay, detention, loss, breakage, rotting or other deterioration or damage, not attributable to a violation of any provision of the Act to Regulate Commerce, is by appropriate action in the courts. Duncan v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 385.

(b) In cases of loss, the shippers remedy is at law, and the question of the reasonableness or validity of a contract limiting the carriers liability is to be determined in the courts on the facts in each case. Duncan v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 385, 393.

(c) The remedy of a party for injury to goods shipped resulting from delay, detention, loss, breakage, rotting or other deterioration or damage, not attributable to a violation of any provision of the Act to regulate commerce, is by appropriate action in the courts. Blanton Duncan v. A. T. & S. F. R. R. Co., et al, 6 I. C. C. 85.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) The loss of coal in transit may have been a breach of defendant's legal duty to complainant and also of the contract of carriage; but the only recourse that shippers have with respect to such infractions of their legal rights is in the courts, where the responsibility as well as the fact and amount of loss or damage, may be determined. S. W. Portland Cement Co. v. T. & P. Ry. Co., 41 I. C. C. 39, 41.

(e) Claims against common carriers for loss, damage, or delay to property are governed by general legal principles and are determinable by the courts. National Industrial Traffic League v. A. & R. R. R. Co., 61 I. C. C. 120, 125.

(f) In a suit against an initial carrier under the Carmack amendment to the Hepburn Act of 1906, for a failure to deliver goods at destination, a state court has jurisdiction since the Act complained of is not a violation of the original Act of 1887, and the Interstate Commerce Commission does not have, therefore, the exclusive jurisdiction under section 9 of the Act. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wallace, 223 U. S. 481, 489; 32 Sup. Ct. 205, 56 L. ed. 516.

(g) Congress has so asserted, by the Carmack Amendment, its power over the subject of interstate shipments, the duty to issue bills of lading, and the responsibilities thereunder, as to preclude the application to an interstate commerce shipment of a local and exceptional rule of law which invests the innocent holder of a bill of lading with rights not available to the shipper, such as the right to rely on erroneous recitals in the bill of lading as to the date of the carrier's receipt of the goods. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Harold, 36 Sup. Ct. 665, 668, 241 U. S. 371, 60 L. ed. 1050.

(h) Congress has paramount authority over the whole subject-matter of interstate commerce and contracts and regulations regarding it, and when it acts, all local laws and policies are superseded and its action becomes controlling; but if it omits to act, local laws and policies apply. Piper v. Boston & M. R. R., 97 Atl., (Vt., 1916), 508.

(i) Congress by its acts has taken over the whole subject-matter of interstate commerce so as to supersede all special regulations, laws, and policies of particular states as to the carrier's liability for loss or damages to interstate shipments, and contracts for interstate shipments. Piper v. Boston & M. R. R., 97 Atl., (Vt., 1916), 508.

II. CARRIER'S LIABILITY.

§5½. In General.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A railroad company, in the carriage of goods is subject to the liability of a common carrier, and must answer for all losses not occasioned by the act of God or the public enemy, and cannot, in this state, by special contract, limit or relieve itself from this liability. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Palmer, 4 I. C. R. 494.

(b) There is nothing in the Interstate Commerce Law which, by reason of an allowance of a rebate to the agents of the owners or consignees of goods, if actually made, would invalidate the contract of affreightment or exempt a railroad company from liability on its bills of lading. Merchants Cotton-Press & S. Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America (U. S. Sup. Ct.), 4 I. C. R. 499.

(c) Common carriers will not be relieved from liability for damages done in consequence of transporting articles dangerous to the property or health of others, where they had knowledge of such dangerous character, or could have had knowledge by the use of due care. Rouse v. Youard (Kan., App.), 5 I. C. R. 315.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) Carrier cannot by tariff provision exempt itself from liability to shipper or loss of property in transit. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 30.

(e) A provision in the tariff of western carriers that when the carrier's liability is established there will be deducted from the weight of the grain lost one-eighth of one per cent of the shipping weight on wheat, rye, oats, etc., and one-fourth of 1 per cent on corn to cover shrinkage due to evaporation or other natural causes not found unreasonable. Claims for Loss and Damage of Grain, 48 I. C. C. 530, 544.

(f) Shippers are entitled to information as to the manner in which shipments are handled by the carrier and to be advised of any losses or damage occurring in transit. Claims for Loss and Damage of Grain, 48 I. C. C. 530, 571.

(g) Carriers' responsibility for the safety of freight stored upon right of way instead of in warehouses is not altered by fact that warehouses were congested. Dodge Bros. v. Director General, as Agent, 62 I. C. C. 689, 691.

(h) A common carrier is now regarded as an insurer of goods intrusted to its care and custody for transportation and is liable for all loss, damage or injury occurring to the goods while they are held by it in its capacity of a common carrier, except when such loss, damage, or injury is caused by the act of God; the public enemy; the act of the shipper himself; public authority; or the inherent vice or nature of the goods. Old Dominion Co. v. Director General, 63 I. C. C. 43, 45.

(i) Proposed limitation of liability of carrier for invisible loss or waste from contract lot shipments of ex-lake grain, to the amount in excess of one-eighth of one per cent of the contract lot regardless of condition of equipment, found justified. Proposed rule will eliminate joint inspection of the cars by carrier and consignee, inevitable variations in the determination whether or not a car is leaky, and computation on individual carloads. Shortage in Weights of Ex-Lake Grain, 74 I. C. C. 619.

(ia) It is the duty of shippers properly to prepare his goods for shipment, and if special protection be needed, this also he must furnish. When suitable car is furnished, it is proper that shipper secure his shipment within it, by staking or otherwise, and so protect it from damage. Slating Cars for Watermelons, 78 I. C. C. 722, 735.

(ib) A railroad was liable for negligence in unreasoably delaying an empty tank car, though freight tariffs filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission specified compensation to be made by the railroad to the shipper or owner for the use of tank cars at specified rate per mile; such tariff having reference to the railroad's use of the car and not to unreasonable delay in return thereof, and the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission not extending to claims for unreasonable delay. Gustafson et al v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. (Ill. 1920), 129 N. E. 516.

(ic) The Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by Act March 4, 1915, incorporating what is known as the Cummins Amendment, providing that a carrier shall be liable to the holder of a bill of lading for any loss, damage, or injury to the property "caused by it," does not limit the liability of a carrier to that of an ordinary bailee for its own negligence only, but covers any loss or damage for which it would be liable at common law. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. John Lysaght, Ltd., 271 Fed. 906.

(id) The fact that a contract for the shipment of race horses specified a lower rate than the tariff rate for animals of that value, so as to be in effect the giving and receiving of a rebate on the shipment, which subjected both carrier and shipper to criminal punishment, but which was not declared by the Interstate Commerce Act prohibiting such rebates, to make the contract void, does not prevent the shipper from recovering the value of horses killed by the carrier's negligence. Adams Exp. Co. v. Darden, 286 Fed. 61.

(ie) Provisions in an express company's receipt for a shipment which were invalid under the Cummins Amendment, such as limitation of the carrier's liability to transportation over its own lines, but which were separable from the provision permitted by that amendment, limiting the liability to a stated value, unless greater value was declared do not invalidate the latter provision. Amer. Ry. Exp. Co. v. Lindenberg, 43 Sup. Ct. 206.

(j) The bill of lading required to be issued by a carrier of interstate commerce by the Carmack Amendment constitutes the contract between the shipper and the carrier. Aradalou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., (Mass., 1916), 114 N. E. 297.

(k) When a duty is imposed by law and its performance becomes impossible on account of an act of God, there can be no recovery of damages for the breach. Southern Ry. Co. v. White, 284 Fed. 560.

§5¾. Assignments.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A rule narrowing the carriers' previously acknowledged liability for loss and damage is akin to an increased rate, and the burden therefor rests upon the carrier to show that the narrowed liability is just and reasonable. Northern Potato Traffic Asso. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 53 I. C. C. 100, 102.

(b) In view of the Federal Statutes U. S. Comp. St. 1918, U. S. Comp. St. Ann. Supp. 1919, Secs. 3115 ¾j and 3115¾ l) and the Transportation Act of 1920, secs. 206, 210, assignments of claims for injuries to cattle shipped during federal control were not within U. S. Comp. St. sec. 6383, prohibiting assignments of claims against the United States. Morgan v. Hines, (Mont. 1922), 211 Pac. 778.

§6. Initial Carrier.

See Initial Carrier.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) After a shipper has delivered a shipment to the carrier, with instructions for an interstate carriage, he cannot defeat the liability of the carrier, under the Carmack amendment, for loss of or damage to the goods, by afterwards entering into an agreement with another carrier and obtaining from such other carrier a shipping receipt, since the first transaction has already settled the relation between the owner of the goods and the carrier, and fixed the duties and liability of the carrier to such owner. Aton Piano Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co. (Wis., 1913), 139 N. W. 743, 745.

(b) All provisions and bills of lading for interstate commerce, contrary to section 7 of the Hepburn Act of June 29, 1906, which makes the initial carrier liable for loss of or damage to goods in transit caused by a connecting carrier, are void. Smeltzer v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 158 Fed. 649, 654.

(c) The Carmack Amendment does not apply to foreign commerce; and a railroad whose bills of lading expressly provide that they are issued on behalf of its own lines only, and as agent for its connections but without joint liability, cannot be held for the failure of a connecting steamship line to accept a shipment for transportation. Hamlen & Sons v. I. C. R. R. Co., 212 Fed. 324, 327.

(d) Frequently a connecting carrier issues a bill of lading and in case of loss the claimant attempts to hold it as the initial line. This generally happens where the originating carrier is a branch road. But even though the intermediate carrier of a through line issues a new bill of lading, it nevertheless does not change the status as intermediate carrier and is not liable under the Carmack Amendment for default of any connecting carrier but only for its own negligence. Hudson v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. Ry. Co., 226 Fed. 38, 40.

(e) Under the Carmack Amendment, the initial carrier of an interstate shipment is liable for a misdelivery by the terminal carrier. King v. Barbarin, 249 Fed. 303.

(f) Under the Carmack amendment an initial carrier is liable for the loss of goods by the connecting carrier despite a provision in the bill of lading to the contrary. A. C. L. R. R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219, U. S. 186, 201; 31 Sup. Ct. 164, 55 L. ed. 167.

(g) The effect of the Carmack amendment in respect to carriers receiving packages in one state for points in another and beyond their own lines, is to deny to the initial carrier the former right to make a contract limiting liability to its own line. A. C. L. R. R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 201; 31 Sup. Ct. 164, 55 L. ed. 167.

(h) Under the Carmack amendment (section 20 of the Interstate Commerce Act), wherever the carrier voluntarily accepts goods for shipment to a point on another line in another state, it is conclusively treated as having made a through contract and as though the points of destination were on its own line, and is liable for any loss or damage occurring on its own line, or that of a connecting carrier. Galveston H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wallace, 223 U. S., 481, 491; 32 Sup. Ct. 205, 56 L. ed. 516.

(i) By the schedules filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, the rate on horses was lower when they were shipped under the "uniform bill of lading conditions" than when shipped not subject to such conditions. Plaintiff shipper, in ignorance of the provisions of the schedule, made a special contract for expedited service in the shipment of horses at the rates specified in the schedule for shipment under the "uniform bill of lading conditions." HELD, he was not precluded from recovering in a suit against the carrier for delay on the ground that his contract attempted to secure a preference in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act. Kirby v. C. & A. R. R. Co., 242 Ill. 418, 432, 90 N. E. 252; reversed on other grounds, 225 U. S. 155, 32 Sup. Ct. 648, 56 L. ed. 1033.

(j) A seizure of a shipment of poultry on a connecting line, by military authorities in a flood district under martial law, to relieve sufferers, if done solely by reason of the invitation of the connecting line, when it could have delivered the shipment with the exercise of ordinary care, renders the initial carrier liable. Chicago & E. I. R. R. v. Collins Produce Co., 39 Sup. Ct. 189.

(k) The fact that a bill of lading contains an exemption of liability void under the Carmack amendment, making the initial carrier liable for loss occuring on the lines of connecting carriers and forbidding the exemption from such liability does not vitiate the entire contract of shipment so as to preclude the holder from recovery for a failure safely to transport goods. Central of Ga. Ry. Co. v. Sims, 169 Ala. 295, 301, 53 So. 826.

(l) Where a carrier issued a bill of lading for transportation of goods to a point within the state on the line of another carrier without notice or reason to suppose that the shipment would pass beyond the destination specified but the other carrier took up the bill of lading and issued a new one covering transportation to a point in another state, the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act or the tariff schedules for interstate shipments permitting change of destination did not apply as a matter of federal law so as to make the first carrier liable for damage beyond the original point of destination. Bracht v. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co., 41 Sup. Ct. 150.

(m) A carload of vegetables was shipped from a point in Texas to another point in Texas where a shipper intended to sell it, and a state bill of lading was issued for such shipment. Subsequently, the car was reconsigned and a new bill of lading issued by a connecting carrier for ultimate interstate shipment. The shipper brought an action for damages for injuries sustained during transit against the first carrier that had issued the state bill of lading. HELD: That such carrier was not the initial carrier within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act and was not responsible for the damage that occurred after the shipment had been reconsigned and the exchange bill of lading issued. Bracht v. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co., 41 Sup. Ct. 150.

§7. Intermediate carrier.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The liability of any carrier in the route over which the articles pass in interstate commerce is, under the Carmack Amendment, that imposed by the Act as measured by the original contract of shipment so far as it is valid under said amendment. Kansas City S. R. co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 393, 327 U. S. 639.

(b) Under the Carmack Amendment any stipulation in the shipping receipt of the originating carrier is ineffective in so far as it is not authorized by said amendment, whether intended for its own benefit or that of the succeeding carrier, and any limitation of liability contained in its contract which would be valid in its own behalf would likewise insure to the benefit of its connecting carrier. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 393; 227 U. S. 639.

(c) A connecting carrier is not liable under Twenty-Eight Hour Law, § 3 for the detention of live stock in the cars without unloading for feed, water, and rest for longer than the prescribed time by the carrier from which it receives the shipment and before it has any control over it. Baker v. United States, 284 Fed. 818.

§8. Delivering Carrier.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A terminal carrier is not relieved from liability for misdelivering an interstate shipment by the provisions of the Carmack Amendment, making the initial carrier liable for loss or damage occurring anywhere enroute, with a remedy over against the carrier at fault, but the bill of lading which the initial carrier under that statute must issue governs the entire transportation, and thus fixes the obligations of all participating carriers to the extent that the terms of the bill of lading are applicable and valid. Georgia, F. & A. R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., 36 Sup. Ct. 541; 241 U. S. 190, 60 L. ed. 948.

(b) Under the Interstate Commerce Act the liability of a connecting or terminal carrier for property lost or damaged while in its custody is the same as that of the initial carrier. John Lysaght v. Lehigh Valley R. R., 254 Fed. 351.

(c) The Carmack Amendment which requires the issuance of a through bill of lading by the initial carrier, and makes that carrier liable for damage occuring anywhere along the route does not abrogate the common-law presumption that the damage was occasioned by the last carrier, but was intended to give the shipper the benefit of remedies against both carriers. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. C. C. Whitnack Produce Co. 42 Supt. Ct. 328.

(a) The burning of cotton while awaiting compression, as provided by a bill of lading, in a compress not owned or operated by the carrier, is within a clause in the bill exempting the carrier from loss by fire while the property is on deposit in place of transshipment or depots or landings or at points of delivery. CASES 1887-1908

(a) A common carrier may make no contract protecting itself against liability for its own or its servants negligence, but may, by special contract with the shipper, reasonably restrict its common-law liability in other respects. A carrier may state a reasonable limit to the sum for which he shall be held accountable in case of loss, but can not where this sum is understood to be an undervaluation of the goods thereby evade his full accountability as an ordinary bailee. Duncan v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 385, 393.

(b) If fruit is damaged through negligence of the carrier while in transit there is no reason why the carrier can not be required to respond in damages to the full amount of the injury sustained without regard to the valuation placed upon it, and defendants regulation whereby the freight rate on peaches and other fruit from Georgia points is increased in proportion to the carload valuation fixed by the shipper is unreasonable and unjust. Georgia Peach Growers' Asso. v. A. C. L. R. R., 10 I. C. C. 255, 277.

(c) The only purpose in publishing rates dependent upon the declared or released value of the property transported is to limit the carrier's liability in case of loss or damage to the property. By amendment to section 20 of the Act to regulate commerce approved March 4, 1915, "any such limitation to be made" was declared to be unlawful and void. It was without respect to the manner or form in which it is sought provided, however, that under certain conditions the Commission might establish and maintain rates dependent upon the value of the property as stated in writing by the shipper. In the Cummins Amendment, 33 I. C. C. 682, decided May 7, 1915, the Commission said: "Neither bills of lading or other contracts for carriage should contain any provisions which are so declared to be unlawful and void." Effective August 9, 1916, that part of Section 20 of the Act which authorized the Commission to establish and maintain rates based upon declared value was amended and the provision that any attempt to limit the carrier's liability should be unlawful and void was modified so it should not apply to baggage or to property other than ordinary live stock, "concerning which the carrier shall have been or shall hereafter be expressly authorized or required by order of the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish and maintain rates dependent upon the value declared in writing by the shipper or agreed upon in writing as the released value of the property." The order of the Commission is as follows: In express Rates, Practices, Accounts, and Revenues, 43 I. C. C. 510, decided April 2, 1917, the Commission said: "We can not, in view of the provisions of the law, authorize or sanction such rates upon ordinary live stock; neither can they lawfully be maintained upon any other character of traffic except under authorization duly granted by the Commission." This decision was followed in Live Stock Classification, 47 I. C. C. 335, and again in Williams Co. v. Hartford & New York Transportation Co., 48 I. C. C. 269, in which the Commission held that the rates complained of which were dependent upon the value of the property, and which the carriers had not been authorized by order of the Commission to maintain, were unlawful. Some carriers have neglected to secure from the Commission authority to maintain such rates or to cancel them from their tariffs. Unnecessary controversies arise as to the charges on property transported thereunder. It is clearly the duty of every carrier to secure from the Commission authority for the maintenance of such rates or to eliminate them from its classification and rate schedules. The Commission expects that each carrier will give this matter prompt and careful attention. In the matter of rates dependent upon the declared or released value of property. Order of I. C. C. April 6. 1918.

(d) Under the law it is a duty of shippers of property of more than ordinary value, to bill the same at its true value, in order that the legal rate may be applied. In the case of the shipper declaring a false value to secure a reduced rate, one of the penalties under a form of receipt basing the rate on valuation is an estoppel, by which he is precluded, in case of loss or damage, from denying the correctness of such value so given. In re Express Rates, Practices, Accounts and Revenues, 28 I. C. C. 131, 138.

(e) In 36 I. C. C. 265, the rule in the southwestern lines' tariffs providing that in the adjustment of claims for loss of grain in transit, deductions from the loading weights of one-eighth of 1 per cent on wheat, flax-seed, rye, oats and barley and one-fourth of 1 per cent on corn, as representing natural shrinkage, was held to be reasonable. On reargument complainants contended that arbitrarily to deduct any fixed amount for natural shrinkage was illegal, because (1) the carriers thereby limited liability; (2) it was an arbitrary determination in advance by the carrier of a disputed question of fact, in contravention of Article 7 of the federal constitution; and (3) it amounted to the taking of property without due process of law. In both Kansas and Missouri statutes had been enacted providing that a railroad should be deemed to have delivered the whole amount shipped if the shrinkage did not exceed one-fourth of 1 per cent. HELD (1) that the purpose sought to be accomplished by the rule in question, i. e., the limiting of the carrier's liability to losses actually occasioned by it, was not in violation of the Act to regulate commerce or any amendment of it, since it was merely liability for losses due to the inherent nature of the commodities; and (2) that the rule was not unreasonable. Complaint dismissed. Crouch Grain Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 41 I. C. C. 717.

(f) Certain express companies petitioned the Commission for an order authorizing the maintenance of express rates dependent on the value of the property shipped by express as declared in writing by the shipper or agreed upon in writing and submitted for approval proposed classification rules and form of express receipt. Protestants objected to the provision of the receipt requiring the presentation of certain classes of claims for loss and damage within four months, in that the Cummins Amendment limited the application of the four months' clause to claims arising out of undisclosed loss or damage and to the establishment of rates on ordinary live stock dependent on value. Petitioners did not propose rates on ordinary live stock dependent on agreed or released value, but did plan to continue their existing rates, which were based on value. For instance the rates applicable on horses were predicated on a maximum charge of $200 per head; if the value exceeded that sum an additional charge being made for the excess value, varying with the length of haul. HELD, (1) that an order be entered authorizing the maintenance of existing express rates dependent upon the declared or released value of the property transported, except ordinary live stock; (2) that the Commission was without jurisdiction to authorize the establishment of rates on ordinary live stock dependent upon declared or released value; (3) that the order should, however, apply to live stock chiefly valuable for breeding, racing, show purposes, or other special uses; and (4) that the proposed form of express receipt be authorized, since the four months provision was not in conflict with the Act or unreasonable. Express Rates, Practices, Accounts and Revenues, 43 I. C. C. 510.

(g) The plain and unmistakable purpose of the Cummins Amendment was to make unlawful and void, except as otherwise provided therein, all attempted limitations of liability for loss, damage, or injury to property transported. Williams Co. v. N. Y. Transfer Co., 48 I. C. C. 269, 273.

(ga) When authorized or required by the commission, rates based upon declared or agreed values are sanctioned by the act. Arlington Silver Mining Co. v. G. N. Ry. Co., 83 I. C. C. 255, 257.

(h) Under the Cummins amendment of March 4, 1915, to the Interstate Commerce Act, which declared that carriers should be liable for the full actual loss, a common carrier, where wheat was lost in transit is liable for the value of the grain at the point of destination, notwithstanding the shipment was made under a contract known as a "uniform bill of lading," which was part of the public tariffs filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and which provided that the loss should be computed on the value of the property at the time and place of shipment. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. (Minn. 1918), 252 Fed. 664.

(i) It has also been held by a United States District Court that since the Cummins Amendment expressly invalidates any limitation of liability, a provision in the uniform bill of lading limiting the measure of damages to the value of a shipment at the time and place of shipment is invalid. McCaull-Dinsmore v. C. M. & St. P. Ry., 252 Fed. 664.

(jk) The sole question in this case was whether the loss to the shipper is to be measured by the value of the property at the place of destination at the time it should have been delivered, or by the value of the property at the time and place of shipment; and the decision of this question must depend upon whether or not the provision or stipulation in the bill of lading, issued by the carrier and accepted and agreed to by the shipper that the loss should be measured by the value at the time and place of shipment and settled on that basis, was valid under the Cummins Amendment of March 4, 1915, to the Interstate Commerce Act, which was the law in force at the time of the shipment and of the loss. This amendment was passed after the decisions of the Supreme Court on the Carmack Amendment cited by counsel had been rendered, and it is apparent from its language that its proposal and enactment were caused by these decisions, and that it was aimed directly at them. Viewed in the light of those decisions and of the purpose evidently sought to be the court cannot see that there could be any greater difficulty, after loss has occurred, in ascertaining and proving the value at the time and place of delivery or destination than in ascertaining and proving the value at the time and place of shipment. If it be true, as suggested in the argument and by the Commission, as it may be, that this conclusion will result in difficulties, and in some cases, under these rules and regulations and schedules, in hardship and injustice to the carriers, and possibly in some discrimination amongst shippers, the remedy will be found in facing the law, whose language is too plain for construction or evasion, squarely, and revising and reconstructing those rules and regulations to meet it. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry., 252 Fed. 664, 665.

(l) A tariff named a rate of $4.17 on silverware. The bill of lading accepted by the shipper recited that the carrier received the consignment subject to the classifications and tariffs in effect at the time. The bill of lading contained the provisions that the liability of the carrier for loss or damage should be computed upon the basis of the value of the property at the place and time of shipment, unless a lower value had been represented in writing by the shipper or had been agreed upon or was determined by the classifications or tariffs upon which the rate was based, in any of which events such lower value should be the maximum amount to govern such computation. In the case in question, no lower value represented in writing by the shipper was made, and there was none expressly agreed upon by the shipper and the carrier. The tariff carrying the $4.17 rate provided that recovery in case of loss or damage should be limited to 10 times the amount of the rate. A higher rate was provided in the tariff sheets, under which there was no limitation of liability. The carrier's agent inquired as to the value of the goods and was informed by the shipper that their value was close to $5,000. HELD, that under the Carmack amendment and the decisions interpreting the same, the limitation of liability was valid and the shipper could recover only 10 times the rate paid. American Silver Mfg. Co. v. Wabash R. R. Co. (Mo. 1913), 156 S. W. 830, 833.

(m) The traffic manager of the shipper had on hand a quantity of shipping receipts of the express company, and was acquainted with a provision in the receipt limiting liability in all cases to $50 unless a higher value was declared by the shipper, so as to enable the express company to apply a higher rate. In shipping a box of automobile parts, the shipping clerk accepted from the express company a shipping receipt without declaring a higher value. The carrier could not have arrived at the true value of the contents of the box except by inquiring of the shipper. HELD, under the Carmack amendment, in a suit for loss, the express company was liable only to the limited value stipulated and the limitation in the receipt was not contrary to the provision of the Carmack amendment forbidding the limitation of liability. The stipulation in the shipping receipt was not purely fictitious and did not represent an attempt to limit the carrier's liability to an arbitrary amount, but in order to fix the rate to be charged, some value had to be placed on the property, and since its true value lay within the shipper's knowledge exclusively, the shipper's declaration as to value was binding. Pacific Express Co. v. Ross (Tex. 1913), 154 S. W. 340, 343.

(n) Under the Carmack Amendment, making the initial carrier liable for loss or damage occurring on the line of the connecting carrier and forbidding the limitation of liability, the carrier is not prevented from limiting its liability to a fair agreed value stated in the shipping receipt, where the rate charged is based on said value. M. P. Ry. Co. v. Harper Bros., 201 Fed. 671, 676.

(o) Where, under the filed and published tariffs of an interstate railroad company, the rate on coal was based on its value at the mines where shipment was made, a provision of such tariffs, which became a part of its contracts of carriage, that the amount of any loss or damage for which the company was liable should be computed on the value of the property at the time and place of shipment, as applied to a coal shipment is valid and enforceable. Springfield Light, Heat & Power Co. v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 260 F. 254.

(p) Under Interstate Commerce Act, sec. 20, as amended by Cummins Act, Sec. 1, providing that an Interstate carrier of property shall issue a bill of lading therefore and be liable for any loss or damage to the property caused by it or any other carrier when carried under a through bill of lading, and that no contract limiting such liability shall be valid, a provision of such bill of lading fixing the carrier's liability at the value of the property at the place and time of shipment is a limitation, and is invalid, and not enforceable. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. McCaull-Dinsmore Co., 260 Fed. 835.

(q) Under the Carmack amendment a limitation of liability to an agreed value, stated in the shipping receipt, is valid where the rate is based on such value. C. B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Latta, 33 Sup. Ct. 155, 226 U. S. 519.

(r) The Carmack Amendment does not forbid a limitation of liability in case of loss or damage to a valuation agreed upon for the purpose of determining which of two alternative lawful rates shall apply to a particular shipment. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 394; 227 U. S. 639.

(s) When a shipper delivers a package for shipment and declares a value, either upon request or voluntarily, and the carrier makes a rate accordingly, the shipper is estopped from recovering, in case of loss or damage, any greater amount. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 394; 227 U. S. 639.

(t) The valuations declared or agreed upon as evidenced by the contract of shipment upon which the published rate is applied must be conclusive in an action to recover for loss or damage a greater sum. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 395; 227 U. S. 639.

(u) In an interstate shipment of bulls and cows, the shipping receipt stated that the carrier did not haul these animals for the lower rate specified as applying, except upon valuation of $30 and $20 per head for the bulls and cows, respectively, and thereafter recited that the shipper represented the value as not exceeding these sums. A higher rate was specified in the tariffs where the liability was unlimited. HELD, that the shipper, having accepted this receipt, could not recover in excess of the sums limited for loss of the stock, notwithstanding the provision of the Carmack amendment relating to exemption of liability. H. K. & T. R. R. Co. v. Harriman Bros., 33 Sup. Ct. 397, 400; 227 U. S. 657.

(v) The validity of any stipulation in a shipping receipt, limiting liability in interstate shipments, which involves the Carmack amendment, is a federal question, to be determined under the general common law, and, as such, is withdrawn from the field of state law or legislation. M. K. & T. R. R. Co. v. Harriman Bros., 33 Sup. Ct. 397, 401; 227 U. S. 657.

(w) The liability of a terminal carrier of an interstate shipment for a loss due to its negligence while the goods were in its possession as warehouseman at the place of destination must be regarded as controlled by a limitation to an agreed valuation made to adjust the rate contained in the uniform bill of lading issued by the initial carrier, in view of the provisions of the Hepburn act, enlarging the definition of the term "transportation" so as to include all services rendered in connection therewith, and of a provission of the bill of lading that "every service to be performed hereunder" is subject to all the conditions therein contained. Cleveland, C.,

C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Dettlebach, 36 Sup. Ct. 177; 239 U. S. 588, 60 L. ed. 453.

(x) The parties to an interstate shipment may not, by special agreement, alter the conditions specified in the bill of lading governing the carrier's liability when a shipment is not removed within forty-eight hours after notice to the consignee of its arrival, which conform to the carrier's published regulations. Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, 36 Sup. Ct. 469; 240 U. S. 632, 60 L. ed. 836.

(y) The essential choice of rates must be made to appear before a carrier can successfully claim the benefit of such a limitation and relief from full liability. And as interstate rates are not lawful, unless duly filed with the Commission, it may become necessary for the carrier to prove its schedules in order to make out the requisite choice. But where a bill of lading signed by both parties, recites that lawful alternate rates based on specified values were offered, such recitals constitute admissions by the shipper and are sufficient prima facie evidence of choice. If, in such a case, the shipper wishes to contradict his own admissions, the burden of proof is upon him. York Mfg. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 3 Wall 107, 113, 18 L. ed. 170, 172; The Delaware, 14 Wall. 579, 601, 20 L. ed. 779, 783; Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 112 U. S. 331, 337, 28 L. ed. 717, 719, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Cau v. Texas & P. R. Co., 194 U. S. 427, 431, 48 L. ed. 1053, 1056, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663, 16 Am. Neg. Rep. 659; Squire v. New York C. R. Co., 98 Mass. 239, 248, 93 Am. Dec. 162; Wabash R. Co. v. Curtis, 134 Ill. App. 409, 412; Hutchinson, Carr. 3ded. § 475. The bill of lading in question is plainly entitled "Contract for Limited Liability in the Transportation of Live Stock at Reduced Rates," and contains the conspicuous provisions concerning published rates, tariff regulations, choice offered the shipper, and limit upon the carrier's liability, etc., above set out. In view of these recitals and admissions, the limitation of liability must be treated as prima facie valid, and, consequently, the trial court erred in holding it void as a matter of law, and permitting a recovery for full value of the animals. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. v. Rankin, 36 Sup. Ct. 555, 558; 241 U. S. 319, 60 L. ed. 102.

(z) Recitals in a bill of lading for an interstate shipment, signed by both parties, that alternate rates, based upon specified values are offered by the carrier's published freight rates, constitute admissions by the shipper and are sufficient prima facie evidence of a choice of rates, and cast upon him the burden of proving, in case he wishes to contradict his admissions, that the carrier had not complied with the requirements of controlling federal legislation respecting the filing and publishing of its rate schedules. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. v. Rankin, 36 Sup. Ct. 555; 241 U. S.

(aa) An express company which accepted in London an automobile to be shipped to New York, and, having boxed the same, shipped it by an ocean carrier without declaring its value, taking from the steamship company a bill of lading limiting liability to $100 unless a greater value is declared and extra freight paid, was secondarily liable to the owner, where the car was seriously damaged through the negligence of stevedores employed by the steamship company to discharge the cargo, even though the express company be regarded as a mere forwarding agent. Reid v. Fargo, 36 Sup. Ct. 712; 241 U. S. 544, 60 L. ed. 156.

(bb) Interstate shipments of the character here in controversy made upon bills of lading, and under tariffs filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, have been the subject of frequent consideration in this court. The binding character of the stipulations of the bill of lading and of the rates as fixed in the filed tariffs, have been recognized and enforced. St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Ry. Co. v. Starbird, Adm'r, 243 U. S. 592, 37 Sup. Ct. 462, 61 L. ed. 917, and previous cases in this court therein cited. "The Carmack Amendment (Comp. St. 1916, §§8604a, 8604aa) requires the initial carrier to issue a bill of lading, and carriers are obliged to carry the articles shipped at the rates fixed in the published tariffs. Many decisions of this court have held that the carrier may offer to the shipper and the shipper may be bound by a contract which limits recovery to a valuation declared by the shipper in consideration of the reduced rate for the carriage of the freight, This rule was stated in an early case arising after the passage of the Carmack amendment. Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 509, 510, 33 Sup. Ct. 148, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 257, and has been frequently reiterated since. In the cases in which the recovery for the lesser valuation has been affirmed, the shipper was offered an opportunity to recover a greater sum than the declared value upon paying a higher rate to the carrier. The shipper was offered alternative recoveries based upon different valuations upon the payment of different rates, and was held bound by the one chosen. Such contracts of shipment this court has held not to be in contravention of the settled principles of the common law preventing a carrier from contracting against liability for losses resulting from its own negligence, and are lawful limitations upon the amount of recovery binding upon the shipper upon principles of estoppel. Hart v. Pennsylvania R. R., 112 U. S. 331, 5 Sup. Ct. 151, 28 L. Ed. 717, followed and approved since the passage of the Carmack Amendment in Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 33 Sup. Ct. 148 57 L. Ed. 314, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 257 supra, and see Wells Fargo & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co., 227 U. S. 469, 33 Sup. Ct. 267, 57 L. Ed. 600; Kansas Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 657, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 57 L. Ed. 683; Chicago, R. I. & Pacific R. Co. v. Cramer, 232 U. S. 490, 34 Sup. Ct. 383, 58 L. Ed. 697; Boston & Maine R. Co. v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 Sup. Ct. 526, 58 L. Ed. 868, L. R. A. 1915B, 450, Ann Cas. 1915B 593; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R. Co. v. Robinson, 233 U. S. 173, 34 Sup. Ct. 556, 58 L. Ed. 901. Furthermore it has been held that low valuation will not prevent the application of the rule making the agreement binding upon the shipper. Pierce Co. v. Wells Fargo & Co., 236 U. S. 278, 285, 35 Sup. Ct. 351, 59 L. Ed. 576. While the rule of the lesser recovery based upon lesser rates, when the shipper has been given the option of higher recovery upon paying a higher rate has been held binding upon the shipper so long as the published tariff remains in force, this court has not held a bill of lading containing a limitation against liability for loss caused by the carrier's negligence, such as is here involved to be conclusive of the shipper's right to recover. In the previous decisions of this court upon the subject it has been said that the limited valuation for which a recovery may be had does not permit the carrier to defeat recovery because of losses arising from its own negligence, but serves to fix the amount of recovery upon an agreed valuation made in consideration of the lower rate stipulated to be paid for the service. In the bill of lading, now under consideration, there is an express agreement limiting liability from unusual delay and detention, caused by the carrier's negligence to the amount actually expended by the shipper in the purchase of food and water for his stock while so detained. This stipulation contravenes the principle that the carrier may not exonerate itself from losses negligently caused by it, and is not within the principle of limiting to an agreed valuation which has been made the basis of reduced freight rate. Such stipulations as are here involved are not legal limitations upon the amount of recovery but are in effect attempts to limit the carrier's liability for negligence by a contract which leaves practically no recovery for damages resulting from such negligence. While this provision was in the bill of lading, the form of which was filed with the railroad company's tariffs with the Interstate Commerce Commission, it gains nothing from that fact. The legal conditions and limitations in the carrier's bill of lading duly filed with the Commission are binding until changed by that body (Kansas Southern Ry. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 654, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 57 L. Ed. 683); but not so of conditions and limitations which are, as is this one, illegal, and consequently void. Boston & M. R. R. v. Piper, 38 Sup. Ct. 354, 246 U. S. 439, 62 L. Ed. 820.

(cc) On cases arising prior to passage of the Cummins Amendment, it is held that a limitation of liability in consideration of a reduced rate is valid and binding, but the shipper must have been given the option to ship at unrestricted liability. In other words, the mere fact that the carrier has filed a tariff providing for a limited liability will not of itself make such rate valid, unless it is also shown that the shipper had the option of paying a higher rate, under which the carrier would transport the goods at unrestricted liability. Then, if it is shown that the shipper voluntarily elected to use the lower rate, he must be held to be bound by his choice. Boston & M. R. R. v. Piper, 38 Sup. Ct. 354, 246 U. S. 439, 62 L. Ed. 820.

44 L. R. A. (N. S.), 257; but on the other hand, stipulations requiring claims to be presented within a certain time are held by the federal courts not contracts against negligence, but conditions precedent to suit affecting, not the carrier's liability but the shipper's remedy, and when the time is reasonable such stipulations are held by the federal courts to be valid and binding. (Queene of the Pacific, 180 U. S. 49, 21 Sup. Ct. 278, 45 L. Ed. 419; Southern Express Co. v. Caldwell, 21 Wall, 264, 22 L. Ed. 556. The St. Hubert (D. C.) 102 Fed. 362; Metropolitan T. Co. v. Toledo, St. L. & K. C. R. Co. (C. C.) 107 Fed. 629; The Westminster, 127 Fed. 680, 62 C .C. A. 406; The Arctic Bird (D. C.) 109 Fed. 167; M. K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 33 Supt. Ct. 397, 57 L. Ed. 690.) And such is the general rule in this country. Houtz v. Union P. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. (N. S.), 628, note; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, (2d Ed.), 321. Lynch v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 153 N. Y. S. 633, 636.

§10. Common law liability in general. See Supra §9.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) No contract, receipt, rule or regulation may exempt a carrier from liability for loss or damage. Protection of Potato Shipments in Winter, 29 I. C. C. 504, 507.

(b) Where heater service is performed by shipper and loss or damage results from frost or overheating, not the direct result of negligence of carrier, such loss or damage is not caused by carrier. Miller & Co. v. N. P. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 154, 157.

(c) A rule where cases of eggs are received at shipping point and receipted for on other than order bills of lading as in apparent good order (contents and condition of contents of package unknown) and arrive at destination in the same apparent good condition and show no external evidence of damage, no inspection of the contents of such cases to be permitted before delivery thereof to the consignee, and the consignee to be required to accept and receipt for same subject to the same conditions under which the shipment was received for transportation, viz., as in apparent good order (contents and condition of packages unknown) can not, of course, bar the consignee from suing for and upon due proof from obtaining compensation for loss or damage caused by the negligence of the carrier, even though undisclosed by the joint examination at delivery point, restricted to cases showing external evidence of damages. N. Y. Merc. Exch. v. B. & O. R. R., 36 I. C. C. 156, 157, 160.

(d) Notation placed on bills of lading exempting carriers from damages caused by freezing not found unlawful. Longo Fruit Co. v. I. T. System, 38 I. C. C. 487, 489.

(e) In case of nondelivery, the carrier's common-law liability is the value of the goods at the point of destination at the time they should have been delivered. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry., (Minn., 1918), 252 Fed. 664.

(f) In the absence of legislation a carrier, unless there be a special contract, is only bound to carry over its own line and then deliver to a connecting carrier. A. C. L. R. R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 197, 31 Sup. Ct. 164, 55 L. ed. 167.

(g) Where an initial carrier contracts to carry over the whole route its common-law carrier liability extends over its entire route. A. C. L. R. R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 197, 31 S. Ct. 164, 55 L. ed. 167.

(h) The liability for loss or damage, under the Carmack Amendment, aside from responsibility for the default of a connecting carrier on the route, is not beyond the liability imposed by the common law, as that body of law applicable to carriers has been interpreted by the United States Supreme Court. Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 33 Sup. Ct. 148, 154; 226 U. S. 491.

(i) The liability, under the Carmack Amendment, aside from responsibility for the default of a connecting carrier in the route, is not beyond the liability imposed by the common law, as that body of law applicable to carriers has been interpreted by the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as by many courts of the states. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 395; 227 U. S. 639.

(j) The common-law liability of a carrier as an insurer was not changed with respect to a loss occurring on its own line by the provision of the Carmack Amendment, making the initial carrier of an interstate shipment liable for any loss, damage, or injury "caused by it" or by any other carrier to which the shipment may be delivered. Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pac. Ry. Co. v. Rankin, 36 Sup. Ct. 555; 241 U. S. 319, 60 L. ed. 1022.

(k) Though the Interstate Commerce Act and the Cummins Amendment (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8592a, 8604a) may be inapplicable to a particular carrier, its standards are relevant to an inquiry whether public policy will permit the enforcement of a stipulation in a bill of lading issued by such carrier, exacting the institution of a suit within 60 days; after notice of claim. South & Central American Commercial Co. Inc. v. Panama R. Co. (New York, 1923), 142 N. E. 666.

(b) There is no national common law. Gatton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 474.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Where heater service is performed by shipper and loss or damage results from frost or overheating, not the direct result of negligence of carrier, such loss or damage is not caused by carrier. Miller & Co. v. N. P. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 154, 157.

(d) Notation placed on bills of lading exempting carriers from damage caused by freezing not found unlawful. Longo Fruit Co. v. I. T. System, 38 I. C. C. 487, 489.

(e) Under section 20, paragraph 10 of the Interstate Commerce Act, a contract seeking to limit the liability of the carrier for loss or damage arising through its negligence on account of a lower rate accorded is void. Wabash R. R. Co. v. Priddy (Ind., 1913), 101 N. E. 724, 128.

(f) Under the Carmack Amendment the provision forbidding exemption of liability is a statutory declaration that a contract of exemption from liability for negligence is against public policy and void. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 394; 227 U. S. 639.

(g) An agreement to release a carrier for part of a loss due to negligence is no more valid, under the Carmack Amendment, than one whereby there is complete exemption; neither is such contract any more valid because it rests upon a consideration, than if it was without consideration. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Carl, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 394; 227 U. S. 639.

(h) The liability imposed on the carrier for loss or damage in interstate shipments, by the provision of the Carmack Amendment, is the liability imposed by the common law upon the common carrier, and may be limited or qualified by special contract with the shipper, provided the limitation or qualification be just and reasonable, and does not exempt from loss or responsibility due to negligence. M. K. & T. R. R. Co. v. Harriman Bros., 33 Sup. Ct. 397, 401; 227 U. S. 657.

(i) The common-law liability of a carrier as an insurer was not changed with respect to a loss occurring on its own line by the provision of the Carmack Amendment, making the initial carrier of an interstate shipment liable for any loss, damage, or injury "caused by it" or by any other carrier to which the shipment may be delivered. Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pac. Ry. Co. v. Rankin, 36 Sup. Ct. 555; 241 U. S. 319, 60 L. ed. 1022.

(j) A provision in a uniform live stock agreement filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and covering an interstate shipment which limited the shipper's damages for unusual delay resulting from negligence to the amount actually expended by the shipper in the purchase of food or water for the stock while detained is invalid as a contract exempting the carrier from liability for its own negligence, and cannot be sustained as a contract limiting recovery to an agreed valuation in consideration of a reduced rate. Boston & M. R. R. v. Piper, 38 Sup. Ct. 354.

(k) Claimant made a shipment of race horses while the first Cummins Amendment was in effect which prohibited any limitation of liability, under an express receipt, which limited liability to $100 for each animal, and paid the express rate applicable for such limited liability. Owing to the negligence of the carrier five of the horses were killed and the claimant recovered a verdict for $32,500. It was contended the verdict could not stand because the limitation of liability having been prohibited the parties had entered into a void contract, which was unenforceable. The court overruled this contention and upheld the verdict. Adams Express Co., v. Darden 286 Fed. 61.

§10. (2) Limitation of liability.

See Limitation of Liability.

(ab) A shipment is not within the provisions of a statute forbidding carriers within the state to limit their common-law liability, where the contract provides for the carrying of the goods to a foreign port by means of the carrier's own line, its connecting lines in another state, and an ocean steamship company. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sherwood (Tex.), 4 I. C. R. 240.

(c) A clause limiting the liability of a railway company to its own line which is wholly within the state will not convert into a domestic bill of lading an instrument which purports on its face to be a through bill of lading to a foreign port, providing for the transportation of the goods to their foreign destination and fixing the through rate of freight. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Sherwood Thompson Co., 4 I. C. R. 240.

(d) A shipment is not within the provisions of a statute forbidding carriers within the state to limit their common-law liability where the contract provides for the carrying of the goods to a foreign port by means of the carrier's own line, its connecting lines in another state, and an ocean steamship company. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Sherwood Thompson & Co., 4 I. C. R. 240.

(e) A state statute prohibiting carriers from limiting their liability for loss by fire cannot be made to apply to property being transported under a bill of sale from a point in one state to a point in another state, both foreign to the state enacting the statute, although the carrier's charter was granted by such state and the point where the loss occurs is actually within its boundaries. Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 802.

(f) Neither the common-law rule nor a state statute denying validity to a contract exempting a common carrier from liability can be regarded as a regulation of commerce, although applied to an interstate shipment. Solan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 468.

(g) Interstate shipments are not within the purview of the Texas statute restricting the right of common carriers to contract against liability for loss of goods not caused by the carrier's negligence. Texas & Pacific Ry. Co. v. Payne, 7 I. C. C. app. LXIII.

(h) A provision of a State Constitution that common carrier shall not be permitted to contract for relief from its common-law liability is not in conflict with the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Eubank, 7 I. C. C. app. LXXXIX.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(i) Limitations of liability in respect of ordinary live stock prohibited by Cummins Amendment, and with respect to other commodities they are lawful under this amendment only to extent that by the Commission's order a carrier may be authorized to maintain rates dependent upon values declared or agreed upon in writing by the shipper. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 482.

(j) A declaration in the tariff as to the matter of liability under the law can have no controlling effect, for the carriers liability for loss and damage is determined by the law. Nothing can be added or subtracted from the law by limitations or definitions stated in tariffs and there is the constant risk if such declarations are included, of misstating the law and misleading the parties to no good purpose. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 482.

(k) In the opinion of the Commission tariff provisions which purport to state the law, fix limitations of the carriers liability, or define the legal obligations of the parties, are, generally objectionable. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 483.

(l) A proposed tariff contained numerous provisions defining or seeking to limit the carriers liability for loss or damage. This liability is determined by the law and can not be changed by declarations or definitions stated in tariff. There is the constant risk therefore, if such declarations are included, of misstating the law and misleading the parties to no good purpose. These provisions should be eliminated, but shippers should be warned that where they direct in some measure the extent or character of the service and damage results which may be ascribed to such directions, the carriers cannot be held liable. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 614.

(m) Respondents parties to tariff on contract lot shipments of ex lake grain from Buffalo, Black Rock, Buffalo, East Buffalo, and Oswego, N. Y., and Erie Pa., to Boston New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other points in trunk line territory, both locally and for export, proposed to change the rule on liability for shortage so that the liability will be only for shortage in excess of one-eighth of one per cent of the contract lot when the shortage is occasioned in part by accident or defective cars, the same as the liability is now with respect to contract lot shortage all of which is otherwise occasioned. The effect of the change is that one-eighth of one per cent of the contract lot will be deducted for invisible loss and waste, regardless of the condition of the cars, and the liability of the carriers limited to shortage in the contract lot beyond that allowance. This liability of the carriers would arise directly from the existing shortage, without regard to any record of the condition of the cars while in transit or at destination. Under the new rule inspection of the cars at destination would be unnecessary except for the carrier's own purposes, such as repairs. The proposed change in the rule gives the carrier only a protection which it should have in connection with additional liability. The change lessens, but still does not eliminate, the advantage which ex-lake shippers have as compared with all rail shippers. HELD, respondents have justified the schedules under suspension. Claims for Shortage in Weights of Ex-Lake Grain destined to Eastern Points, 74 I. C. C. 619.

(n) Proposed limitation of liability of carrier for invisible loss or waste from contract-lot shipments of ex-lake grain, to the amount in excess of one-eighth of one per cent of the contract lot regardless of condition of equipment, found justified. Proposed rule will eliminate joint inspection of the cars by carrier and consignee, inevitable variations in the determination whether or not a car is leaky, and computation on individual carloads. Shortage in Weights of Ex-Lake Grain, 74 I. C. C. 619.

(o) Where a shipper carries articles of freight to a freight agent of a railroad company in charge of its business, and discloses the nature and value of the articles to be shipped by freight, and such agent writes only one article in the bill of lading when the shipment contains many articles, the company cannot escape responsibility for the negligence or dishonesty of its employees because the bill of lading contains a clause that "no carrier will be liable in any way for any documents, specie, or for any articles of extraordinary value not specifically rated in the published classification or tariff, unless a special agreement to do so and the stipulated value of the articles are indorsed hereon." Where the information is furnished the agent in charge, and he fails to write the data on the bill of lading, it must be treated as having waived the provision. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. King (Miss., 1921), 88 So. 322.

(p) Under the Cummins Amendment permitting the carrier to limit its liability to a stated value, unless a greater value is declared in writing by the shipper or agreed on in writing as the released value of the property, it is not essential that an express receipt limiting the liability to the basic valuation in consideration of the reduced rate be signed by the shipper to be binding on him, though such a signature would be additional evidence of his agreement, but his acceptance of the receipt, the contents of which he is presumed to know, is an assent to its terms, so as to make it the written agreement of the parties. American Railroad Express Co. v. Lindenburg, 43 Sup. Ct. 206.

(q) Proof that express company had filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission a tariff, specifically referring to an order of the Commission in proceedings to which the express company was not a party, which permitted a limitation of liability to a stated value, and containing the form of receipt therein authorized, and that thereafter it made its charges in conformity with tariff, raises a presumption that the express company was authorized by the Commission to establish and maintain rates dependent on declared or agreed values. American Ry. Express Co. v. Lindenburg, 43 Sup. Ct. 206.

§10¼. Damages in general.

(a) The market value of horses at the destination which was in the contemplation of the parties at the time the contract of shipment was made is properly considered in measuring the damages resulting from negligence in the shipment. Reeves v. Texas & P. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 5 I. C. R. 639.

(b) Under the Cummins Amendment providing that interstate carriers shall be liable for actual loss, the measure of damages recoverable by a dealer in coal who sold at both retail and wholesale for loss of a portion of a carload of coal was not his loss of profit, either retail or wholesale, where he had coal in storage ample for his business needs, but was his full actual loss, including cost of coal at mine, plus freight, if paid, and war tax, but not including any allowance for unloading, cartage, overhead or profit. Brown Coal Co. v. Ill. Cent. R. R. Co. (Iowa, 1923), 192 N. W. 920.

(c) In a suit for damages for depreciation in value of seasonable goods the value of which was practically destroyed by delay in shipment during the period of federal control, plaintiff, having accepted the goods when delivered, could recover the amount of the depreciation in the reasonable market value thereof between the dates on which delivery should have been made and that on which deliverey was actually made, not to exceed the maximum liability fixed in the contract pursuant to Federal Control Act, §10. American R. R. Exp. Co. v. Parisian Hat Co., (Texas, 1922), 240 S. W. 947.

(d) The owner of coal requisitioned for railroad use during government operation cannot be compelled to accept a price fixed by the gevernment, but is entitled under the Fifth Amendment to "just comparison." Dexter & Carpenter Inc. v. Davis, 281 Fed 385.

(e) Under the order of the Fuel Administrator of January 17, 1919, providing that all contracts for sale of coal should provide that the coal deliverable thereunder should be subject to requisition by the Fuel Administrator, and that in the absence of a government price such requisition should be "at the price at which such shipment has been consigned by the shipper thereof," where shipments were made to apply on foreign contracts and the coal was requisitioned the shipper is entitled to the foreign contract price notwithstanding the fact that under government regulations the shipper was compelled to consign the coal to the Tidewater Coal Exchange for shipper's account. Dexter v. Carpenter, 281 Fed. 385.

(f) A provision of a bill of lading issued in November 1915 for an interstate shipment requiring the amount of any loss or damage to be computed on the basis of the value of the property at the place and time of shipment including freight charges, violates Act March 4, 1915, (the Cummins Amendment), making carriers liable for the full actual loss, not withstanding any limitation of liability or of the amount of recovery, where the actual loss was more than the amount recoverable thereunder. §10½. Damages for delay.

(a) A carrier which receives, under a contract to transport it within a reasonable time, freight for shipment which must go through a point at which the facilities are so greatly overcrowded that a delay will be necessary at that point, will be liable for the loss of the property caused by the delay at that point. Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. C. C. S. D., Ill.), 4 I. C. R. 802.

(b) Permitting a shipment of cotton to lie at one station for eighteen days is negligence under a contract to transport it within a reasonable time. Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. (C. C. S. D. Ill.), 4 I. C. R. 802.

(c) A carrier which receives cotton for transportation under a contract by which it agrees to deliver it to the consignee within a reasonable time is liable for its loss if it leaves it for eighteen days on a barge moored in a river exposed to sparks from passing boats and engines on the levee above, by some of which it is set on fire. Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. (C. C. S. D. Ill.), 4 I. C. R. 802.

(d) A carrier who receives under a contract to transport it within a reasonable time, freight for shipment which must go through a point at which the facilities are so greatly overcrowded that a delay will be necessary at that point, will be liable for the loss of the property caused by the delay at that point. Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 802.

(a) A stipulation in a contract for the shipment of a stock that no recovery for damages can be had unless written notice is given to the carrier before the stock is unloaded is in violation of Kentucky Constitution, § 196, providing that no common carrier can contract for relief from its common-law liability; and such provision is not an unlawful attempt to regulate or interfere with interstate commerce when applied to a shipment into another state. Ohio & Miss. Ry. Co. v. Taber, 7 I. C. C. app. XXXIII.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Representatives of carriers and shippers alike appeared before the Commission, joining in request for approval of a waiver by the carriers of the provision in the uniform bill of lading that claims for loss, damage or delay must be presented within four months. This provision had been incorporated into both the uniform bill of lading, used in Official and Western Classification territory, and the standard bill of lading used in the Southern territory. In the case of the uniform bill it had been embodied in the freight classifications of carriers and thus made a part of their tariff schedules. The provision had, from a variety of reasons, particularly doubt as to its legality, been disregarded by many of the carriers, thus leading to widespread and serious discrimination. The legality of the provision having been sustained by the courts, however, all parties thought best, in view of the past discriminations, to waive the limitation as to past claims. HELD, that the Commission is without authority to order carriers to disregard their tariffs, nor does it feel justified in acquiescing in the adjustment of matters brought into this condition by disregard of tariff provisions, except from the necessity of the situation, where to do otherwise must leave uncorrected grossly unjust and widespread discriminations. To prevent such results the carriers should deal with all claims presented prior to December 1, 1913, and all claims accruing within two years prior to the report of the Commission and filed by April 1, 1914, upon their merits without regard to the period of limitation fixed by the tariff. Bills of Lading, 29 I. C. C. 417.

(c) A four months limitation in the bill of lading as to the time in which a claim must be filed applies to a claim for freezing. Midland Linseed Co. v. American Liquid Fireproofing Co. (Ia., 1918), 166 N. W. 573, 575.

(d) In an action against the initial carrier of an intrastate shipment, liable under the Carmack Amendment to the Hepburn Act to the legal holder of the bill of lading, the contract providing that claims for loss, damages, etc., should be made in writing to the carrier at the point of delivery, etc., required such notice, even in case of a willful misdelivery by the final connecting carrier. Kemper Mill Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., (Mo., 1916), 186 S. W. 8.

(e) Where a live stock shipping contract for an interstate shipment at reduced rates provided that failure to give notice of loss within 10 days after unloading should be a waiver of the same, and the contract or bill of lading had been duly filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, a connecting carrier is not authorized in view of the Act to regulate commerce and the Carmack Amendment, of the Hepburn Act, to waive the requirement, which was for the benefit of all carriers, by receiving oral complaints, for that would open opportunities to discriminations prohibited by the statute; it appearing that the initial carrier was prepared at a higher rate to transport the animals without such requirement. Olson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. R., 250 Fed. 372.

(f) An agreement in a reduced rate contract for the shipment of live stock requiring notice of loss or damage to be given within 10 days after the animals should be unloaded, on penalty of waiver, is valid, being fair, just, and reasonable. Olson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. R. 250 Fed. 372.

(g) A federal court has held that where a shipment is damaged in transit, notice of loss is unnecessary, under the Cummins Amendment ,and suit may be brought if notice has not been given. Where an interstate shipment of horses was unnecessarily and carelesssly held in the railroad yards at an intermediate point, notice of claim for loss was unnecessary; the shipping contract following the Interstate Commerce Act, which declares notice unnecessary for damage in transit by carelessness or negligence. Hailey v. Oregon Short Line R. R., 253 Fed. 569.

(h) Notice of damage to live stock in transit, caused by the carrier's negligence, being unnecessary, under the Cummins Amendment, an allegation, in answer in action for such damage as to lack of notice, will be stricken as redundant and immaterial. Hailey v. Oregon Short Line R. R., 253 Fed. 569.

(i) Notice to an officer or station agent of the connecting carrier at final destination must be deemed to satisfy the requirement of a stipulation in a through bill of lading for an interstate shipment of cattle, issued by the initial carrier, that the shipper, as a condition precedent to his right to recover for any injury to the cattle while in transit, shall give notice in writing of his claim to some officer or station agent "of said company" before the cattle are removed from the place of destination or mingled with other stock, in view of the Carmack Amendment, under which the bill of lading was issued, making the connecting carrier the agent of the receiving carrier for the purpose of completing the transportation and delivering the property, and of a further stipulation in the bill of lading that its terms and conditions shall inure to the benefit of any connecting carrier over whose line the cattle shall pass. Northern Pac. Railway Company v. Wall, 36 Sup. Ct. 493; 241 U. S. 87, 60 L. ed. 905.

(ia) Since the Carmack amendment makes it obligatory upon the initial carrier to issue a through bill of lading, the connecting carrier becomes the agent of the receiving carrier for the purpose of receiving the goods and delivering the property. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 196, 206, 55 L. ed.. 167, 178, 182, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Wallace, 223 U. S. 481, 491, 56 L. ed. 516, 523, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205. Therefore a provision in a bill of lading governing an interstate shipment of live stock that notice of loss must be given before the live stock is removed from the place of destination or mingled with other stock is complied with when such notice is given to the delivering carrier, although such carrier is not the initial line. It is not necessary that notice be given to the initial line, as any connecting carrier is its agent. Northern P. R. Co. v. Wall, 36 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 496 241 U. S. 87, 60 L. ed. 905

(j) The initial carrier may validly stipulate in the bill of lading, issued conformably to the Carmack Amendment, for an interstate shipment that "claims for loss, damage, or delay must be made in writing to the carrier at the point of delivery or at the point of origin within four months after the delivery of the property, or, in case of failure to make delivery, then within four months after a reasonable time for delivery has elapsed." Georgia, F. & A. R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., 36 Sup. Ct. 541.

(k) Misdelivery of an interstate shipment by the terminal carrier must be regarded as "failure to make delivery," within the meaning of a clause in the bill of lading issued by the initial carrier, conformably to the Carmack Amendment which casts upon that carrier responsibility with respect to the entire transportation, that "claims for loss, damage, or delay must be made in writing to the carrier at the point of delivery or at the point of origin within four months after the delivery of the property, or, in case of failure to make delivery, then within four months after a reasonable time for delivery has elapsed." Georgia, F. & A. R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., 36 Sup. Ct. 541; 241 U. S. 190, 60 L. ed. 948.

(l) A claim for the value of a shipment of flour misdelivered by the carrier is sufficiently made to satisfy the requirement of the bill of lading that claims based on failure to make delivery shall be made in writing within four months after the time for delivery has elapsed, where the shipper, after making an investigation in response to a telegram from the carrier's traffic manager, telegraphed the latter five days after the arrival of the flour at destination "We will make claim against railroad for entire contents of car at invoice price. Must refuse shipment as we cannot handle." Georgia, F. & A. R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., 36 Sup. Ct. 541; 241 U. S. 190, 60 L. ed. 948.

(m) The effect of a stipulation in a bill of lading for an interstate shipment requiring claims for damages or misdelivery to be presented within four months after a reasonable time for delivery has elapsed cannot be avoided by suing the carrier in trover on the theory that in making the misdelivery it converted the shipment, and thus abandoned the contract, since the parties could not waive the terms of the contract under which the shipment was made, pursuant to the Act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104), as amended by the Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 593, chap. 3591, Comp. Stat. 1913, § 8592), nor could the carrier by its conduct give the shipper the right to ignore the terms and hold the carrier to a different responsibility from that fixed by the agreement made under the published tariffs and regulations. Georgia, F. & A. R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co. 36 Sup. Ct. 541; 241 U. S. 190, 60 L. ed. 948.

(n) A shipper of live stock must comply with provisions in bill of lading, issued as required by Act of Congress, that no claim for damages shall be allowed or paid, or sued for, unless claim shall be made in writing, verified by affidavit of shipper or his agent, and delivered to general freight agent of carrier at his office in given city within five days from time live stock is removed from cars. Baltimore & O. R. R. v. Leach, 39 Sup. Ct. 254.

(o) The exception in the Cummins Amendment that "if the loss, damage, or injury complained of was due to delay or damage while being loaded or unloaded, or damaged in transit by carelessness or negligence, then no notice of claim or filing of claim shall be required as a condition precedent to recovery," does not apply to a case of non-delivery. St. Sing v. American Ry. Exp. Co. (N. C. 1922), 111, S. E. 710.

(p) A shipper is not barred from maintaining an action against a carrier for negligently causing the rusting, during transit, of a shipment of stoves, because it did not file its claim with the receiving or delivering carrier within six months as provided by the bill of lading; the Interstate Commerce Act, providing that "no notice of claim * * * shall be required as a condition precedent to recovery" in such cases. A. F. Thompson Mfg. Co. v. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. (W. Va., 1923), 115, S. E. 877.

§12. Settlements and rights inter se.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Under the Carmack Amendment of June 29, 1906, making the initial carrier liable for damage caused by the connecting carrier and allowing the former to recover of the latter for the amount of the judgment secured by the shipper, the initial carrier cannot so recover when it delivers cattle in an injured condition to the connecting carrier and there is no evidence to show that the damage sustained by the shipper was caused by the connecting carrier. M. K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Jarmon (Tex. Civ. App., 1911), 141 S. W. 155, 156.

(b) Where in a suit against the initial and the connecting carrier of an interstate shipment for delay and damage to goods the complainant is dismissed with plaintiff's consent as to the latter carrier the initial carrier may still be prosecuted and recovery had against it under the Carmack Amendment, making such carrier liable for loss, damage or injury caused by subsequent carriers. §13. Special damages.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) In a shipper's action against a carrier for damages to hay while in transit, demurrage charges, which the shipper was compelled to pay while attempting to dispose of the damaged hay, were not special damages requiring notice to the carrier to fix liability therefor. CASES 1887-1908

(a) Tex. act March 4, 1891, making it unlawful to make any contract limiting the period in which suit may be brought to less than two years, and prescribing that no period of less than ninety days shall be required in which to give notice of damages, is not void as an interference with interstate commerce, although it may affect contracts for interstate shipments. Armstrong v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 5 I. C. R. 247.

(b) The prohibition of Tex. act March 4, 1891, against entering into a contract limiting the time in which to sue to a shorter period than two years, is binding in interstate as well as domestic shipments, as it is not an attempt to regulate interstate commerce. Reeves v. Texas & P. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 5 I. C. R. 639.

(c) A state statute providing that no provision in a contract limiting the time within which to sue to less than two years shall be valid, and that no stipulation in any contract requiring notice to be given of any claim for damages as a condition precedent to the right to sue thereon shall be valid unless the stipulation is reasonable, is not an interference with interstate commerce. The court says these statutes should be treated as in the nature of statutes of limitation. If treated as statutes of limitation they simply affect the remedy, and do not attempt to affect the rights of the parties or to control or regulate in any manner interstate commerce. It is in the undoubted power of the state to pass laws prescribing periods of limitation in which remedies may be enforced, within a certain time and to declare that limitation shall not affect contracts that are made and entered into with its jurisdiction or sought to be enforced there. Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Eddins, 7 I. C. C. app. VIII.

(d) Texas act of March 4, 1891, providing that any stipulation in a contract limiting time for suit to less than two years, or which fixes the period within which the notice of damages as a condition precedent to the right to sue at less than ninety days shall be void, and providing that if any such notice is required the same may be given to the nearest or any other convenient local agent of the company requiring the same,—applies to interstate shipments. Mo., Kans. & Tex. R. R. Co. v. Withers, 7 I. C. C. App. LXI.

(e) A state may, in the absence of any action by Congress, provide that no carrier shall limit the time for bringing suit for breach of the carriage contract, or for giving notice of loss, to less than that stated in the statute, although the contract to which it applies is for one of interstate carriage. The court followed Solan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 95 Iowa, 260, 28 L. R. A. 718, which held that such regulations were not in themselves regulations of interstate commerce, although they control in some degree the conduct and the liability of those engaged in such commerce. So long as Congress has not legislated upon the particular subject they are rather to be regarded as legislation in aid of such commerce, and as a rightful exercise of the police power of the State to regulate the relative rights and duties of all persons and corporations within its limits. And overruled the decision of the Texas court of civil appeals to the effect that a through shipment to a point beyond the State is an interstate shipment, to which the State statute authorizing restrictions on carrier's liability does not apply, although the terminus of the initial carrier is within the State, and the contract restricts its liability, except to guarantee the freight rate to its own line. Armstrong v. Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Ry. Co., 8 I. C. C. app. I.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(f) The Cummins Amendment of March 4, 1915, to the Interstate Commerce Act, providing as to carriers subject thereto, among other things, that no shorter period than two years shall be allowed for the institution of suit on claims, which period is to be computed from the disallowance of the claim under Transportation Act Feb. 28, 1920, § 438 is inapplicable to a common carrier by water, whose carriage is unconnected with carriage by land; both the Interstate Commerce Act, § 1, and the Cummins Amendment being limited to carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad, or partly by railroad and partly by water, when both are used under a common control, management, or a continuous carriage or shipment. South & Central American Commercial Co. Inc. v. Panama R. Co. (New York, 1923) 142 N. E. 666.

(g) The Transportation Act, Section 206 (a), which provides that actions based on causes arising out of federal possession of railroads under Federal Control Act or of the Act of Aug. 29, 1916, may, after the termination of federal control, be brought against an agent designated by the President, and such actions may, within the periods of limitation prescribed by state or federal statutes, but not later than two years from the date of the passage of this act, be brought in any court which, but for federal control, would have jurisdiction of the action had it arisen against the carrier, did not extend the time, as state or federal laws were to govern if they did not extend the time of bringing actions beyond two years from the passage of the act, and, if they did, then the act limited them to two years from its passage. Northern Milling Co. v. Davis (Wisc. 1922), 190 N. W. 351.

(h) In view of the Cummins Amendment to the Carmack Amendment providing that it shall be unlawful for a carrier to provide a shorter period for the institution of suits against it than two years, limitations in bills of lading that suits shall be brought against the carrier within two years are valid. Northern Milling Co. v. Davis, (Wisc, 1922), 190 N. W. 351.

(i) The expression "periods of limitation," in the Transportation Act, providing that the period of federal control shall not be computed as part of the periods of limitation, applies to limitations fixed by federal or state statute, in view of section 206a, expressly providing that causes of action arising out of federal control may be brought within the periods of limitation prescribed by state or federal statutes, and of section 438, amending the provision relating to contract periods of limitation, but making no reference to the exclusion of the periods of federal control. New York Central R. Co. v. Lazarus, 278 Fed. 900.

(j) The provision of the Transportation Act Feb. 28, 1920, sec. 206a, permitting actions against the federal Agent to be brought within the periods of limitation then prescribed by state or federal statutes, but no later than two years from the date of passage of the act, was intended to limit, not to extend, rights of action, and does not invalidate existing contracts limiting the period within which an action must be brought which were valid when they were made. Ellis v. Davis, 43 Sup. Ct. 243.

§13⅝. Waiver of provisions.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where a live stock shipping contract for an interstate shipment at reduced rate provided that failure to give notice of loss within 10 days after unloading should be a waiver of the same, and the contract or bill of lading had been duly filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, a connecting carrier is not authorized, in view of the Act to regulate commerce and the Carmack Amendment of the Hepburn Act, to waive the requirement, which was for the benefit of all carriers, by receiving oral complaints, for that would open opportunities to discriminations prohibited by the statutes; it appearing that the initial carrier was prepared at a higher rate to transport the animals without such requirement. Olson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. R., 250 Fed. 372.

(b) "A bill of lading," said the Supreme court in Pollard v. Vinton, 105 U. S. 7, 8 (26 L. Ed. 998) "is an instrument well known in commercial transactions, and its character and effect have been defined by judicial decisions. In the hands of the holder it is evidence of ownership, special or general, of the property mentioned in it, and of the right to receive said property at the place of delivery. * * * It is an instrument of a twofold character. It is at once a receipt and a contract." It is at material whether the property for which such an instrument is issued is to be carried by rail or water. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Knight, 122 U. S. 79, 7 Sup. Ct. 1132, 30 L. Ed. 1077; Friedlander v. Texas, etc., R. Co. 130 U. S. 426, 9 Sup. Ct. 570, 32 L. Ed. 991. And where such an instrument was, as here, issued by the initial carrier of an interestate shipment it was distinctly adjudged by the Supreme Court in the recent case of Georgia, Florida & Alabama R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., 241 U. S. 190, 36 Sup. Ct. 541, 60 L. Ed. 948, such bill of lading governs the entire transportation and fixes not only the obligations of all participating carriers, but also the rights and obligations of all parties to the contract, none of whom can ignore or waive its terms—the construction of which contract and the determination of all rights and obligations arising thereunder being a federal question. New York Cent. R.

Co. v. Mutual Orange Distributors, 251 Fed. 230 234.

(c) The effect of a stipulation in a bill of lading for an interstate shipment requiring claims for damages or misdelivery to be presented within four months after a reasonable time for delivery has elapsed, cannot be avoided by suing the carrier in trover on the theory that in making the misdelivery it converted the shipment, and thus abandoned the contract, since the parties can not waive the terms of the contract under which the shipment was made pursuant to the Interstate Commerce Act. Nor could the carrier by its conduct give the shipper the right to ignore the terms and hold the carrier to a different responsibility from that fixed by the agreement made under the published tariffs and regulations. Georgia S. & A. Railroad v. Blish Milling Company, 36 Supreme Court, 541 241 U. S. 190, 60 L. ed. 948.

(d) Under the Cummins Amendment Act, the uniform express receipt, conforming in its provisions to the terms of the amendment and filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, is binding upon the parties and is not the subject of waiver; and, in accordance with its provisions, in the event of a loss in transit, as distinguished from injury in loading or unloading or damage in transit, the giving of notice of claims as specified therein is a condition precedent to the right of recovery from the carrier. Henningsen Produce Co. v. Amer Ry. Express Co. (Minn, 1922), 188 N. W. 272.

III. EVIDENCE.

§13¾. In general.

See Evidence.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Evidence of the value of an entire lot of cotton, while not sufficient to prove the value of a portion of it, in the absence of facts showing the average weight, value, and quality, is admissible as tending to show such value. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sherwood (Tex.), 4 I. C. R. 240.

(b) A written notification to the consignor, by a carrier's freight claim agent of the destruction of property received for transportation, is not admissible against the carrier to prove the loss of the property, until it is shown to have been made in discharge of the agent's duties or within the scope of his powers and while the obligation of the carrier with reference to the property yet continued. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sherwood (Tex.), 4 I. C. R. 240.

(c) Evidence of the value of an entire lot of cotton, while not sufficient to prove the value of a portion of it, in the absence of facts showing the average weight, value, and quality, is admissible as tending to show such value. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Sherwood Thompson & Co. 4 I. C. R. 240.

(d) That a witness did not see the fire will not preclude his testifying that it consumed certain property where he states that he knows of his own knowledge that it did so. To exclude the evidence it must appear that his knowledge was founded so entirely on hearsay as to be inadmissible. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Sherwood Thompson & Co., 4 I. C. R. 240.

(e) Parol testimony is not admissible to impeach the validity of an act which by the record is shown to have been duly and legally passed. Ames v. Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 835.

(f) One who has been educated as a veterinarian may give an opinion on subjects coming within the scope of his profession; but one who has not been so educated cannot give an opinion on any such matter requiring science or skill to determine, although he has frequently seen the treatment of diseases by veterinarians and has read extensively from books and papers treating diseases of stock. Rouse v. Youard (Kan. App), 5 I. C. R. 315.

(g) The original waybill is admissible in evidence in a suit against a connecting carrier for refusal to deliver the goods on tender of the charges agreed on in the bill, where other evidence has been given to show that the carrier had paid accrued charges amounting to as much as the sum specified, as tending to show that it did not intend to ratify that contract. Dwyer v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. (Tex.) 5 I. C. R. 361.

(h) Evidence of the price actually received for certain horses at the place of destination by plaintiff in an action for damages to horses by negligence in shipment is admissible to corroborate the correctness of his estimate of the market value of the horses, to which he has testified. Reeves v. Texas & Pacific R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 639.

(i) In a suit for damages against the initial carrier under the Carmack Amendment for damages or delay by the connecting carrier, a letter to the connecting carrier from the plaintiff settting out its claims is admissible, especially where the bill of lading requires and provides that the claim must be made in writing to the carrier at the point of delivery or at the point of origin. Baltimore C. & A. Ry. Co. v. Sperber & Co. (Md., 1913), 84 A. 72, 74.

(j) Where the question of determining the correct legal rate applicable on a shipment has been submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Commission decides the rate legally applicable under the tariffs, the matter is res adjudicata and conclusive on that question in a suit in a state court to recover for conversion of the property arising by refusal of the carrier to deliver the shipment except upon payment of a higher sum. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. v. Porter (Tex., 1913), 156 S. W. 267, 275.

(k) Rate schedules of an interstate carrier on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission are admissible in evidence in an action against it to recover damages for delay in the delivery of an interstate shipment on the issue of the validity and effect of a provision in the bill of lading by which the carrier undertook to limit its liability to a specified sum. Southern Exp. Co. v. Byers, 36 Sup. Ct. 410, 411; 240 U. S. 612, 60 L. ed. 825.

§14. Acts of connecting carrier.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Inasmuch as the initial carrier is liable under the Carmack amendment for injuries caused to cattle by its connecting carriers, evidence of injuries done them by such carriers is admissible to prove the extent of such liability. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. v. Crews (Tex., 1911), 139 S. W. 1049, 1051.

§15. Burden of proof.

See Evidence I; Burden of Proof.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The fact that a plaintiff rests his case on a common-law liability will not deprive defendant of the right to remove it, if he bases his defense on an Act of Congress. Lowry v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 435.

(b) The burden is upon a common carrier seeking to avoid liability for loss of an interstate shipment occasioned by fire, under a provision of the contract relieving it from liability for loss from fire, if not caused by its own negligence, to show that the fire was not due to its negligence. Tex. & Pacific Ry. Co. v. Payne, 7 I. C. C. App. LXIII.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Where a carrier relies on a special contract limiting its liability or showing nonliability the burden is on it to show a valid contract, and to establish the reasonableness of the provisions upon which it relies. If there is no valid contract, such defense is not available. St. Louis, etc., Co. v. Alexander, Ann. Cas. 1915-B, notes, P. 86. Toledo, St. L. & W. R. Co. v. Milner (Ind., 1915), 110 N. E. 759.

(d) The provision of the Carmack Amendment that the initial carrier shall be liable for loss, damage or injury to property on the line of a connecting carrier, but that nothing therein should deprive the holder of a receipt or bill of lading of any remedy or right of action which he has under existing law, was not intended to change the common law liability of the carrier, but to affirm it, and to sustain his cause it is therefore sufficient for plaintiff to show delivery of fruit to defendant initial carrier in good condition, and receipt by the consignee in bad condition, for at common law, that is a showing of damage caused by the carrier prima facie, and it is for the latter to relieve itself by evidence of any lawful excuse. Collins v. D. & R. G. Ry. Co. (Mo. App., 1914), 167 S. W. 1178.

(e) It does not follow in every case that, where tariffs have been filed with the Commission, the contracts to which such tariffs are applied have been approved by the Commission. The burden is upon the carrier to establish the validity of its bill of lading. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. A. J. Steele & Son (Virginia, 1915), 86 S. E., 124, 127.

(f) The Carmack Amendment, declaring that the initial carrier shall be liable to the lawful holder of the bill of lading or receipt for any loss, damage, or injury caused by it or by any connecting carrier, does not impose upon the shipper the burden of establishing, in a suit against the initial carrier, that the loss was in fact caused by the initial or connecting carrier, but merely extends the common-law liability of the initial carrier to all losses, whether occurring on its line or that of a connecting carrier. Chicago, & E. I. R. Co. v. Collins Produce Co., 235 Fed. 857.

(g) Under the Carmack amendment, when the holders of the bills of lading prove the goods have not been delivered to the consignee, the presumption arises that they have been lost by reason of the neglect of the carrier or its agents, and the burden of proof that the loss resulted from some other cause for which the initial carrier is not responsible in law or by contract is then cast upon the carrier. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wallace, 223 U. S. 481, 492, 32 Sup. Ct. 205, 56 L. ed. 516.

(h) Under the Carmack Amendment, in an action against initial carrier for loss of poultry occurring on a connecting line, the burden of proof is not on the shipper to show that loss was "caused by" the connecting line, and not the military authorities in a flood district under martial law, which confiscated the poultry for benefit of sufferers. Chicago & E. I. R. R. v. Collins Produce Co., 39 Sup. Ct. 189.

S. P. Co. v. Crenshaw, 5 Ga. App. 675, 680, 63 S. E. 865.

(b) Carriers should bring their tariffs into conformity with the fourth section of the law without suggestion from the Commission as to details. Re tariffs of the Columbus & Western Ry. 2 I. C. C. 11.

(c) During the period between May 29 and August 1, 1894, when greatly reduced rates were charged by defendants to Knoxville, Tennessee, dealers at Lynchburg, Virginia, an intermediate locality, were entitled to rates over the defendant lines from New York Providence and Boston not greater than those accepted at the same time on like traffic over said lines to Knoxville, and the excess paid for transportation by the intervening Lynchburg dealers over contemporaneous rates to Knoxville was unlawfully collected. CASES 1887-1908

(a) An amendment to a declaration charging a common-law or implied contract obligation to repay money obtained by wrongful overcharges states a new cause of action within the rule as to the statute of limitations, where the original counts sought to recover treble damages as a statutory penalty. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Jones (Ill.), 4 I. C. R. 683.

(b) A railroad company which has an arrangement with another company by which it is enabled to forward all matter intrusted to it for transportation to a designated place, which it adopts as a station on its line, is estopped to deny its possession of property intrusted to it at such place for shipment. Landa v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. (Mo.), 5 I. C. R. 254.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Present tariff rule cannot bar consignees from suing for and upon due proof obtaining compensation for loss or damage caused by carrier's negligence even though undisclosed by external evidence. New York Mercantile Exchange v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 36 I. C. C. 156, 160.

(d) It is elementary that an undisclosed principal of a nominal agent can maintain an action at law against a carrier for damages to a shipment in transit. Oden & Elliott v. S. A. L. Ry., 37 I. C. C. 345, 348.

(e) In an action against a common carrier of livestock for damages to a shipment, where, nearly three years after the shipment, and in a second trial, defendant tendered the plea that notice of the loss was not presented within the time required by the contract of shipment, the disallowance of such amendment by the court was proper, defendant having waived the provision of the contract of shipment in view of the lapse of time, the preceding trial, and cost to plaintiff; the fact affording no reason for inflicting a hardship upon plaintiff that defendant had been kept from filing such plea before because the United States Supreme Court had not decided that the Carmack Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act superseded state laws governing a carrier's liability for damage to interstate shipments. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. v. Smith & Johnson (Ky., 1915), 176 S. W. 1013.

(f) The term "lawful holder" of the bill of lading as used in the Carmack Amendment, making the initial carrier liable for loss or damage occurring on the line of the connecting carrier to such holder, comprehends the owner of the property transported or the one beneficially entitled to recover for the loss or injury, and manual possession of the bill of lading is not prerequisite to the right to suit. IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) While the carrier's liability for losses must be determined, not by the Commission, but by the courts, yet to insure uniformity and to avoid unjust discrimination rules or practices concerning liability for loss or damage should be shown in the tariffs lawfully filed by carriers engaged in interstate transportation. IV. CRIMINAL LIABILITY.

§19. In general.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where it was asserted that a claim against a railroad company was fraudulent and that the pressing of the claim was a violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce, §10, par. 3, as amended, the acts and sayings of one prosecuting or pressing the claim are generally admissible on the question of intent, and he may also testify as to his intention. Laser Grain Co. v. United States 250 Fed. 826.

(b) Released rates and rates based on declared values limit the liability of carriers for loss, damage, or injury to property transported. If carriers could lawfully base rates upon declared values, the value declared would be a part of the description of the commodity and the shipper who, by undervaluing, secured a lower rate than he was entitled to would be guilty of violating section 10 of the act, and by claiming full value in case of loss or damage, would subject himself to prosecution. LOTTERY TICKETS

(a) A ticket in a lottery authorized at the place of issue is not within the protection of the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution,—especially in view of the legislation of Congress touching lotteries; and an agreement between the holders of different tickets to share the price that the ticket of any member might draw is to be tested by the law of the state in which the agreement is made, and not by the laws of the state where the lottery is located. Roselle v. McAuliffe, 7 I. C. C. App. XI.

(b) A ticket in a lottery authorized at the place of issue is not within the protection of the interstate commerce clause of the United States Constitution. The court says: The people of the State of Missouri have the inherent, sole, and exclusive right to regulate the internal government and police thereof subject to the paramount force of the Federal laws. The Federal laws do not sanction the agreement here in question or add anything towards improving its legal quality as determined by the local law. A ticket in a lottery authorized at the place of issue cannot certainly be regarded as within the protection of the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution; certainly not in view of the legislation of Congress touching lotteries. Roselle v. Farmers' Bank of Norborne (McAuliffe Inte), 7 I. C. C. App. Page c.

(c) A ticket in a lottery authorized at the place of issue is not within the protection of the interstate commerce clause of the United States Constitution. The court says: "The people of the State of Missouri 'have the inherent, sole, and exclusive right to regulate the internal government and police thereof' subject to the paramount force of the Federal laws. . . . The Federal laws do not sanction the agreement here in question, or add anything toward improving its legal quality as determined by the local law. A ticket in a lottery, authorized at the place of issue, cannot certainly be regarded as within the protection of the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution; certainly not in view of the legislation of Congress touching lotteries." Roselle v. Farmers' Bank of Norborne, McAuliffe, 8 I. C. C. App. LXXV.

MAILS

(a) Failure of a railroad company to run any other trains than their regular passenger trains for carrying the mail is not a violation of law; but failure or refusal to carry mails on regular passenger trains, whether local or through trains, upon which they are required to carry mails, is unlawful. Re Charge to Grand Jury (No. 1) (D. C. S. D. Cal.), 4 I. C. R. 777.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(aa) The total compensation paid for transportation of mail is made up of a multitude of separate payments and services, differing fundamentally in nature, cost, and value, performed in varying degree by different lines, the relation of which to the total is subject to constant change, and which, taken as a whole, is constantly on the increase. Railway Mail Pay, 56 I. C. C. 1, 15, 16.

(b) The Post Office Department should be charged with whatever the service necessarily requires in the operation of trains and cars, but beyond this limitation any charges of space may not, with propriety, be made against the mail service. Railway Mail Pay, 56 I. C. C. 35, 38.

(c) The carriers have claimed that railroads may be required to transport mail for the Government at rates lower than the Commission would be justified in prescribing under ordinary circumstances and conditions. The Commission held, there is nothing to warrant it in requiring any railroad transporting the mails to perform the service at less than fair and reasonable compensation. Railway Mail Pay, 56 I. C. C. 1, 46, 47.

(d) It is essential to the social and commercial life of the nation that the mails be handled promptly and transported rapidly, and to insure this it is necessary that control of transportation of the mails be lodged with the Postmaster General. Railway-Mail Pay, 56 I. C. C 1, 68.

(e) It is in the interest of the government to have the compensation for transportation of the mails fixed on a basis that will enable the Post Office Department to so supervise the service as will insure a wise and judicious expenditure of the public money, and at the same time encourage the use of railroad facilitie so as to minimize economic waste. Railway-Mail Pay, 56 I. C. C. 1, 68.

(f) There is every reason from an economic stand point why the railroads should continue to perform side, terminals, and transfer service. It is a most important service to the public. The people have to pay for it in the end. The arrangement that will result in the least expenditure of the public money, and at the same time do justice to the railroads, should be adopted. Railway-Mail Pay, 56 I. C. C. 1, 70.

(g) The mail business of electric railroads generally is unimportant. The manner of transportation and the manner in which the mails are tendered to the carriers present the main difficulties encountered in the past. Extreme cases may not, with propriety, be used as the basis for payment generally. It is on the general average conditions that the general bases and rates must be established. Electric Railway Mail Pay 58 I. C. C. 455, 476.

(h) The contention of the department that because of the public nature of the mails and the public character of the carriers lower than fair and reasonable rates may properly be prescribed for the electric lines, is not upheld by the Commission, as although they should have due consideration, they do not justify the Commission in prescribing unreasonably low rates for such service. Electric Railway Mail Pay 58 I. C. C. 455, 476.

MARINE INSURANCE

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Joint tariffs limited liability for marine risk on shipments moving rail and water. Subsequently tariffs amended to include marine insurance in the rate for full value, the same as provided on shipments moving all rail. HELD: Subsequent amendment amounted in effect to a voluntary reduction in the rate by amount of insurance premiums, but such voluntary reduction is not of itself sufficient ground for a finding that the rate previously in effect was unreasonable. MEXICO

See Adjacent Foreign Country.

(a) The "circumstances and conditions" touching the transportation of passengers and freight to and from the Republic of Mexico through El Paso, Texas, by the Texas & Pacific R. Co. are (within the meaning of section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act) so substantially different from those surrounding transportation to other points on said railway as to justify said Company in establishing lower rates at El Paso on freights transported for export into and received from Mexico and for delivery at El Paso than is charged at points between that city and the points where the freights originate and where the distance and haul are shorter. Re Petition of the Receivers of the Texas and Pacific R. Co. 1, I. C. R. 30.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) The Commission has no authority to establish a rate of transportation in Mexico; nor to order the maintenance of a rate for the future from a point in the United States to a point in Mexico; but it may require the American carriers to cease and desist from continuing to apply a joint through rate, or any rule, regulation, or practice in connection with that joint through rate, and it may, where such rate has been voluntarily maintained, inquire whether it has been reasonable, and if found unreasonable, award damages in that behalf. International Nickel Co. v. Director General 66 I. C. C. 627, 629.

(c) Complainant attacked charges assessed on coke, carloads, shipped from Gardner and Koehler, N. M., and Segundo, Colo., to Cananea, Mexico, between June 25 and July 24, 1918, as inapplicable, unjust and unreasonable. Shipments moved to Naco, Ariz., 654, 658 and 688 miles, beyond Naco they were hauled 20 miles within Mexico via the S. P. Complainant relies upon its contention that the rates attacked were unlawful to establish their unreasonableness. These rates were initiated by the president, acting through the Director General, in conformity with the federal control act and the act to regulate commerce. They were lawfully established under the act which is administed by the Commission and it is without jurisdiction to determine whether they were or were not lawfully established under the laws of Mexico. HELD, rates charged not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Greene Cananea Copper Co. v. Director General, 80 I. C. C. 121.

(d) Contention that rates from points in United States to point in Mexico, increased under General Order No. 28 of general director, were unlawful since laws of Mexico require publication of increased rates for 30 days before becoming effective, not sustained. Rates assailed were lawfully established under acts administered by commission, which is without jurisdiction to determine whether or not they were lawfully established under laws of Mexico. Greene Cananea Copper Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C., 121.

(e) The authority of the Commission to award reparation is questioned because part of the transportation took place in Mexico. The rates attacked are joint rates and all carriers parties to such rates are jointly and severally liable for any damage resulting from their application. United States Graphite Co. v. Director General, 88 I. C. C. 157, 159.

(f) The Commission has no authority to establish a rate of transportation in Mexico; nor to order the maintenance of a rate for the future from a point in the United states to a point in Mexico; but it may require the American carriers to cease and desist from continuing to apply a joint through rate, or any rule, regulation, or practice in connection with that joint through rate, and it may, where such rate has been voluntarily maintained, inquire whether it has been reasonable, and if found unreasonable, award damages in that behalf. American Splint Corporation v. C. P. Ry., 88 I. C. C. 221.

(g) As the purpose of the original Interstate Commerce Act of 1887 was merely to regulate commerce between the several states and compel interstate carriers to make their charges reasonable, section 22, preserving the existing remedies at common law, and as prior to the Carmack Amendment of 1906 to section 20, prescribing a rule of liability in case of interstate shipments, the carriers' liability for such a shipment was either that of the general common law or that determined by the public policy of the particular state, the Interstate Commerce Act prior to the Cummins Amendment, which extended its scope to foreign shipments, did not apply to a shipment from Mexico to Texas. Mexico Northwestern Ry. Co. v. Williams (Tex. 1921), 229 S. W. 476.

MINIMUM RATES

See Classification §15. Interstate Commerce Commission §10¼.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(ab) Once a minimum rate is fixed on traffic between two points the ability of carriers in the exercise of judgment in management to stimulate such traffic by reductions in rates is limited and curtailed. No doubt the power to fix such minimum rates can in some situations be employed to advantage and with propriety, for the purpose of averting rate wars, which are always injurious to the carriers and ordinarily, in the long run, to the public interest, or for the purpose of preventing an unjust burden upon other forms of traffic or upon other parts of the country. This power should be sparingly exercised and only in cases where it clearly appears that its exercise is necessary in order that substantial public injury may be avoided. Sugar cases of 1922. 81 I. C. C. 448, 472.

(b) Power to fix minimum rates on traffic between two points can in some situations be employed to advantage and with propriety, for purpose of averting rate wars, which are always injurious to carriers and ordinarily, in long run, to the public interest, or for purpose of preventing unjust burden upon other forms of traffic or upon other parts of the country. This power should, however, be sparingly exercised and only in cases where it clearly appears that its exercise is necessary in order that substantial public injury may be avoided. Sugar Cases of 1922 81 I. C. C., 448, 472.

(c) Desire of competitive manufacturing points to be each accorded its "fair share" of business in common destination territory does not, standing alone, justify exercise of commission's power to fix minimum rates. Sugar Cases of 1922, 81 I. C. C. 448, 472.

I. APPLICATION OF MINIMUM.

§1. In General.

See Application of Rates.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Where three connecting roads publish a joint tariff under which they hold themselves out to the public as prepared to transport commodities in carload lots of a certain minimum magnitude at a certain specified rate, such carriers are by their tariff allowed to charge no more than the rate upon such carload, no matter what equipment they may provide for its transportation, except as the tariff in specific terms provides certain minimum weights for carloads in cars of certain lengths or capacity. Pacific Purchasing Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 549.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Where different minima exist on a commodity in different states, the Commission cannot undertake to fit the interstate minimum to each. To do so would result in state regulation of interstate commerce. 1915 Western Rate Advance Case, 35 I. C. C. 497, 576.

(c) Within reasonable limits it is proper for the carriers themselves to provide the minimum weights to meet economic and commercial conditions, but the Commission does not believe that it should be required of them except under very unusual circumstances. Efforts and progress made by carriers toward greater economy and efficiency in operation by the employment of more modern facilities of transportation should not be discouraged or retarded by the failure of the shippers facilities to keep pace with the carriers. Natchez Chamber of Commerce v. L. & A. 58 I. C. C. 610, 631.

(d) It is the duty of the carriers to publish regulations protecting the minimum applicable in connection with the car ordered, subject to reasonable provisions for the protection of the carriers equipment. Minimum weight on grain based on capacity of car ordered. 60 I. C. C. 318, 320.

(e) The desirability of uniform minima under appropriate conditions should not be overlooked, but in the absence of any showing to the contrary, it must be assumed that the higher minimum is reasonably intended to comport with the loading capacity of the car. Cairo Association of Commerce v. Director General, 52 I. C. C. 701, 703.

(f) A contention that the phrase in a tariff "highest rate and minimum weight" means the highest rate and highest minimum weight, sustained. Minimum Weight on Live Stock in Mixed Carloads, 64 I. C. C. 546.

(g) In establishing a minimum for the transportation of a light and bulky article it is the aim to name a weight which can be loaded under ordinary circumstances. Bernard Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 557, 560.

(h) A carload minimum weight reasonably adapted to the traffic generally should not be increased merely because one shipper, on account of conditions peculiar to himself, is able to load in excess of the existing minimum thereof. Bernard Coal Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 559, 560.

(i) As a practical matter, a car can not be loaded with tank or silo material merely for the purpose of filling it. Only so much of the material can be loaded as is required for the fabrication of the tanks or silos making up the shipment. International Lime Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 424.

§2. Tariffs and Publication.

(a) Circulars issued by a railway company prescribed maximum and minimum carload weights for grain depending upon the capacity of the car furnished by the railway company to the shipper; the rules so prescribed were not shown upon the carrier's posted schedules of rates and charges; and application of the rules to three carload shipments of corn carried for complainant resulted in materially increasing the charges above those in force under the carrier's published rate schedules. HELD, That complainant only had to consult the schedule showing defendant's rate and charges, and that complainant is entitled to recover charges collected on its shipments in excess of those set forth in such schedule. Suffern, Hunt & Co. v. Indiana, D. & W. A. Co., 7 I. C. C. 255.

(b) The law requires that the minimum weight rule or regulation itself shall be stated on the tariff or schedule of rates, if it is to be made effective, and that changes in such minimum weight, thereby advancing or reducing the charge shall be shown by printing new schedules or plainly indicating such changes upon the existing rate schedule. Where slight changes are made in an existing schedule showing numerous rates, the printing of a supplement or amendment to the schedule showing such changes has been regarded as substantial compliance with the statute, but the Commission has called attention to the uncertainty and confusion caused by the issuance of a considerable number of supplements or amendments to a rate sheet, and have pointed out that such practice is not in conformity with the law. Suffern Hunt & Co. v. I. D. & W. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 255, 278.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) On sacks of Portland cement weighing 38,000 lbs. from Chanute, Kan., to Denison, Ia., a joint rate of 10c to Council Bluffs and a local rate of 4.9c thence to destination were collected, no through rate being in effect. Defendant initial carrier's tariff failed to provide a carload minimum for the 10c rate to Council Bluffs. The delivering carrier established, by a tariff published subsequently to that of the initial line fixing the 10c rate, a minimum of 40,000 lbs. HELD, the 10c rate to Council Bluffs should be assessed on the actual weight of shipment. When a car is demanded and loaded by the shipper and is tendered and otherwise delivered as a carload, and no minimum carload weight is legally provided, the carload rate, if it makes less than the less-than-carload rate, must be applied on the actual weight, whether the actual weight of shipment be more or less than an ordinary carload quantity. Sunderland Bros. Co. v. M. & T. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 425, 426.

§3. Furnishing Car of Minimum Ordered

See Cars And Car Supply §8.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where neither the bill of lading nor the waybill bears any notation indicating that a car of a particular size was ordered by the shipper, and neither the complainant nor any other witness states definitely that the order given for the shipment required the defendant carrier to furnish a car of small capacity, and where no other evidence that such equipment was made is offered, reparation will not be granted for charges assessed on the minimum of a larger car than the one complainant alleges he ordered. Wheeler Lumber, Bridge & Supply Co. v. S. P. Co., 16 I. C. C. 547, 548.

(b) While a long course of dealing between the shipper and the carrier, involving daily or frequent shipments of automobiles from a definite station, might so familiarize the carrier's agents at that point with the requirements of the shipper in the way of equipment as to justify a holding that an order for a car for three automobiles was sufficient to charge the carrier with notice that a thiry-six foot car was wanted, such a relationship between shipper and carrier must be clearly made out before reparation can be awarded on that basis for the exaction by the carrier of the minimum for a larger car than the one alleged to be ordered. Pope Mfg. Co. v, B. & O. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 400, 403.

(c) Where a carrier by its tariffs establishes particular minima, as applicable to cars of given dimensions, it must furnish a car of the size provided for in its tariff and ordered by the shipper; or, in case of its inability to do this, it must provide other equipment under such conditions as to fairly protect the minimum of the car ordered, and its tariffs should contain a provision to that effect. Noble v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 432, 438.

(d) When the carrier, for its own convenience, furnishes a car of different character from one ordered for transportation of fir lath or other produce of like nature, car so furnished may be used on basis of minimum weight applicable to car ordered, or on basis of actual weight of shipment if greater than such minimum. Atlas Lumber & Shingle Co. v. N. P. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 313, 314.

(e) The Commission has consistently held that "where a carrier by its tariffs specifies a certain minimum for a car of a certain size, it thereby tenders to the public that rate of transportation;" and that where for its own convenience it tenders a car of different capacity from that ordered by the shipper the carrier must protect the minimum applicable to the car ordered. Feltus Lumber Co. v. G. N. Ry., 51 I. C. C. 571, 575.

§4. Larger car furnished than ordered.
See Cars and Car Supply §8.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where a shipper orders a car of specified length and the carrier supplies one of larger dimensions, the shipper is entitled to charges assessed on the actual weight of the shipment where the weight exceeds the minimum of the kind of car ordered, but is less than that of the one furnished, despite the fact that at the time of the shipment the carrier had no published rule to that effect where the shipment actually moved could have been loaded into the car ordered. Reparation awarded on shipment of cedar posts from Hines, Minn., to Benton, Neb., where the shipper ordered a thirty-three-foot car, was furnished a thirty-four-foot car and assessed on the thirty-four-foot car minimum. Kaye & Carter Lumber Co. v. M. & I. Ry. Co., 17 I. C. C. 209, 211.

(b) Where a carrier by its tariffs specifies a certain minimum for a car of a certain size it thereby tenders to the public that rate of transportation; and that where for its own convenience it tenders a car of different capacity from that ordered by the shipper the carrier must protect the minimum applicable to the car ordered. §5. Minimum higher than car capacity.

(a) It would be manifestly unjust under any rule as to minimum loads or otherwise, to charge for weight not carried in a car which the carrier has furnished and in which on account of its size and the nature and bulk of the freight the required minimum quantity can not be loaded. Suffern Hunt & Co. v. I. D. & W. R. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 255, 282.

(b) It would manifestly be unjust, under any rule as to minimum loads or otherwise, to charge for weight not carried in a car which the carrier has furnished and in which on account of its size and the nature and bulk of the freight the required minimum can not be loaded. National Hay Asso. v. L. S. & M. S. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 264, 305.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) If cars will not carry the minimum prescribed a provision should be inserted in tariffs to the effect that the capacity of the car shall govern. Milk and Cream Investigation, 43 I. C. C. 375, 377.

(d) Ordinarily carload minimum weights should be established with reference to the loading capacity of the car; and if carriers desire to protect themselves from unrenumerative charges per car they should do so by regulating the rate and not by prescribing minimum weights which manifestly can not be loaded. Dallas Cooperage & W. Co. v. G. C. & S. F. Ry., 45 I. C. C. 468, 469.

(e) Admitting that it was impossible to load the minimum in a few of the cars used, it does not necessarily follow that the minimum was unreasonable. The test is,what can ordinarily be done? Briggs & Turvias v. Director General, 61 I. C. C. 363, 364.

(ea) Tariff rules providing for charges on mixed carloads of live stock at the highest rate and highest minimum applicable to any of the stock in straight carloads, found unreasonable. Mixed shipments will not ordinarily load to the minimum weights as determined by the present rules, and an undue burden is placed upon the small live-stock shippers who have not sufficient tonnage of each kind of stock to ship in straight carloads. Rule providing for charges based on the rate and minimum for that kind of stock which on a straight c. l. basis produces the highest charges prescribed. National Live Stock Exchange v. A. A. R. R. Co., 69 I. C. C. 125, 131, 137.

(f) It is unreasonable to base transportation charges on minimum weights in excess of the cars' capacity. Arizona Copper Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 287, 288.

(g) Charges on hay, based upon applicable minimum which, could not be loaded in cars furnished, found not unreasonable as compared with lower charges subsequently established as an emergency measure and based upon cubic capacity of cars. While the practice of securing revenue through a minimum higher than the capacity of cars furnished should be condemned, where abnormally low per car charges resulted from emergency rates established as a temporary relief measure a shipper has no well-founded claim because he could not load to the prescribed minimum. Devereaux Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 289.

(h) The practice of securing revenue through a minimum higher than the capacity of cars furnished should be condemned, but where abnormally low per car charges resulted from emergency rates established as a temporary relief measure, a shipper has no well-founded claim because he could not load to the prescribed minimum. Devereaux Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 289, 290, 291.

(i) Charges on certain shipments of cotton twine and cotton factory sweepings from Uniontown, Ala., to Pacsteel, Calif., assessed on basis of minimum weights of cars furnished, found unreasonable to extent they exceeded charges on basis of actual weight, cars having been of lesser capacity than those ordered by shipper were furnished by carrier for its own convenience, into which minimum prescribed could not be loaded. Reparation awarded and carriers ordered to provide "carriers' convenience" rules. California Cotton Mills Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 74 I. C. C. 747.

(j) While minima should be high enough to insure a proper utilization of equipment, they should not exceed what can be reasonably and generally loaded. Minimum weights on coal tar paving cement. 81 I. C. C. 762, 763.

(k) If carriers desire to protect themselves from unduly low charges per car they should not do so by prescribing arbitrary minimum weights which can not be loaded in the ordinary equipment available, and it is unreasonable to base charges on a minimum to which cars are incapable of being loaded. Minimum weights on furniture 83 I. C. C. 64, 67.

(l) Carriers should not attempt to protect themselves from unduly low charges per car by prescribing arbitrary minimum weights which can not be loaded in ordinary equipment available, and it is unreasonable to base charges on such weights. Riverside Mills, 25 I. C. C. 434; Durham Coal & Iron Co., 34 I. C. C. 10. Minimum Weights on Furniture, 83 I. C. C. 64, 67.

(m) A c. l. minimum for light articles such as furniture should be no higher than can ordinarily be loaded. Montague & Co., 17 I. C. C. 72; Minimum Weights on Furniture, 83 I. C. C. 64, 67.

§6. Mixed Carloads.

See Classification §7 Mixed Carloads.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A minimum was assessed on each of two kinds of grain in one car separated by a bulkhead, the tariff providing for the mixed carload rate only when all but one of the grains were sacked. Rule amended and reparation ordered on shipment made. Hewitt & Connor v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 431.

(b) Complainant attacked the mixed carload rule of the defendant which provided that the deficit in minimum should be added to the weight of the highest rate article in the shipment. HELD, that the rule is unreasonable in the requirement that "when the aggregate weight of a mixed carload shipment does not amount to 20,000 lbs. add to the weight of the highest rated articles in the shipment sufficient to make minimum weight of 20,000 lbs." and that in lieu of this requirement the rule should provide that when the aggregate weight of a mixed carload shipment does not amount to 20,000 lbs., there should be added to the weight of the heaviest loaded article in the shipment sufficient to make minimum weight of 20,000 lbs., except that when the shipment consists of two or more articles of equal weight, the weight sufficient to make the minimum weight of 20,000 lbs. should be added to the weight of the lowest rated article. Ponchatoula Farmers' Ass'n v. I. C. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 513, 520.

(c) Generally speaking charges on mixed merchandise in carloads should be paid on the highest class rate with the lowest minimum applicable to any article in the car taking that rate. Sheldon & Co. v. N. Y. C. & St. L. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. A-276.

§7. Reasonableness and Discrimination.

See Cars and Car Supply §8; Distance Rates §3.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A practice had existed on the part of certain carriers of live cattle to make a carload rate irrespective of weight, leaving the shipper to load into the car as many cattle as he pleased and was able to put into it. The carriers substituted for this practice the rule that while naming a carlot rate they prescribed a minimum weight for a carload and then charged by the hundred pounds in proportion to the carlot rate for any excess over the minimum. HELD, that this rule was not unlawful. Leonard v. Chicago & Alton R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 599.

(b) A carrier enforced minimum carload weights for corn and other grain (except oats) which were 4,000 pounds less than the capacity of the car furnished by the carrier; the capacity of the car ordered by the shipper when such order could not be complied with, but this only on application to the superintendent, thus entailing more or less delay and sometimes loss to shipper; the capacity of the car furnished by the carrier on shipments destined to Indianapolis; and a general minimum weight of 28,000 pounds. HELD upon all the facts, that minimum carload weights for corn or other grain which vary with the size of cars furnished by the carrier are unreasonable and unjust and operate to subject complainant and other shippers to unjust discrimination and undue prejudice and disadvantage; and that the carrier should establish a fixed, reasonable and just minimum carload weight for corn and for each other kind of grain. Suffern, Hunt & Co. v. Indiana D. & W. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 255.

(c) A carrier which had not provided track scales at stations prescribed a rule or regulation forbidding shippers to load grain in cars beyond a specified weight above the marked capacity under a so-called "penalty" of increased rates on the excess weight. HELD, That such rule or regulation, if properly established, is not unlawful, provided the increase in charges for excessive weight is not unreasonable, and the margin between such maximum and the carrier's minimum carload weight for grain is so wide that shippers may, without scales, readily comply with both rules. Suffern, Hunt & Co. v. Indiana D. & W. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 255.

(d) A maximum carload weight with reasonable increase in rate on the excess loaded is not unlawful if sufficient difference is preserved between such maximum and the minimum carload weight allowed by the carrier. Suffern Hunt & Co. v. I. D. & W. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 255, 280.

(e) Upon all the facts and circumstances, including, on the one hand, the difficulties and liability to loss attending the production and shipment of peaches, and, on the other hand, the large percentage of cars loaded above the prescribed minimum weights for carloads, for which excess no charge is made by the carriers, the exceptional character of the service, which involves fast time and prompt delivery at destination, the carriage of a large amount of nonpaying freight, return of cars without loads, and many other conditions relating to the highly perishable nature of the traffic, —HELD, that neither the minimum carload weight nor the transportation charge established by the defendant engaged in the carriage of peaches in refrigerator cars from Georgia points to New York, based upon a rate of 81 cents from Atlanta to New York, is unreasonable or unjust. Georgia Peach Growers' Asso. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 255.

(f) Defendant's rule, providing that the minimum charge upon any single shipment of freight shall be for 100 pounds at the class or commodity rate applying upon the article which is in force in the territory roughly described as south of the Ohio and Potomac and east of the Mississippi rivers, and also on traffic shipped to that territory from points in the central west, does not, upon the facts of the case, unjustly discriminate in its application to complainant's traffic. Wrigley v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 412.

(g) It is reasonable and proper that carriers should fix a minimum weight and charges for the transportation of less than carload shipments. Wrigley v. C. C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 412, 420.

(h) Defendants' minimum carload weight of 26,000 lbs. for the carriage of citrus fruit in refrigerator or ventilator cars from southern California points to eastern destinations is not unreasonable, with the 40-foot car in general use. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 10 I. C. C. 590.

(i) The defendants' charges for the transportation of peaches from Macon and Atlanta, Ga., to Philadelphia, New York, Washington and Baltimore, including both the charge for carriage and the charge for refrigeration, having been complained of as unreasonable and unjust, after full hearing, HELD, That defendants' rate per 100 pounds for the transportation of peaches, other than refrigeration, from Macon and Atlanta, to wit: 81 cents to Philadelphia and New York and 78 cents to Baltimore and Washington, and their refrigeration charge of 12½ cents per crate of 42 pounds, minimum carload 550 crates, between such points, are unreasonable and unjust; and that defendants' practices in using one minimum carload requirement for transportation service other than refrigeration and a different minimum carload for refrigeration service is also unreasonable and unjust. HELD, further, That the rate for transportation other than refrigeration to Philadelphia and New York on carload shipments should not exceed 76 cents per 100 pounds, and Baltimore and Washington 73 cents per 100 pounds, such rates to apply on a carload minimum of 20,000 pounds for 36-foot cars and 22,500 pounds for 40-foot cars, and that the refrigeration charge on such shipment should not exceed 11 cents per crate of 42 pounds and apply on a carload minimum of 476 crates for 36-foot cars and 535 crates for 40-foot cars. HELD, further, That defendants' demurrage charge of $5 per day for detention of refrigerator cars by shippers, after expiration of twenty-four hours free time, and defendants' present rate on less than carload shipments, are not shown upon the record to be unreasonable or unjust. Waxelbaum & Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 178.

(j) Practice of using one minimum carload requirement for transportation service, and a different minimum for refrigeration service, held unreasonable and unjust. Waxelbaum & Co. v. Atlantic C. L. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 178.

(k) It is not reasonable that carriers unable to supply shippers with sufficient cars of large or average capacity should make such minimum loading requirements as can not be practically complied with as to the smaller cars in order that they may obtain as much earnings from shipments therein as from those in the larger and superior cars. Weimer & Rich v. Chi. & N. W. Ry. Co. et. al. 12 I. C. C. 462.

(l) If no large cars, small cars must not have too high minima. Wiemer & Rich v. C. & N. W. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 462.

(m) Complainant attacked as unreasonable minimum carload weights on hay from Ledyard, Iowa, to Minneapolis, Minn., and Pekin, Ill. From the evidence disclosed the minimum weights published in the tariffs of defendants could not be loaded into the size of cars furnished. Minimum applicable to Minneapolis 16,000 pounds for cars 30-feet and under, 18,000 pounds for cars over 30-feet and including 32 feet, 19,000 pounds on cars over 32-feet to and including 34-feet, 20,000 pounds on cars over 34-feet and less than 36-feet and 22,000 pounds on cars 36-feet and over. To Pekin minimum on cars 34 ft. in length and under 15,000 pounds and over 34 feet, 20,000 pounds. Minimum to Chicago on cars 34 feet and under 15,000 pounds, for cars over 34 feet, 20,000 pounds. HELD, minimum attacked to Pekin not unreasonable, but minimum to Minneapolis unreasonable to extent it exceeded minimum to Chicago. Wiemer & Rich v. C. & N. W. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 462.

(n) For charges collected under rule of terminal carrier that minimum carload weight should be marked capacity of car, on steel rails loaded in accordance with rules of Master Car Builders Association enforced by the initial carrier, prohibiting loading to a greater weight than 75 per cent of the marked capacity. HELD: Unjust and reasonable. Cambria Steel Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 466.

(o) The rule of a terminal carrier, that the minimum carload weight should be the marked capacity of the car, whereby freight charges are collected upon a higher minimum loading requirements than the practice of the carriers governed by the Master Car Builders Association rules permit, which rules are enforced by the initial carrier,—HELD unreasonable and unjust. Cambria Steel Co. v. Great Northern R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 466.

(oa) On March 13, 14, and 17, 1906, complainant shipped 1,560,340 pounds of steel rails from Johnstown, Pa., to Seattle, Wash., with freight charges at the rate of $13 per gross ton aggregating $9,746.52, assessed under the rules prescribed by the Master Car Builders' Association which are enforced by the initial carrier, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, prohibiting the loading of 60-foot steel rails on twin cars to a greater weight than 75 per cent of the marked capacity of the cars. Upon arrival of shipments at destination additional charges of $2,779.40 were collected by the defendant, covering that part of the haul from Kankakee to Seattle, under its rule providing that the minimum carload weight should be the marked capacity of the car. HELD, that the rule or regulation of the defendant company whereby freight charges were collected upon a higher minimum loading requirement than the practice of the carriers governed by the Master Car Builders'

Association rules would permit, was unreasonable and unjust. This rule having been modified subsequent to the movement of the shipments in question, no order is made in regard thereto. Complainant awarded reparation in the sum of $2,433.04, on account of unreasonable charges collected on shipments specified herein. Cambria Steel Co. v. Great Northern Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 466.

(p) Where three connecting roads publish a joint tariff under which they hold themselves out to the public as prepared to transport commodities in carload lots of a certain minimum magnitude at a certain specified rate, such carriers are by their tariff allowed to charge no more than the rate upon such carload, no matter what equipment they may provide for its transportation, except as the tariff in specified terms provides certain minimum weights for carloads in cars of certain lengths or capacities. Pacific Purchasing Company v. C. & N. W. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 549, 552.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(q) Where collapsible bunker cars are presented for loading with the bunkers thrown up, carriers may provide in their tariffs for such carload minima as will require the loading of such cars to their full capacity, not exceeding two tiers in height. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 24 I. C. C. 671, 672.

(r) The physical minimum is that minimum which represents the weight or bulk quantities which can be loaded into a car from the point of view of space or the theoretical number of packages capable of being loaded into a car, determined by dividing the cubical contents of the car by the cubical contents of one of the packages, multiplied by the weight of the package, possibly with some consideration of the dimensions of the package. The commercial minimum is that minimum which represents the unit of purchase and sale of the commodity as established by custom and the conditions existing in that trade and in the territory in which it governs at the time the physical minimum would consider only the physical loading capacity, while the commercial minimum would consider, in addition to trade requirements, conditions of manufacture, distribution and consumption. In re Suspension of Western Classification No. 51, 25 I. C. C. 442, 482.

(s) In establishing the minimum weight for a commodity, the test of the physical ability to load a certain weight into a car of given size is not sufficient. If it is in the interest of efficient and economical railway operation to increase the size of cars used, such rate of increase should not exceed the ability of business to adopt itself to the larger cars. The minimum weight for shipments of heavy, low-grade commodities that move in great volume is not calculated to disturb commercial conditions to the same extent that they might be disturbed by a correspondingly high minimum of traffic of a different character. Generally speaking, freight cars should be made to fit the business. Within reasonable limits business may be required to adapt itself to the car, but when there is a conflict between the increase size of the car and the necessities of business, business may not be required unreasonably to adapt itself to the car. Statistics for the United States, as well as for leading countries of Europe, show that increases in the size of the cars have been accompanied by less economical utilization of the car space. The minimum weights prescribed in the three great classifications in the United States have been based quite uniformly upon commercial relations rather than physical dimensions. The commercial minimum is a real thing, and established methods and customs governing business at any particular time should be given proper weight in the establishment of minimum weights at that time. In re Suspension of Western Classification No. 51, 25 I. C. C. 442, 607.

(t) It must be assumed that the minimum weights established by carriers are intended reasonably to correspond with the loading capacity of the car as to the particular commodities to which they relate. Where a shipper makes comparisons between the car earnings, under the rates attacked, and those on analogous commodities moving between the same points, in the absence of direct testimony to show the average loading of the commodities referred to, which evidence is in the possession of the carriers, it is but fair and reasonable to compare the minimum weights on the article in question with those applied to the analogous commodities as a means to ascertain, approximately at least, the comparative car earnings. Northwestern Woodenware Co. v. C. M. & P. S. Ry. Co., 28 I. C. C. 237, 242.

(u) A carload minimum weight which is reasonably adapted to the needs of the carriers and the great majority of shippers will not be increased because one shipper, by the expenditure of exceptional effort and expense, finds himself able to load more heavily than can his competitors; neither will this Commission under such circumstances prescribe a lower rate per 100 lbs. conditional upon the use of a higher minimum weight as the measure of the carload. Rates on Excelsior and Flax Tow from St. Paul, Minn., 29 I. C. C. 640.

(v) Where there is a uniform minimum for all cars of all lengths, the carrier is not required to furnish a car of any specified length, but is under the duty of establishing a minimum weight that can be reasonably loaded into a car of the size furnished. Tull & Gibbs v. N. & W. Ry., 55 I. C. C. 17, 18.

(w) The maintenance of cubical-capacity minima on tank cars and silo material from Portland to eastern destinations while contemporaneously maintaining minimum weights from San Francisco Bay points, found to result in undue prejudice to Portland. Portland Traffic & Transportation Asso. v. Director General 59 I. C. C. 606, 610.

(x) During a period of car shortage the carriers promulgated a rule for purpose of conserving equipment, whereby shippers were required to load cars to cubical capacity regardless of published minimum weights. The Commission held the rule was in violation of section 6, as its enforcement had the effect of superseding the tariff provision publishing the minimum weights and of increasing the carload charges. Wheeler Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 59 I. C. C. 699.

(y) Where impossible to load the minimum in a few of the cars used, it does not necessarily follow that the minimum was unreasonable. Briggs & Turivas v. Director General, as Agent, 61 I. C. C. 363, 364.

(z) The fact that one point has a higher minimum than another does not of itself constitute undue preference within the meaning of the act. Briggs & Turivas v. Director General, 61 I. C. C. 363, 365.

(aa) Where there is a uniform minimum for cars of all lengths, the carrier is not required to furnish car of any specified length, but is under the duty of establishing a minimum weight that can be reasonably loaded into a car of the size furnished. California Cotton Mills Co. v. Director General 68 I. C. C. 403, 406.

(bb) To load a car below the minimum increases the cost of transportation to the shipper without any advantage to the carriers and is a needless waste of transportation facilities. Nonapplication of transit privileges on deficiencies in weight of grain 69 I. C. C. 19, 22.

(cc) If carriers desire to protect themselves from unduly low charges per car they should do so by regulating the rate and not by prescribing arbitrary minimum weights which can be loaded only in cars of unusual size, and it is unreasonable to base charges on a minimum to which cars are incapable of being loaded. National Livestock Exchange v. Ann Arbor R. R. Co. 69 I. C. C. 125, 130.

(dd) The practice of securing revenue through a minimum higher than the capacity of cars furnished should be condemned, but where abnormally low per car charges resulted from emergency rates established as a temporary relief measure, a shipper has no well-founded claim because he could not load to the prescribed minimum. Devereaux Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 289, 290, 291.

(ee) Whether changes in carload minimum weights may properly be required without consideration of the rates depends upon the fact in each case. California & Hawaiian Sugar Refining Corp. v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 73 I. C. C., 664, 667.

(ffgg) A carload minimum weight reasonably adapted to the traffic generally should not be increased merely because one shipper, on account of conditions peculiar to himself, is able to load in excess of the existing minimum thereof. Bernard Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 557, 559, 560.

(hh) In establishing a minimum for the transportation of a light and bulky article it is the aim to name a weight which can be loaded under ordinary circumstances. Phillip Bernard Co. v. Director General, 74 I. C. C., 557, 560.

(ii) Where there is a uniform minimum for cars of all lengths, the carrier is not required to furnish a car of any special length, but is under the duty of establishing a minimum weight that can be reasonably loaded into a car of the size furnished. California Cotton Mills Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 74 I. C. C., 747, 748.

(jj) The practice of assessing charges at the published minimum, where cars furnished by carriers for their own convenience can not reasonably be loaded to the minimum, is unwarranted. Under "carriers' convenience" rules, carriers are not obligated to furnish cars of the sizes ordered, but are required to protect the actual weights where smaller cars furnished are fully loaded. California Cotton Mills Co. v. S. Ry. Co. 74 I. C. C. 747, 749.

(kk) There is a close relationship between the minimum and the rate and if the minimum be reduced to a point which will unduly affect the revenues of the carriers, an attempt to increase the rates to offset the loss in revenue is a possibility that must not be overlooked. Minimum carload weights on hogs in Missouri and other states 81 I. C. C. 373, 379.

(ll) The maintenance of a comparatively low minimum is not an approved method of adjusting a disadvantage growing out of an improper relationship of rates. Anderson Lumber Co. v. N. P. R. Co., 87 I. C. C. 425, 432.

§8. Two cars for one ordered.

See Bill of Lading §5; Cars and Car Supply §8; Classification §21; Follow Lot Shipment.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) It is not reasonable that carriers unable to supply shippers with sufficient cars of large or average capacity should make such minimum loading requirements as can not be practically complied with as to the smaller cars in order that they may obtain as much earnings from shipments therein as from those in the larger and superior cars. Weimer &Rich v. C. & N. W. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 462, 465.

(b) Complainant attacked commodity rates charged on steel rails, carloads, from Johnstown, Pa, to Seattle, Wash., in March 1906 as unreasonable. Charges were collected on basis of $3 per gross ton from Johnstown to Kankakee, Ill., and $10 per gross ton beyond. The rails were 60 feet in length and consequently it was necessary to load them on twin cars, the entire consignment requiring 20 pairs of cars so loaded. Additional charges were collected at destination. Under the rules of the Master Car Builders Association shippers are not permitted to load 60 foot rails on twin cars to a greater weight than 75 per cent of the marked capacity of the cars. The aggregate marked capacity of the 40 cars used for these shipments was 2,100,000 pounds. The maximum permitted under the rules referred to would be 1,575,000 pounds. The G. N., provided a rule which allows a minimum weight of 60,000 pounds on steel rails, carloads, unless the marked capacity of the car is less, in which case the minimum weight will be the marked capacity of the car from Kankakee to Seattle. The rule of the initial carrier was in accordance with the Master Car Builders rule but that of the G. N., prescribed an arbitrary minimum. Subsequently the G. N., published a rule providing on rails, steel, C. L., minimum weight 60,000 pounds, except where length of rails requires two or more cars, in which case the minimum carload weight will be 40,000 pounds for each car used. HELD, rule of the G. N., unreasonable to extent it exceeded the rule prescribed by the Master Car Builders, reparation awarded. Cambria Steel Co. v. G. N. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 466.

(c) Complainant attacked rates and minimum weight charged on several carloads of brass beds from Kenosha, Wis., to Los Angeles, Cal., as unreasonable. A car was ordered but defendant was unable to furnish a single car which would hold the minimum weight of 30,000 pounds provided for in the tariff, and instead provided two small cars making the following notation on the through billing: Care U. P., and S. P. Two cars used as one, in lieu of proper equipment and inability of C. & N. W., to furnish same. Charged at commodity rate of $2.20 whereas complainant contended for fifth class rate of $1.65. Minimum under the commodity rate 12,000 pounds, under the class rate 30,000 pounds. It was entirely proper for the originating road to furnish the two cars because of its inability to furnish a single car of sufficient capacity to contain the shipment tendered. HELD, rate attacked unreasonable to extent it exceeded $1.65, reparation awarded. Pacific Purchasing Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 549.

(d) Reparation on shipments of brass beds, of difference between rates charged by connecting carrier on two cars furnished by an initial carrier on account of its inability to furnish a single car which would hold the minimum weight provided for in the joint tariff, and the rate to which such a shipment, if made in a single car, would have been entitled. Pacific Purchasing Co. v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 549.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) Where carriers by their tariffs specifiy minima for large size cars they should further provide that when such cars are not available two smaller cars may be used under such circumstances as will fairly protect the minimum specified for the larger car. Noble v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 432, 437.

(f) The mere failure of carriers to provide "two for one" rules is not prima facie unreasonable unless graduated minimum weights are provided for cars of different sizes. Dietly v. N. Y. C. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 317, 319.

(g) In establishing a minimum for the transportation of a light and bulky article it is the aim to name a weight which can be loaded under ordinary circumstances. Bernard Co. v. Dir. Gen., as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 557, 560.

(h) The practice of assesing charges at the published minimum, where cars furnished by carriers for their own convenience can not reasonably be loaded to the minimum, is unwarranted. Under "carriers' convenience" rules carriers are not obliged to furnish cars of the sizes ordered, but are required to protect the actual weights where smaller cars furnished are fully loaded. California Cotton Mills Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 74 I. C. C. 749

(i) Carrier for own convenience furnished one larger car in lieu of two smaller ones ordered by shipper, and charges assessed on basis of combined full minima of cars ordered. HELD: Charges assessed found unreasonable to extent they exceeded those that would have accrued on basis of minima of ordered cars loaded to full visible capacity. Reparation awarded. Noll Lumber Co. v. U. P. R. R. Co., 80 I. C. C. 105.

(j) Initial carrier will be liable for such additional charges as may be imposed on shipper by reason of failure to furnish car of capacity ordered. Conf. Ruling 339. Peninsular Portland Cement Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 83 I. C. C. 10, 12.

§9. Follow-lot shipments.

See Follow Lot Shipments.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) There is some doubt as to the propriety of that part of the rule applicable to the last car of the various grades of ore from vessels or stock piles. The general rule of the official classification governing part lot or follow lot shipments does not apply to bulk commodities and it would seem that the carriers would be justified in prescribing a minimum weight on iron ore that would at least return revenues sufficient to cover the cost of transporting the car and its contents. Iron Ore Rate Cases, 41 I. C. C. 181, 206.

§10. Tank Cars.

See Tank Cars.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The minimum of a tank car should be the capacity of the tank. Rates on Asphalt and Asphaltum, 26 I. C. C. 614, 616.

(b) The general practice of all carriers to provide that the carload minima on liquids shipped in tank cars shall be the capacity of the tank and to assess charges upon basis of weight ascertained by multiplying the capacity of the tank by an estimated weight per unit of volume of the commodity. Fuller & Co. v. A., T. & S. F. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 519, 520.

(c) The assessment of charges on the full gallonage capacity of tank cars is virtually a publication of graduated minima based upon the varying sizes or capacities of the cars in service. Every consideration of economy if not of safety demands the movement of tank cars under full loading. Lange Soap Co. v. G. H. & S. Ry., 45 I. C. C. 452, 454.

§11. Reparation.

See Reparation.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainant attacked as unjust and unreasonable rule of the defendants requiring it to load cars to their cubical capacity regardless of published minimum weights, and seeks reparation. The latter part of the year 1917 was a period of acute car shortage occasioned by the extraordinary volume of war traffic, and every effort was being made to secure more economical use of equipment through heavier loading. The defendant issued bulletin reading as follows: "In future agents will decline to furnish cars for shipment of lumber, or other products, where the weight of shipment is less than the capacity of the car. This is a war measure in the interest of conservation of equipment, and all employees are requested to co-operate in this important matter." This bulletin was not filed with the Commission and was canceled Dec. 13, 1917. Notice of its cancellation was not sent to defendants agents, however, and they continued to enforce it until April 5, 1918. On one occasion defendant refused to accept a carload shipment and permitted it to remain on a side track for several days until complainant increased the lading. The average weight of complainant's shipment to interstate destinations during the period covered by the complaint was 48,109 pounds. Most of these shipments went to customers with whom complaint had previously entered into contracts of sale, based on the carload rather than feetage unit. Taking into consideration the urgent necessity for preventing transportation wastes which existed in the autumn of 1917, the Commission is unable to say that the rule here considered, as an emergency measure, was unjust. However, the Commission is of the opinion the method of promulgating the rule was in violation of section 6 of the Act, providing for printed schedules naming rates. The enforcement of such a rule as this would have the effect of superseding the tariff provision publishing the minimum weight carload charges for hauling shipments of that commodity. If defendant desired to promote the economical use of equipment by raising the minimum weight, it should have done so in the manner prescribed by law. Had public necessity been shown, defendant could have secured the permission of the Commission to amend its tariffs on short notice. HELD, complaint dismissed and reparation denied for lack of proof. Wheler Co. v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 699.

(b) If complainant had stood on its right under the tariff to demand transportation of shipments of the minimum weight, it would have had an appropriate remedy in mandamus or an action for damages for refusal to furnish transportation on reasonable request therefore, but complaint chose to comply with defendants bulletin, and transportation was not refused. The alleged damage for which complainant here seeks reparation is speculative and not the direct result of defendants attempt to change the carload minimum in an unlawful manner. Wheler Co. v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 699, 701.

NARROW GAUGE RAILROADS

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) On mixed carloads of potatoes and onions in sacks and packages from Reno, Nev., to Alturas, Cal., a rate was exacted of 80c per 100 lbs. Defendant was a narrow-gauge railroad extending from Reno to Alturas, a distance of 184 miles. The rate in the opposite direction between these points was $6 per ton. One of the carloads moved while a combination rate of $12 per ton was in effect between the points in question. The rate charged yielded 8.7c per ton mile. HELD, the rate exacted was unreasonable to the extent that it exceeded $12 per ton. Reparation awarded. E. Lauer & Son v. Nevada-California-Oregon Ry., 17 I. C. C. 488, 489.

(b) Somewhat higher rates may exist on narrow-gauge lines than on the standard trunk lines. In Re Transportation of Wool, Hides and Pelts, 23 I. C. C. 151, 176.

(c) Less-than-carload rates assessed upon weight of two shipments in excess of maximum loading of narrow-gauge cars, which were subsequently loaded into standard-gauge, found unreasonable Thompson v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 31 I. C. C. 138, 141.

NET RATES

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complaint attacked so-called manufacturers or net rates on logs, bolts, billets and poles, from points south of the Ohio river on the I. C., and M. & O., to Cairo, Ill., as unjust and unreasonable; that the minimum weight provisions maintained by the I. C. R. R. are unreasonable; and that the rates on billets have been erroneously charged on shipments of handle bolts. Defendants maintain two sets of rates on rough material from points on their line south of the Ohio river, the higher being known as gross rates and the lower as net rates. The use of the latter is conditioned upon an outbound movement of manufactured products in the ratio of 1 pound of products to every 1.5 to 5 pounds of inbound rough material. The net rates are published in the form of distance scales. From points on the I. C., the rates on billets are higher than on logs, bolts, and poles, the original basis having been 120 per cent of the log rates with a minimum differential of 9.5c per 100 pounds. The M. & O. applies the same rates on billets as upon the other classes of rough material. The scales of net rates do not apply to points on the north bank of the Ohio river and rates to Cairo are made by adding an arbitrary of 3c per 100 pounds to the net rates applying to East Cairo and Wickliffe, Ky. The through rates attacked are lower than the through rates on lumber from the same points of origin to Cairo. The minimum weights for the gross and net rates are usually the same, but on billets from points on the I. C., the minimum is 30,000 pounds for the gross and 50,000 pounds for the net rates. The record affords no basis upon which it might be found unreasonable or otherwise unlawful. HELD, the pieces of wood introduced in evidence are billets and not bolts and the net rates and minimum weights attacked are not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Cairo Association of Commerce v. Director General, 62 I. C. C. 701.

NEWLANDS ACT

See Labor Board.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The reduction of wages by a railway receiver appointed by the federal court, forbidden by Newlands Act, § 9 (Comp. St. § 8674), without a hearing after 20 days' notice, is a reduction not consented to, since only such reduction provoke strikes, which it was the object of the act to prevent, and therefore that statute does not prevent the receiver from making contracts with the existing employees or with new employees for employment at reduced wages. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co. v. Atlanta, B. & A. Ry. Co., 271 Fed. 731.

(b) Under Newlands Act, § 9 (Comp. St. § 8674), requiring a hearing on 20 days' notice before reduction of wages of employees of a receiver of a railway appointed by a federal court, and section 1, (section 8666), defining employees affected by the act as persons actually engaged in train operation or train service, train operatives and train service men include only engineers, firemen, conductors, switchmen, train hands, and porters, and these alone are covered by the act, though telegraphers, station agents, clerks, and track and shop men are necessary to the continued operation of trains. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co. v. Atlanta, B. & A. Ry. Co., 271 Fed. 731.

(c) Under Newlands Act, § 1 (Comp. St. § 8666), defining carriers and employees affected thereby, and section 9 (section 8674), providing that, whenever receivers are in control of the business of employers covered by the act, the employees of such employers had a right to be heard before wages were reduced, after at least 20 days' notice of the proposed hearing, clearly includes all persons operating railroad trains at the time the receiver takes possession, so that the reduction of the wages of such persons under the act can only be made after 20 days' notice. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co. v. Atlanta, B. & A. Ry. Co., 271 Fed. 731.

(d) The provision of Newlands Act, § 9 (Comp. St. § 8674), requiring a hearing after 20 days' notice before the reduction of wages by a railway receiver appointed by the federal courts, is justified as a statute of procedure in federal courts, under the implied power of Congress to regulate the exercise of the jurisdiction of the courts which it is authorized by the Constitution to establish. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co. v. Atlanta, B. & A. Ry. Co., 271 Fed. 731.

(e) Employees of a railroad when a receiver took it who continued in such employment under protest after the receiver reduced the wages under an order of court invalid under Newlands Act, § 9 (Comp. St. § 8674), because not rendered after a hearing of which 20 days' notice had been given, were entitled to claim the compensation previously paid them for the time they so served under protest, and therefore have a standing in court to attack the validity of the order reducing the wages, though thereafter they terminated their employment by striking. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co. v. Atlanta, B. A. Ry. Co., 271 Fed. 731.

(f) Newlands Act, § 9 (Comp. St. § 8674), forbidding wage reductions by federal receivers of interstate railways until after a hearing on 20 days' notice, is not unconstitutional, as taking property without due process of law or without just compensation, since it merely requires maintenance for a brief period, of the wage consented to by the owner of the property and if such maintenance is impossible the operation can be stopped. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co. v. Atlanta, B. & A. Ry. Co., 271 Fed. 731.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where no rule is published requiring payment of transportation charges prior to turning shipments over to a delivering line, shippers are not on notice of any such practice or requirement. A shipper does all that is required when he notifies the delivering line shown in the billing of such disposition of the cars as is desired, and to escape responsibility for failure to effect delivery called for the line-haul carrier must clearly and unequivocally show that the delivering lines had knowledge of the arrival of the cars and that they were being held for its account. CASES 1887-1908

(a) Complaint for overcharges withdrawn where complainant's receipt in full settlement for overcharges was shown by respondent. Stahl v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 1 I. C. R. 314.

(b) Hearing of complaint of people of Hot Springs, N. C., against the Western, North Carolina Railroad Company for overcharges in passenger rates; upon company's promises to refund excess, the case was permitted to remain open for a few days to see if company fulfilled promise. Hot Springs v. Western N. C. R. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 316.

(c) A claim for the refusing to a shipper of an overcharge made in a petition by railroad commissioners for the enforcement of their order as to rates is waived on appeal if not asked in the appellate court. Campbell v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 203.

(ca) The retention of an overcharge has all the effect of extortion and unjust discrimination against the person from whom its payments has been required, and when the refund of an excessive charge has been unnecessarily delayed for a considerable period the officials responsible therefor become fairly chargeable with willful intention to violate the law. Phelps & Company v. The Texas & Pacific Railway Company. 4 I. C. R. 363.

(d) The retention of an overcharge has all the effect of extortion and unjust discrimination against the person from whom its payment has been required, and when the refund of an excessive charge has been unnecessarily delayed for a considerable period the officials responsible therefor become fairly chargeable with willful violation of the law. Phelps & Co. v. T. & P. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 363, 369.

(e) The statute of limitations of the state in which the offense was committed applies in actions under the Interstate Commerce Act to recover back freight paid to a carrier in excess of that charged other shippers. Copp v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. C. E. D. La.) 4 I. C. R. 805.

(f) The concealment from a shipper of the fact that the rates charged him were excessive and that rebates were secretly given to others, and false representations as to these facts, do not take a cause of action for the recovery of the excess paid by him out of the statute of limitations, as the case is not based on fraud. Murray v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Iowa) 4 I. C. R. 806.

(g) There is no national common or general law which can be made the basis of an action to recover back unreasonable rates imposed by a carrier. Swift v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Ill.) 5 I. C. R. 116.

(h) A joint tariff rate of $2.70 per ton on shipments of coal between Richmond. Mo. and Mankato, Kan.. had been agreed on, and was in force and in use by the St. Joseph, St. Louis, & Santa Fe Railroad Company, which operated a line from Richmond, Mo., to St. Joseph, Mo., and the Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific Railway Company, which operated a connecting line from St. Joseph, Mo., to Mankato, Kan. The agent of the first-named conmpany by mistake quoted the plaintiff a rate of $1.70 per ton on carload shipments of coal from Richmond to Mankato. The plaintiff thereupon shipped 10 car loads. HELD, that the Rock Island Company is in no manner affected by such mistake, but is entitled to collect the full customary rate, there being no pretense that such rate is excessive or unreasonable. Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific R. Co. v. Hubbell 5 I. C. R. 241.

(i) A champertous agreement between a client and his attorney with reference to a suit against a carrier for an overcharge is not a defense to such suit. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Smith (Ark.) 5 I. C. R. 348.

(j) A railroad company which has been in possession of its road for fifteen years cannot plead mistake as to the distance traveled in defense of an action for the statutory penalty for overcharge for transportation. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Smith, 5 I. C. R. 348.

(k) That plaintiff has made a champertous agreement with his attorney is no defense to an action against a carrier for the statutory penalty for an overcharge for transportation. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Smith, 5 I. C. R. 348.

(l) The recovery of the statutory penalty for overcharge by a carrier is not prevented by the fact that plaintiff boarded the train for the sole purpose of paying the overcharge and bringing an action Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Smith 5 I. C. R. 348.

(m) Overcharges by a common carrier on interstate shipments made prior to the taking effect of the interstate commerce act of Congress cannot be recovered by the shipper by the application of common-law doctrines. Gatton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. (Iowa) 5 I. C. R. 474.

(n) The retention of an overcharge has all the effect of extortion and unjust discrimination against the person from whom its payment has been required, and when the refund of an excessive charge has been unnecessarily delayed for a considerable period the officials responsible therefor become fairly chargeable with wilful intention to violate the law. Phelps & Co. v. Texas & Pacific Railway Co., 6 I. C. C. 36.

(o) When the refund of an excessive charge by a carrier has been unnecessarily delayed for a considerable period, the officials responsible therefor become fairly chargeable with wilful intention to violate the law. Phelps V. Texas & P. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 36.

(p) A shipper who is compelled to pay charges in excess of those set forth on the published rate schedules, because of rules prescribed by the railroad company in circulars as to minimum and minimum carload weights, is entitled to recover the same back from the company. Suffern v. Indiana. D. & W. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 255.

(q) A shipper from an intermediate station, to whom through rates in force for more distance points are denied, contrary to § 6 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, is entitled to recover the overcharge. Chicago Fire Proof Covering

Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 316.

(r) The defendants are not shown to be guilty of any wilful or intentional violation of the law, where it was charged that they imposed charges in excess of the tariff rate on certain shipments of fruit from Michigan points to Chicago, but the fact showed the existence of errors in charges arising from lack of knowledge by the Chicago agent of the kind of package used, or the actual contents of the package shipped to complainant, the shipments having been unloaded by complainant, and that such errors also arose from a practice of the agent of the initial carrier at one point temporarily used as a receiving station for fruit, of making a charge in addition to the freight rate, without the knowledge of the railroad company. Davis v. Pere Marquette R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 405.

(s) Complaint attacked as an overcharge rate charged on snapped corn, carloads, from Grove, Indian Territory to Marshal, Tex., via Frisco to Paris, Tex., thence T. & P. Rate charged on the first car 44½c, on the second 31½c. For some time previous there had been a through rate in effect of about 30c but this was canceled and the T. & P., established a proportional rate of 14½c from Paris to Marshall. The rate from Grove to Paris was 21c on corn, snapped corn to take a rate 25% higher than on corn. No distinction is made in the tariff between corn and snapped corn. HELD, shipments overcharged to extent rate charged exceeded 35c per 100 pounds. H. B. Pitts & Sons v. St. L. & S. F. R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 684.

(t) Complaint alleged overcharge on shipments of hay from Robinson and La Junta, Colo., and Dodge City, Kan., to Marshall, Jefferson and Kildare, Tex., routed via Santa Fe to Fort Worth and T. & P., beyond. Shipments moved between January and July 1903. Previous to December 1902 a through rate of 36 cents was in effect which was afterwards published on Sept. 11, 1903. The T. & P., after the cancellation of the through rate established a proportional rate of 18¾c from Fort Worth applicable on hay from points on the Santa Fe. Distance 775 miles from Robinson and La Junta to Fort Worth, 575 miles from Dodge City, from Fort Worth to destinations about 200 miles. From the meagre evidence the Commission is not able to pass upon the reasonableness of the rates. The local rate of the T. & P., was 15c and the Santa Fe should be allowed 21c for its haul. HELD, rate of 18¾c unreasonable to extent it exceeded 15c, rate of Santa Fe unreasonable to extent it exceeded 21c. H. B. Pitt & Sons v. A. & S. F. Ry. 10 I. C. C. 691.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(u) It is not unlawful for carriers uninformed as to contract relations between consignor and consignee to make refund of overcharge in ordinary course of business to consignee named in bill of lading. Ludowici-Celadon Co. v. F. E. C. Ry. Co., 35 I. C. C. 81.

(v) If an overcharge exists refund thereof should be promptly made. Perry & Co. v. A. E. R. R., 44 I. C. C. 755, 756.

(w) The Commission declared in effect in Conference Ruling 489, that carriers should pay interest on all unsettled claims for overcharges from the date the charges are improperly collected until the overcharges are refunded. The fact that the overcharges are refunded subsequent to the appointment of receivers does not affect the situation. Lexington Flouring Mills v. M. P. Ry., 48 I. C. C. 687, 688.

(x) The Commission has assumed jurisdiction of overcharge claims against the director general on interstate shipments during the part of federal control prior to General Order No. 28. Terre Haute Indianapolis & Eastern Co. v. Director General 77 I. C. C. 658, 661.

(y) Under the amendment of February 24, 1922, to section 206 of the Transportation Act, complaints for the recovery of overcharges may be filed against the director general, as agent, within two years and six months subsequent to the termination of Federal control on March 1, 1920. Terre Haute, Indianapolis & E. T. Co. v. Director General as Agent. 77 I. C. C. 662.

(z) An overcharge has been defined to be the amount collected on shipments in excess of the legally published rates. Conf. Ruling 489. Lay Fish Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 4, 5.

(aa) An overcharge is the amount collected on shipments in excess of the legally published rate. La Fish Co. v. Director General 80 I. C. C. 4, 5.

(bb) What the Commission has sometimes called a plain overcharge has been defined as the amount collected in excess of that applicable in accordance with the lawfully published and filed tariff providing the rate. Gerard Ragone & Co. v. Director General 80 I. C. C. 491, 492.

(cc) The phrase overcharge as used by the Commission embraces only cases where the carriers have demanded and received a rate in excess of the published rate. The Commission does not use that phrase in cases where the published rate has been collected but is alleged on one ground or another to be an excessive rate. Gerard Ragone & Son v. Director General 80 I. C. C. 491, 492.

(dd) Section 206 c of the Transportation Act, 1920, as amended, provides that straight overcharge claims against the agent designated under subdivision A of that section may be filed with the Commission within two years and six months after the termination of federal control. Allied Machinery Co. of America v. Director General 81 I. C. C. 204.

(dda) Contention that section 6 of the act, in providing penalty for failure to comply with regulations or orders made by commission under that section, precludes recovery of overcharge arising from illegal rates, not sustained Section 8 of the act provides for liability to persons injured through carrier's violation of the act, and section 9 gives such persons election to make complaint to commission or prosecute action in Federal court. Complainant could recover amount paid in excess of legal rate in common-law action for money had and received, and reparation in like amount can be awarded by commission because collection of illegal rate constitutes violation of the act. Proctor & Gamble Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 81 I. C. C., 361, 363.

(ee) A cause of action to recover against a carrier for an overcharge of freight arises, whether ex delicto or ex-contractu, at the time and place of the actual payment of the overcharge. If the cause of action is one ex contractu, the contract upon which it is based was made and was to be performed at the time and place where the overcharge was paid. Where the shipment out of which the overcharge arose was over the lines of connecting carriers, and the overcharge was paid to the terminal carrier, the cause of action nevertheless arose at the time and place of payment to the terminal carrier, even assuming that its collection by the terminal carrier amounted to a payment to the initial carrier through the terminal carrier as its agent. Drake v. Davis, (Ga. 1923), 116 S. E. 552.

(ff) If a carrier fails to desist from charging a rate which the Interstate Commerce Commission has held to be excessive, the shipper, or person injured, may recover. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Southern Sawmill Co., (Mo. 1923), 251 S. W. 434.

(ffa) The fact that a payment was voluntarily made does not prevent its recovery from a third person whose breach of contract made it necessary to make the payment to the payee, even though it would prevent recovery from the payee. Devine v. Meramec Portland Cement & Material Co., (Missouri, 1923, 253 S. W. 444.

(gg) A shipper's right at common law to sue the carrier to recover excessive and discriminatory freight charges collected from the shipper by the carrier is not abrogated by the Utah law requiring reasonable rates, and authorizing an overcharged shipper to recover double the charges paid; hence a suit to recover excessive freight charges collected is not governed by the State law as to action for liability created by statute, as to action for statutory penalty, but by the four year statute. Jeremy Fuel & Grain Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., (Utah 1922), 207 Pac. 155.

(hh) In an action against a carrier for excessive freight charges, a statement in the complaint that an overcharge has been collected is one of ultimate fact, and not simply a legal conclusion, and a complaint alleging the rate charged, and that it is unreasonable or extortionate, is not subject to demurrer. Jeremy Fuel & Grain Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., (Utah 1922,) 207 Pac. 155.

(ii) Since the Transportation Act provides that the period of federal control shall not be computed as a part of the period of limitation in actions against carriers for causes of action arising prior to federal control, the period from the date the government took control of and operated a railroad must be excluded from the computation of the period of limitation of the state statute. Jeromy Fuel & Grain Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., (Utah 1922), 207 Pac. 155.

(jj) Federal Transportation Act, § 206

(f), providing that the period of federal control shall not be computed as part of the periods of limitation in actions against carrier or in claims for reparation to the commission for causes of action arising prior to federal control, applies only to the federal rate regulating statutes, and has no effect on Rem. Code 1915, § 8626-91, requiring complaints concerning overcharges to be filed with the Public Service Commission (now Department of Public Works) within two years from accrual of cause of action, compliance with which is necessary for jurisdiction. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Department of Public Works, (Wash 1922,) 207 Pac. 686.

(kk) A direct action in court may be maintained against a railroad company to recover overcharges on shipments, where no question is made as to tariff schedules or rules requiring administrative action by the Interstate Commerce Commission, but the only issue is one of fact as to whether or not defendant furnished a service that entitled it to the higher rate charged. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. Wolf, 272 Fed. 681.

(ll) Where, on the hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission of a petition against a railroad company for reparation for unreasonable rates "heretofore and hereafter charged to petitioners," both parties treated the issues as embracing shipments made both before and after filing of the petition, and evidence relating thereto was taken without objection, the commission HELD to have power to award reparation for overcharges made after as well as before the filing of the petition. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co. v. G. B. Markle Co., 279 Fed. 261.

(mm) Interstate Commerce Act providing that all claims for the recovery of damages shall be filed within two years after the cause of action has accrued applies only to claims for damages filed before the Commission, and an action in court to recover an excessive freight rate is governed by the period of limitation fixed by the state statute. Davis v. Parrington, 281 Fed. 10.

(nn) Claims against a railroad company for overcharges collected more than five years before the property of the company was impounded for administration by a court of equity HELD not within the class of claims which may be given priority over recorded liens. North American Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 288 Fed. 612.

(oo) Shippers, who have purchased the statutory remedy for recovery of overcharges collected by a railroad company, by obtaining from the Interstate Commerce Commission an order awarding them damages, and a judgment on such order, cannot later maintain a suit to charge the company as trustee, on the inconsistent theory that ownership of the money collected remained in them. North American Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 288 Fed. 612.

(pp) The collection by a railroad company of rates in accordance with its established schedule is not unlawful, though the Interstate Commerce Commission may afterward adjudge such rates to be unreasonable and excessive, and order reparation to shippers, and the company is not chargeable with holding the excess rates so collected as a trustee ex maleficio. North American Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 288 Fed. 612.

(ppa) Where freight on a commodity is paid by the consignee, who is the purchaser, but pursuant to contract is charged against the consignor as a payment on the purchase price, such payment is to be considered as originally made by the consignor, who may recover against the carrier for an overcharge. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. 295 Fed. 53.

(qq) An action to receive overcharges is barred under the Interstate Commerce Act after the expiration of two years from the time the cause of action accrues. Kansas City Southern Ry. v. Wolf, 43 Sup. Ct. 259.

(rr) The Interstate Commerce Act, § 9, authorizing a person claiming to be damaged by a common carrier to make complaint to the Commission, or bring suit in court, and section 16, requiring all complaints for the recovery of damages to be filed with the Commission within two years from the time the cause of action accrues, and a petition for the enforcement of an order of the Commission to be filed within one year from the date of the order, apply to a suit to recover charges collected by a carrier in excess of its tariffs on file, even though the demand for such relief required no administrative act by the Commission, so that an application to the Commission before suit was unnecessary, and tne provision is a condition to the right to recover, so that a demurrer, raising the objection that the pleading showed on its face that more than two years had elapsed since the right to recover accrued, should have been sustained. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. Wolf, 43 Sup. Ct. 259.

OWNERSHIP OF COMMODITIES

PACKAGE RATES

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complaint attacked charges collected on 15 carloads of citrus fruit, in field boxes the size of which is prescribed by a Florida law, shipped intrastate in Florida, during January 1919 for packing and reshipping beyond and on 11 carloads of empty field boxes from Tavares to the groves as unjust and unreasonable. Rates on citrus fruit from groves to packing houses in Florida, and on returned empty boxes, are published in cents per field box. The field boxes used by complainant were smaller than the standard field boxes and prior to Oct 23, 1918 rates on half sized boxes were one half standard box rates. On that date defendant canceled these half rates and made basis applicable the regular rate. The desirability of a standard size field box is not disputed. The dimensions prescribed by the Florida legislature are not claimed to be unfair nor are the rates per standard box alleged to have been unreasonable HELD, rates attacked not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Florida Citrus Exchange v. Director General 66 I. C. C. 307.

(b) The mere fact that complainant was charged more for hauling a like quantity of fruit than were the users of the standard box does not entitle it to reparation. Such a result inevitably follows where rates are stated in amounts per package and the shipper chooses to use a package smaller than the standards prescribed by the tariff. Florida Citrus Exchange v. Director General 66 I. C. C. 307, 308.

PANAMA CANAL ACT

See Erie Canal; Evidence §42; Facilities and Privileges §16; Water Carriers; Water Competition.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Congress has decreed that there shall be a restoration of conditions prevailing when railroads had no interest in boat lines. Lake Line Applications, Under Panama Canal Act, 33 I. C. C. 699, 713.

(b) One evident purpose of section 11 of the Panama Canal act was to remove restraints on competition between the rail and the water lines, and the showing which would justify the Commission in granting permission to continue the operation of boat lines, is not merely that the existing service and the rates are reasonably statisfactory and have not been the cause of substantial complaint but that under railroad ownership the lines render service as good as they would render if independently owned and operated, and that railroad ownership does not deprive the public of substantial benefits of competition, either in service or in rates. Steamer Lines of Chesapeake Bay, 35 I. C. C. 692, 696.

(c) It must be shown not only that existing service and rates are reasonably satisfactory, but that under railroad ownership the lines render service as good as if independently owned and operated and that railroad ownership does not deprive the public of substantial benefit of competition. Steamer Lines on Chesapeake Bay, 35 I. C. C. 692, 696, 607.

(d) Where one rail carrier owns all the capital stock of another and that other in turn owns all the stock of a water carrier both have such interest in the latter as is defined in section 5 of the act. Ocean Steamship Co. of Savannah, 37 I. C. C. 422, 423.

(e) The volume of traffic handled by a steamship company between two points served by a controlling rail carrier may be negligible, and the steamship company may not solicit or seek such traffic; but neither of these factors is controlling in determining whether or not possibility of competition, exists. Potential competition may exist via a route in the absence of any tonnage whatever. It is not altogether metaphorical to say that each route competes with every other route. If the violation of the water carrier is to determine wether or not competition may exist, a water line in active competition with its railroad owner for certain traffic might avoid the provisions of the act by temporarily withdrawing from such competitive business. To concede this would render the amendment to the act impotent to accomplish one of its prime purposes—the preservation of competition on the route by water. Ocean Steamship Co. of Savannah, 37 I. C. C. 422, 425.

(f) A rail carrier by participating in a through route between two termini only one of which is reached by its rails in fact serves both termini, and may compete within the meaning of section 5 with steamers operating as part of another through route between the same termini. Peninsular & Occidental S. S. Co., 37 I. C. C. 432, 434.

(g) A contention that inasmuch as heavy through freight is not considered desirable traffic by a steamship company because of its limited facilities, and is not sought or desired by the latter, it can not be considered competitive traffic within the meaning of the Act, is unsound. Whether or not a steamship company competes for a certain class of traffic is largely a matter of policy shaped by its owners. To concede that the possibility of competition depends on the volition of the water carrier would defeat the evident purpose of the amendment to restore and maintain competition in instances where rail carriers had secured the control of a potentially competitive water line. Peninsular & Occidental S. S. Co., 37 I. C. C. 432, 436.

(h) The Act was not intended to prevent water lines competing with rail carriers, but, on the other hand, it contemplates encouragement of such competition by divorcing the water line from rail line which is using the water carrier to stifle competition, os is not operating it in the best interests of the public. S. P. Co., Ownership of Oil Steamers, 37 I. C. C. 528, 536.

(i) Competition is a question of fact to be determined by the circumstances in each case. It means something more than an occasional movement via a rail line which parrallels a water line, where the rail line operates at a serious disadvantage in that it does not and can not offer rates and service on anything like equal terms with the water line. Whether or not there would be a normal, active competition between the rail line and the water line if operating independently of each other is the best practical test of competition. S. P. Co. Ownership of Oil Steamers, 37 I. C. C. 528, 536.

(j) The provisions of section 1 of the Act apply to any common carrier engaged in the transportation of passengers or property. There is no change or modification by the amendment of Aug. 24, 1912, with respect to the agency of transportation over which the Act confers regulatory authority upon the Commission. A corporation which proposed, but only under certain contingencies, to become a common carrier is not covered by the wording of the amendment. Analysis of the language used in the amendment justifies the conclusion that it deals with common carriers which, whether existing at the time of its enactment or thereafter, should, at the time when its provisions are invoked, be going concerns equipped and ready to engage in the interstate transportation of property. Charleston & Norfolk S. S. Co. v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 40 I. C. C., 382, 385.

(k) Paragraph (a) of the Panama Canal Act contemplates that a common carrier by water must be operating, or at least equipped to operate, since not only is a physical connection with its dock to be established, but the situation must be such that the Commission may ascertain whether "such connection is reasonably practicable"; whether it "can be made with safety to the public;" whether "the amount of business to be handled is sufficient to justify the outlay"; and "to determine the terms and conditions upon which these connecting tracks, when constructed, shall be operated"; and the Commission "may either in the construction or operation of such tracks, determine what sum shall be paid by either carrier." These preliminary requirements may not, as a practical matter, to be determined in advance of the acquirement by the water line of terminal facilities. C. & N. S. S. Co., v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 40 I. C. C., 382, 385.

(l) The time during which petitioning rail carriers may continue to operate or have an interest in a boat line can not be extended unless the Commission finds such extension is of advantage to the convenience and commerce of the people, and will neither exclude, prevent, or reduce competition on the route by water. Direct Nav. Co., 46 I. C. C. 378, 379.

(m) But the Commission has not before them for determination any general question of public policy, for that is a matter for the Congress. Section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act charges the Commission only with the duty, in a case of this kind, of determining whether or not competition for traffic between the owning rail carriers and their boat lines through the Panama Canal does or may exist, and in doing this the Commission has to give due weight to the actual conditions at the present time. Application of United States Steel Products Co., 57 I. C. C. 513-516.

(n) It had been found that the ownership and operation of boat lines by rail lines had retarded and stifled competition on routes by water in the interest of rail lines, and it was to prevent this evil and permit the development of water borne commerce in the interest of the public that the Panama Canal amendment was passed. S. P, Co. Ownership of Atlantic steamship lines 77 I. C. C. 124, 128.

(o) Under section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the Panama Canal act, providing that applications may be "filed * * * for the purpose of asking an order to install new service not in conflict with the provisions of this paragraph." the word "paragraph" clearly does not refer to that in which it is used because such paragraph contains no prohibitions. The word "paragraph" in an act of Congress will be construed to mean "section" whenever to do so accords with the legislative intent. S. P. Co. Ownership of Atlantic S. S. Lines, 77 I. C. C. 124, 128.

(p) Contention that the paragraph of section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act which provides that the commission may extend the time during which a service by water may be continued, does not grant authority to install a new service, and that if the commission finds that a proposed service is new and that in that service applicant does or may compete with all-rail routes, the application must be denied whether in the public interest or not. HELD: Not sustained. S. P. Co., Ownership of Atlantic S. S. Lines, 77 I. C. C. 124, 128.

(q) The Panama Canal amendment to section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act is a part of a public statute and passed in the public interest. It has been found that the ownership and operation of boat lines by rail lines has retarded and stifled competition on routes by water in the interest of the rail lines, and it was to prevent this evil and permit the development of water-borne commerce in the interest of the public that the amendment was passed. S. P. Co., Ownership of Atlantic S. S. Lines, 77 I. C. C. 124, 128.

(r) Under section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the Panama Canal Act, the same consideration of advantage to the convenience and commerce of the people which applies to the continuance of an existing service would have equal application in the installation of a new service, and it does not appear that it was the intention of Congress to prohibit the continuance of an existing line, but to permit the further development of service when traffic offering warrants and it is in the public interest. S. P. Co. Ownership of Atlantic S. S Lines, 77 I. C. C. 129.

(s) The purpose of the Panama Canal amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act was not to forbid railroad ownership, operation, or control of steamship lines, but to forbid the use of such ownership or control in such a manner as to restrict movement of interstate commerce in the interest of that railroad's competing rail lines. S. P. Co. Ownership of Atlantic S. S. Lines 77 I. C. C. 137.

(t) Competition now exists between steamship lines operating through the Panama Canal and the railroads generally. Application of United States Steel Products Co., 77 I. C. C. 685, 686.

(u) Contention that independent steamship lines can not survive in competition with a steamship line "subsidized" by an industry. HELD: Whether or not an industry should be permitted to operate a steamship line is a question of public policy to be determined by the lawmaking body. Application of United States Steel Products Co., 77 I. C. C. 685, 687, 688.

(v) The Interstate Commerce Act makes it unlawful for any railroad company subject to the provisions of the act after July 1, 1914, to own, operate, control, or have any interest in any common carrier by water with which its railroad does or may compete for traffic, under penalty of a fine for each day's violation. By a further provision it confers on the Interstate Commerce Commission jurisdiction to determine, on application of any railroad company also owning or controlling a water line, the questions of fact as to competition or possibility of competition between the rail and water lines, and upon certain findings to make an order extending the time during which the water service may be continued after July 1, 1914. In all such cases the order of the Commission is made final. HELD, That an order of the Commission pursuant to the statute dismissing the petition of a carrier for such an extension does not require a dissolution of the connection between the rail and water service, but merely leaves the petitioner subject to the operation of the statute, and that a suit in the district court to enjoin enforcement of the Commission's order is not an appropriate proceeding to review its action. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. United States, 234 Fed. 682.

(w) Under the jurisdiction conferred on the Commission to determine questions of fact as to actual or potential competition between the rail and water service of a petitioner and the provision making its order final, such order is reviewable by the courts only so far as to ascertain that the fundamental requirements of a hearing have been observed, and that the findings were not arbitrary, but based on relevant and substantial evidence; its weight and effect being for the Commission. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. United States, 234 Fed. 688.

§½. In general.

(a) The only state interference with the landing and receiving of passengers and freight which is permissible is confined to such measures as will prevent confusions among vessels and collision between them, and insure their safety and convenience and facilitate the discharge and receipt of passengers and freight. Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania (U. S. Sup. Ct.), 1 I. C. R. 382.

(aa) There being no proof in this case of the amount invested by the reorganized corporation or its trustees, this court has no means, if it had the power, to determine that the rate of three cents a mile, fixed as the fare of passengers by the legislature, is unreasonable; and it does not appear that there has been any such confiscation as amounts to a taking of property without due process of law, because the income of the road, at that rate of fare, will pay only one and one half per cent on the original cost of the road. Dow v. Beidelman, 2 I. C. R. 56.

(b) An agreement between several railroad companies, some of which own and control competing lines, for the appointment of a common governing committee, or an association composed of one member from every company, to fix the rates for which freights should be carried to and from points within the State of Texas, is illegal because contrary to Tex. Const. art. 10, § 5, which provides that "no railroad, . . . or managers of any railroad corporation, shall consolidate the stock, property, and franchises of such corporation with, . . . or in any way control, any railroad corporation owning or having under its control a parallel or competing line." Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. State (Tex.), 2 I. C. R. 335.

(c) Transportation of persons is as much commerce as transportation of property. Louisville, New Orleans, Texas R. Co. v. State, 2 I. C. R. 615.

(d) The extraordinary liability imposed by law upon a railroad company as a common carrier for the sufficiency and safety of its passenger cars, and the competency of its employes in operating such cars is a highly important protection to the public; but such company might very reasonably claim that it was not responsible for a passenger car of a private car company or the consequences of that passenger car being transported as part of its train in causing a wreck, collision or delay, when it had no volition in accepting or rejecting such car, but was forced to transport it by order of a civil tribunal. Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania Railroad, 2 I. C. C. 792, 794.

(da) The word "owner," as used in the act, includes all those who operate a railroad or steamboat in the transportation of passengers; as for example, lessees, receivers and the like. State v. Corbett, 4 I. C. R. 694.

(e) A maximum rate fixed by the legislature for the transportation of passengers is not unreasonable as to a particular road merely because such road cannot, by charging only such rate, pay its operating expenses and the interest on its debts. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Smith, 5 I. C. R. 348.

(f) The regulation of the sale of tickets on railroads and steamboats, which makes such sale unlawful without a certificate of authority from the carrier, is not a regulation of commerce beyond the power of a State legislature, but is a mere police regulation of a public employment. The court says that the duties which the act imposes upon the carriers therein named and their agents cannot interfere with the freedom of interstate travel. Such travel is not impeded because tickets are required to be purchased from agents of the carrier who are provided with certificates of their authority. The limitation of the sale of tickets to such agents may be a restraint upon the business of scalpers and ticket brokers, but cannot be regarded as a burden upon interstate commerce. The business of the carrier being a proper subject for the exercise of the police power, its necessary incidents and adjuncts are also subject thereto. As the issuing and use of tickets are required in such business their sale is an incident thereof and may be regulated by legislative action. G. Burdick v. People of the St. of Ill., 7 I. C. C. App. XX.

(g) An excursion ticket entitling the purchaser to a continuous passage over five different railroads, beginning in one State and ending in another after passing through two intermediates, is a contract for interstate passenger traffic within the provision of the Federal Constitution empowering Congress to regulate commerce among the several States. And a State statute requiring the redemption of unused portions of tickets or coupons cannot be made applicable to such ticket. Mo., Kans. & Tex. R. R. Co. v. Fookes, 7 I. C. C. App. LXI.

(h) A state statute attempting to regulate the fares of travelers from one State to another would be repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution but the State legislature may regulate the fare for persons traveling from one point to another within the State where the trip is not part of a trip to a point without the State. Beardsley v. N. Y. Lake Erie & Western R. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. App. LXXVII.

(i) Cars employed in interstate commerce are not exempt, in the absence of national legislation covering the subject, from the operation of a State law forbidding under penalties the heating of passenger cars in that State by stoves or furnaces kept inside the cars or suspended therefrom. The court says: The mere grant to Congress of the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among States did not, of itself and without legislation by Congress, impair the authority of the States to establish such reasonable regulatioons as were appropriate for the protection of the health, the lives, and the safety of the people. The statute in question had for its object to protect all persons traveling in the State of New York on passenger cars moved by the agency of steam against the perils attending a particular mode of heating such cars. There may be reason to doubt the efficacy of regulations of that kind. But that was a matter for the State to determine. We know from the face of the statute that it has a real, substantial relation to the object as to which the State is competent to legislate, namely, the personal security of those who are passengers on cars used within its limits. Why may not regulations to that end be made applicable within a State to cars of railroad companies engaged in interstate commerce as well as to cars used wholly within such State? The statute in question is not directed against interstate commerce. Nor is it within the meaning of the Constitution a regulation of commerce, although it controls, in some degree, the conduct of those engaged in such commerce. So far as it may affect interstate commerce it is to be regarded as legislation in aid of commerce and enacted under the power remaining with the State to regulate the relative rights and duties of all persons and corporations within its limits. N. Y., N. H. & Hartford R. R. Co. v. People of the St. of N. Y., 7 I. C. C. App. LXXXVIII.

(j) The interstate commerce clause of the United States Constitution is violated by a statute which attempts to make it a penal offense for a person not authorized by the charter of a railroad or a steamship to sell railroad or steamboat tickets. People of the St. of Ill. v. Ullman, 8 I. C. C. App. LIX.

(k) Interstate passengers, defendant road not required to transport at rate fixed by state law for intrastate transportation, where conditions do not warrant reduction. Railroad Commission of Arkansas v. St. L. & N. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 233.

(l) State rates for passengers will not be followed in fixing interstate rates on unprosperous line. Railroad Commission of Arkansas v. St. L. & N. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 233.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(m) Section 22 of the act, as amended, contemplates that carriers shall be required to recognize an additional class of passenger travel and to provide a special form of ticket which shall be used at just and reasonable rates fixed by the commission. Interchangeable Mileage Ticket Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 204.

(n) The business of a railroad station checkroom is not interstate under Interstate Commerce Act, § 1, enacting that it shall not apply to "storage or handling of property wholly within one state." Denver Union Terminal Ry. Co. v. Cullinan, (Colo 1922), 210 Pac. 602.

(o) Section 6 (second paragraph of the Act) provides for the publication of tariff rates on the transportation of freight, but makes no mention of passenger rates. To properly interpret such paragraph, the entire section must be read and considered in connection therewith, when it will clearly appear that the provision for publishing and posting rates is not limited to the shipment of merchandise, but by implication, if not in terms, includes passenger service. United States v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. of Canada, 225 Fed. 283, 284.

(p) The Hepburn Act does not prevent a state commission from entering an order requiring reasonable service of passenger trains to county seats as such regulation are only incidental to interstate commerce. Gulf C. & S. F. Ry. v. State of Texas, 38 Sup. Ct. 236.

§1. Jurisdiction of Commission.

See Interstate Commerce Commission; Jurisdiction of Commission.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Interstate Commerce Commission, having no authority to control commissioners of immigration, cannot do so indirectly by inhibiting railroad companies from carrying out arrangements made by them with the commissioners. Savery v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. (Com), 2 I. C. R. 210.

(b) The Interstate Commerce Commission may make its own inspection to ascertain the unfitness of cars for transporting immigrants. Savery v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 210.

(c) The matter of the reception of immigrants at New York having been put by the laws af the state under the control of a board of commissioners of emigration, and that board having made such regulations as it has deemed desirable for the protection of the immigrants, until they are ticketed and put on board of railroad trains for their respective destinations and the federal government through its legislative and executive departments having sanctioned the control by the commissioners of emigration, the Commission has no authority to interfere with their regulations. Savery & Co. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. 2 I. C. C. 210, 216.

(d) A railroad company which transports immigrants in unfit cars will be required to provide better accomodations, and to ascertain their fitness the Commission will make its own inspection. Savery & Co. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 210, 217.

(e) Transportation of persons is as much commerce as transportation of property. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. State (Miss.) 2 I. C. R. 615.

(f) The contention that the Commission has power, under the act to regulate commerce, as amended June 29, 1906, to require a common carrier to locate or relocate and maintain a station at a given point is open to doubt; but, without deciding this question here, it is manifest that the Commission should not exercise such power unless all the facts and conditions clearly indicate that the interests of the general public in the locality involved are materially impaired by the lack of such facilities. Jones, E. and Al. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 144.

(g) Assuming the Interstate Commerce Commission to have power to require a common carrier to locate or relocate and maintain a station at a given point, such power should not be exercised unless all the facts and conditions clearly indicate that the interests of the general public in the locality involved are materially impaired by the lack of such facilities. Jones v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 144.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(h) The Commission has no power to control the mileage sol din one state by its terms, good only for transportation wholly within that state, receivable for interstate journeys. In re Mileage Books, 28 I. C. C. 318, 321.

(i) The Commission cannot compel a carrier to reduce its fares solely on the ground that to do so would induce settlement of sparsely populated communities. Arizona Corp. Commission v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 45 I. C. C. 436, 442.

(j) Under the Act as it stood prior to the amendment of 1912 the Commission had authority to establish through routes and joint rates or fares for passenger traffic, and yet nowhere is such authority given in specific terms. It arises out of consideration of the Act as a whole. Col. Nav. Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 625, 631.

(k) If the mantenance of intrastate passenger fares fixed by a franchise contract result in unjust discrimination against interstate commerce, it is within the Commission's power to remove it by prescribing other and different intrastate fares. Ohio Rates, Fares, and Charges, 64 I. C. C. 493, 498.

(ka) The commission has no authority to require carriers to establish for particular passengers or particular occasions, special fares lower than the regular fares. Reduced Rates, 1922, 68 I. C. C. 676, 729.

(l) The suitable location of a passenger terminal within a great city is a matter which can best be determined locally rather than by a commission sitting in Washington, and a referendum vote is entitled to great weight in this connection. Cleveland Passenger Terminal Case, 70 I. C. C. 342, 350.

(m) Jurisdiction of Commission does not extend to claims arising from anticipated delay of passenger trains. Hohlfelder v. D. & R. G. W. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 587, 588.

(n) Interstate Commerce Act, §22, as amended by Act Aug. 18, 1922 (Comp. St. Ann. Supp. 1923, § 8595), directing the Commission to require railroads to issue interchangeable mileage scrip coupon tickets at just and reasonable rates, HELD, not to warrant an order of the Commission requiring issuance of such tickets at reduced rates, based not on the independent exercise of the Commission's judgement, but on erroneous interpretation of the statute or its assumed purpose. United States v. New York Cent. R. R. Co. 44 Sup. Ct., 212.

II. REASONABLENESS AND DISCRIMINATION.

§2. In general.

See Discrimination; Reasonableness of Rates.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Rate at which excursion tickets are sold does not entitle mileage ticket purchaser to complain of unjust discrimination if charged a higher rate. Asso. Wholesale Grocers v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 393.

(b) In the transportation of passengers carriers are performing a public duty under franchises granted by the State, and are subject to the rules of law which require absolute impartiality of law, when the circumstances and conditions are substantially similar. Smith v. N. P. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 611, 620.

(c) It will be very difficult to find any principle upon which the transportation of passengers in our country can be impartially and fairly carried short of maintaining the rule of absolute equality of payment from all persons enjoying the same accomodations. Smith v. N. P. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 611, 621.

(d) A passenger rate war in which rates were repeatedly reduced by several competing lines to an exceedingly low basis on a particular class of traffic, without any filing of tariffs, was contrary to the requirements of law, as well as against the true interest of each party thereto. Re Passenger Tariffs & Rate Wars (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 340.

(ef) No necessity or compulsion is created by a war of rates, which justifies disobedience of the statute. Re Passenger Tariffs & Rate Wars (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 340.

(g) Rates obtained of ticket brokers and scalpers lower than those offered at the regular offices of the company effect unjust discrimination. Re Passenger Tariffs and Rate Wars, 2 I. C. C. 340, 341, 347.

(h) The employment of ticket brokers and scalpers for the sale of railroad tickets placed in their hands, to be disposed of at reduced rates under the pretense of paying commissions thereon is illegal. Re Passenger Tariffs and Rate Wars, 2 I. C. C. 341, 349.

(i) The design of the Act was to put each individual, in the matter of transportation, on exact equality. It was not a new idea in law, for it had always been recognized as a sound legal proposition, though violated in practice, that a common carrier must treat all persons alike under similar circumstances and conditions. P. C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. B. & O. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 729, 730.

(j) Complainant attacked passenger fares of $1.85 or 10c per mile between Seligman, Mo., and Eureka, Ark., while the local rate between the stations in Arkansas is 5c per mile, as unjustly discriminatory and unreasonable. The through rate over a railroad 18½ miles long (10½ miles in Arkansas and 8 in Missouri) was $1.85 or 10c per mile. The local charges between the stations in Arkansas were on the basis of 5c per mile, any higher charge being unlawful under the statute of the state. On roads of this class in Missouri the rate authorized is 4c per mile. The net earnings are in excess of a moderate return on the actual investments of the railway company, but are less than in former years. HELD, that the through rate is unreasonable and unjust, and that any through rate over the road in excess of $1.20 (6½c per mile) is unreasonable and unlawful. Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners of Missouri v. E. S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 69.

(k) The defendant railway company and a land company owning land and a suburban hotel along the line of railway are distinct corporations, but under substantially the same ownership and control. The land company purchased passenger tickets of the railway company at full rates of fare, and sold them at half rates to guests of its hotel, to persons residing upon land which it had sold or otherwise transferred, and to others, but refused to sell such tickets at half rates to complainant, who, though living in the same locality, resided upon ground not acquired from the land company. HELD, upon the evidence presented, that no discrimination was practiced by the railway company; that the community of interest between the two corporations resulting from common ownership was not made a device for enabling the railway company to evade its legal obligations; and that the action of the land company in discriminating between persons in the sale of tickets for the benefit of its separate business is not subject to correction by the Commission. Wilson v. Rock Creek R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 83.

(l) A charge for interstate fares between two cities in different states, which is higher than the maximum charge for carriage of passengers allowed by the state statutes, is not unreasonable or otherwise unlawful, where the section of country between such points is particularly barren and sparsely settled, and the passenger receipts of the road have been decreasing for several years, and the conditions governing local passenger traffic of such road in one of the states are substantially dissimilar to those applying on its interstate passenger service between the two cities. Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transp. v. Charleston & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 601.

(m) The charge for the carriage of passengers between two points in different states need not be reduced under the Federal statute, because of the reduction of the maximum mileage rates in one of the states, subject to the right of the Commission of that state to restore the old rate under which the charge was fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transp. v. Charleston & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 601.

(n) Complainant was charged a through fare of $4.65 from W. to M., passing through R. although the sum of the fares from W. to R and from R. to M. was fifty cents less; but it appeared that the local fares to and from R. applied to and from different stations, and that the extra fifty cents covered a transfer charge. HELD, That as the complainant was not subjected to unjust discrimination and the reasonableness of the transfer charge was not attacked, the complaint must be dismissed. Behrend v. Washington Southern Ry. Co. et al, 9 I. C. C. 637.

(o) A passenger is not unjustly discriminated against by a railroad fare from Washington to Moseley passing through Richmond, although the fare is 50 cents in excess of the combined local fares, where the extra 50 cents covered a bus transfer charge. Behrend v. Washington, S. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 637.

(p) Complainant attacked as unreasonable passenger fare from Boston, Mass. to Janesville, Wis., as compared with the rate in the reverse direction. HELD, this was not unjust discrimination and did not, if itself render the higher rate unreasonable. MacLoon v. B. & M. R. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 642.

(q) A passenger fare from Boston, Mass., to Janesville, Wis., is not rendered unreasonable by the fact that it is $2.00 greater than the fare the passenger paid from Janesville to Boston. MacLoon v. Boston & M. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 642.

(r) Complainant attacked passenger fare charged from Niagara-on-the-Lake Canada, to Buffalo, N. Y., as unjustly discriminatory. The route is to Victoria, Canada, distance 30 miles, thence across the International Bridge to Black Rock, N. Y., and from there to Buffalo, 5 miles. The bridge is operated by an independent company which charges 6c for each passenger. The regular published fare is $1.10 but during the summer season it makes a special rate of 85c to meet competitioin. To get the benefit of the special 85c rate it is necessary to purchase a ticket at the station. Complainant failed to buy a ticket and was charged $1.10. When a railroad company makes a reduction from regular passenger fares which are not found unreasonable, it may lawfully require that a person desiring to avail himself of such reduction shall purchase a ticket, and that all person not holding such special reduced rate ticket shall pay the reasonable ordinary fare. HELD complaint dismissed. Cist v. M. C. R. R., 10 I. C. C. 217.

(s) When a railroad company makes a reduction from its regular rates, which are not found unreasonable, it may require that the person desiring to avail itself of that reduction shall purchase a ticket and that it may collect of all persons not holding such special ticket the reasonable ordinary fare. Cist. v. M. C. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 217, 219.

(t) An unlawful discrimination is made by charging of a given sum for rail transportation to Gardiner, Mont., and return only, and the acceptance of a smaller sum for the rail transportation when the passenger goes by stage to points in or through Yellowstone Park, with or without hotel accomodations therein, the service performed by the railway company being the same in each case. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 145.

(u) An arrangement between a railway company, stage transportation company, and a hotel association, under which coupon tickets are issued, covering transportation and hotel charges, constitutes and effects an undue and unreasonable preference and advantage to the transportation company and hotel association, and subjects the complainant, who operates a stage line, as well as the passengers, to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 145.

(v) The defendant railway company publishes rates entitling passengers to transportation over its line from St. Paul, Minn., and other points, including eastern cities, to Gardiner, Mont., and return, via Gardiner through the Yellowstone Park, a Government reservation, by stages of the defendant transportation company and return, and also, if desired, to accomodations at hotels in the Park conducted by the defendant association. Complainant also operates a stage line through the Yellowstone Park and has established permanent camps where hotel accomodations are furnished. Licensed camping parties are conducted through the Park by the interveners. Tickets issued by the defendant railroad company providing both railroad and stage transportation, and those also including hotel accomodations, are coupon tickets, covering the service by rail, by stage, and at the hotels, and the rates charged therefor are divided between the railway company and the stage company, or between the railway company, the stage company and the hotel company, as the case may be, in such manner that the railway company receives for its rail service less than its established rate to Gardiner and return. The joint rate and ticketing arrangement is solely between the railway company and the other defendants. The railway company admittedly controls the policy and operations of the other defendants. Excellent facilities for touring the Park are furnished by complainant. HELD: (1) That the defendant railway company, stage transportation company, and hotel association are not competent in law to form through routes and establish joint rates as provided in section 6 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and the circular or tariff under which the rates and tickets in question are provided cannot be regarded as a joint tariff established by connecting carriers under that Act. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co. et al, 11 I. C. C. 145. (2) That, upon the facts in this case, the charging of a given sum for rail transportation to Gardiner and return only, and the acceptance of a smaller sum for the rail transportation when the passenger goes by stage to points in or through Yellowstone Park, with or without hotel accomodations therein, the service performed by the railway company being the same in each case, constitutes unlawful discriminatioin. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co., et al, 11 I. C. C. 145. (3) That the arrangement between defendants under which the through tickets are issued and sold and the proceeds divided, and the joint operations of defendants as actually carried on, constitute and effect an undue and unreasonable preference and advantage to the transportation company and hotel association, and subject complainant and others in like situation, as well as passengers traveling to and from Yellowstone Park, to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage; and while it is not decided that a carrier subject to the Act may not in some cases provide for transportation beyond its own line by stage or other similar conveyance, the facts shown in this case establish a discrimination forbidden by law. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co., et al, 11 I. C. C. 145.

(w) It is the duty of the defendant railway company to so conduct and control its operations relating to the transportation of passengers to Yellowstone Park as to afford such passengers full and equal opportunities at the terminus of its line at Gardiner, and elsewhere, to select the stage line or other agency they may desire to use for touring the Park, and the places and manner of entertainment therein. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 145.

(x) Defendant's charge for passenger fare from Ellenton, S. C., to Augusta, Ga., 22 miles, is 80 cents, and from Jackson, S. C., to Augusta 15 miles, 60 cents, and these fares are alleged to be unreasonable. The local passenger fares in South Carolina and Georgia are controlled by a maximum of three cents per mile fixed by state authority. The distance covered between the points mentioned is via the C. & W. C. Ry. the other defendant, the A. C. L. R. Co., having certain trackage rights over part of the other line. All fares collected by the A. C. L. R. Co. for transportation between Ellenton or Jackson and Augusta are turned over to the C. & W. C. Ry. Co. The financial condition of the C. & W. C. Ry. Co is poor. The country along the line of this road, though long settled, is sparsely inhabited and the traffic is light. HELD: (1) That the rates fixed by the State Commissions of South Carolina and Georgia are presumptively reasonable, but such presumption is not conclusive and the railroad companies are entitled to show the contrary in a case involving the rates on interstate traffic. (2) That a railroad company is entitled to a fair return upon the value of that which it employs for the public convenience, and that in view of all the facts in this case, and previous decisions of the Commission cited, it is not apparent that the interstate passenger rates complained of are unreasonable. Brabham et al, v. Atlantic C. L. R. Co. et al, 11 I. C. C. 464.

(y) A commodity rate can not be applied to the transportation of passengers or a passenger rate to the transportation of a commodity. HELD, that newspaper employees can not lawfully be carried on special newspaper trains under a commodity rate established for the carriage of newspapers, or at any rate other than one specified in a regularly published schedule of passenger rates. In the matter of Free Transportation of Newspaper Employees on Special Newspaper Trains, 12 I. C. C. 16, 19.

(z) The defendant road being unfinished, without through connections, not extravagantly managed, under the necessity of making extensions required by public authority and the need of equipment and extension, and not earning sufficient to more than meet its operating expenses, and fixed charges not having been shown to be excessive, should not, in the judgement of the Commission, under all the circumstances at this time, be required to transport interstate passengers at the same rates per mile as are finished, well-equipped and prosperous roads. Railroad Commission of Ark. v. St. L. & Nor. A. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 233.

(aa) Complainant attacked passenger rates in effect on the St. Louis & North Arkansas Ry. This road runs from Seligman, Mo., a point on the Frisco to Leslie, Ark., 120 miles. Passenger rates in Arkansas are 3c per mile on all roads over 75 miles in length. The defendant road being unfinished, without through connections, not extravagantly managed, under the necessity of making extensions required by public authority and the need of equipment and extension, and not earning sufficient to more than meet its operating expenses, and fixed charges not having been shown to be excessive, should not, in the judgement of the Commission, be required to transport interstate passengers at the same rates per mile as are finished, well-equipped, and prosperous roads. HELD, complaint dismissed. Railroad Commission of Arkansas v. St. L. & N. A. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 234.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(bb) And the interests of the public can not go by default in any proceeding before Commission. Public interest requires highly efficient passenger service. Jewelers' Protective Union v. P. R. R. Co., 36 I. C. C. 71, 75.

(cc) The established formula for computing the rate per passenger per mile is to divide passenger revenue by the number of revenue passengers carried 1 mile. The computation is confined to revenue passengers and does not include free passengers, mail, express, baggage or any service other than revenue passengers and the fares they pay. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C. 1, 5.

(dd) Separation of maintenance of equipment, transportation, and traffic between freight and passenger traffic presents no insurmountable difficulties. The separation of the expenses incident to the maintenance of way and structures, however, is more difficult. These latter expenses in the main can not be directly allocated to the respective services. They are common expense necessary to and influenced by the necessities of both services but not wholly controlled by either. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C. 1, 12.

(ee) The high velocity of passenger trains, as compared with freight trains, necessitates a better maintenance standard on that account. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C. 1, 18.

(ff) Inasmuch as the greater speed of passenger trains necessitates more power than would be required were the speed less, it is asserted that the weights of the passenger locomotives bear some direct relation to both the weight and the speed of the trains they draw. The locomotive ton-mile therefore to a certain extent measures the work done by the engines in each class of service, and to a certain extent forms a measure of the wear on track and structures. There is, however, a large proportion of the expenses incident to the maintenance of way and structures that is influenced only to a small extent and certain expenses are not influenced at all by the weight and speed of the trains that pass over the tracks. The action of the elements and deterioration of materials will go on whether trains pass over the tracks or not. The effect of these natural agencies varies greatly with the location, the materials used in track structure, and with the season. It is uncertain how much of any particular item of expense is due to action of the elements and how much to wear. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C. 1, 18.

(gg) The expenses for maintenance of way and structures which apparently can not be at this time directly allocated as between passenger and freight upon the basis of the costs should be divided between passenger and freight as nearly as possible upon the basis of their respective utilization of this part of the plant. If one could correctly measure and compare the degree of utilization of the track and structures by these two branches of the service this comparison might serve as a basis for the division of these unallocated expenses. What is the best measure that can be obtained of this utilization of the track by these respectives services? In the absence of any certainty that the scale of passenger fares and that of freight rates is properly proportioned, the revenue derived from the respective services can not form a fair measure of this utilization. The absence of such a known relation between these charges, however, leads to an examination of certain expenses as probably indicative of the utilization of the track and structures. The fuel consumed by road locomotives drawing trains over the road; the lubricants, water, and other supplies for these locomotives; the train supplies; the wages of trainmen and enginemen, are all separated between passenger and freight, and each by itself or the aggregate of all will constitute an index of the utilization of the tracks by these two branches of the service. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C. 1, 22.

(hh) The public has a right to demand of the railroads that transportation shall be safe; that reasonably expedited service shall be furnished; that the number of trains operated shall be commensurate with the volume of traffic moving; that the trains and stations shall be clean, sanitary, and comfortable. For such services and facilities the carriers should be allowed under reasonable fares to earn a reasonable return upon the property used in that service. Neither competition nor the unreasonable demands of the public, however, must be made the excuse for waste and extravagance in the passenger service. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C. 1, 34.

(ii) Travel is influenced by so many different factors that statistical proof of the existence of casual relations between the volume of the movement of passengers and the level of the fares is generally impossible. The general deduction that travel may be influenced by the level of the fares will probably not be challenged in any quarter; nor can there be found much ground for questioning the statement that where the change in fares is decidedly marked, a corresponding change in the amount of travel may be attributed wholly or in a large part to such change. On the other hand, where changes in fares are relatively slight, it is doubtful whether any appreciable effect upon the volume of passenger movement will result therefrom. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C. 1, 40.

(jj) While the Commission should permit reasonable interstate fares it can not sanction fares that are higher than are reasonable for the service performed because intrastate fares are alleged or shown to be unduly low. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C., 1, 41.

(kk) The average receipts per passenger-mile in a given territory may diverge widely from the standard fare per mile in the same territory. Where commutation traffic has been extensively developed, the receipts from such service will depress heavily the average receipts per passenger-mile. And similarly the extent to which excursion fares, half rate fares, and mileage book fares are accorded will cause the average receipts per passenger-mile to fall below the standard fare per mile. So, too, the extent to which long lines by an abatement in fares meet the competition of short lines to a common destination and the extent to which state controlled fares preclude the application of higher fares for interstate travel will operate in the same general direction. Western Passenger Fares, 37 I. C. C. 1, 43, 44.

(ll) The terminal costs are about the same whether the passenger is intrastate or interstate. Intrastate fares within Illinois, 59 I. C. C. 350, 358.

(mm) Uniformity in passenger fares could not be maintained if it should become the policy of the Commission, in fixing fares, to consider as controlling the transportation characteristics of particular lines or portions of lines. South Carolina Fares and Charges, 60 I. C. C. 290, 296.

(nn) Cost of service is only one of the elements to be considered in determining what would be a proper relationship between intrastate and interstate fares. If it does cost more to handle one character of passenger traffic than the other it would not necessarily follow that there should be a difference in rates. Nebraska Rates, Fares and Charges, 60 I. C. C. 305, 308.

(oo) While the effect may be to divert traffic from the direct line, there is no inhibition in the act to prevent a circuitous carrier meeting the fares of a competitor between common termni, so long as such fares are not so unduly low as to place a burden on other traffic and to not contravene the provisions of section 4 of the act. Proportional Basing Fares to Ogden, 73 I. C. C. 434, 437.

(pp) Respondents proposed to cancel the application of special newspaper rates on illustrated newspaper supplements shipped in baggage cars on passenger trains prior to publication. The American Railway Express Company urged upon respondents its objections to their present tariffs on the ground that, under its contract for conducting express business over their lines, it was not permissible for respondents to transport these supplements from the printer to the publisher on passenger, mail or express trains, and these schedules were filed. If the suspended schedules become effective the considerably higher first class freight rate of respondents or first class express rates will be applicable. Respondents admit it is necessary and in the public interest that newspapers, milk, and emergency shipments such as oxygen tanks, should be given expedited service, and they have for many years provided such service in their baggage cars. It is a matter of common knowledge that many passenger trains which carry baggage do not carry express or mail. It seems clear that if these schedules are permitted to become effective the express service alone will be adequate to move this traffic. Protestants principal objection to that service rests upon the considerably higher rates which would apply. While the present rates are undoubtedly low, the Commission is not prepared upon this record to sanction the considerably higher charges that would become applicable for the only kind of service that would appear adequate upon the cancellation of the present rates. HELD, suspended schedules not justified. Cancellation of newspaper rates on illustrated newspaper supplements shipped from printers to publishers, 74 I. C. C. 336.

(qq) Attempts to evade the plain requirements of the fourth section of the act in the matter of passenger fares, by annexing different conditions relating to the amount of bagage carried, or to the time for which tickets are good, will receive no countenance by the commission. Fares between New York and Points West of Newark, 74 I. C. C. 516, 520.

(rr) Under section 2 prohibiting unjust discrimination, and section 3 prohibiting undue preferences, a passenger has no right to be transported over a longer route between two points at the tariff rate applicable to a shorter route. If he travel by the longer route, he must pay the fare applicable thereto and at the time chargeable to all persons traveling by that route and if he refuse to do so, it is not only the right but the duty of the conductor to refuse to carry him. Ligon v. St. L. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo. App., 1914), 168 S. W. 647, 649.

§3. Basing fares.

See Basing Points and Lines.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) It is lawful for a carrier or carriers having duly established in the manner required or authorized by law any form of excursion, commutation, or mileage fares, to provide in their schedules for the use of any of said fares as basing fares, thus enabling other carriers to use the same, in connection with their own duly established fares, for the through transportation of passengers on any physical line of connecting carriers, upon a combination of tickets over all of the component parts of such through lines, and for the carriers composing or operating such through line to afford through sleeping car, baggage, checking and other through accommodations in the same manner as in case of through tickets over the entire line, provided the passenger demanding such through transportation and through accommodation shall present to the initial carrier at the point of starting the lawfully authorized tickets covering the lines necessary for the entire through journey. It, however, is not deemed lawful for a carrier to check a passenger's baggage beyond the point to which he presents tickets at the point of starting, upon the mere declaration of intention to go farther upon another ticket, to be thereafter purchased or otherwise. In Re Mileage Excursion and Commutation Tickets, 23 I. C. C. 95, 96.

(b) Upon duly established tariff authority therefor the initial carrier may issue to a passenger a through ticket for the sum of two or more duly established fares applicable over the several connecting roads composing the through physical line from the starting point to destination, or may issue additional or separate ticket or tickets at lawful tariff fares therefor, which, in connection with the ticket or tickets already held by the passenger, will cover the entire journey that the passenger desires to take. In Re Mileage, Excursion and Commutation Tickets, 23 I. C. C. 95, 97.

§3. (1) Combination on state fares.

(a) Passenger fares on the C. & S. R.

Co., between Savannah, Ga., and points in South Carolina, exceed the combined state rate now in force, but most of them, including the fare between Savannah and Charleston, are less than the sum of state rates in effect prior to the South Carolina statute of March 9, 1896, which limits passenger fares in that state 3¼c per mile, unless otherwise provided by the State R. R. Commission, and abrogates a special rate of 4c per mile provided by this railway in an act of 1884. The interstate fare between Savannah and Charleston is equal to 3.826c per mile. The conditions governing local passenger traffic in South Carolina on the C. & S. R. Co., and those applying on the interstate passenger service of that railway between Savannah and Charleston are substantially dissimilar. HELD, that the federal statute contains no provision under which the interstate fares must necessarily be reduced because the South Carolina mileage rate was lowered by the state act of March 9, 1896, or be varied to a different mileage rate which may be fixed by the State Commission. That the interstate fares of the C. & S. Ry. between Savannah, Ga., and points in South Carolina are not unlawful upon the evidence in this case. Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transportation v. C. & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 601.

(b) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory passenger fare from Fernandino, Fla., to Savannah, Ga., which is higher than the local passenger rate of defendant in Georgia and Florida. Defendants passenger fare from Fernandino, Fla., to Savannah, Ga., 124 miles is $5.00, or about 4c per mile. A rate of 3c per mile is fixed by state authority for fares within Florida and Georgia. Defendants line between Savannah and Fernandino or Jacksonville is more expensive to maintain than other parts of its system. The freight traffic is light and the local passenger traffic is insignificant. A reduction of this interstate passenger fare would not contribute to development of the section or increase materially the passenger business of the line. Reducing the fare to 3c per mile would render the earnings of this part of the system less than the average upon the whole system and less than the average of other roads in that part of the country. HELD, that ordinarily the through interstate passenger fare should not exceed the sum of local fares, but there is no specific requirement in the regulating statute to that effect, and the only question for determination is whether the fare complained of is unreasonable. HELD, the fare charged can not be deemed excessive, complaint dismissed. Artz v. S. A. L. Ry., 11 I. C. C. 458.

(c) Complainant attacked as unreasonable passenger fare from Ellenton, S. C., to Augusta, Ga., and from Jackson, S. C., to Augusta, Ga. Fare from Ellenton is 80c for 22 miles and from Jackson, 15 miles, 60c. The local passenger fares in South Carolina and Georgia are controlled by a maximum of 3c per mile fixed by state authority. The financial condition of the road is poor, and the country along its line, though long settled, is sparsely inhabited and the traffic is light. HELD, the rates fixed by the State Commissions are presumptively reasonable, but such presumption is not conclusive and the railroad companies are entitled to show the contrary in a case involving the rates on interstate traffic, complaint dismissed. Brabham v. A. C. L. R. R., 11 I. C. C. 464.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) It is lawful for a carrier or carriers having duly established in the manner required or authorized by law any form of excursion, commutation, or mileage fares, to provide in their schedules for the use of any of said fares as basing fares, thus enabling other carriers to use the same, in connection with their own duly established fares, for the through transportation of passengers on any physical line of connecting carriers, upon a combination of tickets over all of the component parts of such through lines, and for the carriers composing or operating such through line to afford through sleeping car, baggage, checking and other through accommodations in the same manner as in case of through tickets over the entire line, provided the passenger demanding such through transportation and through accommodations shall present to the initial carrier at the point of starting the lawfully authorized tickets covering the lines necessary for the entire through journey. It, however, is not deemed lawful for a carrier to check a passenger's baggage beyond the point to which he presents tickets at the point of starting, upon the mere declaration of intention to go farther upon another ticket, to be thereafter purchased or otherwise. In Re Mileage, Excursion and Commutation Tickets 23 I. C. C. 95, 96.

§3. (2) State fares.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Interstate Commerce Commission has no power, upon an application for a suspension of § 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act, to allow or disallow a differential as to passenger rates in favor of a company on account of whose low rates suspension is sought by competing companies, though the question as to the propriety of such differential may influence it in deciding the application. Canadian Pacific Passenger Rate Differentials, 8 I. C. C. 71.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Petitioner requested the Commission to authorize use in Montana the interstate scale of passenger fares and excess baggage charges found reasonable on interstate traffic in 61 I. C. C. 500. Petitioner is a line of railroad 49 miles in length between Butte and Southern Cross, Mont., the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific Ry. Co. While petitioner has shown that its interstate passenger fares are now on a basis of 3.6 cents per mile, while its intrastate fares are but 3 cents per mile, the record is silent as to the effect on interstate commerce of this difference. For aught that appears of record, petitioners entire passenger and excess baggage revenue results from its intrastate traffic. HELD, there is no showing of such substantial disparity which operates as a real discrimination against, and obstruction to, interstate commerce as would warrant the order sought. Montana Rates and Fares, 77 I. C. C. 141.

§3. (3) The Fourth Section.

(a) Reductions in competitive passenger rates cannot legally be made without, at the same time reducing intermediate rates, as required by § 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act. Re Passenger Tariffs and Rate Wars (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 340, 341, 349.

(b) Additional transportation facilities and accommodations for passengers traveling to Chicago and return, during the World's Fair, are shown to be necessary to the convenience and safety of travelers. The petitioner has made provision for increased facilities by establishing a new route which can only be utilized by the acceptance of a lower rate from a longer distant point, and such acceptance without relief from the operation of the fourth section, will compel the reduction of rates which are reasonable from shorter distance points. HELD, to secure additional guaranties for the safety and convenience of the public under conditions like these is believed to be in accordance with the spirit and purpose of the act, and the relief from the operation of the fourth section will be granted. In petition of the C. H. & D. for relief from fourth section, 6 I. C. C. 323.

(ba) A common carrier which has established a reasonable excursion rate to the World's Fair from designated points may be relieved from the operation of the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 4, so as to charge a less amount from a longer-distance point without reducing the rate from the shorter-distance point, where the reduced amount is necessary to enable such carrier to compete with other roads, on the ground that the use of all routes of transportation is necessary for the safety and convenience of visitors. Re Rome, W. & O. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 328.

(c) The established rate for carrying passengers from Ogdensburg and points east of Richland on the R. W. & O., to Chicago and return had previously been $36.00, or $18 each way. After the opening of the World's Fair the Canadian roads established an excursion rate from the points referred to, to Chicago and return, of $24.00. The R. W. & O., and its connections established an excursion World's Fair rate, to Chicago and return of $25.75, which was reasonable, from shorter distance points south of Richland, including Syracuse, N. Y. The largely increased travel during the Chicago Exposition required the use of all routes of transportation for the greater safety and convenience of visitors. On application of the R. W. & O., to be relieved from the operation of the fourth section, relief was granted, and the petitioner was authorized, during the continuance of the World's Fair, to accept $24.00 to Chicago and return, the rate established by its competitors, the Canadian roads, without reducing its greater charge of $25.75 to shorter distance points, including Syracuse. Application of the R. W. & O., for relief from the fourth section., 6 I. C. C. 328.

(d) The Canadian Pacific Ry., operated through the Dominion of Canada, connects with lines which reach various sections of the United States, and that Railway is thereby enabled to engage in the carriage of passengers between numerous points in the United States, and of passengers traveling to and from the Klondike region in Canada, in competition with lines wholly within the United States and subject to the act. This foreign carrier has greatly reduced passenger fares currently in effect on such traffic, including those in force from Boston and other eastern points to St. Paul, Minn., and points on the Pacific coast, and from St. Paul to Pacific coast destinations, without the concurrence of its connecting American lines; and it makes such reduced rates effective by including therein the separately established rates of such connecting lines. The competing American lines must either meet the reduced rates of such foreign carrier, or lose their share of the traffic; and they can not make such reduced rates apply at intermediate points without suffering large loss of necessary revenue. HELD, that the petitioning American carriers should be relieved temporarily from the operation of the fourth section so that they may meet the competitive passenger rates of the Canadian Pacific, without making such rates effective on passenger traffic to or from intermediate points on their respective lines. In the matter of the application of the A. T. & S. F. R. Co. for a suspension of the fourth section., 7 I. C. C. 593.

(e) That a railroad company elects to take more time by its best line to reach a point than its competitors, while it substantially makes the same time by its inferior line, does not entitle it to a differential in passenger rates against competing lines, or furnish a ground for the denial of an application by the competing lines for the suspension of § 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act. Canadian Pacific Passenger Rate Differentials, 8 I. C. C. 71.

(f) The Canadian Pacific Ry. published reduced passenger rates via its line from Boston and New England territory to Seattle and points on the Pacific coast. Various American lines applied to the Commission for permission to meet these rates, under the proviso of the fourth section, without making them applicable at intermediate points. HELD, suspension orders granted. Canadian Pacific Passenger Rate Differentials, 8 I. C. C. 71.

§3a. Caretakers.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainant attacked the retention by defendants between Jan. 1, 1921 and Sept. 18, 1920, of passenger fares paid for the transportation of caretakers sent by the complainants to accompany shipment of livestock from California, Nevada and Utah, subjected them to payment of rates, fares and charges which were unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory and unduly prejudicial. Complainants are accustomed to send buyers into the country to purchase livestock, delivery of which is taken at the ranches or railroad stations. They then send out experienced drovers, retained in their employ to assemble the stock and accompany the shipments to their plants. This custom is due to the scarcity of public stock yards in this section. The rule had been in effect for some time prior to time complainant was filed and was subsequently restored. The fares were paid for transportation subsequently had. There is nothing unreasonable in the mere retention of those fares. It is only as an incident related to the movement of the livestock that the cancellation of the rule in question can be said to be unreasonable. The cancellation of the rule resulted in increased charges. The reasonableness of the fares as such, and of the aggregate fares is not attacked. It can be inferred that the making of the livestock rates in this territory, the cost of the passenger service was given due consideration. HELD, cancellation of the provision for free transportation unreasonable, reparation awarded. Western Meat Co. v. Director General, 83 I. C. C. 218.

§4. Certificate plan.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Defendant carriers published tariffs for the letter carriers' convention at St. Paul, Minn., 1909, which carried the provision that a rate of a fare and a half on the certificate plan would apply to this occasion from points east of the Missouri River, on condition that a thousand or more persons be in attendance by rail, holding certificates which show the purchase of one-way tickets at one dollar or more. It was also provided that passengers must purchase one-way tickets at place of meeting or normal (not special or reduced) one-way fare and obtain a certificate receipt. The receipt when signed by the secretary of the meeting and stamped by the joint agent, to be honored for "delegate" return ticket at reduced fare. Attendance at the convention was over 1,400, but there were only 888 certificates. The St. Louis delegation purchased 106 summer tourist's round-trip tickets, St. Louis to St. Paul, and return, and the Kansas City delegation 39½ round-trip tickets, Kansas City to St. Paul and return. The agent refused to validate any certificates unless there were 1.000 or more present, and would not allow the tickets from St. Louis to Kansas City to be counted. HELD, that the certificate plan be approved; that the tariffs must control, and that reparation would not be allowed to those certificate holders who had been compelled to pay the full fare on the return. National Ass'n of Letter Carriers v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 6.

§4½. Conductor's penalty charge.

(a) A regulation published on public tariff schedules, that the conductor shall collect fare on trains from passengers without tickets by adding 25 cents to single-trip rates, does not make an unjust discrimination. Sidman v. Richmond, & D. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 766.

(b) It was a regulation of the respondent Company, published on its public tariff schedules filed and posted as required by the Act to Regulate Commerce, that the conductor should collect fare on trains from passengers without tickets by adding 25 cents to single trip rates. HELD, that it was not unjust discrimination against the complainant to exact this addition from him. Sidman v. Richmond & Danville R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 766.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Conductor's penalty charge, if reasonable in amount and in the conditions under which it is levied, has been recognized as proper by the Commission and the courts. South Carolina Fares and Charges, 60 I. C. C. 290, 298.

(d) The failure of carriers to make a conductor's penalty charge, in addition to the regular fares against intrastate passengers who board trains without tickets at points where they might have been purchased, while maintaining such a charge against interstate passengers; or, maintaining lower penalty charges intrastate than interstate, found unduly prejudicial to interstate passengers, unduly preferential of intrastate passengers, and unjustly discriminatory against interstate commerce. Penalty charge of not in excess of 15 cents prescribed. South Carolina Fares and Charges, 60 I. C. C. 290, 303; North Carolina Fares and Charges, 60 I. C. C. 362.

§5. Commutation fares.

See Commutation Fares.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Mileage, excursion, or commutation passenger tickets must be offered impartially to all who accept the conditions on which they are issued, and the rates at which they are sold must be published. The general requirements of the Act to Regulate Commerce as amended are as applicable to these classes of tickets as to any others. Re Passenger Tariffs (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 445.

(b) One who purchased a quarterly commutation ticket thirteen days after the quarter began is not entitled to recover any portion of the purchase price on account of the fact that a portion of the term had expired. Sidman v. Richmond & D. R. Co., (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 766.

(c) The respondent issued commutation tickets for a stated number of trips within a specified time, subject to several conditions, one of which was that the purchaser should have no claim for rebate on account of non-use of the ticket from any cause; another that it be presented to the conductor for cancellation of each trip when taken. A commuter had to pay the conductor full fare if he did not have his ticket, but in such cases the respondent had fallen into the habit of refunding the same on presentation of the ticket for cancellation of the trip at the proper office of the Company. About three weeks prior to the complainant's purchase of his ticket, the respondent had discontinued this habit and had given notice to that effect in a new tariff sheet filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and posted in the stations of the railroad as required by law on a change of tariff rates. HELD, that it was not an unlawful discrimination to refuse to refund to the complainant who held such ticket, but had forgotten to take it on a certain trip and had paid his fare, notwithstanding he supposed the former custom was in vogue when he purchased his ticket. Sidman v. Richmond & Danville R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 766.

(d) It is not an unlawful discrimination to refuse to refund money paid by a person who had forgotten his commutation ticket, after the carrier had discontinued a former practice of refunding in such cases, and had given proper notice to that effect, although the passenger supposed the custom was in vogue when he purchased his ticket. Sidman v. Richmond & D. R. Co. (Com) 2 I. C. R. 766.

(e) The action of the defendants in withdrawing the 180 trip quarterly ticket between Baltimore and Washington was within the limits of their discretion, and did not constitute a violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce. (Clements, Commissioner, dissenting), Sprigg v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 443.

(f) Under section 22 of the Act, carriers are allowed to issue mileage, excursion and commutation tickets, but ordinarily they cannot be compelled to do so. To the extent necessary for their use, tickets of the description named are exempt from the general rules of the statute. Compliance with those rules may be directed by the Commission, but requiring exceptions thereto is not within its province; and this applies as well to the restoration of such tickets where they have been withdrawn, as to the refusal to furnish them where their introduction has been requested. (Clements, Commissioner, dissenting), Sprigg v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 443, 451.

(g) The provision in section 22, above referred to, authorizes special rates to commuters, which are less per mile than the charges to other passengers for longer distances. Such a relation of rates must exist at certain points along any system of commutation. The most remote point within a commutation district secures lower rates per mile than the next and more distant point without that district; but the discrimination thus created is not unjust, nor are places outside the commutation territory thereby subjected to undue prejudice. Sprigg v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 443.

(h) The provision of § 22 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, allowing the issuance of mileage, excursion, and commutation tickets, authorizes special rates to commuters, which are less per mile than the charges to other passengers for longer distances. The discrimination thus created is not unjust, nor are places outside the commutation territory thereby subjected to undue prejudice. Sprigg v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 443.

(i) Complainant alleged the withdrawal by defendants of the 180 trip quarterly ticket between Baltimore, Md. and Washington, D. C., as unreasonable and a violation of the Act. The Commission is of the opinion that the act of withdrawing this ticket was within the limits of the discretion of the carriers, and did not constitute a violation of the act. The provision in section 22 authorizes special rates to commuters, which are less per mile than the charges to other passengers for longer distances. Such a relation must exist at certain points under any system of commutation. The most remote point within a commutation district secures lower rates per mile than the next and more distant point without that district; but the discrimination thus created is not unjust, nor are places outside the commutation territory thereby subjected to undue prejudice. Sprigg v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 443.

(j) Interstate commerce is not affected by Mich. Pub. Acts 1891, No. 90, providing that 1,000 mile tickets shall be kept for sale by railroads, at not more than $20 each, in the Lower Peninsula, or $25 each in the Upper Peninsula, as this refers to the place where the tickets are to be used, rather than to the place of sale, and does not provide for their use outside of the state. Smith v. Lake Shore & Mich. Southern Ry. Co., 8 I. C. C. App. XXVIII.

(k) No opinion expressed upon lawfulness of carrier's practice of transporting packages of a certain kind free for commuters or passengers, nor as to whether it may, as a part of the contract of sale of a commutation ticket, or ticket, to a suburban station, provide that the privileges of a parcels express operated in conjunction with an express company should be extended to the holder of such ticket. Walker v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 196.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(l) Commutation fares are entirely different from mileage books. Commutation Rate Case, 21 I. C. C. 428, 434.

(m) The prosperity and growth of many communities throughout the country depend upon an efficient and reasonable commutation service. Many such communities have not only been encouraged by the carriers, but were, in fact, originally established largely on their initative. Suburban property has been bought, homes have been established, business relations made, and the entire course of life of many families adjusted to the conditions created by a commutation service. This may not have been done on the theory that the fares in effect at any particular time would always be maintained as maximum fares, but countless homes have been established in suburban communities in the belief that there would be a reasonable continuity in the fares, and that the carriers in any event would perform the service at all times for a reasonable compensation. Suburban communities have grown into existence on the theory, voluntarily accepted by the carriers as well as by the public, that one who makes daily use of an agency of transportation between his place of business and his home must necessarily be accorded a special and a low rate. This theory is firmly fixed in the history and traditions of transportation by rail and must, therefore, be regarded as embraced in the law under which such transportation is regulated. Commutation Rate Case, 21 I. C. C. 428, 437, 442.

(n) Commutation traffic stands by itself as a special and distinct kind of service, for which the carrier may demand no more than a reasonable compensation. Excursion traffic is sporadic and occasional, and altogether exceptional. Unlike excursion traffic, commutation traffic is neither occasional, nor sporadic but, on the contrary, is characterized by an unusual regularity in volume; it may be accurately measured and provided for more readily than in the case of any other kind of passenger traffic. It is ordinarily constant, except as it may gradually grow in volume. Its stability is established by the juxtaposition of a community of homes and a community of workshops; and this separation of the place of residence from the place of work is in many cases the direct result of the efforts of the carrier. It has been encouraged, developed, and fostered by the carriers and large and numerous suburban communities have grown up in the belief, not that some fare less than the normal full passenger fare would be demanded in the future, but in the belief that no more than a just and reasonable fare would at any time be exacted, considering the special character of the traffic and of the service and the conditions that differentiate both the traffic and the service so completely and absolutely from all other kinds of passenger traffic and service. That it has been regarded as a different class of traffic conducted under entirely different conditions and a different kind of service is shown, not only by the origin of commutation and the subsequent traditions that have accumulated with its growth, but by the general recognition of it by the carriers themselves as an independent and a special service. This being so, there is no reason why the reasonableness of the fares demanded for the service may not be looked into by the Commission under section 1. It is conceded on behalf of the principal complainant that a carrier may not be compelled under the present law to undertake a commutation service and to establish commutation rates. That is probably true. But having undertaken a definite and regular commutation service such as is shown of record on the part of each of the defendants in this proceeding, the power as well as the duty of the Commission under section 1 to examine into the reasonableness of the charges exacted when complaint has been made seems to be beyond question. Reading section 22 (which provides "that nothing in this Act shall prevent . . . the issuance of mileage, excursion or commutation passenger tickets") in the light of the special nature and character of commutation traffic and service, the utmost that reasonably may be said of it as applied to commutation tickets is that it constitutes a statutory recognition of the fact that commutation is a different kind of traffic. Commutation Rate Case, 21 I. C. C. 428, 441, 442, 443.

(o) Improvements which required expenditures of large sums of money, which have added to the efficiency of the service, and therefore to its value to the commuters, are entitled to some recognition in determining the reasonableness of the increased commutation rates. Commutation Rate Case, 21 I. C. C. 428, 444.

(p) Commutation traffic is sometimes a by-product, a sort of pick-up traffic, incidental to other traffic which is productive of greater remuneration; a traffic which adds slightly to the income, and which were it not present would permit but little decrease in expense. Commutation Fares to and from Washington, D. C., 33 I. C. C. 428, 434.

(q) The nature of commutation traffic must be considered. Passenger traffic is generally recognized as being dependent upon factors different from those controlling freight; and its fares are constructed upon bases dissimilar from those of freight rates. However, just as commodities of low grade take rates lower than other commodities though the cost of carrying may often be the same, commutation traffic frequently takes lower fares than passenger traffic generally, and on the same supplemental principle, and not altogether because of the sale of transportation in quantity. It has not been held by the carriers to the same degree of per unit remunerativeness and probably can not be. This does not imply, however, that the carriers are to carry at an actual loss or without some margin of profit. Commutation Fares to and from Washington, D. C., 33 I. C. C. 428, 434.

(r) In fixing reasonable fares for commutation traffic elements other than cost which determine reasonableness must not be glossed over. Value of the service to the habitual traveler, if often vaguely conceived, is none the less a real factor; and fares tending to put the use of the railroads beyond the reach of the average commuter of a particular region or which might tend to compel on a large scale changes of residence, or which tend to disrupt the community life of those dependent upon this service, must be viewed in the light of the carrier's obligation as a common carrier designed for community service. Commutation Fares to and from Washington, D. C., 33 I. C. C. 428, 435.

(s) The fundamental matter for determination is what is a reasonable price for the commuter to pay who travels every day; whether the ticket upon which he travels be for one month or for three months neither alters the value of the service to the commuter nor the cost to the carrier. Commutation Fares to and from Washington, D. C., 33 I. C. C. 428, 437.

(t) When it is considered that the development of our suburban communities has the beneficial effect of reducing the concentration of population in large cities, and that the welfare both of the city and of the suburb depends in large measure upon the existence of efficient and reasonably inexpensive means of transportation, it is obvious that some form of commutation or trip ticket may be regarded as an economic and social necessity. Proposed Increases in New England, 49 I. C. C. 421, 447.

(u) Where a railroad company has recognized the propriety and necessity of rendering a peculiar service to suburban communities by establishing commutation rates, a state may, without committing any violation of the federal constitution, regulate such rates within the limitation of reasonableness, and may fix rates for the special services rendered commuters, different from those charged for the general service, as the service rendered a commuter carrying little baggage and riding many times on a single ticket for short distances, is of a special character, and different from that given the single way passenger. §5¼. Compartments, Parlor Cars, and Drawing Rooms.

(a) It is not a violation of law to charge a higher parlor car rate in one direction on certain trains than is charged in the other direction on all trains between the same points, provided the carrier furnishes adequate parlor car accommodations at the lower rates. Hewins v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 221.

(b) A discrimination against passengers by reason of charging on three of defendant's trains a parlor car rate higher than the regular parlor car rate is not undue or unreasonable, where the defendant's run numerous trains daily on which parlor car seats may be had at the lower rates. Hewins v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 221.

(c) Complainant attacked as unduly discriminatory parlor car fare charged by defendant between New York, N. Y., and Boston. Defendant has numerous through daily trains between New York and Boston, Mass., on which the through parlor car fare is $1, on all trains from intermediate points the parlor car fare is 50 or 75c according to distance, and on three trains the parlor car rate is $1 to any intermediate point. HELD, it is not a violation of law to charge more in one direction on certain trains than is charged in another direction on all trains between the same points. Defendant furnishes adequate parlor car accomodations at the lower rates for local and short distance passengers, and the discrimination against such passengers by reason of the $1 rate to intermediate points on three of defendant's trains is not undue or unreasonable. Hewins v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., 10 I. C .C. 221.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) Complainant attacked the requirement that a passenger desiring the exclusive use of a Pullman drawing-room must present two first-class railroad tickets as unreasonable and discriminatory, and also challenged the legality of a tariff rule under which a passenger holding two railroad tickets was not permitted to check free more baggage than a passenger holding only one ticket. He was not permitted to procure a Pullman drawing-room for the exclusive use of his wife from St. Paul, Minn., to Chicago, Ill., until he had purchased two tickets; and her baggage weighing 225 lbs. he was charged for the excess over 150 lbs. HELD (1) following Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 36 I. C. C. 250, that the rule requiring the purchase of two tickets was not unreasonable; and (2) that the allegation with respect to the alleged illegal excess baggage charge could not be considered, as not all of the proper parties were made defendants; but (3) that the rule was open to criticism in that it prescribed the maximum weight and value of baggage which would be checked free for each passenger, instead of for each ticket. Complaint dismissed. Carter v. M. St. P. & S. Ste. M. Ry., 43 I. C. C. 51.

(a) Proposal to establish, in lieu of a 5-cent fare, and 8-cent interstate local passenger fare between Jersey City and Hoboken, N. J., and Hudson Terminal station, New York, N. Y., down-town, and a 7-cent fare between Jersey City and Hoboken and stations in New York City, Christopher street to Thirty-third street, inclusive, uptown, found not justified, but present 6-cent fare down-town and 10-cent fare uptown, established by special permission of the Commission in order that respondent might obtain additional revenue to which it was prima facie entitled, found justified. CASES 1887-1908

(a) Complainant attacked excessive charges in the sale of thousand mile tickets and defendant made a motion to dismiss complaint. HELD, a motion to dismiss a complaint denied, because, no notice of motion had been given; and because the object of the motion was to reach the merits of the case and have them passed upon summarily, instead of at the customary final hearing. It is the desire of the Commission that the practice and proceedings shall be as simple as possible, and that final hearings be had forthwith, without the interposition of dilatory motions, etc. Associated Wholesale Grocers of St. Louis v. M. P. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 321, 323.

(b) Twenty-five dollars for 1,000 miles is not unreasonable for a mileage ticket. Associated Wholesale Grocers v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 321, 393.

(c) A sale of mileage tickets to commercial travelers at a certain rate, and refusal to sell to other passengers, except at a higher rate, is an unjust discrimination, within the meaning of the Act. Larrison v. Chi. & Grand Trunk R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 369.

(d) Persons belonging to the class known as commercial travelers are not privileged to ride over railroads at lower rates than other persons, and to make a difference in this respect is unjust discrimination; this is true whether tickets issued are mileage tickets or in some other form. (e) Neglect on the part of a railroad company to publish rates for mileage tickets, is a violation of the Act. Larrison v. Chic. & Grand Trunk R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 369.

(f) Common carriers may continue the issuance of mileage passenger tickets, the charges for which must be reasonable and just and free from unjust discrimination or unreasonable preference. Larrison v. Chic. & Grand Trunk R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 369.

(g) A release of liability by commercial travelers to the railroad company does not constitute a good and sufficient consideration for such discrimination; nor does the fact that they may influence business in favor of the road, etc. Larrison v. Chic. & Grand Trunk R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 369.

(h) The proviso in §22 of the Interstate Commerce Act "That nothing in this Act shall apply to . . . the issuance of mileage . . . passenger tickets applies only to the act of issuing or giving out such tickets; the terms, condition and circumstances upon which the sale of such tickets is made are subject to and must be in accordance with the Act in its general provision. Larrison v. Chic. & Grand Trunk R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 369.

(i) Complainant alleged unjust discrimination and neglect to publish fares, rates and charges for mileage tickets from Port Huron and Detroit, Mich., to Chicago, Ill. Defendant refused to sell to complainant a thousand mile ticket on the ground that complainant was not a commercial traveler. HELD, this was unjust discrimination as it had the effect of charging one person more than another and in contravention of the Act. Louis Larrison v. C. & G. T. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. 369.

(ia) Complainant alleged unjust discrimination and neglect to publish fares, rates and charges for mileage tickets from Port Huron and Detroit, Mich., to Chicago, Ill. HELD, the proviso in section 22 of the Act that nothing in this act shall apply to the issuance of mileage passenger tickets applies only to the act of issuing or giving out such tickets; the terms, conditions and circumstances upon which the sale of such tickets is made are subject to and must be in accordance with the Act in its general provision. (k) Rate at which excursion or commutation tickets are sold does not entitle mileage ticket purchaser to complain of unjust discrimination if charged a higher rate. Associated Wholesale Grocers v. Missouri Pac. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 393.

(lm) HELD, that upon the evidence offered, the Commission cannot find that $25 per 1,000 miles is an unreasonable rate for mileage tickets. Asso. Wholesale Grocers of St. Louis v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 393.

(n) The fact that excursion or commutation tickets are put on sale at a given rate, does not entitle the purchaser of a mileage ticket (each class of tickets being issued for distinct purposes and the form of contract in each case being different) to complain of unjust discrimination if charged a higher rate. (o) Commercial travelers are not entitled to mileage tickets at lower prices than they are sold to the public generally. Asso. Wholesale Grocers of St. Louis v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 393.

(oa) Complainant attacked charges as excessive in the sale of thousand mile tickets. HELD, the fact that excursion or commutation tickets are put on sale at a given rate, does not entitle the purchaser of a mileage ticket (each class of tickets being issued for distinct purposes and the form of contract in each case being different) to complain of unjust discrimination if charged a higher rate. Upon the evidence offered, the Commission can not find that $25 per 1,000 miles is an unreasonable rate for mileage tickets. Commercial travelers are not entitled to mileage tickets at lower prices than they are sold to the public generally. Associated Wholesale Grocers of St. Louis v. M. P. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 393.

(ob) Complainant charged discrimination in selling tickets to land explorers and settlers at lower rates than to the general public. The Northern Pacific has been accustomed to sell tickets to land seekers or explorers at its land office in St. Paul, thus enabling them to go out on the line of its road and inspect the land which it has for sale, at about one half of the regular rate for round trip tickets. It has also been accustomed to sell tickets to settlers, passing through St. Paul with their effects and who are about to purchase railroad or public lands, at low rates. These explorers and settlers are carried on regular trains. After the Act went into effect the sale of these special classes of tickets was for a time discontinued, but was resumed in May, and complaint was made to the Commission. HELD, the Law does not permit the sale of tickets to any class of people at rates different from those established for the general public. The fact that it is very desirable for the defendant to make sale of its lands is not a reason for discriminating in favor of explorers or settlers; the same reason would apply in case a company should desire to stimulate its freight traffic or any other branch of its business by the use of reduced rates or free transportation to customers. That the claim that the settlement of the western territories should be promoted by special facilities of transportation to emigrants, is a claim proper to be addressed to the legislative body, but not for consideration in interpreting the present statute; and moreover the Company is able, by excursion rates open to all, and by making allowances upon the price charges for its land of part or all of cost of tickets, to perhaps accomplish the desired effect to a sufficient extent without violation of the law. That the means, occupation or purpose of parties are not proper considerations upon which to found discriminations among them. The N. P., is therefore notified to desist from selling either of said special classes of tickets at rates less than the regular rates charged to the general public. Smith v. N. P. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 611.

(oc) That the claim that the settlement of the western territories should be promoted by special facilities of transportation to emigrants, is a claim proper to be addressed to the legislative body, but not for consideration in interpreting the present statute; and moreover the Company is able, by excursion rates open to all, and by making allowances upon the price charged for its land of part or all of cost of tickets, to perhaps accomplish the desired effect to a sufficient extent without violation of the law. Smith v. N. P. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 611, 620.

(p) Mileage, excursion, or commutation passenger tickets, must be offered impartially to all who accept the conditions on which they are issued, and the rates at which they are sold must be published. The general requirements of the Act to Regulate Commerce as amended are as applicable to these classes of tickets as to any others. Re Passenger tariffs 2 I. C. R. 445, 447.

(q) When a railroad company sells mileage tickets, it must sell them impartially to all the public who apply for them; and their sale to a particular class of persons at lower rates than are charged to others is unjust discrimination. P. C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. B. & O. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 729, 731.

(r) The Interstate Commerce Act was not designed to prevent competition between different roads, or to interfere with the customary arrangement made by railway companies for reduced fares in consideration of increased mileage, where such reduction does not operate as an unjust discrimination against other persons traveling over the road. Interstate Commerce v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (U. S. Sup. Ct.) 4 I. C. R. 92.

(s) A carrier is not compelled to give special excursion rates to one political convention because it has given them to a similar convention of another political party on another date. Cator v. Southern P. R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 397.

(t) Complainant attacked as unjustly discriminatory special excursion rates in effect to California and return. HELD under the statute the defendants had a legal right to withhold or put into effect an open excursion rate to Omaha, and such right was not affected by the fact that open excursion rates, lower than regular rates of fare, had been in force over their connecting roads during the month previous. Comparison of the rates charged to complainant and others in July for transportation from San Francisco to Omaha and return with reduced excursion rates charged for the transportation of persons from San Francisco to Chicago and Minneapolis in June of the same year, does not of itself present a discrimination or preference which the act empowers this Commission to correct. Cator v. S. P. Co., 4 I. C. C. 397.

Cator v. Southern Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 397.

(v) The allowance of excess mileage by railroad receivers to employees will be approved by the court for portions of the road running through mountains and desert country, where competent men cannot be kept at regular rates, but where such course was entirely successful as employed by the company. Ames v. Union Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

Thos. V. Cator v. S. P. Co. & U. P. Ry. Co., 6 I. C. C. 113.

(y) A State statute requiring every railroad company operating a railroad in the State more than 100 miles in length and authorized to charge a maximum fare of not more than 3 cents per mile to use mileage books will be construed, in the case of a railroad having more than that number of miles in the State but whose lines extend into other States, to apply solely to commerce within the State. Beardsley v. N. Y. L. Erie & Western R. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. App. XC.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(z) The language of section 22 of the Act, to the effect that nothing in the Act shall prevent the issuance of mileage, excursion or commutation passenger tickets, is permissive and does not give the Commission any authority to require interstate carriers to sell interstate transportation in that form. Eschner v. Penn. R. R. Co., 18 I. C. C. 60, 63.

(aa) In permitting the continued sale and use of mileage books for passenger transportation, Congress has to some extent recognized the principle involved therein, sometimes referred to as the "wholesale theory" of transportation; but such books, if issued, must be free from discriminatory classifications and must be open to all who can avail themselves of their use. National Baggage Com. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 32 I. C. C. 152, 156.

(bb) The use of mileage books is merely a privilege accorded by carriers voluntarily, and that purchasers take them subject to all lawful and nondiscriminatory conditions attached to them. Section 22 of the Act provides expressly that nothing in the Act shall prevent the issuance of mileage, excursion, or commutation passenger tickets, which provision has always been construed as permissive and never as authorizing the Commission to compel the issuance of such tickets. Rules and Regulations Governing Checking of Baggage, 35 I. C. C. 157, 160.

(cc) Travelers are not the only parties interested in excursion fares. The Act to Regulate Commerce makes it unlawful for any common carrier subject to its provisions to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage not only to "any particular person" but to any "locality." It is clear that in some instances discriminatory rate adjustments may operate less to the prejudice of passengers or shippers than to rival communities or localities which are endeavoring to develop their natural resources and increase the prosperity of their people. Public Service Commission of Wash. v. A. & V. Ry. Co., 42 I. C. C. 54, 63.

(dd) If travelers want mileage tickets as a convenience and not as a discrimination, there is no great objection to permitting their sale. Proposed Increases in New England, 49 I. C. C. 421, 444.

(ee) Upon investigation, pursuant to section 22 of the Act, as amended, certain carriers by rail required to issue nontransferable interchangeable scrip coupon ticket in the denomination of $90, which shall be sold at a reduction of 20 per cent from the face value of the ticket. Interchangeable Mileage Ticket Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 200.

(ff) The Commission instituted an investigation under section 22 of the Act for the purpose of issuing interchangeable mileage or scrip coupons at just and reasonable rates, good for passenger carriage upon the passenger trains of all carriers subject to the act. All parties who appeared at the hearing were in substantial agreement with respect to most of the conditions, rules, and regulations under which the tickets shall be issued. Every convenience or advantage adherent in a mileage ticket appears to be more completely and satisfactorily met by a scrip coupon ticket, both from the standpoint of the passenger and of the carrier. The amount of the rate is the most important question. CLASSIFICATION. Carriers have long recognized different classes of travel for each of which different rates of fare have been exacted; such as, the standard, the commutation, the convention, the excursion, and the summer and winter tourist. On June 10, 1918, the director general abolished all mileage books and established in lieu thereof an interchangeable scrip coupon ticket sold at the standard fare and good on all passenger trains operated by railroads under federal control. It was established to relieve congestion at ticket offices in the larger cities and partly to take the place of the mileage book and thus afford the public the convenience of boarding trains for short trips without the necessity of purchasing a ticket at the ticket office for each trip. Carriers have never issued an interchangeable mileage ticket good for use on all railroads in all parts of the country. Mileage tickets were issued good for use over particular lines and were interchangeable as to carriers within defined territories, sometimes including a large number of railroads. The demand for an interchangeable mileage or scrip coupon ticket comes chiefly from organizations of commercial travelers. The question whether the mileage or scrip coupon ticket at reduced fare will stimulate travel sufficiently to increase or to equalize any loss in revenue that might result must remain in the realm of speculation until and unless such a ticket is established and experience recorded. The evidence neither proves the affirmative nor the negative of the question whether the mileage book used in the past stimulated travel and whether reductions in fares increased the number of revenue passenger miles. HELD, rail carriers shall establish a nontransferable interchangeable scrip coupon ticket in the denomination of $90, which shall be sold at a reduction of 20% from the face value of the ticket, good for one year, for carriage of passengers on all passenger trains operated by respondents. Interchangeable mileage ticket investigation 77 I. C. C. 200.

(gghh) The scrip ticket contemplates the issuance of a book of coupons which for passenger travel are equivalent to currency, the coupons being detached by the ticket agent or conductor to cover the transportation charge at the time the service is performed. Interchangeable Mileage Ticket Investigation 77 I. C. C. 202.

(ii) Section 22 of the act, as amended, contemplates that carriers shall be required to recognize an additional class of passenger travel and to provide a special form of ticket which shall be used at just and reasonable rates fixed by the commission. Interchangeable Mileage Ticket Investigation 77 I. C. C. 204.

(jj) A scrip ticket at reduced fares could not be justified solely upon the theory that the cost per passenger-mile might thereby be reduced, although it is apparent that anything that will tend to cause a fuller utilization of passenger-train facilities without overcrowding will also tend to reduce the average cost per passenger-mile. Interchangeable Mileage Ticket Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 200, 209.

(kk) Section 22 of the Act as amended, does not upon its face indicate upon what basis an interchangeable mileage or scrip ticket should be issued. The spirit and intended theory of the law is that carriers shall be required to sell such a ticket at something less than the standard fare, which would be just and reasonable because it would be sold in such quantities as to stimulate travel and thereby increase net revenue or at least offset any loss in revenue that might result from the reduction, in which event carriers would render greater service to the public. Interchangeable Mileage Ticket Investigation 77 I. C. C. 209.

(ll) In 77 I. C. C. 200 the Commission required carriers to establish, issue and maintain at their offices a nontransferable interchangeable scrip coupon ticket in the denomination of $90, which shall be sold at a reduction of 20% from the face value of the ticket, and that such ticket shall be good within one year from date of sale. Rules and regulations not agreed upon relate to (a) the character of the identification which shall be required, (b) whether the scrip coupon ticket shall be good for carriage on all passenger trains upon presentation to conductors or shall be good only when such coupon ticket has been exchanged for one way or round trip ticket, and (c) the baggage privileges to which the lawful holders of the tickets are entitled and whether the coupons shall be accepted by the respondents in payment of excess baggage charges. The owner of the coupon ticket shall be required to identify himself by photograph and autograph. An autograph requirement standing alone would not be sufficient to protect the nontransferability of the ticket. HELD, the ticket should be protected by both photograph and autograph. The second rule in dispute provides that coupons must be exchanged at ticket offices for one way or round trip tickets. HELD, the practical and revenue aspects of the situation appear to the Commission to be of greater and of more controlling importance than the inconvenience to passengers, under the rule that coupons must be exchanged for tickets, although when stations are crowded the inconvenience may be serious. HELD, respondent rule should be approved. Respondents rule with respect to baggage provides that, with the exceptions of passengers who board trains at nonagency stations, baggage will not be checked except on presentation of a one way ticket, issued in exchange for scrip. HELD, respondents rule with respect to baggage is reasonable. The rule providing scrip tickets will be sold at stations at which interline tickets are sold is reasonable. Interchangeable Mileage Ticket Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 647.

(mm) Act Aug. 18, 1922, amending Interstate Commerce Act § 22, by directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to require interstate carriers of passengers to issue interchangeable mileage or scrip coupon tickets, HELD within the constitutional power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce. New York Cent. R. Co. v. United States 288 Fed. 951.

(nn) Interstate Commerce Act, § 22, as amended by Act Aug. 18, 1922, by directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to require the issuance by interstate carriers of interchangeable mileage or scrip coupon tickets, does not require the Commission to order such tickets to be issued at reduced rates, but at "just and reasonable rates," to be determined by the Commission, and an order made thereunder, requiring the issuance of such tickets at reduced rates, not fixed by the Commission in the exercise of its own independent judgment, but based on an erroneous interpretation of the statute, or on the assumed intention of Congress is without warrant of law. New York Cent. R. Co. v. United States, 288 Fed. 951.

§6½ Military Passengers.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Upon complaint alleging unjust discrimination in granting reduced fares to officers, enlisted men, or nurses of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps, when on furlough, but not when on short term passes and liberties from ships or stations to nearby cities HELD: Commission without authority to determine the justness and reasonableness of the distinction, which was authorized by the President for purposes connected with the war emergency. Golden v. Director General, 53 I. C. C. 385.

(b) Minimum charge per passenger required by state authority to be maintained within the state, lower than the corresponding interstate charge authorized in Increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C. 220, found unduly prejudical to interstate passengers, unduly preferential of intrastate passengers, and unjustly discriminatory against commerce. South Carolina Fares and Charges, 60 I .C. C. 290, 303; North Carolina Fares and Charges. 60 I. C. C. 362.

(c) Charges for transportation of passengers in sleeping and parlor cars required by state authority to be maintained in the state of Alabama, lower than the corresponding interstate charges authorized in Increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C., 220, found unduly preferential of intrastate passengers, unduly prejudicial to interstate passengers, and unduly discriminatory against interstate commerce. Surcharge for Sleeping Car Service in Alabama, 62 I. C. C. 153.

§7 Party Rates.

See Reasonableness of Rates §25.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Party rates and passenger car load rates, lower than contemporaneous rates for single passengers, constitute discrimination between persons entitled to transportation at equal rates, and are therefore illegal. Re Passenger Tariffs v. 2 I. C. R. 445, 448.

(b) Party-rate tickets are not commutation tickets; and when party rates are lower than contemporaneous rates for single passengers, they constitute discrimination, and are illegal. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 729.

(c) Party-rate tickets for ten or more persons traveling together in one body on one ticket, at a reduced rate per mile, which is reasonable and just, are commutation tickets, which by the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 22, are exempted from the provisions of that Act. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. R. Co. (C. C. S. D. Ohio) 3 I. C. R. 192.

(d) No unlawful preference or discrimination is made to the disadvantage of single passengers by issuing a party-rate ticket for any company of ten or more persons traveling together on the same ticket, at a reduction of about one third from the rate for single passengers, being the same rate per mile charged for 1.000 mile tickets. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (C. C. S. D. Ohio) 3 I. C. R. 192.

(e) A party-rate ticket which is a single ticket covering the transportation of ten or more persons from one place to another on a railroad is not in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, although sold at a reduction from the regular passenger rates. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (U. S. Sup. Ct.) 4 I. C. R. 92.

(f) Can not be limited to particular classes but must be opened to general public. Re Party Rate Tickets, 12 I. C. C. 95.

(g) Party rate tickets can not be limited to particular classes of persons but must be opened to the general public. In the matter of party rate tickets. 12 I. C. C. 96, 105.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(h) Special party rates cannot lawfully be limited by carriers to particular classes of persons, such as theatrical companies and other special organizations engaged in giving public exhibitions, but must be open to the general public. Field v. S. Ry. Co., 13 I. C. C. 298, 299.

(i) Complainant attacked rules, regulations and charges applicable to the transportation of chautauqua outfits from Chicago, Ill., to the Pacific coast and return as unreasonable and unduly prejudicial. The same rules and regulations cover theatrical outfits and paraphernalia used in public entertainments and exhibitions in general. Defendants rules and regulations provide for the free transportation of one special baggage car containing paraphernalia, if the persons traveling on the same train with it number 25 or more. Complainants seven days circuit, however, does not afford such a party of 25. In order for complainants to secure a baggage car they are required to pay, in addition to the fares for the persons, an amount sufficient to make the total revenue equal 18 1-3 fares, minimum $30. The additional tickets bought are the measure of the charge for the baggage car furnished. Complainants inability to avail themselves of the rule is due to the peculiar nature of their business, which requires a complete change of program at each point daily, while the theatrical companies which take advantage of the rule usually have a weekly change of program and are thus enabled to move their personnel enmasse. HELD, allegations not sustained, complaint dismissed. Ellison K. White Chautauqua system v. Director General 68 I. C. C. 492.

(a) It is at least doubtful whether section five of the Act to regulate commerce, and which forbids the pooling of freight, applies to a practice whereby the transportation of immigrants from Atlantic ports westward is divided between the carriers in agreed proportions based upon the proportion of the domestic passenger traffic done by each line, where such a practice cannot be made effective in respect to any other class of passenger business, and the immigrants are carried at domestic published rates, and the arrangements adopted by the carriers in connection with the immigration authorities of the United States have efficiently prompted the protection and greatly improved the treatment and comfort of immigrants. Re Transportation of Immigrants from New York, 10 I. C. C. 13.

(b) Upon investigation by the Commission of practices applied in the westbound transportation of immigrants from New York and other Atlantic ports, it appeared, among other things, that this immigrant traffic is divided between the carriers in agreed proportions based upon the proportion of the domestic passenger traffic done by each line; that, apparently, such a practice cannot be made effective in respect to any other class of passenger business; that the immigrants are carried from the seaboard at domestic published rates; and that the arrangements adopted by the carriers in connection with the immigration authorities of the United States for handling immigrant business have efficiently promoted the protection and greatly improved the treatment and comfort of immigrants: HELD, That whether section 5 of the Act to regulate commerce, prohibiting carriers from entering into any contract, agreement or combination "for the pooling of freight by different and competing railroads or to divide between them the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings of such railroads or any portion thereof," applies to such a division of passengers as has been shown to exist in this case is, at least doubtful; that no discrimination as against individuals, classes or localities results from the handling by the carriers of this immigrant business at domestic published rates, and that there is no justification at this time for the issuance of any order in the premises. Re Transportation of Imigrants from New York. 10 I. C. C. 13.

(b) Railroads have a right to grant special privileges to religious teachers. Re Religious Teachers, etc. 1. I. C. R. 21.

(c) Application made as to whether it is unlawful under the Act for a common carrier to offer to make special rates to individuals in order that such individuals may offer and make proposals to the Interior Department for the transportation of Indian supplies. HELD, it is lawful, under the Act, for a common carrier to offer to make special rates with individuals, in order that such individuals may make proposals to the Interior Department for the transportation of Indian supplies, such transportation being for the United States and the government receiving the benefit of the reduced rates. Re Indian supplies. 1 I. C. C. 22.

(d) It is lawful, under the Act, for a common carrier to offer to make special rates with individuals, in order that the latter may make proposals to the Interior Department for the transportation of Indian supplies, such transportation being "for the United States" and the government receiving the benefit of the reduced rates. Re Indian Supplies 1 I. C. R. 22.

(f) Application on behalf of the inmates of the national homes for disabled volunteer soldiers and sailors, for a ruling as to whether the granting to them of half rate fares by railroads would be unjust discrimination within the meaning of section 2 of the Act. HELD, the Commission cannot make an order or give an option in advance of an actual complaint and hearing. Re Inmates of National Homes. 1 I. C. C. 75.

(g) Section 2 of Act prohibits giving of passes to particular persons; and the exception allowed in section 22 in favor of officers and employees of road does not include the families of such persons. Ex parte Koehler (U. S. C. Ct. Or.) 1 I. C. R. 317.

(j) Twenty-five dollars per 1,000 miles is not unreasonable rate for mileage tickets. Associated Wholesale Grocers v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 321, 393.

(k) Rates are not to be lower for commercial travelers than for general public. Associated Wholesale Grocers v. Missouri Pacific R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 321, 393; Larrison v. Chicago & Grand Trunk R. Co. 1. I. C. R. 369.

(l) The Northern Pacific Railroad Company has been accustomed to sell tickets to land seekers or explorers at its land office in St. Paul, thus enabling them to go out on the line of its road and inspect the land which it had for sale, at about one half of the regular rate for round trip tickets. It has also been accustomed to sell tickets to settlers, passing through St. Paul with their effects, and who are about to purchase railroad or public lands, at low rates. These explorers and settlers are carried on the regular trains. After the Interstate Commerce Law went into effect the sale of these special classes of tickets was for a time discontinued, but was resumed in May, and complaint was made to the Commission. An investigation of the matter was held at Minneapolis, and briefs were filed. The Commission now decides: (a) That the Interstate Commerce Law does not permit the sale of tickets to any class of people at rates different from those established for the general public. The fact that it is very desirable for the defendant to make sale of its lands is not a reason for discrimination in favor of explorers or settlers; the same reason would apply in case a company should desire to stimulate its freight traffic or any other branch of its business by the use of reduced rates or free transportation to customers. (b) That the claim that the settlement of the Western Territories should be promoted by special facilities of transportation to emigrants, is a claim proper to be addressed to the legislative body, but not for consideration in interpreting the present statute; and moreover the Company is able, by excursion rates open to all, and by making allowances upon the price charged for its land of part or all of cost of tickets, to perhaps accomplish the desired object to a sufficient extent without violation of the Law. (c) That the means, occupation or purpose of parties are not proper consideration upon which to found discrimination among them. (d) The Northern Pacific Railroad Co. is therefore notified to desist from selling either of said special classes of tickets at rates less than the regular rates charged to the general public. Smith v. Northern Pac. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 611.

(m) Land explorers and settlers are not entitled to lower rates than the general public. Smith v. Northern Pac. R. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 611.

(n) When the defendant puts on sale in an emigration office special tickets at reduced rates, which are not open to the public at large, but which are used by passengers upon its ordinary trains, justification for which is claimed in the fact that they are a valuable auxiliary to the companys sales of real estate, it certainly demands and receives from its ordinary passengers more for the same purpose than it collects from persons who, truthfully or otherwise, represent themselves to be prospective purchasers of land or settlers. Smith v. N. P. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. 611, 620.

(o) Rates may be reduced for religious teachers and as act of charity. Re Religious Teachers, 1. I. C. R. 21.

(p) A railroad company may make a special rate for immigrants as a class, and decline to give the same rate to others for whom different accommodations are furnished. Savery v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 210.

(q) There is nothing illegal or wrongful in a railroad company making a rate for immigrants as a class, and declining to give the same rate to others for whom different accommodations are furnished.

Savey & Co. v. N. Y. Central & Hudson River R. Co. 2 I. C. R. 210, 218.

(r) Rates obtained from ticket brokers lower than those offered at the regular offices of the company effect unjust discrimination. Re Passenger Tariffs and Rate Wars v. 2 I. C. R. 341.

(s) The employment of ticket brokers and scalpers for the sale of railroad tickets placed in their hands, to be disposed of at reduced rates under the pretense of paying commissions thereon, HELD, illegal. Re Passenger Tariffs and Rate Wars v. 2 I. C. R. 341.

(tw) Where a carrier by its published general tariffs charges the general public from and to all points upon a large portion of its lines certain rates upon a class of freight, and at the same time publishes and puts into force a special tariff by which it charges a class of persons named, from and to the same points on its lines, less than one half in amount of the rates on the same class of freight that it charges the general public in its general tariffs, such a discrimination is unjust and is violative of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Elvey v. Illinois Central R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 804.

(v) A shipper to whom, as an emigrant, is accorded the rate provided by the special tariff, for example, sixty dollars on a carload of freight weighing 20,000 pounds, from Chicago, Illinois, to Hammond, Louisiana, a distance of 863 miles in December, 1888, and in May, 1889, makes return shipment of same freight from Hammond, Louisiana, to Chicago, Illinois, under the general tariffs of the carrier, there being no other tariffs on north-bound freight between these points, and is charged therefor $122 per car, complains of an unjust charge; HELD, that as the carrier in each instance charged only its open published rates, and no evidence is offered to show that the rates in either instance are unjust and unreasonable, and as the general tariffs of the Company have long been in use and published and open to the public, and the special tariff has been but recently issued, and is open to a certain special class only, and is unlawful, that the general tariffs afford a better standard of what are reasonable and just rates than the special tariff, and that the shipper in such cases has not been injured in paying less than one half the amount charged the general public on the first haul, and only what was charged the general public on the second haul. Elvey v. Illinois Central R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 804.

(w) A discrimination by a special tariff cannot be sustained upon the ground that the special tariff is made to aid "emigrants" in moving from one State to another where land is cheap, and to develop a sparsely settled country, and to build up business along the carrier's lines, and upon the supposition that this constitutes substantially dissimilar circumstances and conditions from those which exist when similar services are rendered by the carrier for the general public. Elvey v. Illinois C. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 804.

(x) A special tariff by which carrier charges a class of persons named, from and to the same points on its lines, less than one half in amount of the rates on the same class of freight that it charges the general public in its general tariffs, makes a discrimination which is unjust and is violative of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Elvey v. Ill. C. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 804.

(y) Whatever the reason which impels a carrier to put reduced rate tickets on sale for a limited period may be, so long as the tickets are open to all who desire to purchase them, the law does not question the priority of making the reduced rates; on the contrary, the statute says in terms that this right of carriers shall be preserved. Cater v. S. P. Co. 4 I. C. C. 397, 399.

(z) A proceeding by a minister of religion for unjust discrimination in the allowance of reduced rates to ministers will be dismissed where complainant fails to show that he had made proper application for the reduced rate, producing credentials showing that he was a minister, or that such an application would have been refused by the carrier. Emerson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 289.

(aa) Unjust discrimination in allowance of reduced rates to ministers of religion was alleged in these cases, but the complainant failed to show that he had made proper application for the reduced rate, or that such an application would have been refused by either of the defendants, and upon these grounds the complaints were dismissed. Edgar W. Emerson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 289.

(bb) Complainant attacked as unduly discriminatory an allowance of reduced rates to ministers of religion. Complainant failed to show that he had made proper application for the reduced rate, or that such an application would have been refused by either of the defendants. HELD, complaint dismissed. Emerson v. C. R. I. & P. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 289.

(cc) A railway company practices no discrimination within the Interstate Commerce Act by selling passenger tickets at full fare to a land company which sells them at half rates to guests of its hotel, persons residing upon land sold or transferred by it, and others, but refusing to sell them at half rates to a person living in the same locality upon ground not acquired from it, although the two corporations are under substantially the same ownership and control, where their community of interests is not made a device for enabling the railway company to evade its legal obligations. Wilson v. Rock Creek R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 83.

(dd) The defendant railway company and a land company owning land and a suburban hotel along the line of railway are distinct corporation, but under substantially the same ownership and control The land company purchased passenger tickets of the railway company at full rates of fare, and sold them at half rates to guests of its hotel, to persons residing upon land which it had sold or otherwise transferred, and to others, but refused to sell such tickets at half rates to complainant, who, though living in the same locality, resided upon ground not acquired from the land company. HELD, Upon the evidence presented, that no discrimination was practised by the railway company; that the community of interest between the two corporations resulting from common ownership was not made a device for enabling the railway company to evade its legal obligations; and that the action of the land company in discriminating between persons in the sale of tickets for the benefit of its separate business is not subject to correction by this Commission. Morrison and Clements, Commissioners, dissenting. Wilson v. Rock Creek R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 83.

(ee) Where a railroad company makes a reduction from regular passenger fares which are not found unreasonable, it may lawfully require that a person desiring to avail himself of such reduction shall purchase a ticket, and that all persons not holding such special reduced rate ticket shall pay the reasonable ordinary fare. Cist v. Michigan C. R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 217.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(ff) A fare of 1c per mile was allowed officers, enlisted men and nurses, on furlough except they were not allowed on short term passes or on liberty. HELD, the conditions as set forth in subdivision E of Section 8 of G. O. 28 are not subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission but properly come within the province of the President acting as head of the Army and Navy. William E. Golden v. Director General, 53 I. C. C. 385, 388.

(gg) The Commission has no authority to require carriers to establish for particular passengers or particular occasions special fares lower than the regular fares. Reduced Rates, 1922, 68 I. C. C. 676, 729.

§7½ Round-trip tickets.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Proposal of the Southern Pacific to establish proportional round-trip summer excursion fares from certain California points to Ogden, Utah, for purpose of meeting the competition of the Union Pacific, which forms the direct route, and to be applicable when passenger holds local round-trip ticket over the O. S. L. from Ogden to West Yellowstone, Mont., found justified. Proposed fares do not appear unduly low; will not have a demoralizing effect upon the rate structure in this territory; the S. P. will receive traffic not otherwise obtainable; and the public will be afforded an additional route. Proportional. Basing Fares to Ogden, 73 I. C. C., 434.

(b) Applicant sought authority to continue 30-day round-trip passenger fares equal to double the one-way fares between New York and stations on its line west of Newark, N. J., which exceed the contemporaneous aggregates of intermediate passenger fares, composed of a 15 day round trip fare between New York and Newark, plus 30 day round trip fares, equal to double one way fares, between Newark and points west thereof, without observing the aggregate of intermediate rates provision of the fourth section. The Commission is inclined to hold that even if a violation of the aggregate of intermediate fares provision of the fourth section were shown to exist, the situation would constitute a special case under the fourth section, and would entitle the applicant to relief. While the existing case presents no features such as has been encountered in other applications, the Commission deems it advisable to remark that attempts to evade the plain requirements of the fourth section in the matter of fares, by annexing different conditions relating to the amount of baggage carried, or to the time for which tickets are good, will continue to receive no countenance at its hands. HELD, :Proceeding should be discontinued, application may be withdrawn. Passenger Fares Between New York and Points West of Newark, N. J. 74 I. C. C., 516.

§7¾ Special trains and Services.

See Special Trains; Special Rates and Service.

(a) A guaranty by a railroad company to an opera troupe transported over its line of arrival at destination at a certain time is not in contravention of the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act against undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person or firm, although the transportation is had upon party-rate tickets. The action was for damages for breach of the contract to carry within the specified time, and the carrier set up the invalidity of the contract because an undue and unreasonable preference or advantage had been given. The court said the transportation was not and was not to be any different from what any party might have had on the same train. The substance of the guaranty was that such condition would be made as would take the troupe through in time. This was not anything undue, but was what was due, and if it was not undue it was not unreasonable. W. H. Foster et al. v. Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Ry. Co. 7 I. C. C. App. XVI.

(b) Complainant, a commercial salesman, travels with his assistant over the defendant transcontinental line in a private car stocked with samples of men's clothing and furnishings. For the first trip the car was transported from point to point as complainant required for fifteen round-trip fares between St. Paul, Minn., and Portland, Ore.; but defendant's charge for subsequent trips was fifteen local fares from point to point where stoppages were made by complainant for business purposes. Complainant alleged this higher charge to be unreasonable and also wrongfully discriminating as compared with the lower rate of fifteen round-trip fares usually granted to pleasure, theatrical and other parties in private cars. While there is no substantial difference in cost to the carrier in transporting complainant's car and cars used by theatrical or other parties, the dissimilarity in the nature and value of the two services is marked and the benefit accruing to complainant exceptional. He uses in all cases the property of defendant, its side tracks and station yards, for transacting his business, and his occupation is such that he derives advantages peculiar to himself which are not available to other owners of private cars. Defendant claimed not to be a common carrier of private cars, and that it may transport some cars and refuse to transport others as and when it sees fit. HELD—1. The regulating statute is opposed to every species of favoritism, and seeks to secure like treatment for all persons in like relations to the carrier. Defendant may lawfully decline to haul private cars at all, or it may haul private cars of one class and refuse to haul others of a wholly different class; but if it transports private cars of any class, it must in like manner and upon like terms transport all private cars occupied for the same or similar purposes. 2. Where the differences in cost or character of service are substantial either in the work performed by the carrier or in its utility and value to the persons served, a fair relation of rates meets the carrier's obligation. 3. In comparison with the private-car service more or less frequently performed by defendant for pleasure seekers and theatrical companies, the service demanded by complainant is dissimilar and unusual to such a degree that to require from him greater compensation, or to refuse his car altogether, would not subject him to unlawful discrimination or disadvantage. 4. In determining whether it will in any case transport complainant's car or others of that class, defendant may properly take into account the effect of the practice upon the interests and localities it serves; but the right of complainant to have his car hauled does not depend upon the wishes of his business rivals ,nor can the compensation to be paid by him be justly conditioned upon the routing of his freight traffic. 5. Rates may be fair and reasonable for the service rendered, and, from the carrier's standpoint, justly related to other charges; and yet if a low rate is granted upon conditions with which only a few can comply (e. g., a charge below the ordinary carload rate for shipments of a hundred or a thousand carloads), that rate is presumably unfair and wrongfully prejudicial to all other shippers of like traffic, because they are practically unable to meet the terms upon which it is offered. This principle may properly be considered with reference to the class of cars employed by complainant, which only a limited number of dealers can afford to use for reaching their customers and exhibiting their wares. In the competitive struggle to supply consuming markets neither contestant should be favored through the facilities furnished or the rates enforced by public carriers. This is at once the aim of the law and the requirement of relative justice. 6. The rates charged to complainant for moving his car, while not held to be reasonable, are not shown to be unreasonable. 7. It is the legal duty of defendant to publish and file its rates and regulations for the movement of private cars, certain kinds of which are more or less frequently handled over its line Carr v. Northern Pacific Ry. Co. 9 I. C C. 1.

(c) Complainant, a traveling salesman, travels with his assistant over the defendant in a private car stocked with samples of mens clothing and furnishings. For the first trip the car was transported from point to point as complainant required for fifteen round trip fares between St. Paul, Minn., and Portland, Ore.; but defendants charge for subsequent trips was fifteen local fares from point to point where stoppages were made by complainant for business purposes. Complainant attacked this higher charge as unreasonable and also wrongfully discriminating as compared with the lower rate of fifteen round trip fares usually granted to pleasure, theatrical and other parties in private cars. While there is no substantial difference in cost to the carrier in transporting complainants car and cars used by theatrical or other parties, the dissimilarity in the nature and value of the two services is marked and the benefit accruing to complainant exceptional. He uses in all cases the property of defendant, its side tracks and station yards, for transacting his business, and his occupation is such that he derives advantages peculiar to himself which are not available to other owners of private cars. HELD, the rates charged to complainant for moving his car, while not held to be reasonable, are not shown to be unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Carr v. N. P. Ry. 9 I. C. C. 1.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) A passenger purchased a regular ticket, intending to use the same in interstate transportation. His employer, without his knowledge or request, chartered special train for a part of his transportation wholly within one state, which he used. HELD, that when passenger left the regular train and boarded the special train, his contract with the carrier terminated, and therefore the special train service cannot be considered part of an interstate transportation, and the Commission is without jurisdiction to determine the reasonableness of the charge exacted therefor. Wait Talcott v. Southern Pacific Co., 33 I. C. C., 292, 293.

(e) The Commission considered the proposed withdrawal by the M. & O. R. R. and S. Ry. in Miss. of concurrences from tariffs publishing rates, rules, and regulations governing the transportation of special baggage and passenger cars (such as were used by dramatic, minstrel, or chautauqua companies). About 16,000 companies had invested about $1,000,000,000 in show property, including private cars. The carriers contended that the handling of these cars was unprofitable and subjected the carriers to fire and personal injury hazards, but it did not appear that damage claims of any consequence have ever arisen; while it was evident that withdrawal from the concurrences would result in the disruption of the traffic which was widespread and of long continuance. HELD, that the carriers had not justified their proposed withdrawal from participation in the existing rates, rules and regulations. Cancellation of sustended schedules directed. Special Passenger Equipment, 45 I. C. C. 590.

(f) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and illegal charges assessed by the C. M. & St. P. Ry., for passenger train service rendered its employes from Oglesby, Ill., to Cedar Point, Ill. Defendant agreed to furnish an additional train more suitable to the purpose of complainant if the latter would guarantee payment of $75 per round trip. The carrier assessed this charge based upon a rule in its tariffs that when a special train was furnished minimum charge would be $75 per round trip. It was shown this train was not a special one as it also carried other passengers to Granville, Ill., where a mine of defendant was located. It was not shown that the miners to Granville paid any fares. HELD, the train was not a special passenger train but was an extra train, and charge made was illegal and not covered by tariff; reparation with interest awarded based upon what the charges paid exceeded those which should have been collected at the rates applicable for regular passenger service. La-Salle County Carbon Coal Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 367.

§7¾ (1) Sur Charges

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Commission in 58 I. C. C. 220, authorized all steam railroads to establish a surcharge upon passengers in sleeping and parlor cars amounting to 50 percent of the charges for space, effective August 26, 1920, and become effective locally in Georgia, Sept. 1, 1920, but was canceled locally in that state on Dec. 20, 1921, carriers petitioning this Commission for rehearing and order to remove alleged discrimination between state and intrastate traffic. The surcharge is now being collected from both interstate and intrastate passengers throughout southern territory except those traveling intrastate in Georgia. This has resulted in the imposition of higher transportation charges for interstate journeys between points ir Georgia and points in adjoining states than for intrastate movements within Georgia for the same or greater distances. Interstate travelers may void full payment of the surcharge on a through journey by paying combinations of local sleeping or parlor car fares to and from border line points. There are no transportation or traffic conditions which justify exemption of the intrastate passengers from the surcharge. HELD, non payment of the surcharge locally in Georgia unduly discriminates against interstate traffic and this discrimination should be removed by applying the surcharge on intrastate traffic the same as on interstate. Surcharge for transportation of passengers in sleeping or parlor cars between points in Georgia 69 I. C. C. 623.

§7⅞ Transfers.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainants attacked the withdrawals of the transfer arrangement theretofore existing between the W. & O. D. Ry., and the Capital Traction Co., as subjecting them to the payment of unreasonable and discriminatory fares. There was no connection between the lines of the two carriers, but their terminals were within a few feet of each other. Prior to Aug. 9, 1916, the W. & O. D. had issued transfers to and accepted them from the traction company on the basis of combination fares based on Cherrydale or Thrifton, Va. Effective that date through fares to the Washington, D. C. terminal considerably lower than the combination fares were made available, but by reason of the withdrawal of transfer privileges there was an increase amounting to $1.05 for 52 monthly commutation trips. Prior to Aug. 9, 1916, the prices of 52 trips between Washington and Hayes, Round Hill, Harrison, and Great Falls, Va.., were $3.72, $17.82, $3.72 and $7.52; and subsequent to that date $2.60, $16.70, $2.60 and $6.40. The traction company did a street to street business in Washington and ran a line to Chevy Chase Lake, Md., but there was nothing to distinguish its business from that conducted by other street railways. HELD (1) that the Commission had no jurisdiction over the traction company to require restoration of the prior transfer arrangement; and (2) that it had not been shown that new through fares of the W. & O. D. were unreasonable. Case held open for 15 days. James v. W. & O. D. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 570.

§8. Validation.

(a) Where there is tariff authority, it is not violation of the Act to require validation of limited excursion tickets and to charge validation free therefor. Riter v. O. S. L. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 443, 444.

III DISCRIMINATION IN FACILITIES

See Discrimination; Facilities and Priviliges.

§9. Regulations in General.

See Rules and Regulations.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) In absence of statutory authority, one railroad company can sell tickets over road of another company only by agreement. Chicago & A. R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 1 I. C. R. 357.

(b) Railroad companies may forbid their agents to receive commissions for sale of tickets over other companies' roads. Chicago & A. R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 1 I. C. R. 357.

(c) The practice of one company's paying the agents of another company a commission for selling tickets over former's road is not reasonable or proper. Chicago & A. R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 1 I. C. R. 357.

(d) Companies may forbid their agents to receive commissions for sale of tickets over other company's roads. Chicago etc. R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 1 I. C. R. 357.

(e) The practice of paying commissions for sales of tickets is not proper. Chicago etc. R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 1 I. C. R. 357.

(f) Railroad companies may, under their right to control the official conduct of their own agents, forbid their agents to receive commissions from other companies for the sale of tickets over such other companies' roads, and may direct them not to sell tickets over roads of companies which refuse to recognize this corporate authority but which insist on subsidizing such agents. One person or corporation has no right to interfere with the employees of another, and the Act does not disturb this principle. Chicago & A. P. R. Co. v. Penn. Co. 1 I. C. R. 357.

(g) It is both the right and the duty of railroad companies to make such reasonable regulations as will secure order and promote the comfort of their passengers. Council v. W. & A. R. R. Co. 1 I. C C. 638, 641.

(hi) When the matter is not regulated by statute it seems to be generally held that it is a reasonable requirement that passengers who neglect to purchase tickets at stations before embarking on cars shall be charged additional fare, if proper conveniences and facilities are furnished them for procuring tickets. Sidman v. R. & D. R. Co. 2 I. C. C. 766, 768.

(j) It would be directly at war with the rights and safety of the traveling public, as well as of the railroad company, if the line of the carrier should become an arena over which it should be compelled to make a contract of some sort with every car company or inventor of cars, and transport the public in trains of which such cars were part. Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania Railroad 2 I. C. C. 792, 796.

(k) The interest of the public lies in the direction of holding every common carrier by rail to the strictest responsibility in furnishing safe, suitable and sufficient car equipment for the transportation of persons over its line; and the law making power in enacting the Act has not undertaken to divide this responsibility with the carrier in the selection of its cars. Worcester Excursion Company v. Pennsylvania Railroad 2 I. C. C. 792, 796.

(l) Proceeding to compel respondent to accept complainants cars for transportation over its line. Where a railroad company has by an arrangement with one car company procured a sufficient supply of sleeping and excursion cars for all the business of its lines, and refuses to haul excursion cars of other private car companies over its track for this reason, it cannot be forced to do so against its objection. Complaint dismissed. Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania Railroad 2 I. C. C. 792, 797.

(m) An arrangement between a railway company, stage transportation company, and a hotel association under which coupon tickets are issued, covering transportation and hotel charges, constitutes and effects an undue and unreasonable preference and advantage to the favored transportation company and hotel association, and subjects complainant, who operates a stage line, as well as the passengers, to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 145.

(n) It is the duty of the defendant railway company to so conduct and control its operations relating to the transportation of passengers to Yellowstone Park as to afford such passengers full and equal opportunity at the terminus of its line at Gardiner, and elsewhere, to select the stage line or other agency they may desire to use for touring the Park, and the places and manner of entertainment therein. Wylie v. Northern P. R. 11 I. C. C. 145.

(o) An unlawful discrimination is made by the charging of a given sum for rail transportation to Gardiner, Mont., and return only, and the acceptance of a smaller sum for the rail transportation when the passenger goes by stage to points in or through Yellowstone Park, with or without hotel accommodations therein, the service performed by the railway company being the same in each case. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 145.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(p) To prevent discrimination and promote equality of treatment in charges and services, the law requires not only definite statement of the amount of the rates, fares and charges of carriers in their established schedules, but equally definite statement therein of all privileges and facilities granted or allowed in connection therewith, and any rules or regulations which in anywise affect or determine any part or the aggregate of the rates, fares or charges, or the value of the service rendered to the passenger, shipper or consignee. It is clear that no schedule complies with the requirements of the law which does not definitely and fully state the charges, on the one hand, and the services to be rendered therefor on the other. In Re Mileage, Excursion and Commutation Tickets, 23 I. C. C. 95.

(q) Carriers, individually and jointly, may afford many facilities, accommodations and conveniences to shippers and passengers which they may not be compelled to afford, but they are no more at liberty to unjustly discriminate with respect to such services than with respect to those things which, under the law, they may be compelled to do. In Re Mileage, Excursion and Commutation Tickets, 23 I. C. C. 95, 96.

(r) A provision that "no tickets or ticket orders issued by foreign lines will be honored as forming part of through transportation for the checking of baggage sale or parlor-car or sleeping-car tickets, or for reservations in parlor cars or sleeping cars, to points beyond" is obviously unjust and unreasonable. It operates to subject the holders of all such tickets to an annoying and often prohibitory inconvenience, no carrier receiving the equivalent of its full local fare to the junction may in respect of combinations of tickets severally subject to the Act, whatever the character of the transportation issued and accepted by the connecting line, lawfully withhold provision for incidental services so constantly and universally in demand. Rules and Regulations Governing Checking of Baggage, 35 I. C. C. 157, 160.

(s) No carrier receiving the equivalent of its full local fare to the junction may, in respect of combinations of tickets severally subject to the Act, lawfully withhold provision for incidental services universally in demand. Rules and Regulations Governing Checking of Baggage, 35 I. C. C. 157, 160.

(t) An order of a state Public Service Commission, requiring a railroad company to detour through trains between points in different states in order to pass through a particular city of 4,000 inhabitants, constituted an undue burden on interstate commerce, where such city had seven local trains each way, which met its reasonable requirements, and compliance with the order would add 10 miles to the route of the through train and require the maintenance of 16 additional miles of track at the high standard essential for through trains. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Public Service Comm. of State of Missouri. 41 Sup. Ct. 192.

§10 Baggage.

See Baggage; Baggage Transfer; Rules and Regulation.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Commission will not make rules as to free baggage until violation of Act is charged. Re Order of Railway Conductors. 1 I. C. C. 18; Traders & Travelers Union v. Phila. & Reading R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 18, 62, 315, 371.

(b) The Commission has no jurisdiction in a case presented involving agreement between Traders & Travelers Union and certain carriers, for allowance of extra free baggage to passengers presenting "baggage indemnity certificate" issued by such Union under arrangement made prior to time when Act went into effect. Re Order of Railway Conductors, 1 I. C. C. 18; Traders & Travelers Union v. Phila. & Reading R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 18, 62, 315, 371.

(ba) Complainant attacked the rule of defendants to the effect that since the Act became effective 150 pounds of extra free baggage was not allowed on the baggage indemnity certificate presented. HELD, there is nothing in the facts disclosed by the evidence which involves any question of unjust discrimination or extortion, or any other matter over which the Commission has jurisdiction. That the power to enforce contracts has not been confided to the Commission, nor has it any general power or authority to manage the business of carriers, but only a limited power, expressly defined by the Act, to interfere to prevent wrong and oppression in specified cases. Petition dismissed. Traders & Travelers Union v. P. & R. R. R. 1 I. C. C. 371.

(c) On a petition by the Traders & Travelers Union, alleging that the defendant railroad had, prior to the time when the Interstate Commerce Act went into effect, entered into an arrangement with petitioner to allow 150 pounds of extra free baggage to passengers presenting the "baggage indemnity certificate" issued by petitioner, and that the defendants now refuse to make such allowance of extra free baggage,—HELD, (a) That there is nothing in the facts disclosed by the evidence which involves any question of unjust discrimination or extortion, or any other matter over which the Commission has jurisdiction. (b) That the power to enforce contracts has not been confided to the Commission, nor has it any general power or authority to manage the business of carriers, but only a limited power, expressly defined by the Act, to interfere to prevent wrong and oppression in specified cases. (c) That the petition must be dismissed. Traders & Travelers Union v. Phila. & R. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 371.

(d) The defendant railroad company transports packages of a certain kind free only when they belong to commuters or to a person who is a passenger upon the train. No opinion is expressed upon the lawfulness of this practice, nor as to whether such defendant might, as a part of the contract of sale of a commutation ticket, provide that the privileges of this parcels express should be extended to the holder of such ticket or that the purchase of a ticket to one of these stations should carry with it the right to purchase and use a certain number of these stamps. J. E. Waker v. Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. et al. 12 I. C. C. 196.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) Undue discrimination is not exercised by a railroad company in carrying free 150 pounds of baggage for a passenger, as against the many passengers who travel without baggage. Herbeck-Demer Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 88, 89.

(f) Where railroad companies, acting through a transfer company which was their agent but was not subject to the Act, placed their baggage checks at the homes of passengers in certain sections of Washington, D. C., to the exclusion of passengers located in another section, they were guilty of a discrimination which, under all the circumstances of the case, was unjust. Anacostia Citizens' Assn. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 411, 415.

(g) Paraphernalia for public entertainments not subject to rule relating to size of baggage. Regulations Restricting the Dimensions of Baggage, 26 I. C. C. 292, 295.

(h) In considering the question of regulation of dimensions and shape of baggage receptacles, the factor of personal safety of employes of the carriers, if not a prime one, is not the least important from an operating standpoint. Regulations Restricting the Dimensions of Baggage, 26 I. C. C. 292, 302.

(i) Carriers may make proper and needful rules for the handling of baggage which are consistent with safe and efficient operating practices and in accord with the service which they owe to the public. This is not only their right, but it is their duty, circumscribed only by the requirements that such rules, regulations and practices shall be just and reasonable. Regulations Restricting the Dimensions of Baggage, 26 I. C. C. 292, 302.

(j) The courts have held that the transportation of a certain amount of a passenger's baggage is not gratuitous, the compensation therefor being included in the fare of the passenger. National Baggage Com. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 32 I. C. C. 152.

(k) The Cummins Amendment applies to transportation of baggage. The Cummins Amendment, 33 I. C. C. 682, 696.

(l) The amended law seems clearly to recognize the carrier's right to fix conditions and terms applicable to baggage dependent upon value as declared by person offering same for transportation. The Cummins Amendment, 33 I. C. C. 682, 697.

(m) The Commission considered proposed rules prohibiting the through checking from trunk line territory to southern and southeastern territory, of baggage and sale of through parlor or sleeping car tickets, and combination tickets. Respondent, the P. R. R., issued 1000 mile mileage books at 2¼c per mile, while the Southern Passengers Association's interchangeable mileage exchange orders against which the proposed rules were directed, sold at 2c per mile; making the combination fare from New York to Atlanta, for instance, $13.88 or $3.42 less than the joint through fare. HELD that respondents had not justified proposed rules, since it appeared that they received the equivalent of their full local fare to the junction point. Rules and Regulations Governing Checking of Baggage, 35 I. C. C. 157.

(n) The initial carrier is now made liable for the full actual loss, damage, or injury to baggage caused by it or by connecting carriers, notwithstanding any limitation of liability or of the amount of recovery in any receipt, contract, regulation, or tariff, and any such limitation by act of the parties, as by checking at owner's risk, is made unlawful and void. The statutory limitation of which the carrier may avail itself in certain cases, if it so elects, is not extended by the first proviso of the Cummins' Amendment to cover the practice of checking at owner's risk. Jewelers' Protective Union v. Penn. R. R., 36 I. C. C. 71, 72.

(o) Transportation without additional charge of a greater amount of baggage for passengers traveling in intrastate commerce, than is accorded passengers traveling in interstate commerce, under corresponding fares found to result in unjust discrimination against interstate commerce and should be removed by reducing the intrastate baggage allowance to the level of the interstate allowance. South Carolina Fares and Charges, 60 I. C. C., 290; North Carolina Fares and Charges, 60 I. C. C. 362.

(p) So it was also held that excess baggage charges required by state authority to be maintained within the state, lower that the corresponding interstate charges authorized in increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C., 220, found unduly prejudicial to interstate passengers, unduly preferential of intrastate passengers, and unjustly discriminatory against interstate commerce. (Following cases are all in 60 I. C. C.) Montana Rates and Fares, 61; Ohio Rates, Fares and Charges, 78; Indiana Rates, Fares, and Charges, 337; Utah Rates, Fares, and Charges, 388; Nevada Rates, Fares and Charges, 623.

(q) The free transportation of a limited amount of baggage is an incident of, and is included within the passenger fare contract. Ellison-White Chautauqua System v. Director General 68 I. C. C. 492, 495.

(r) It is impracticable to set forth the voluminous rules regarding baggage on railroad tickets, baggage check, or valuation slip, and notice thereon that the property transported as baggage is "subject to tariff regulations" is adequate. Jones v. L. I. R. R. Co. 74 I. C. C. 238, 239, 240.

(s) Tariff defined personal baggage as consisting of "wearing apparel, toilet articles and similar effects," but specifically provides that jewelry was not to be enclosed in baggage to be checked. HELD: While the courts have held variously with respect to the classification of jewelry as baggage, the implication here is clear that it is excluded. Jones v. L. I. R. R. Co. 74 I. C. C. 238, 239.

(t) A limitation by a carrier as to its baggage liablity is determinative of the rate to be charged and affects the service to be rendered the passenger, within section 6 of the Act, as amended by the Act of June 29, 1906, requiring that such regulations be filed with the Commission as a part of the carrier's tariffs. B. & M. R. R. Co. v. Hooper, 34 Sup. Ct. 526, 531; 233 U. S. 97; 58 L. ed.—

(u) The requirements of the Carmack or Cummins' amendment, that a railroad corporation receiving property for transportation in interstate commerce shall issue a receipt or bill of lading therefor, does not require, in the case of baggage, other receipts than baggage checks. Such checks are receipts, and there is no special requirement in the statute as to their form, though the Commission is authorized to make requirements as to the checks or receipts to be given for baggage if that subject needs regulation. B. & M. R. R. Co. v. Hooker, 34 Sup. Ct 526, 532; 233 U. S. 97. 58; L. ed.—.

§11. Colored Passengers.

(a) It is unjust discrimination to remove a colored passenger holding a first class ticket from a first class car to a second class car, less clean and comfortable. Heard v. Georgia R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 493, 719. Council v. Western & A. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 292, 355, 638.

(b) The separation of white and colored passengers is not unlawful if the accommodations are equal in all respects. Heard v. Georgia R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 314, 719; Council v. Western & Atlantic R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 292, 355, 638.

(c) There is no undue prejudice or unjust preference shown by railroad companies in separating their white and colored passengers by providing cars for each, if the cars so provided are equally safe and comfortable. But fair dealing and common honesty require that a colored passenger should have the security and convenience of travel for which his money has been accepted. Where a colored passenger had purchased a first class ticket, and there was but one car on the train furnishing the accomodation for which he had paid and was entitled to have, and after he had entered this car, he was forcibly removed to a car assigned to passengers of his race, which was a half car, half lighted, in which men and women were huddled together and where men, white and black, smoked at pleasure, the car being designated as a "second class" car, being dismal, less clean and less comfortable than the car in which he was first seated, the railroad company was held to have subjected him to undue prejudice, and unreasonable disadvantage in violation of section 3 of the Act to Regulate Commerce; and these unlawful acts and all unjust discrimination were ordered to be discontinued. Council v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 638.

(ca) Complainant claimed it had been subjected to unreasonable prejudice and unjust discrimination by the refusal of defendant to furnish the accommodations for which he had paid. There is no undue prejudice or unjust preference shown by railroad companies in separating their white and colored passengers by providing cars for each if the cars so provided are equally safe and comfortable. But fair dealing and common honesty require that a colored passenger should have the security and conveniences of travel for which his money has been accepted. Where a colored passenger has purchased a first class ticket, and there was but one car on the train furnishing the accomodation for which he had paid and was entitled to have, and after he had entered this car, he was forcibly removed to a car assigned to passengers of his race, which was a half car, half lighted, in which men and women were huddled together and where men, white and black, smoked at pleasure, the car being designated as a second class car, being dismal less clean and less comfortable than the car in which he was first seated, HELD, the railroad company subjected him to undue prejudice and unreasonable disadvantage in violation of section 3; and these unlawful acts and all unjust discriminations ordered to be discontinued. The complainant having offered evidence of pecuniary damages as a basis for an award of injuries done in his violent removal from the car and for reasonable fees of attorneys he has been compelled to employ the defendant railroad company under the 7th amendment of the Constitution of the United States being entitled to a trial by jury, the Commission, because it could not give such a trial, declined to go into that question leaving the complainant to his appropriate remedy in the courts for the alleged trespass and assault upon him, in which, under section 8 of the Act, the defendant may be held liable for counsel or attorneys fees to be fixed by the court. Council v. W. & A. R. R. 1 I. C. C. 638.

(d) Complainant claimed he had been subjected to unreasonable prejudice and unjust discrimination by the refusal of defendant to furnish the accomodations for which he had paid. Regulations setting apart cars for separate use of white and colored persons had been established by the defendant similar other carriers in the south. The one designated the colored peoples car was divided by a partition into two nearly equal apartments with a door between them opening either way by slight pressure and without a fastening when closed. The rear half end was the smoking car for white and colored men by the rule, but for the white men in practice. The front half of the car was the colored car for both sexes. This separation may be carried out on railroad trains without disadvantage to either race and with increased comfort to both. Complainant paid the same fare as other first class passengers. It was no more than fair dealing and common honesty that he should have the security and conveniences of travel for which his money had been expended. There was in the train no car furnishing the accommodations for which the complainant had paid and was entitled to have, other than the one from which he was removed because he was a colored man. HELD, in denying to complainant equal accommodations furnished the other passengers paying the same fare the defendant subjected complainant to undue prejudice and unreasonable disadvantage. Council v. W. & A. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. 638.

(e) Passengers paying the same fare upon the same railroad train, whether white or colored, are entitled to equality of transportation, in respect to the character of the cars in which they travel, and the comforts and conveniences supplied. Heard v. Georgia R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 719.

(f) Separation of white and colored passengers paying the same fare is not unlawful, if cars and accommodations equal in all respects are furnished to both, and the same care and protection of passengers observed. Heard v. Georgia R. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 719.

(g) By requiring the petitioner who had paid a first class fare to ride in a half car set apart for colored passengers, with accommodations and comforts inferior to the car for white passengers in the same train who paid the same fare, and without the protection against annoyance furnished to white passengers, the Georgia Railroad Company subjected him to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage, in violation of the third section of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Heard v. Georgia R. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 719.

(h) Complainant attacked the rules of defendant in being required, while holding a first class ticket, to travel in a compartment of a car allotted to colored persons and inferior, in its accomodations and comforts to the car for white persons in the same train, as being unduly discriminatory. HELD, the subjection of complainant to the inferior accomodations and discomforts of the colored compartment and amid the fumes of tobacco smoke and whisky, while the company had his money for a first class passage, enjoyed by white passengers but denied to him, was a palpable violation of the third section of the act. Heard v. Georgia R. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. 719.

(i) A carrier furnishing separate cars to white and colored passengers on its line engaged in interstate travel must make them equal in comforts, accommodation, and equipment, without any discrimination. Heard v. Georgia R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 508.

(j) A carrier engaged in interstate travel over its lines must afford the equal protection of the law alike to all passengers, without regard to race, color, or sex, against undue prejudice and disadvantage from disorderly conduct on the part of other passengers or persons. Heard v. Georgia R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 508.

(k) Complainant, a colored passenger, was excluded from a first class car although he held a first class ticket, and attacked this exclusion as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. Petitioner purchased a first class ticket from Philadelphia, Pa., to Atlanta, Ga., but traveled in the first class coach only as far as Augusta, Ga., where he was required to leave this car and enter a second car reserved for colored people. This latter car was in an unfit condition for the transportation of passengers although the law provides equal and like conditions should prevail. HELD, defendant discriminated against complaint in not furnishing equal accommodations with those furnished white persons. Heard v. Georgia R. R. 2 I. C. C. 508.

(l) It is a lawful duty that a carrier owes to the traveling public in carrying out its rules of furnishing separate cars to white and colored passengers on its line engaged in interstate travel, to make them equal in comforts, accommodation, and equipment without any discrimination. Heard v. Georgia R. 2 I. C. C. 508, 511.

(m) It is a lawful duty which a carrier owes to the traveling public engaged, in interstate travel over its line, to afford the equal protection of the law alike to all such persons without regard to race, color or sex, against undue prejudice and disadvantage from disorderly conduct on the part of other passengers or persons. Heard v. Georgia R. 2 I. C. C. 508, 511.

(n) The law will not tolerate the doctrine any more in the transportation of persons than of property, that one class is to be favored by the carrier over another. Heard v. Georgia R. R. 2 I. C. C. 508, 514.

(o) The Mississippi statute of March 2, 1888, § 1, requiring all railroads carrying passengers (other than street railroads) to provide equal but separate accommodations for white and colored races, by providing two or more passengers cars for each passenger train, or by dividing the cars by a partition, is not invalid as an interference with interstate commerce, as it refers only to the carriage of passengers between points within the State. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co.

v. State (Miss.) 2 I. C. R. 615. Affirmed by U. S. Sup. Ct. 2 I. C. R. 801.

(p) The first section of said Statute which requires railroads to provide separate accommodations for the white and colored races, is within the power of the State, and is not a regulation of interstate commerce and does not violate the commerce clause of the Constitution. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. State of Mississippi. 2 I. C. R. 801.

(q) A railroad company must furnish to colored people who pay first-class fare cars to ride in that are as safe and comfortable in their conditions and appointments as the cars furnished to white passengers who pay first-class fare. Houck v. Southern P. R. Co. (C. C. W. D. Tex.) 4 I. C. R. 441.

(r) A railway company, in the management of its complicated interests, may be authorized in law,—on showing a proper or sufficient state of facts, to establish in the opinion of the court the reasonableness of the rule—in setting apart one or more cars for the use exclusively of colored passengers, and a like number, more or less, as the service may require, for the use exclusively of white passengers; but whenever the company enforces such a rule the company is charged with the duty of furnishing to colored people who pay first class fare cars to ride in that are as safe and comfortable in their conditions and appointments as the cars furnished to white passengers who pay first class fare. Houck v Southern Pac. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 441.

(s) The provisions of the Kentucky statute requiring separate compartments or cars for white and colored passengers to be furnished by all railroad companies operating trains within the state, in respect to interstate commerce, cannot be separated from those relating to commerce wholly within the state, and render the whole act void. Anderson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. C. D. Ky.) 4 I. C. R. 764.

(t) A statute requiring separate cars or compartments to be furnished white and colored passengers upon railroads is valid as a proper exercise of the police power of the state when confined to the intrastate commerce of the state and not applying to interstate commerce. Anderson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 764.

(u) The prohibition contained in U. S. Const. 14th Amend. against discrimination by a state because of race or previous condition of servitude, though securing to citizens certain fundamental rights as against state action, does not secure the joint and common enjoyment of such rights. Anderson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 764.

(v) The Kentucky statute requiring all companies operating railroads within the state to provide separate cars or compartments for white and colored passengers is so broad as to embrace all passengers, including those whose passage commences or ends in other states, and is void as an interference with interstate commerce. Anderson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 764.

(w) The Kentucky statutes requiring all railroad companies to furnish separate coaches or compartments for colored and white passengers does not violate U. S. Const. 14th Amend. prohibiting discrimination by a state because of race or previous condition of servitude, as it prohibits any discrimination in the quality, convenience, or accommodations in the cars and compartments set apart for the different classes of passengers. Anderson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 764.

(x) A statute requiring all railroads in the state to furnish equal but separate accommodations for whites and blacks, and requiring conductors to assign passengers to their respective places, when applied to a passenger from another state on an interstate railroad line, invades the powers conferred on Congress by the commerce clause of the Constitution. Carrey v. Spencer, 5 I. C. R. 636.

(y) A railroad company which authorizes a railroad company in another state to sell a ticket to a negress entitling her to a first-class passage over the former company's line, thereby recognizes her as an interstate passenger and entitled to the rights of such a passenger. Carrey v. Spencer, 5 I. C. R. 636.

(z) The requirement of the Kentucky statute of separate coaches for white and colored passengers does not, at least as applied to carriage wholly within the State, violate the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, although the line extends beyond the State. The ruling was placed upon Britton v. Atlantic & C. Air-Line R. Co., 88 N. C. 542, 43 Am. Dec. 749; Chesapeake O. & S. W. R. Company v. Wells, 85 Tenn. 615; Day v. Owens, 5 Mich. 525, 72 Am. Dec. 62; West Chester & P. R. Co. v. Miles, 55 Pa. 209, 93 Am. Dec. 744; Com. v. Power, 7 Met 596, 41 Am. Dec. 465; Murphy v. Western & A. R Co. 23 Fed. Rep. 637; Houck v. Southern P. R. Co. 38 Fed. Rep. 226, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 441; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801; and Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256. The court says it is well known that a large portion of the white race is opposed to being required to keep the same seat or to travel in the same coaches that are occupied by the colored race, and it is wholly immaterial whether the colored race shares the same feeling in that regard or not toward the white race, but the presumption is that many of them likewise prefer to occupy seats in coaches not occupied by white persons. But whether this be true or not, it is manifestly better for the colored race to be separated from the white race than to be placed in the same coach with white persons, with the result that the same would be offensive to the white race; for, if this be true, it would reasonably cause disturbances which would be alike disagreeable and injurious to both races. It seems to us that the law complained of is more necessary for the comfort, convenience, and protection of the colored race than of the white race; and it is to be regretted that the law has not been accepted by both races as designed and intended for the mutual benefit and protection of both races. McLeod, Receiver of Ohio Valley Ry. Co. v. Lander 8 I. C. C. App LX.

(aa) A State statute providing for separate and equal accommodations for the white and colored races on railroads is a valid police regulation and applies both to intra and interstate travel. The court distinguishes the case of Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547, saying that subsequent cases have established three distinct propositions: First, that any legislation by a State, whether it be or not in the exercise of police power, though it incidentally and remotely affects interstate commerce without constituting a regulation of it, may be valid; second, that in the reasonable exercise of the police power a State may impose burdens upon interstate commerce which occasion both inconvenience and hardship to the carrier, provided Congress has not directly acted upon the same subject; third, that laws passed under the police power of the State for the reasonable regulation of travel and transportation are not regulations of interstate commerce in the objectionable sense, under the Constitution. Specifically, they have also settled, fourth, that laws providing for the separation of the white and colored races in public conveyances, giving each equal privileges of travel and accommodation, are reasonable, and are valid exercises of State authority under the police powers, although they affect and impose burdens upon interstate commerce; citing Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256; Hennington v. Georgia 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1064; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801. Smith v. State of Tennessee, 8 I. C. C. App. LXXII.

(bb) Employees of railroads may have passes. Re Transportation of Land and Immigration Agents, 12 I. C. C. 7.

(cc) White and colored passengers. Carriers may not discriminate between white and colored passengers paying the same fare, in the accommodations which they furnish to each. Edwards v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 247.

(dd) Carrier may not discriminate in accommodations to be provided to white and colored passengers paying same fare. Edwards v. N. C. & St. L. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 247.

(eeff) Colored, passengers equal accommodations to be provided for. Edwards v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 247.

(gg) Segregation of white and colored passengers on interstate journeys is a reasonable regulation of interstate traffic and permissible under the Act to Regulate Commerce. Georgia Edwards, v. Nash Chat. & St. Louis Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 247.

(hhii) Complainant attacked as discriminatory the facilities furnished by the defendants in connection with the transportation of passengers between negroes and those belonging to other races. Complainant purchased a first class ticket from Chattanooga, Tenn., to Dalton, Ga., and occupied a seat in a car by passengers other than negroes and was requested to move to another car set apart by defendant for the use of people of her race. Defendant furnished one of the cars with wash bowls and towels, the other was not supplied with such conveniences, the former being used by the white race. A separate smoking department is set aside for white passengers but none for colored passengers. The separation of white and colored passengers paying the same fare is not unlawful if cars and accommodations equal in all respects are furnished to both and the same care and protection of passengers is observed. HELD, similar accommodations should be furnished to both white and colored people and defendant is ordered to furnish accordingly. Georgia Edwards v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 247.

(jj) Where a carrier provides facilities for personal cleanliness in first class coaches devoted to the use of white passengers, and a separate smoking compartment for the use of such passengers also, similar accommodations should be provided for colored passengers paying first class fare Georgia Edwards v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 247, 250.

(kk) Segregation of white and colored passengers on interstate journeys is a reasonable regulation of interstate traffic and permissible under the Act. Georgia Edwards v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 247, 249.

(ll) Carriers may not discriminate between white and colored passengers paying the same fare in the accommodations which they furnish to each. Georgia Edwards v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 247, 249.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(mm) Compartment passenger cars running from Atlanta, Ga., to Washington, D. C., were provided for the colored people and for the whites. The forward compartment was occupied by the colored people and was supplied with a washbowl, a duplicate of that in the compartment assigned to white passengers. Ordinarily, soap and towels were furnished to all passengers, and, if on account of an emergency they were not furnished, the white and colored passengers suffered alike. But one toilet was furnished for men and women in each compartment which did not bear designation. In emergency, the cars were sometimes turned so that the colored compartment was in the rear, in which case a separate smoking compartment was not furnished the colored passenger. HELD, the general treatment and accommodation of colored passengers was not unduly discriminatory in favor of the whites. Cozart v. S. P. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 226, 230.

(nn) Complainant, colored bishop, alleged that colored passengers in the southeastern states were unduly discriminated against, in the character and condition of the passenger coaches furnished to them, in the refusal to sell sleeping car tickets, or to deny the holder of such tickets the right to use the space called for by them, and in refusal to colored passengers of access to dining cars, and of service of food and refreshments. The evidence showed that the day-coaches accommodations offered to colored passengers were the same as to white people, and that more space was provided for the colored than the white travelers. Colored passengers were not served with meals in the dining car at the same time with whites, but were served on the third and last call, or upon request were served at their seats either in the Pullman, or in the ordinary coach, portable tables being used for that purpose. In other respects the dining service was the same for the colored as for white travelers. As to sleeping cars, the rules and regulations did not discriminate against colored persons, the real discrimination arising from the application of the rules to individual travelers by the carriers' servants. The laws in the section of the country involved provided for the separation of the white and black passengers on trains, such laws having been upheld as constitutional. The evidence indicated that the average colored traveler was not welcomed by the average ticket seller or Pullman conductor when applying for sleeping car accommodations on account of the exceeding infrequency of the demand, and the fear of breaking state laws in acceding thereto, the confusion with respect to state and federal laws, and the rights, obligations and penalties attaching thereto, and the manner of the making of the demand. Colored travel for long distance was exceedingly slight, as compared with white travel. The evidence indicated that the colored people demanding accommodations were often lacking in tact with respect to the race problems actually existing. HELD, under the evidence no undue discrimination or prejudice was established. Complaint dismissed. Gaines v. S. Air Line Ry. Co., 16 I. C. 471, 474, 476.

(oo) A bulletin issued by a carrier engaged in both intrastate and interstate carriage of passengers, announcing the enactment of a state statute requiring the segregation of races, declaring the statute applied only to intrastate passengers and requiring its enforcement on trains which carry passengers to which the law does apply, was not by its terms a valid regulation for the segregation of interstate passengers according to race. Washington, B. & O. Electric R. Co. v. Waller, (1923), 289 Fed. 598.

§11½. Divisions.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A lower basis of divisions of joint through passenger fares between points in California and Salt Lake City, Utah, and points north and east thereof, accorded complainant than defendants allowed each other of similar joint fares, found to be unlawful, in violation of the second paragraph of section 3 of the Act. Reparation awarded. Western Pacific R. R. Co. v. S. P., 55 I. C. C. 71.

§12. Free Transporation and Passes.

See Crimes III; Express Companies §5; Free transportation.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Section 2 of Act prohibiting giving of passes to particular persons, and the exception allowed in section 22 in favor of officers and employees of road does not include the families of such persons. Ex parte Koehler (U. S. C. Ct.) 1 I. C. R. 317.

(b) Passes to families of employees. Section 2 of the Interstate Commerce Act in effect prohibits the giving of passes or free carriage to particular persons; and the exception allowed in section 22, in favor of officers and employees of the road, does not include the families of such persons. Ex Parte Koehler, Receiver of Ore. & Cal. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 317.

(c) In the absence of an actual case, the Commission will not pass upon the question of passes to the United States Fish Commission. Re United States Commission of Fish and Fisheries, 1 I. C. R. 606.

(d) The Interstate Commission declines, in the absence of an actual case, to pass upon the question for the propriety of railroads continuing the issuance of free passes to the United States Fish Commission and the National Museum, to enable their employees to carry on their official duty at less expense to the United States. Re U. S. Commission of Fish & Fisheries v. 1 I. C. R. 606.

(e) Under the Interstate Commerce Act, § 2, where passes issued to a company's ex-employe, good for twenty days, were not used, and no one was ever transported upon them, a charge of unjust discrimination cannot be sustained. Griffee v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. 2 I. C. R. (Com.) 194.

(ea) On the 10th of April, 1887, on the request of one C. H. Waite, trip passes were issued to him by an officer of the defendant from Lincoln, Nebraska to Atchison, Kansas, and return to be good for twenty days. Waite had been an employee of the defendant for several years in the capacity of an engineer, and, having been recently discharged professed when he applied for the passes that he desired to go to Atchison to seek employment on another road. They were issued to him as ex-employee. They were not used, and no one was ever transported upon them. They were delivered to the Commission on the hearing. HELD: (a) That the offense charged is under the second section of the Act and consists in charging, demanding, collecting or receiving by a common carrier to which the Act applies, from any person or persons, a greater or less compensation for service rendered or to be rendered, in the transportation of persons or property subject to the Act, than it charges, demands, collects or receives from any other person or persons, for doing him or them a like and contemporaneous service; (b) That the unlawfulness under this section is the doing of a service by a carrier in the manner forbidden by the statute, and if no such service has been done a contravention of the Act has not occurred; (c) That the passes in question not having been used, but having long ago become defunct by their terms, and no transportation of anyone upon them having ever taken place, the charge of unjust discrimination is not sustained. Griffe v. Burlington & Missouri R. R. Co., in Nebr., 2 I. C. R. 194.

(f) Free transportation issued in the form of an annual pass, to a person not in the regular and stated service of the carrier nor receiving any wages or salary under a contract of employment, but requested by him as compensation for throwing in its way what business he conveniently could, HELD to be illegal. Slater v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 2 I. C. R., 243.

(g) Complainant attacked the illegal free transportation of a person not a railway employe. HELD, free transportation issued in the form of an annual pass, to a person not in the regular and stated service of the carrier nor receiving any wages or salary under a contract of employment, but requested by him as compensation for throwing in its way what business he conveniently could is illegal. Slater v. N. P. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 243.

(h) A pass costs the carrier little or nothing, and when the good will and occasional good words of a person who is able to influence the direction of traffic can be obtained so cheaply it is a hardship to prevent the carrier from making use of the opportunity; but the evils of the unrestricted employment of free passes by common carriers has grown so great and had become so apparent, both to the public and to the carriers themselves, that it was deemed by Congress to be absolutely necessary to eradicate the whole system from interstate commerce in order to put an end to the abuses which had grown beyond the limits of any other regulation or control. Slater v. N. P. R. R. Co. 2 I. C. C. 243, 245.

(i) Unreasonable and unlawful preference may be given by a common carrier by granting free transportation over its lines from one State into another to one passenger, who is not an officer or employe of the carrier, while denying it to others. United States v. Cleveland, C. & S. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Ohio), 3 I. C. R. 290.

(j) The defendant issued passes entitling the holders to free transportation over the lines of its system, extending into the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts; there were several classes of the persons who received the passes, among them, gentlemen long eminent in the public service, higher officers of the states, prominent officials of the United States, members of the legislative railroad committees of the above named states and persons whose good-will was claimed to be important to the defendant; HELD, that the giving of free transportation to such persons was a violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce. The defendant also issued such passes to other classes of persons, among them, the sick, necessitous and indigent, proprietors of hotels, members of the families of employes, agents of ice companies, milk contractors, state railroad commissioners, trustees of railroad mortgages and newspaper publishers for advertising; HELD, as to these latter classes of persons that as the investigation as to them had not been finished, the case should be held for further consideration and order. When an investigation by the Commission to inquire into the business management of a common carrier has been fully concluded as to some matters, and not concluded as to others, an order may be made pendente lite, as to the former, and the cause retained for further consideration and order as to the latter. Upon the facts found in this case, held, that the second section of the Act prohibits the giving of free transportation to the persons embraced within the classes first above named; that a carrier is bound to charge equally to all persons regardless of their relative individual standing in the community; that the words, "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions" relate to the nature and character of the service rendered by the carrier, and not to the official, social or business position of the passenger; that section twenty-two of the Act is exceptive in character and only applies to the persons and subjects expressly specified therein. Re Boston & Maine Co. 3 I. C. R. 717.

(k) Issuing free passes to gentlemen long eminent in the public service, high officers of the States, prominent officials of the United States, members of the legislative railroad committee of several States, and persons whose goodwill was claimed to be important to the defendant, —is a violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Re Boston & M. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 717.

(lm) The action of the railroad company in granting to members of the city council of New Orleans and the clerk of that body, on account of their official position free transportation as passengers over all or some portion of its interstate lines, violates the Act to Regulate Commerce, and is unlawful. Harvey v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 793, 794.

(ma) The refusal of a railroad company to honor tickets or coupons for passage issued by another company over its lines does not constitute a discrimination within the Interstate Commerce Act as, in the absence of arrangement between the companies, there is no obligation on the part of either to honor tickets issued by the other. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 718.

(n) The free transportation of shippers or dealers between state or interstate points on account of interstate freight traffic furnished to the carrier is unlawful. Milk Producers' Protective Asso. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 92, 163.

(o) A railroad official who grants a pass as a matter of personal favor and friendship, to be used in an interstate journey by one who is not within the exceptions of the Interstate Commerce Act, is guilty of a violation of the provisions of that act against unjust discrimination. Re charge to Grand Jury 7 I. C. C. App. LIV.

(p) The prohibition of the Interstate Commerce Act against the issuance of railway passes does not apply to passes issued for money or other valuable consideration. Curry v. Kans., & Colorado Pacific Ry. Co., 7 I. C. C. XCI.

(q) Land and immigration agents not entitled to passes. Re Transportation of Land and Immigration Agents, 12 I. C. C. 7.

(qa) Immigration agents only as bona fide employees to have passes. Re Transportation of Land & Immigration Agents, 12 I. C. C. 7.

(r) Land and Immigration Agents not to be transported free or at reduced rates unless bona fide and actual employees of carriers. Re Transportation of Land & Immigration Agents, 12 I. C. C. 7.

(s) Land and immigration agents, unless they are bona fide and actual employees of carriers subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce, are not within the excepted classes specified in that statute, and providing transportation for such agents free or at reduced rates over lines of such carriers is, and since the act was originally passed has been, unlawful. Ruling in Tariff Circular No. 5-A reaffirmed. Transportation of Land and Immigration Agents v. 12 I. C. C. 8.

(t) Land and immigration agents, unless they are bona fide and actual employees of carriers subject to the Act, are not within the excepted classes specified in that statute, and providing transportation for such agents free or at reduced rates over lines of such carriers is, and since the act was originally passed has been, unlawful. Complaint of I. C. R. R. as set forth in statement of J. C. Stubbs, Chairman of western lines. 12 I. C. C. 8, 9.

(u) Effects of employes may be moved free. Re Railroad-Telegraph Contract, 12 I. C. C. 10.

(v) As a telegraph service along its right of way is essential to the safe operation of its trains, a railroad company or a group of separately incorporated roads generally recognized as a "railway system," may lawfully contract to furnish free or reduced-rate transportation to a telegraph company for such of its officers, men, materials, and supplies as are required in connection with the construction, maintenance, and operation of such a telegraph line and service upon its own right of way; and the legality of such free or reduced-rate transportation is not affected by the fact that the telegraph company may also use such telegraph line in connection with its telegraph service to the public; but such company or system can not lawfully contract, in consideration of free telegraph service or services at reduced rates over wires beyond its own right of way, to furnish free or reduced-rate transportation in connection with the construction, maintenance, or operation of a telegraph line and service off the line of such company or system and upon the line or lines of another carrier or system. Re Railroad Telegraph Contracts, 12 I. C. C. 10.

(w) The mere fact that carriers, as a means of securing traffic make agreements with shippers, tracing their freight cars on the rails of other carriers, communicating with their agents in distant localities, frequently find it convenient to telegraph to points beyond their own right of way and are allowed by the telegraph companies to do so free or at reduced rates, does not make it lawful for a railroad company to grant to a telegraph company free or reduced rate carriage for its officers, employees, materials or supplies destined for use in a telegraph service on the right of way of other carriers. Railroad-Telegraph contracts. 12 I. C. C. 10, 13.

(x) The provisions of the Act relative to the issuance of free tickets, free passes, free transportation, or free carriage to employees of carriers apply only to persons who are actually in the service of the carriers and who devote substantially all of their time to the work or business of such carriers. Land and immigration agents, unless they are bona fide and actual employees, representatives of correspondence schools, agents of accident or life insurance companies, agents of oil or lubricating companies, etc., are not within the classes to which free or reduced-rate transportation can be lawfully furnished. But the Commission does not construe the law as preventing a carrier from giving necessary free transprotation to a person traveling over its line solely for the purpose of attending to business of, or performing a duty imposed upon, the carrier, nor from giving free carriage over its line to the household and personal effects of an employee who is required to remove from one place to another at the instance of, or in the interest of, the carrier by which he is employed. Nor does the Commission construe the law as preventing a carrier from giving free or reduced-rate carriage over its line to contractors for material, supplies, and men for use in construction, improvement, or renewal work on the line of that carrier, provided such arrangements for free or reduced-rate carriage are made a part of the specifications upon which the contract is based and of the contract itself. Railroad-Telegraph Contracts 12 I. C. C. 11.

(y) Telegraph or telephone expert may be hired and passed. Re Free Transportation of Newspaper Employees, 12 I. C. C. 15.

(z) Newspaper messengers, caretakers, not entitled to passes. Re Free Transportation of Newspaper Employees, 12 I. C. C. 15.

(aa) Contractors may be hired and passed by carrier. Re Transportation of Newspaper Employees, 12 I. C. C. 15.

(bb) Clock makers in employ of carrier, may be transported free. Re Transportation of Newspaper Employees, 12 I. C. C. 15.

(cc) Employees of newspapers, may be carried only at regular published rates. Re Transportation of Newspaper Employees, 12 I. C. C. 15.

(dd) Caretakers on special newspaper trains may not be carried free or at commodity rates. Re Free Transportation of Newspaper Employees, 12 I. C. C. 15.

(ee) Where the Congress has expressly enumerated special classes of persons or things that may be exempted and excepted from the operation of general provisions in a law, this Commission cannot enlarge the excepted classes by mere construction and include in them persons or things not thus expressly named in the statute itself. The so-called caretakers of newspaper companies whose duty it is to assort newspapers on special newspaper trains and to make them up into packages for delivery as the train arrives at the several points along the line of the run, may not lawfully be granted the free transportation that is permissible under the act to the caretakers of certain other kinds of traffic specifically enumerated in the act. In the matter of the free transportation of newspaper employees on special newspaper trains. 12 I. C. C. 16, 19.

(ff) The Commission does not understand that the employees or socalled messengers of the newspaper companies while on special newspaper trains are in any sense employees of the carrier. The duty of the carrier as such is confined to the transportation of the newspapers. It is no part of its duty to assort the newspapers on the train or to prepare them in parcels containing the required number of papers at each station; that is a duty pertaining wholly to the newspaper companies. Transportation of newspaper employees. 12 I. C. C. 16, 18.

(gg) Free transportation of some passengers places greater burden on others. Re Right of Railroad Company to Exchange Free Transportation with Transfer and Baggage Express Companies, 12 I. C. C. 39.

(hh) Transfer companies may not receive passes. Re Right of Railroad Companies to Exchange Free Transportation with Transfer and Baggage Express Companies, 12 I. C. C. 39.

(hha) While the petitioner, Frank Parmelee Company, not being subject to the regulating statute, may doubtless give free transportation on its omnibus and baggage express wagons to whomsoever it wishes, no common carrier subject to the jurisdiction of that act can lawfully grant free transportation to the officers, agents, or employees of petitioner. Specific exceptions noted in the act as to "baggage agents" entering trains near large terminals to arrange for baggage transfer. Exchange of Free Transportation 12 I. C. C. 40.

(ii) Section 1 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, amended June 29, 1906, provides: "No common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, shall . . . directly or indirectly, issue or give any interstate free ticket, free pass, or free transportation for passengers, except to its employees and their families, its officers, agents, . . . : Provided, That this provision shall not be construed to prohibit the interchange of passes for the officers, agents, and employees of common carriers, and their families." The proviso clearly modifies the main clause and is to be construed strictly. The words "common carriers" relate only to those referred to in the main clause, namely, common carriers subject to the act. Exchange of Free Transportation 12 I. C. C. 40.

(jj) Petitioner is a common carrier engaged in the city of Chicago in transferring passengers and baggage between railroad stations and between such stations and hotels and private residences and performs a service connected with interstate passenger traffic, but is nevertheless not a carrier subject to the provisions of the Act. HELD, while the petioner, Frank Parmalee Company, not being subject to the regulating statute, may doubtless give free transportation to whomsoever it wishes, no common carrier subject to the jurisdiction of the act can lawfully grant free transportation to the officers, agents, or employees of petitioner. This does not apply to the baggage agents of petitioner and other transfer and baggage express companies whose duty it is to meet passenger trains at some point near the larger terminals and go through the trains to arrange for the transfer of passengers and their baggage. In the matter of the right of railroad companies to exchange free transportation with local transfer and baggage companies 12 I. C. C. 40.

(kk) It must be borne in mind that every extension of the privilege of free transportation casts an appreciable additional burden upon those who pay for their transportation and thus contribute to the earnings that carriers are entitled to as just return upon the capital invested. The whole spirit of the act is that this burden should be distributed as equally and equitably as possible. Manifestly, therefore, and especially in view of the discussion accompanying its enactment, the antipass provision should receive a narrow rather than a liberal construction. In the matter of the right of railroad companies to exchange free transportation with local and transfer and baggage companies, 12 I. C. C. 45.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(ll) The anti-pass provision of section 1 of the Interstate Commerce Act as amended, relates only to interstate passes. State passes are not referred to in the Act at all. Colorado Free Pass Investigation, 26 I. C. C. 491, 494.

(mm) And carriers' practices in granting free transportation under section 22 must not result in undue preference or prejudice under section 3. Dairymen's Supply Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 28 I. C. C. 406, 408.

(nn) The gift by interstate carriers of state passes to public officials and others not shippers is an evil not directly within the power of the Commission to redress, but the Commissoin will not lose sight of the practice when the rates of such companies are called in question. Montana Pass Situation, 29 I. C. C. 411.

(oo) Proposed withdrawal of free transportation of attendants accompanying empty fish cars, found justified. Express Charges on Empty Fish Cars, 50 I. C. C. 24, 27, 28.

(pp) The free carriage of persons or of property is contrary to the general principles to be found in the Act to regulate commerce, as amended. The same provides . . . . . for the punishment of those who offend its provisions. Any free carriage of passengers that is now lawful is authorized in the form of exceptions to the general principle to be found in the so-called antipass provision of section 1 of the Act. Any free carriage of property that is lawful is to be found in the exceptions noted in section 22 of the Act. While the free carriage of certain of the excepted classes of passengers has thus been authorized even when traveling for pleasure or for their personal benefit, the spirit of the whole Act forbids the free carriage of property except where public interests are involved under the conditions specified in section 22. Legality of Express Franks, 50 I. C. C. 599, 603.

(qq) Any free carriage of passengers that is now lawful is authorized in the form of exceptions to the general principle to be found in the so-called antipass provision of section 1 of the Act. Legality of Express Franks, 50 I. C. C. 599, 603.

(rr) Complainant attacked as unreasonable charges collected for the transportation of 21 carloads of live poultry from Oklahoma, Texas, South Dakota, Kansas, Missouri and Iowa to points in New York, Illinois, Kansas, Ohio and Iowa, and the return transportation of the caretakers. In 49 I. C. C. 96, the Commission found that the cancellation of the western trunk line shipments of live poultry was justified as applicable before, but not after January 10, 1915, the date on which the rating of live poultry, in carloads, was increased from fourth to third class. When the rating was increased the Commission took into consideration in allowing the increase that the charges on the outward movement of the cars covered the return transportation of caretakers, 49 I. C. C. 228 and 32 I. C. C. 380. HELD, cancellation of the rule providing for free return transportation of caretakers in charge of live poultry not justified. Reparation with interest awarded. Swift & Co. v. S. A. & A. P. Ry., 53 I. C. C. 515.

(ss) A common carrier, subject to the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce, cannot accept any compensation other than money for the services which it renders, and a pass issued for a nonmonetary consideration, though valid when made, becomes invalid under the provisions of that act. Shrader v. Steubenville, East Liverpool & B. V. T. Co., (W. Va., 1919), 99 S. E. 207.

(tt) A pass issued by a carrier for the transportation of the wife of an employe must be deemed to be issued gratuitously, since the statute applies to it the term "free pass," and since section 2 of the Act of June 29, 1906, forbids the charging by a carrier of "a greater or less or different compensation" for the transportation of passengers from that in its published rates. C. & W. C. Ry. Co. v. Thompson, 34 S. Ct. 964; 234 U. S. 576; 58 L. ed.

(uu) The right of a carrier which is subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, to issue passes to the officers, agents, and employees of carriers not subject to that Act, such as trans-Atlantic steamship companies and foreign railway companies, is recognized in the proviso in §1 of that Act, that the prohibition against free transportation "shall not be construed to prohibit the interchange of passes for the officers, agents, and employees of common carriers and their families." United States v. Erie R. Co., 35 Sup Ct. 396 U. S. 259; 59 L. ed. 567.

§12a. Land Settlers.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A carrier may sell its lands at such prices as it may seem fit to establish therefor, and may accept whatever it sees fit in payment; and when it makes a discount from the selling price of an amount equal to the whole or to any part of the fare paid by the purchaser in inspecting or emigrating to said lands, it does not appear to violate any of the provisions of the Act. Smith v. N. P. R. R. 1 I. C. C. 611, 620.

§13. Stations.

(ab) The defendant having the lawful right, in the public interest as well as in its own interest, to move its station to the new point, it can not be held liable for damages alleged to have been sustained as a consequence of such action. Jones et. al. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 144.

(cd) The obligation to provide station facilities at a given point along the line of a railroad may arise under the terms of the charter of a company or may be imposed by statute, and some authorities assert that the duty exists also at common law; but the Commission is not the proper forum to which to appeal for the enforcement either of a charter, statutory or common law obligation, as it has no authority to issue the writ of mandamus, and possesses no common law jurisdiction. C. J. Jones v. St. L. & S. F. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 144, 147.

(ef) Removal of station at Chase, Ind Terr., having three stores, postoffice, two churches, two schoolhouses, and, within a circle of four miles, a population of from 300 to 400, which was located on low lands subject to overflow, and where there was a general lack of business, to a junction point with another carrier 2½ miles west, which may be reached as conveniently by farmers, does not materially impair the interests of the general public. Jones v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 144.

(g) Not liable for damages resulting from removal of station to new point. Jones v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 144.

(h) Complainant attacked the action of defendant in moving its freight station. In the fall of 1905 defendant moved its station at Chase, Ind. T., 3½ miles west to a junction point with another carrier also called Chase; old Chase has three stores, postoffice, two churches, and two schoolhouses and within a circle of 4 miles has a population of from 300 to 400; the passenger receipts of defendant at old Chase averaged about $47 a month, and for a few months in 1904 and 1905 its freight receipts averaged, owing to cattle for grazing having been shipped there, about $418 a month, but the cattle have since ceased; in addition to this lack of business there, old Chase is located on lowlands subject to overflow by water; prepared freight is now received and delivered at old Chase; defendants passenger trains do not stop at old Chase; defendants passenger trains do not now stop at old Chase, but farmers can reach the station at new Chase as conveniently as they were able to use the station at old Chase. HELD, the record does not show that the interests of the general public have been materially impaired by the removal of the station to the new point, and that under the circumstances complainants are not entitled to an order requiring defendant to re-erect and maintain a station at old Chase. Defendant having the lawful right, in the public interest as well as in its own interest, to move its station to the new point, it can not be held liable for damages alleged to have been sustained as a consequence of such action. C. J. Jones v. St. L. & S. F. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 144.

(i) A railroad is constructed and operated primarily in order to serve the shipping and traveling public. The publication and posting of its schedules of freight and passenger rates may be said to establish a sort of privity between the railroad company and the shippers and travelers of a given community, and to create certain obligations on the part of the company to the shippers and travelers of that community. The Commission does not understand that such a relation exists between a railroad company and the owners of real estate in such a community, or that a railroad company, in the absence of some contract with them for the location and erection of a station at a given point, owes any obligation to the real estate owners, as such, of that community. But even if it be assumed that this Commission has jurisdiction over claims of the character presented, it follows that, having the lawful right, in the public interests as well as in its own interest, to move its station to the new point, the defendant can not be held liable for damages alleged to have been sustained as a consequence of such action. Jones v. St. L. & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 144, 150.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(j) A carrier cannot justify unreasonable discrimination between localities in refusing to stop its passenger trains at a particular place on certain days by a contract not to do so. A controversy involving a question of such discrimination must be determined independent of the contract. Loch Lynn Construction Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 396.

(k) Carriers have the right, and it is their duty, in the operation of their roads, reasonably and practically to adjust the same as to stopping at stations, particularly with reference to the number and speed of passenger trains, frequency of stops and the like, with reasonable adaptation to all of the varying circumstances and conditions existing along their lines at different places. There is a large field for the exercise by them of reasonable discretion respecting the many details of operation and adjustment to varying conditions, particularly with regard to through or limited trains, local or accommodation trains, and stops ranging all the way from what is suitable and reasonable with respect to mere flag stations where, upon signal from the passenger, a local or accommodation train may stop, up to the fastest trains for long distances in through travel, stopping only at important cities or junction points. Loch Lynn Construction Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 396, 399.

(l) A contract between a religious association and a carrier by which the latter agrees not to stop trains on Sunday cannot in any degree justify undue or unreasonable discrimination between stations on its line. Loch Lynn Construction Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 396, 399.

(m) The suitable location of a passenger terminal within a great city is a matter which can best be determined locally rather than by a commission sitting in Washington, and a referendum vote is entitled to great weight in this connection. Cleveland Passenger Terminal Case, 70 I. C. C. 342, 350.

(n) A carrier which has accepted a passenger for a destination beyond its own lines does not discharge its duty by delivering him at the junction point during a heavy rain, with no other shelter than that afforded by a "switch shanty," where he could have reached a through coach attached to the train by merely passing through other cars had he been informed that there was such a coach. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Bigger, 36 Sup. Ct. 127, 129; 239 U. S. 330; 60 L. ed. 310.

§13½. Stopovers.

(a) The sale of a ticket limited, not as to time, but only as to the privilege of a stopover, at the reduced price named for limited tickets in the published schedules filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which do not specify what is meant by the word "limited," is not a violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce. United States v. Egan (D. C. E. D. Mo.), 3 I. C. R. 582.

(b) A state statute making railroad tickets good for six years and giving the holder of one the right to stop off at as many stopping places as he pleases, before reaching his destination, cannot, in view of the power of Congress over commerce, be applied contrary to their terms to tickets sold beyond the limits of the state and entitling their holders to passage from a point in a foreign state or country to one in the state which enacted the statute. Lafarier v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 198.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Complainant bought transportation for himself and wife from El Paso Tex., to San Francisco, Cal., via Portland, Ore., and return. The tariff and tickets provided that the going time limit should be Oct. 20, 1909. Under privileges lawfully extended by the carrier, complainant and his wife stopped off at Boise, Idaho, to visit a sick daughter and did not resume their journey until Oct. 22nd. The agent at Portland refused to honor the tickets and complainant was obliged to buy two tickets of $20 each from Portland to San Francisco, for which he seeks to recover reparation. The tariff provided that in case of illness of a holder of a ticket, or accompanying member of the family of the holder, stopover might be granted and the limit of the ticket extended by exchange or otherwise after the passenger had sufficiently recovered to resume the journey. HELD, complainant was not entitled to reparation. The provision recited related to a sick passenger and not to some third party not a passenger and the extra fares were properly collected. Parker v. S. P. Co., 24 I. C. C. 681.

§14. Through Routes and Rates.

See Through Routes and Joint Rates.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) In the absence of statutory authority one railroad company can sell tickets and check baggage over the road of another company only by agreement; and the Act to Regulate Commerce does not in terms require one railroad company to sell through tickets over the road of another company. Chicago & A. R. R. Co., v. Penn. Co., 1 I. C. R. 357.

(b) The Act does not require one company to sell through tickets over road of another. Chicago etc. R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 1. I. C. R. 357.

(ba) Complainants charge violation of section 3 of the Act in refusing certain facilities for receiving, forwarding, and delivering passengers to complainants lines, consisting of through or coupon tickets, which being afforded to other and competing companies, give, the complainants alleged, undue and unreasonable preference to those companies. HELD, In the absence of statutory authority one railroad company can sell tickets and check baggage over the road of another carrier only by agreement; and the Act does not in terms require one railroad company to sell through tickets over the road of another company . Railroad companies may, under their right to control the official conduct of their own agents, forbid their agents to receive commissions from other companies for the sale of tickets over such other companies roads, and may direct them not to sell tickets over roads of companies which refuse to recognize this corporate authority but which insist on subsidizing such agents. One person or corporation has no right to interfere with the employees of another, and the act does not disturb this principle. The practice of one companys paying the agents of another company a commission for selling tickets over the formers road is not reasonable or proper. The defendant companies in prohibiting their agents from receiving commissions and in refusing to sell through tickets over the roads of complainants while the latter insists on paying commissions to defendants agents, have not contravened the third section of the Act, which require that railroad companies shall afford all reasonable, proper and equal facilities to connecting line. Chicago & Alton R. R. v. Pennsylvania Co., 1 I. C. C. 357.

(bb) Railroad companies may, under their right to control the official conduct of their own agents, forbid their agents to receive commissions from other companies for the sale of tickets over such other companies roads, and may direct them not to sell tickets over roads of companies which refuse to recognize this corporate authority but which insist on subsidizing such agents, Chicago & Alton R. R. v. Pennsylvania Co. 1 I. C. C. 357, 360.

(bc) The defendant companies in prohibiting their agents from receiving commissions and in refusing to sell through tickets over the roads of complainants while the latter insist on paying commissions to defendants agents, have not contravened the third section of the Act, which requires that railroad companies shall afford all reasonable, proper and equal facilities to connecting lines. Chicago & Alton R. R. v. Pennsylvania Co. 1 I. C. C. 357, 361.

(c) Reduction of passenger rates without consent of connecting lines over which tickets are sold, and without filing schedules thereof with Commission, HELD, to be in violation of section 6 of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Re Passenger Tariffs and Rate Wars 2 I. C. R. 341.

(d) When there is no joint rate in effect from a station on the line of one carrier to a station on another carrier's line to which a ticket is applied for, it is competent to name a through rate made up of the sums of rates prevailing on the several roads or parts of roads made use of in the journey; using for such a through rate local rates where there are no joint rates in combination with locals, where they are in effect for any part of the distance. When no joint rates are announced, it is understood that the local rates are employed in arriving at the through rate. Re Passenger Tariffs (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 445.

(e) A railroad company is under no obligation to honor tickets for passage over its line issued by another company, in the absence of an arrangement between them. Oregon Short Line v. U. N. R. Co. v. Northern Pacific R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 250.

(f) In making contracts for through transportation of passengers the initial carrier may lawfully prefer a road going through to the point of destination to one going only part of the way, an arrangement with which would necessitate further arrangements to reach the desired point. Little Rock Memphis R. Co. East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 201.

(fa) No unlawful discrimination against a railroad is effected by the traffic arrangement of a rival road running parallel with it for a considerable distance from their common initial point by which through tickets are sold to points on the rival road beyond the point of divergence exclusively over the latter without granting the former any facilities for securing a share of the traffic to such points for the distance which it could carry it. Little Rock-Memphis R. Co., East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 261.

(g) Defendant charged one fare of 5 cents for the ride in Maryland and another for the ride in the District of Columbia, selling, however, six tickets for 25 cents, good for passage in either the District or State, making a through fare of 10 cents, or two such tickets for a continuous ride between Maryland and the District, the total length of its road being about 7½ miles. HELD, That unreasonableness cannot be presumed from the amount of fare so charged and the other facts incidentally appearing, no direct evidence upon that question having been presented. Wilkon v. Rock Creek R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 83.

(h) A charge of 5 cents over the portion of a railway in Maryland, and a like charge over that portion in the District of Columbia, making a through fare of 10 cents for 7½ miles, cannot be presumed unreasonable in the absence of any direct evidence to that effect. Wilson v. Rock Creek R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 83.

(ha) The provision of New York Laws 1897, chap. 506, that no person except an authorized agent shall sell any ticket for conveyance on any vessel or railway train, is a mere police regulation to prevent fraud on passengers, is not a "regulation" of interstate commerce within the meaning of the United States Constitution, although it entitles the holder to transportation without the State. People of the State of N. Y. ex. rel. Tyrolu v. Warden of City Prison, 8 I. C. C. App. LI.

(i) Complainant attacked passenger fares charged from Washington, D. C., via Richmond, Va., to Moseley, Va., as unreasonable. Through rate $4.65, rate to Richmond $3.50. beyond 65c, combination on Richmond $4.15. The evidence shows that the local fares to and from Richmond applied to and from different stations and that the extra 50c covered a transfer charge. HELD, as the complainant was not subjected to unjust discrimination and the reasonableness of the transfer charge was not attacked, complaint dismissed. Behrend v. Washington Southern Ry. 9 I. C. C. 637.

(j) Complainant alleged unlawful discrimination in the matter of passenger rates and tickets to and from Yellowstone National Park. The defendant railway company publishes rates entitling passengers to transportation over its line from St. Paul, Minn., and other points, including eastern cities, to Gardiner, Mont., and return, via Gardiner through the Yellowstone Park, a Government reservation, by stages of the defendant transportation company and return, and also, if desired, to accomodations at hotels in the Park conducted by the defendant association. Complainant also operates a stage line through the Yellowstone Park and has established permanent camps where hotel accommodations are furnished. Licensed camping parties are conducted through the Park by the intervenors. Tickets issued by the defendant railroad company providing both railroad and stage transportation, and those also including hotel accommodations are coupon tickets, covering the service by rail, by stage, and at the hotels, and the rates charged therefor are divided between the railway company and the stage company or between the railway company the stage company and the hotel company, as the case may be, in such manner that the railway company receives for its rail service less than its established rate to Gardiner and return. The joint rate and ticketing arrangement is solely between the railway company and other defendants. The railway company admittedly controls the policy and operations of the other defendants. Excellent facilities for touring the Park are furnished by complaint. HELD, that the defendant railway company, stage transportation company, and hotel associates, are not competent in law to form through routes and establish joint rates as provided in section 6 of the Act, and the circular or tariff under which rates and tickets in question are provided can not be regarded as a joint tariff established by connecting carriers under that act. That, the charging of a given sum for rail transportation to Gardiner and return only, and the acceptance of a smaller sum for the rail transportation when the passenger goes by stage to points in or through Yellowstone Park, with or without hotel accommodations therein, the service performed by the railway company being the same in each case, constitutes unlawful discrimination. That the arrangements between defendants under which the through tickets are issued and sold and the proceeds divided, and the joint operations of defendants as actually carried on, constitute an effort and undue and unreasonable preference and advantage to the transportation company and hotel association, and subject complainant and others in like situation, as well as passengers traveling to and from Yellowstone Park, to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage; and while it is not decided that a carrier subject to the Act may not in some cases provide for transportation beyond its own line by stage or other similar conveyance, the facts shown in this case establish a discrimination forbidden by law. It is the duty of the defendant railway company to so conduct and control its operations relating to the transportation of passengers to Yellowstone Park as to afford such passengers full and equal opportunity at the terminus of its line at Gardiner and elsewhere to select the stage line or other agency they may desire to use for touring the Park, and the places and manner of entertainment therein. Wylie v. N. P. Ry. 11 I. C. C. 145.

(k) A railway company, stage transportation company, and a hotel association which furnishes accommodations to passengers are not competent in law to form through rates and establish joint rates as provided in section 6 of the Act to regulate commerce; and the circular or tariff under which the rates and tickets in question are provided cannot be regarded as a joint tariff established by connecting carriers under that Act. Wylie v. Northern P. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 145.

(l) Ordinarily the through interstate passenger fare should not exceed the sum of local fares, but there is no specific requirement in the regulating statute to that effect, and the only question for determination is whether the fare complained of is unreasonable. Artz v. Seaboard Air Line Railway, 11 I. C. C. 458.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(m) Circumstances can rarely exist which would justify charging a passenger more for a through ride between two points than the combination of locals between the same points, where the locals have been voluntarily established. U. S. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 470, 471.

(n) If carriers maintain through passenger fares made up of the sums of locals they should use the lowest scale available, especially when the higher local includes privileges not directly pertaining to the transportation and of which the through passenger does not care to avail himself. U. S. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 470, 472.

(o) The caprice, or even a proper desire, of an occasional passenger should not govern, but if any considerable part of the traveling public reasonably prefer to use some other route rather than the one existing, then the existing route cannot be called a reasonable and satisfactory through route. In the Matter of Through Passenger Routes via Portland, Ore., 16 I. C. C. 300, 303.

(p) While in some cases a higher through passenger fare may be maintained than the sum of the local fares, such fare can only be so maintained under peculiar circumstances and for special reasons. Kurtz v. Penn., Co., 16 I. C. C. 410, 415.

(q) Through checking of baggage and through sleeping accommodations and other through passenger accommodations may properly be accorded, under tariff authority, upon presentation to the initial carrier of a combination of tickets covering the entire journey, in which may be included mileage, excursion and commutation tickets, but it is unlawful to check baggage beyond the point to which a ticket is presented upon a mere declaration of intention to go farther. In Re Mileage, Excursion and Commutation Tickets, 23 I. C. C. 95, 96.

(r) The through routes over which some of the joint fares apply embrace substantially less than the entire length of the lines of railroad of the defendants which lie between the termini would not be unreasonably long as compared with other practicable through routes which could otherwise be established. Western Pacific R. R. v. S. P. Ry., 55 I. C. C. 71, 73.

(s) Failure of the Louisiana & Arkansas Ry. Co., to extend to Natchez, Miss., its through passenger-train service, now terminating at Vidalia, La., not shown to result in undue prejudice in favor of Alexandria and Shreveport, La., which cities it also serves and the establishment of such service to all points on that line not shown to be in the public interest or to be practicable. Natchez Chamber of Commerce v. L. & A. Ry. Co. 59 I. C. C. 678.

(t) The courts in determining whether a satisfactory through route for passenger service already exists will, in complex and delicate cases, attach great weight to the judgment of the Commission. I. C. C. v. N. P. Ry. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 544, 30 Sup. Ct. 417, 54 L. ed. 608.

(u) The Commission has no power to make an order establishing a through route for passenger traffic if a reasonable and satisfactory one already exists. I C. C. v. N. P. Ry. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 544, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417, 54 L. ed. 608.

(v) Whether a reasonable and satisfactory through route for passenger service already exists so as to prevent the Commission from establishing another such route may be inquired into by the courts. I. C. C. v. N. P. Ry. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 544, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417, 54 L. ed. 608.

§14½. Tourist Cars.

(a) A railroad company which transports immigrants in unfit cars will be required to provide better accommodations, and to ascertain their fitness the Commission will make its own inspection. Savery & Co. v. N. Y. Central & Hudson River R. Co. 2 I. C. R. 210.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) There is no necessity to order the railway companies to provide for the reservation of seats during the daytime in their tourist cars. These tourist cars are really second-class sleepers. They are chiefly used by those who are taking a long journey and cannot afford to pay for accommodation in the first class sleeping cars. The suggestion is made that a person traveling a short distance might for a few hours be permitted to reserve a seat in a tourist car. There is no necessity for this. The first-class cars are more comfortable than the tourist cars, and often less crowded. The tourist cars are used chiefly by those taking a long journey, and, if seating accommodation was reserved during the daytime, it might prevent those for whom the cars were intended securing proper accommodation. A large number of women and children are usually to be found on tourist cars, and it seems undesirable that they should be disturbed by the class of passengers that one sometimes finds traveling short distances on a second-class ticket on a railway. (Can. Ry. Com. 1914), Day Seats in Tourist Sleepers. File 22694.

IV. CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES.

§14¾. In General.

See Claims; Reparation.

(a) The Commission declines to proceed on the plaintiff's claim for damages, for injuries done in his violent removal from car, leaving him his remedy in the courts. Heard v. Georgia R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 314, 719. Council v. Western & Atlantic R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 292, 355, 638.

(aa) Complainant charged unjust discrimination in violation of section 2 and 3. HELD, where a railroad ticket broker having no apparent interest in the transaction, presented a complaint alleging unjust discrimination on the part of a railroad company in permitting a certain person to transfer to another the return portion of a passage ticket, while it refused to grant the same privilege to a third person holding a ticket alleged to be similar (but which was not so in fact) HELD, person aggrieved should complain in his own name, and that the complaint by the ticket broker would not be entertained. The Act does not afford a remedy for transactions which occurred before it took effect. Ottinger v. S. P. R. R. 1 I. C. C. 607.

(b) The complainant purchased what the respondent termed a quarterly commutation ticket on the 13th day of June, specifying the number of trips that might be taken thereon as 180, but it provided that the term should expire on the 31st day of the following August, and this was known to the complainant when he made the purchase. It was similarly stated on each one of such quarterly tickets when it was to expire viz.: at the end of the third calendar month after it was issued. HELD, that the complainant was not entitled to recover any portion of the purchase price for the thirteen days less than a full quarter. Sidman v. Richmond & Danville R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 766.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Reparation awarded for unlawful charges on account of an error in the issuance of a ticket for transportation from Omaha, Neb., to Portland, Oregon. Chambers v. C. G. W. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. 1904.

(d) Complaint seeking reparation in amount of additional passenger fares assumed by complainant from stop-over-point to enable connection for completion of excursion trip within time limit, upon defendants' train from such point being reported late, dismissed. Summer-excursion tickets granted certain definite rights within definite times. If, for own convenience, complainant elected to assume that defendants' train from stop-over point would be on time when he chose to leave for completion of passage, and when that assumption failed, or threatened to fail, purchased other tickets, defendants are not liable in damages under the act. Jurisdiction of commission does not extend to claims arising from anticipated delay of passenger trains. Hohfelder v. D. & R. G. W. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 587.

(e) A "gatekeeper", to whom the plaintiff presented her ticket, after having purchased it from an agent of the Central of Georgia Railway Company and who accompanied her to the train and assisted her in boarding the same, and who was the keeper of the gate leading to the tracks of that railway company at the station where the ticket was purchased, is inferentially the agent of the Central of Georgia Railway, and an allegation of these facts is a sufficient allegation as to such agency. Ryle v. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. (Ga., 1923) 119 S. E. 342.

§14¾a. Burden of Proof.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where an existing rate is attacked, the burden is on the complainant to establish that it is unreasonable in fact. This is especially so where the rate has been in force for a long period during which time the traffic greatly increased in volume. L. & N. R. Co. v. United States, 35 Sup. Ct. 696, 698; 238 U. S. 1, 59 L. ed.

§15. Errors of Ticket Agents.

See Erroneous Rate; Tariffs § 3 (2).

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A misapprehension under which a party has paid for one journey in two sections, whereby the cost of the transportation has been made more than it would have been had a through ticket been purchased, may lawfully be corrected by return of the excess, though the carriers were without fault and only charged for each portion of the journey the regular rates. Major J. P. Sanger v. The Southern Pacific Co., 2 I. C. R. 548.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Damages may be awarded where additional charges accrue as a result of the error of the carrier's agent in indorsing an excursion ticket. Gorman v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 613.

(c) A carrier is liable for the negligent act of its agent in not permitting a passenger to take advantage of lawfully published interstate rates or facilities. Sanders v. A. C. L. R. Co. (S. C., 1915), 85 S. E. 167, 169.

(d) Through error of initial carrier, complainant purchased a 7-day limited ticket instead of a 30-day limited one; connecting carriers collected cash from complainant because time limit had expired, and therefore exempt from joining in making refund. Burden solely upon the initial carrier. Dierks v. S. P. Co., Unrep. Op. A460.

L. R. R. Co., 40 I. C. C. 65, 66.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainant lost a commutation ticket issued under a tariff that provided refund would be made only when the lost ticket was found and returned to the proper officer of the issuing company. The ticket was never used apparently by the finder and defendant refused to make refund on account of the tariff. HELD, that the condition in the tariff is unreasonable and discriminatory, because many cases exist in which recovery of a lost ticket is impossible. Reparation awarded. Moore v. N. Y. & L. B. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 557.

(b) Where complaint demanded a refund or further service on a lost commutation ticket of the "punch-cancellation" variety, which ticket was lost by complainant when only a part of the rides had been used, and at his request was "outlawed" by defendants. HELD, that it is clear that to allow redemption on alleged lost and unrecovered "punch-cancellation" commutation tickets, where the carrier has no check on the number of rides used, would afford ready means for violation of law and perpetration of fraud; complaint dismissed. Hill v. P. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 650.

(c) Complainant demanded defendants refund the value of the unused portion of a ticket from Albany, Ga., to Philadelphia, Pa., lost by him enroute. The ticket called for passage by rail to Savannah, and thence by ocean carrier to destination. While enroute to Savannah he lost the portion of the ticket entitling him to ocean transportation, promptly notified the ocean carrier of his loss and purchased another ticket to Philadelphia. The issuing carrier's tariff provided against the redemption of mislaid, lost, destroyed or stolen passenger tickets, and stated that requests for redemption of unused portions of tickets would be honered only when accompanied by the unused transportation. The carrier contended that if compelled to make refund on tickets alleged to have been stolen it would be obliged to adopt burdensome practices and records to protect itself against fraudulent demands. Even an accounting system conducted at enormous expense would not fully protect against fraudulent claims. HELD, that it would be unjust and unfair to carriers, and involve them in additional expense out of all proportion to the results to be obtained, to require them to make refunds of the value of lost passenger tickets. Complaint dismissed. Miller v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 29 I. C. C. 526.

(d) And where mileage book cover was lost, and presentation was made more than 18 months after book was issued the refusal to make refund of $5 was not found unreasonable. Jaeger v. A. R. R. Co., 34 I. C. C., 28.

§16½. Redemption of Tickets.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainant alleged unlawful discrimination by reason of the carrier's failure to redeem three unused tickets for accommodation on its sleeping cars from certain New Hampshire points to New York and Boston. The tickets had not, contrary to the carriers requirements, been presented for redemption prior to the departure of the trains on which the accommodations were reserved; though notice by telephone had been given two days before departure of the trains. HELD, the evidence was insufficient to sustain the complaint. Reinert v. Pullman Co., 36 I. C. C. 304.

(b) By the Transportation Act, Feb. 28. 1920, Congress has undertaken to appropriate the field as to the redemption of unused tickets, and Pen. Code 1911, arts. 1527-1529. relating to redemption of unused railway tickets and providing a penalty for failure to make refund. do not apply to interstate commerce. in view of Const. U. S. art. 1. § 8. Neubert v. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co., (Tex., 1923), 248 S. W. 141.

(c) There was no duty on a carrier at common law to redeem an unused ticket or part thereof. Neubert v. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co., (Tex., 1923), 248 S. W. 141.

(d) Where a passenger, on the day he purchased a ticket, presented it to the carrier's agent for redemption, the fact that he signed no receipt or statement of facts concerning the ticket or its purchase was no defense, in a suit to recover the amount paid, unless he was requested to do so. Thompson v. New York Cent. R. Co., 195 N. Y. S. 954.

V. OPERATION.

§17. In General.

See Evidence §18; Operation.

(a) It would be directly at war with the rights and safety of the traveling public, as well as of the railroad company, if the line of the carrier should become an arena over which it should be compelled to make a contract of some sort with every car company or inventor of cars, and transport the public in trains of which such cars were part. Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 792.

(aa) The extraordinary liability imposed by law upon a railroad company as a common carrier for the sufficiency and safety of its passenger cars and the competency of its employes in operating such cars is a highly important protection to the public; but such company might very reasonably claim that it was not responsible for a passenger car of a private car company, or the consequences of that passenger car being transported as part of its train in causing a wreck, collision or delay, when it had no volition in accepting or rejecting such car, but was forced to transport it by order of a civil tribunal. Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 792.

(ab) Cost of passengers less in slow than high speed trains. Re Party Rate Tickets, 12 I. C. C. 95.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) In part because of conditions growing out of the war the passenger traffic has become relatively more profitable during the last three years. A reduction in the number of passenger trains occurred simultaneously with a substantial increase in the number of passengers carried, resulting in heavier loading of passenger cars and trains. Ex Parte 74 Application for Increase in Rates, 58 I. C. C. 220, 240.

(c) Attempts to evade the plain requirements of the fourth section of the act in matter of passenger fares, by annexing different conditions relating to the amount of baggage carried, or to the time for which tickets are good, will receive no countenance by the commission. Fares between New York and Points West of Newark, 74 I. C. C. 520.

(d) Complainant attacked refusal of defendant to accord baggage car service on passenger trains for the movement of condensed skim milk from Richmond, Petersburg and Suffolk, Va., to Rocky Mount and Wilson, N. C., and to receive shipments of milk, cream, and condensed skim milk from connecting lines for transportation in baggage cars, as unjust and unduly prejudicial. Passenger trains are provided for the transportation of passengers and baggage. Milk, cream and buttermilk are daily necessities, and this fact in connection with their perishable nature has compelled an extraordinary expedited service to be accorded to these commodities. Defendants should not be compelled to extend this service to other commodities simply because they are somewhat similar in character where the same compelling reasons do not exist. It is not shown that the present means of transportation accorded complainant are inadequate. HELD, refusal of defendant to transport condensed skimmed milk in passenger trains in baggage cars not unreasonable or unduly prejudicial, complaint dismissed. Chapin Sacks Corp. v. A. C. L. R. R., 80 I. C. C. 255.

§18. Publication and Tariffs.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Neglect to publish rates for mileage tickets is violation of Act. Larrison v. Chicago, etc. R. Co., 1 I. C. R., 369.

(b) Reduction of passenger rates without consent of connecting lines over which tickets are sold, and without filing schedules thereof with the Commission, held to be in violation of section 6 of the Act. Re Passenger Tariffs and Rate Wars, 2 I. C. C. 340, 343.

(c) New individual or joint passenger tariffs must be posted at stations to which they apply, and tickets can legally be sold on combination of initial or terminal locals therewith. Re Passenger Tariffs (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 445, 447.

(de) Passenger excursion rates are required to be published according to the provisions of section 6 of the Act Party rate tickets are not commutation tickets and when party rates are lower than contemporaneous rates for single passengers they constitute discrimination, and are illegal. P. C. C. & St. L R. Co. v. B. & O. R., 2 I. C. C. 729, 732.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(f) Practice of complainant of absorbing in part or in whole the local fares of the Great Northern Ry., from stations on its line north of Seattle, to Seattle, for the purpose of establishing through rates, is unlawful, as the tariff provisions and the practices thereunder conform to requirements of section 6. C. M. & St. P. Ry. v. G. N. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 302, 305, 307.

(g) A passenger is bound to proceed upon the assumption that the carrier's published tariffs as to the transportation and care of baggage are conclusive until such tariff is altered by the carrier or competent legal authority. Borden v. N. Y. C. R. R., 162 N. Y. S. 1099.

(a) HELD, that applications averring that the railroad companies do not now violate the law and do not wish to do so, and asking the ruling of the Commission (in advance of any action by the railroads) as to the effect of the Act in reference to the granting of free passes to railroad employees and their families, and in reference to an additional allowance of free baggage to commercial travelers, cannot be entertained. Re Order of Ry Conductors 1 I. C. R. 18.

(b) Where a railroad ticket broker, having no apparent interest in the transaction, presented a complaint alleging unjust discrimination on the part of a railroad company in permitting a certain person to transfer to another the return portion of a passage ticket, while it refused to grant the same privilege to a third person holding a ticket alleged to be similar (but which was not so in fact), HELD, that the person aggrieved should complain in his own name, and that the complaint by the ticket broker would not be entertained. Ottinger v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 607.

(c) Complaint by ticket broker, having no apparent interest in transaction, alleging discrimination in allowing transfers of return tickets, will not be entertained. Ottinger v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 607.

(d) Complainant attacked passenger fares charged immigrants from New York, N. Y., to Chicago, Ill., as unreasonable. Subsequent to the hearing the rates were reduced. HELD, complaint dismissed. Savery & Co. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 210.

PEDDLER CAR

See Cars and Car Supply §9¾.

PEDDLER CAR SERVICE

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The operation of the peddler car is as follows: The car is iced, for the service must in all cases be under refrigeration, and loaded by the packer with fresh meats and packing house products, in whatever quantity and proportion may be desired. The car is then transported to the first unloading point, where it is opened and a portion of the contents removed. From thence it goes to the next unloading point, and so on to its final destination. The work of unloading is performed by the employes of the carrier in the same manner that local freight is unloaded at the various stations, no special or additional storage facilities being provided. The initial icing is by the packer and if any subsequent icing is needed the packer pays for the ice actually used. In Re Investigation of Unreasonable Rates on Meats, 23 I. C. C. 656, 670.

(b) Carriers should publish tariffs according peddler car service on packing house products and fresh meats from Oklahoma City and Wichita to various points in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico; the rate upon packing house products should be 130 per cent and upon fresh meats 150 per cent of the carload rate and a minimum may be required equivalent to the earnings upon 10,000 lbs. of fresh meat to the most distant point. Refrigeration should be provided or paid for by the shipper in addition to the above rates. In Re Investigation of Unreasonable Rates on Meats, 23 I. C. C. 656, 670.

(c) The Commission considered a proposed increase in the minimum weight applicable generally to packing house products and other commodities to be shipped in peddler cars at the fouth class rate between points in Western Trunk Line territory, from 10,000 to 12,000 pounds. The existing rule governing peddler cars was also amended by inserting the words "and other freight," after the list of commodities which might be included in making up the minimum. The movements of peddler cars was a special service, which could only be used by a few of the larger packers, and the routes selected by the packers often passed through junctions through which ordinary traffic did not pass; but the peddler car routes averaged less than 280 miles, the service was not greater than that rendered in connection with ordinary less-than-carload traffic, the packer paid the regular less-than-carload rates, guaranteed a minimum per car earning, and saved the carrier the expense of refrigeration. Car-mile earnings ranged from 17.55c to 20.1c. The carriers' earnings were largely increased by penalties exacted, where the deficit in weight was way-billed at the fourth class rate; the larger packers paying deficits on from 25 to 35 per cent of the cars handled for them. From 66 2-3 to 75 per cent of peddler cars were loaded to 10,000 pounds, and on most shipments 12,000 pounds could not be loaded, because orders could not be secured for sufficient quantities. HELD, that the proposed increased minimum had not been justified. Rule under suspension cancelled. Rules Governing Shipments of Freight in Peddler Cars, 32 I. C. C. 428.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The system of rates known as "penalty rates" (whereby a relatively high rate is charged on cotton from point of origin to compressing point, and if handled to the port by the same carrier such charge applied on the through rate) is wholly out of line with the ethics of modern ratemaking. One rate should be established from the point of origin to the compress point, and this rate should be no more than the reasonable local rate. Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. M. & O. R. R. Co., 32 I. C. C. 272, 275.

(b) Penalty rates is a system wholly out of line with the ethics of modern rate making. Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. M. & O. R. R. Co., 32 I. C. C. 272, 275.

(c) So-called "penalty rates" on cotton to compress points are condemned by the Commission. It is intended that the rate to the compressing point shall be so fixed that the shipper may direct his shipment to any desired port without incurring any penalty or having to pay more than the reasonable through rate from originating point to port. Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. M. & O. R. R., 32 I. C. C. 272, 276.

(d) No valid reason for "penalty rate system." Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. M. & O. R. R. Co., 32 I. C. C. 272, 276.

(e) Complainant attacked the sixth-class rate of 6½c per 100 lbs. charged on two carloads of logs shipped from Cambridge City, Indiana to Dayton Ohio. There was via the same route a commodity rate of 5c, limited, however, to apply on logs manufactured at Dayton when the products were shipped out over the carrier's line. HELD, that the rate charged was unreasonable to the extent that it exceeded 5c, it being improper to impose an additional sum as a penalty against a shipper because different carriers move his raw material to a transit point and his manufactured product out. Reparation awarded. Hossofous v. P. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 37 I. C. C. 575.

(f) It is unreasonable for carriers to impose any additional sum as a penalty against a shipper because different carriers move his raw material to a transit point and his manufactured product out. Hossafous v. P. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 37 I. C. C. 575, 576

(g) New storage charges proposed on grain in elevators at Atlantic ports are in nature of penalties, by which carriers hope to expedite movement of grain but it is not shown that such penalties can stimulate the exporters to obviate causes beyond their control contributing to congestion. Export Grain Storage Charges 42 I. C. C. 530, 533, 537.

(h) Manufacturers and dealers in lumber, constructing a railroad in connection with their mill, and making shipments of lumber direct from their mills, were not legally injured by order of Interstate Commerce Commission requiring carriers to cease charging a penalty for holding cars at reconsignment points because subjected to more effective competition, or because it might be difficult to secure cars in time of future car shortage, in the absence of a showing that carriers desired to impose such charges, and could not maintain suit to set the order aside. CASES 1887-1908

(a) Complainant attacked rates on milk and cream from all stations on the defendant's lines to Weehawken, Hoboken, and Jersey City, N. J., or through Jersey City to New York, as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. A uniform or blanket rate offered on milk and cream from these stations of 32c on milk and 50c on cream per can of 40 quarts, regardless of distance or difference in amount of service rendered. HELD, to be unreasonable, unjustly and unduly prejudicial. Instead of the present method of charging uniform rates per 40 quart can of 32c on milk and 50c on cream there should be at least four divisions or groups of stations, the first group extending 40 miles from the terminal in New Jersey; the second, covering a distance of 60 miles and ending about 100 miles from such terminal; the third embracing stations within the next 90 miles and extending about 190 miles from the terminal; and the fourth, comprising stations beyond 190 miles from the point of delivery, rates charged not to exceed 23c from the first group, 26c from the second, 29c from the third, 32c from the fourth; the rate on cream to be 18c higher than on milk. Milk Producers Protective Asso. v. D. L. & W. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 92.

(b) Upon all the facts and circumstances, including the peculiarities of defendants' milk and cream transportation service, HELD, that instead of the present method of charging uniform rates per 40 quart can of 32 cents on milk and 50 cents on cream from all interstate shipping stations on the defendant lines west of the Hudson River to the respective points of delivery in Weehawken, Hoboken and Jersey City, N. J., there should be at least four divisions or groups of stations, the first group extending 40 miles from the terminal in New Jersey; the second, covering a distance of 60 miles and ending about 100 miles from such terminal; the third, embracing stations within the next 90 miles and extending about 190 miles from the terminal; and the fourth, comprising stations beyond 190 miles from the point of delivery. That the rates charged on milk in 40 quart cans should not exceed 23 cents from the first or 40 mile group of stations, 26 cents from the second or 60 mile group, nor 29 cents from the third or 90 mile group, and that the present rate of 32 cents from stations more distant than 190 miles is not unreasonable; that a rate on cream in cans which is 18 cents higher than the rate on milk in 40 quart cans, the present difference, is not unreasonable or unjust; that such group distances and rates should apply on the branches as well as on the main lines, and that the resulting relations of rates should be maintained; that any reduction that may be made in the present rate per quart on milk or cream in bottles should be followed by a corresponding change in the rate for each group on milk or cream in 40 quart cans. That the distance on the Ulster & Delaware road covered by the third group should be limited to 30 miles, and stations on that road more than 130 miles from Weehawken via the West Shore road should constitute its fourth group; that by short line distances all points on the Wallkill Valley and Lehigh & Hudson River roads are within the second group, and rates from such stations should not exceed those applicable for the second group; that the Erie Railroad Company should charge third group rates from points on its Carbondale branch which can be reached over distances less than 190 miles via the Scranton branch of the Ontario & Western, and such relief from the operation of the 4th section is granted to the Erie Company as may be necessary to enable it to lawfully make such charges effective; that the defendant, the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad Company is entitled on shipments of milk and cream from New York points which it carries through New Jersey and delivers in New York City to charge such an addition to its rate to Jersey City, N. J., as is reasonably warranted by the greater cost of delivery in New York City. Milk Producers' Protective Asso. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 92.

(c) Provision should be made for mixed shipments of milk and cream in carloads; rates to be made on the basis of the per can rates for each commodity in carloads, subject to the minimum provided for milk. New England Milk Case, 40 I. C. C. 699, 737.

(d) Complainant attacked rate charged on cream, carloads, from Concordia, Kans., to Crete, Neb., between March 1, 1920, and May 27, 1920, as unreasonable Prior to March 1, 1920, defendant maintained a proportional rate of 25c on single consignments of not less than 150 cans between April 1 and Sept. 30, and not less than 100 cans between Oct. 1 and March 31. This rate was cancelled and from March 1, 1920, to May 26, 1920, the only rates applicable were any quantity distance rates, which were 40c for 123 miles. On May 27, defendant established proportional rate of 25c on single consignments of not less than 200 cans, and provided that the gross charge for single consignments of a less number of cans should not exceed the gross charge for 200 cans. No evidence was offered by defendant, which admitted in its answer that the rate charged was unreasonable to extent is exceeded the subsequently established rate. HELD, rate charged unreasonable to extent it exceeded 25c, reparation awarded. Fairmont Creamery Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 68 I. C. C. 319.

PER CAR RATES

(a) A practice had existed on the part of certain carriers of live cattle to make a carload rate irrespective of weight, leaving the shipper to load into the car as many cattle as he pleased and was able to put into it. The carrier substituted for this practice the rule that while naming a carlot rate they prescribed a minimum weight for a carload and then charged by the hundred pounds in proportion to the carlot rate for any excess over the minimum. HELD, that this rule was not unlawful. Prima facie the new rule is more just and reasonable than the practice it supplanted since the charge is more in proportion to the service rendered. Leonard v. C. & A. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 599, 602.

(b) The fact that by the action of certain state commissioners a car is permitted to be loaded by the shipper at discretion without the carlot rate being affected thereby is not a reason for adopting the like rule in interstate traffic if that course is found not to be most just and politic. Leonard v. C. & A. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 599, 603.

(c) An arbitrary charge of $80 per car imposed by the New York, New Haven, & Hartford Railroad Company for the transportation from New York to Boston of peaches and other fruit shipped from Georgia points to Boston, its haul being part of the through service between the points of shipment and destination, is unreasonable and unjust; and $50 per car would be a just and reasonable charge for such transportation. Georgia Peach Growers' Asso. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 255.

(d) Complainant attacked as unreasonable minimum weight and rate charged on peaches from Georgia points to northern and eastern markets. Upon all the facts and circumstances, including on the one hand the difficulties and liability of loss attending the production and shipment of peaches, and on the other hand the large percentage of cars loaded above the prescribed minimum weights for carloads for which excess no charge is made by the carriers, the exceptional character of the service which involves fast time and prompt delivery at destination, the carriage of a large amount of non paying freight, return of cars without loads, and many other conditions relating to the highly perishable nature of the traffic, HELD, neither the minimum carload weight nor the transportation charge established by the defendants based on a rate of 81c from Atlanta to New York, is unreasonable or unjust. HELD, further, an arbitrary charge of $80 per car imposed by the New Haven for the transportation from New York to Boston, its haul being part of the through service from Georgia points to Boston, is unreasonable and unjust and $50 per car would be a just and reasonable charge. Georgia Peach Growers' Asso. v. A. C. L. R. R., 10 I. C. C. 255.

(e) Upon all the facts and circumstances, including on the one hand, the difficulties and liability of loss attending the production and shipment of peaches, and, on the other hand, the large percentage of cars loaded above the prescribed minimum weights for carloads, for which excess no charge is made by the carriers, the exceptional character of the service, which involves fast time and prompt delivery at destination, the carriage of a large amount of nonpaying freight, return of cars without loads, and many other conditions relating to the highly perishable nature of the traffic,—HELD, that neither the minimum carload weight nor the transportation charge established by the defendants engaged in the carriage of peaches in refrigerator cars from Georgia points to New York, based upon a rate of 81 cents from Atlanta to New York, is unreasonable or unjust. Georgia Peach Growers' Asso. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 255.

(ea) Complaint attacked rates charged on beef cattle, carloads from Fort Worth Tex., to New Orleans, La., as unreasonable and discriminatory. Defendants rate was 42 ½ per 100 pounds and $15 per car additional when shipment is made in lots of less than ten carloads HELD, the charge of $15 per car in addition to the rate of 42½c per 100 pounds is unreasonable when applied to single carload shipments. New Orleans Livestock Exchange v. T. & P. R. R. 10 I. C. C. 327.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(f) Per car rates established by the Director General under general order No. 28, on bituminous coal and charged on shipments moving between yards of complainant in Philadelphia, Pa., not found unreasonable as compared with lower per car rates applicable on other commodities or with those subsequently established. Atlantic Refining Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 60 I. C. C. 355.

(g) Director general canceled the "per car" rates on live stock and established rates in cents per 100 pounds. After termination of Federal control carriers restored the "per car" basis. HELD While transportation characteristics of live stock are different from those on lumber and grain, the earnings per car and per car mile on the latter were substantially higher than those on live stock which comparison tends to show that the charges assessed during the interim were not unreasonably high. Carstens Packing Co. v. Director General, as Agent 68 I. C. C. 125.

PERCENTAGE RATES

(a) Complainant alleged unjust discrimination in rates charged against Detroit on grain in that rates to the Seaboard are 78% of the Chicago rate instead of 70% claimed, and that the carriers operating east from Detroit accept a division on freight originating west of Detroit lower than the local rate from Detroit, Mich. When freight, for example, grain, is hauled to the seaboard for export or to New England points, from the northwestern points and territories; through Detroit and Chicago, the rule invoked by the petitioners in this case as a basis of relief, namely; that an estimated portion of this through rate as between the points of origin of the freight and Detroit must not be lower in proportion to distance than the rate upon the freight from such points or origin destined to Detroit, is one that connot be sustained. Detroit Board of Trade v. G. T. Ry. of Canada, 2 I. C. C. 199.

(b) Complainant attacked class rates from Chicago, Ill., to Sioux Falls, S. D., as unreasonable and unjust as well as unduly discriminatory as compared with the rates to Sioux City. The distance from Chicago to Sioux Falls is 108% of the short line distance to Sioux City, although via the defendants line the distance is less to Sioux Falls than to Sioux City. The amount of freight transported between Chicago and Sioux City, in either direction, is largely in excess of the amount carried between Chicago and Sioux Falls. The Commission is convinced that relative equality requires a substantial modification of the present disparity and indicates with a degree of certainty the measure of appropriate reduction in rates to Sioux Falls. HELD, rates to Sioux Falls should be made 104% of the rates to Sioux City from Chicago. The location of Sioux Falls, its shorter distance from Duluth, and the conditions under which transportation from that point is effective, seems to require as low rates to Sioux Falls as to Sioux City. The reasonableness of the rates attacked is not now determined but the decision is confined to the relation of rates from Chicago and Duluth to Sioux Falls and Sioux City. Daniels v. C., R. I. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 458.

(c) Rates from Cincinnati and Louisville to Norfolk are much lower than those from St. Louis and Chicago to Norfolk, and the competitive conditions governing the rates from Cincinnati and Louisville appear to be of the same general character as those which apply to rates from Chicago and St. Louis. The same is true of rates to Wilmington from Cincinnati, Louisville, Chicago and St. Louis. No substantial difference appears to exist in the really forceful conditions governing rates from these points of supply, except that of distance, which favors Cincinnati and Louisville. Carriers north of Cincinnati, Louisville and other Ohio River points obtain in most instances shares of the rates to Wilmington which equal their local charges while they accept much less than their local rates on traffic destined to Norfolk and other Virginia cities, and the rates charged by carriers south of Norfolk, Richmond, or other Virginia gateways on Wilmington business are upon a high basis. HELD, that what constitutes just rate relations from Cincinnati and Louisville to Norfolk and Wilmington is a fair basis for relative rates from St. Louis and Chicago, and that basis should be adopted, with the modification in favor of the carriers that the readjustment may be made on the basis of East St. Louis rates and the established practice of charging practically the same rates from St. Louis and Chicago to Wilmington continued. HELD, further, that substantial compliance with such rule of adjustment would result by making the rates from Chicago, St. Louis and East St. Louis to Wilmington 135 per cent of the rates in force from East St. Louis to Norfolk. Wilmington Tariff Asso. v. C. P. & V. R. Co. et al, 9 I. C. C. 118.

(d) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates on cement plaster, carloads, from Quanah, Tex., to Kansas City and St. Louis, Mo., as compared with the rates from Cement, Okla., Cement being intermediate. Rate from Quanah to St. Louis, 728 miles, is 18c and to Kansas City, Mo., 571 miles, 13c, while from Cement to St. Louis, 602 miles rate is 10c and to Kansas City, 445 miles rate is 8c. It appeared that the Frisco made the rates from Cement to enable plaster from that point to compete with other plasters in the St. Louis and Kansas City markets, that the cost of transportation is not greater over the line from Quanah to Cement than from Cement to St. Louis, and that defendants would make the same profit if they hauled Quanah plaster at the same rate per ton mile that is applied from Cement. HELD, rates attacked unreasonable to extent they exceed 128 per cent of the rate from Cement to Kansas City and 120 per cent of the rate from Cement to St. Louis, reparation awarded. Texas Cement Plaster Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R., 12 I. C. C. 68.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) The Commission has long realized the desirablity of establishing some standard scale of percentage relation which all classes should bear to the first class rate, but because of the great variety in percentages which now exists, and the many conflicts which would result between existing scales and any percentage scale which it might prescribe has not yet seen its way to establishing such a scale for general use. Tulsa Traffic Asso. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 40 I. C. C. 9, 11.

(f) There are certain practical reasons why rates applied under any given classification should bear a percentage relation one to another. Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. A. H. T. Ry. Co., 41 I. C. C. 83, 92.

(g) Under the formula used in making these percentage group rates, the desired percentage is obtained by deducting a fixed terminal charge of 6 cents per 100 pounds from an assumed rate from Chicago to New York of 25 cents per 100 pounds; the remainder is divided by the short line distance from Chicago to New York; the result is multiplied by the short line distance of the point from which the percentage is sought from New York, the terminal allowance is again added and the percentage which the resulting rate bears to the 25 cent rate is the percentage to be used. South Bend Chamber of Commerce v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 215, 218.

(h) The mere showing of the fact that in making effective the increases provided in general order No. 28 of the Director General, a slight disturbance was created in the percentage relationship which a specific rate bore to other rates between the same points, and the subsequent voluntary restoration of that relationship does not warrant a condemnation of the rate in effect during the interim. Ault & Wiborg Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 64 I. C. C. 443.

(i) It does not necessarily follow that because the percentage relationship between proposed commodity rates and the commodity rates applicable in other territories is less than the percentage relation which the class rates in the territory under consideration bear to the class rates in other territories, the proposed commodity rates are reasonable. Memphis-Southwestern Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 501.

(j) Failure of defendant to establish c. l. rates on refrigerator-car service for strawberries from Louisville & Nashville R. R. points while maintaining such rates and service from certain points in Louisiana and other states on other roads, found not unduly prejudicial to complainants at such I. & N. points. Unlike carrier in Louisiana, the L. & N. has at no time authorized the express company to furnish c. l. refrigerator service on strawberries; having handled such traffic by freight on December 27, 1917, and since. Hence, there is substantial difference in circumstances surrounding traffic from Louisiana as compared with traffic from points on the L. & N. Furthermore, the railroads are not parties to this proceeding. Oyler & Son v. Amer. Ry. Exp. Co., 83 I. C. C. 160.

(a) Complainant attacked rates on peaches from the Delaware district to Boston, Mass., as unreasonable. The rate from Wyoming, Del., to Boston was $220.00 per car subsequently reduced $30.00 per car. HELD, a reasonable maximum rate would be $14.00 per ton. in cars of fifteen tons capacity and $16.00 per ton in cars of twelve tons capacity and $18.00 per ton in cars of nine tons capacity. Boston Fruit & Produce Exchange v. N. Y. & N. E. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 493.

(b) For a special service by a carrier, such as the transportation of perishable freight, requiring quick movement, prompt delivery at destination, special fitting up of cars, their withdrawal from other service and their return empty on fast time, all involving greater expense to the carrier, a higher rate than for the carriage of ordinary freight is warranted by the conditions of the service and is reasonable and just. Delaware State Grange v. N. Y. P. & N. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 554.

(c) Where a special service is required of the carrier, such as rapid transit and speedy delivery in cases of perishable freight, a higher rate than for the carriage of ordinary freight is warranted, and, if a carrier charging the rate based on such special service fails to render it, to the damage of the shipper, and without legal excuse, the remedy of the latter would seem to be a proper proceeding in a court of law. Loud v. South Carolina R. Co., 4 I. C. C 205, 211.

(d) On complaint that rates charged by defendant for the transportation of melons in carloads from shipping points in South Carolina to New York and other points in northern and northwestern states were unjust and unreasonable, it appeared that the rates were lower than those in force between the same points on cotton and general merchandise, although greater speed and some other exceptional facilities are involved in the transportation of melons from South Carolina, and that the rates per ton per mile afforded by the melon rates ranged from 7.6 mills to 1.1c, and for most of the defendants roads were less than the average receipts per ton per mile from all freight. The evidence was insufficient to warrant an estimate of the cost of production or the results of sales during the shipping season. HELD, rates complained of not unjust or unreasonable, complaint dismissed, Board of Railroad Commissioners of South Carolina v. Florence R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 1.

(e) The regulation by a carrier whereby the freight rate on perishable fruit is increased in proportion to the carload valuation fixed by the shipper is unreasonable and unjust. Georgia Peach

Growers' Asso. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 255.

(f) Peaches from Macon and Atlanta Ga., to Philadelphia, New York, Washington, and Baltimore. Rate of 81 cents per 100 pounds to Philadelphia and New York, and 78 to Philadelphia and Washington, with a refrigeration charge of 12½ cents per crate of 42 pounds, minimum carload 550 crates, reduced to 76 cents per hundred for transportation to New York and Philadelphia and to 73 cents to Philadelphia and Washington. such rates to apply on a carload minimum of 20,000 pounds for 36-foot cars and 22,500 pounds for 40-foot cars, with refrigeration charge not to exceed 11 cents per crate, to apply on a carload minimum of 476 crates for 36-foot cars and 535 crates for 40-foot cars. Waxelbaum & Co. v. Atlanta C. L. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 178.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(h) Commission has no doubt that a single tariff governing the transportation of perishable freight is desirable on grounds of simplicity, convenience, and utility. Perishable Freight Investigation 56 I. C. C. 499, 461.

(i) Carriers have frequently cited the special cost of protective service in defending the level of line-haul rates upon perishable freight. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 462.

(j) Not unlawful to secure compensation for all or any part of the protective service through the line-haul rate on perishable freight and no presumption exists that compensation is not secured in this way. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 465.

(k) Neither desirable nor practicable to analyze whether or not the line-haul rates include compensation for protective service. In dealing with proposals to establish separate charges best means is to consider the level of the corresponding line-haul rates at the same time. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 466.

(l) Carriers are not equipped to furnish initial ice for shipments of fresh meats and packing house products. It can probably be furnished with maximum economy by the packers. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 470.

(m) Carriers are better equipped to furnish initial ice for fruits and vegetables where cost-of-ice basis now prevails, but having so long given shippers the option of furnishing their own ice, it may be doubted whether carriers are prepared to provide the entire supply. It seems certain that they can not now do so without some injustice or sacrifice of economy. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 470, 471.

(n) No specific evidence that cost-of-ice basis results in favoritism or discrimination between shippers, or that loss and damage claims are greater than when stated charges apply, or that it is impracticable to follow the re-icing instructions which shippers give. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 471.

(o) No convincing evidence offered that where shippers of fruits and vegetables are permitted to furnish their own ice the carriers are unable to gauge the demands for ice in normal seasons or that wastage results because of their inability to do so. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 471.

(p) Proposed tariff does not give sufficient encouragement to the precooling of fruits and vegetables, except in California and Florida. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 471.

(q) Movement of fruits and vegetables is not wholly seasonal and is becoming less so with the increasing use of cold-storage facilities, and the need for refrigeration varies widely during the period in which fruits and vegetables commonly move. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 471.

(r) On shipments which are moved without reicing in transit, switching and supervision costs are less and reach a minimum when the shipper furnishes his own ice. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 473.

(s) No reason why stated charges should apply on vegetables from southern territory, while shipments from New Orleans switching districts have the cost-of-ice basis; nor to apply stated charges on certain lines in Michigan and the cost-of-ice basis on others. Method of dealing with these sistuations must depend upon conclusions reached in regard to line-haul rates. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 473.

(t) If it be found that cost-of-ice basis should be employed where traffic moves on class rates, but stated charges where it moves on commodity rates, adjustments in accordance with such conclusions should uniformly be made. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 473.

(u) No reason why carriers should not equip themselves to furnish protective service against cold in all the northern territory where perishable freight may suffer through lack of such protection. Steps should be taken to procure the equipment which will make possible a correction of this defect. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 476, 613.

(v) No opinion expressed as to whether line-haul rates include compensation for protective service, but the radical nature of the change from no charge at all to charges of the extent proposed makes it desirable that the Director General be assured that the increase in the aggregate charge for the total transportation performed can be justified. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 480.

(w) Carriers entitled to reasonable compensation for protective service they furnish, and if the conclusion be reached that such compensation is not now afforded by the line-haul rates, the only two ways in which it can be obtained are by increasing these rates or establishing separate charges. The latter system is deemed more equitable. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 480, 481.

(x) No way in which the shipper could be permitted to control the amount of ice used in refrigerating l. c. l. freight or any means of applying the cost-of-ice basis to such shipments. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 481.

(y) Where l. c. l. shipments move by short hauls to concentrating points and thence direct in consolidated cars to more distant destinations, lower refrigeration charges would seem justified for movement from concentrating point than for other l. c. l. movements. Such consolidated cars greatly increase the average loading and make refrigeration more efficient and economical. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 481, 548, 616.

(z) Tariff rule found objectionable because it conveys the impression that carriers do not undertake in any way to control the natural tendency of perishable freight to deteriorate or decay, although this is the purpose of protective service. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 483.

(aa) Where insulated cars are required for safe transportation throughout the year, or the greater part of the year, compensation should be secured through the line-haul rates. Where this is not the case, a special charge is preferable, but should be fairly proportioned to the extent and cost of the service furnished. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 486, 487, 614.

(bb) Carriers should collectively establish an effective "Perishable freight section" to oversee and coordinate action in the direction of efficiency in protective service. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 489, 614.

(cc) Hazard arising from loss and damage, due to delays or other deficiencies in the transportation service or to the use of unsuitable equipment, has always been taken into consideration in determining the rates or ratings on perishable freight. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 539.

(dd) "Pickles, in glass or in jars," "Fruits, fresh, n. o. i. b. n.," "Vegetables, fresh or green", "Sauerkraut," and onion sets" should be classified under items which may be protected against cold only, and which are susceptible to damage by artificial heat. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 551.

(ee) Description, "Packing house products, as specified herein," in which reference is made to the "freight tariffs applicable," has the result of leaving the matter in entire uncertainty. Prefatory statement in lieu thereof suggested. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 551.

(ff) Rule 25, under which charges for protective service are not to be included in the line-haul rates, approved subject to comment. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 552.

(gg) Rule 120, providing when shipments of vegetables or fruit, in stock or box cars with side doors open, that transportation will be at owner's risk of loss or damage by heat or cold not the result of carrier's negligence, should be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 559, 561.

(hh) Rule 90, providing for charge of $5 per car for transfer of perishable freight into refrigerator or other fully insulated cars to protect against heat or cold, approved with modifications. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 563, 564.

(ii) Rule 100, providing that wherever sampling or inspection is permitted the carriers do not assume any liability for shortage of or loss or damage by reason of such inspection, should be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation 56 I. C. C. 449, 564, 565.

(jj) Rule providing that wherever sampling or inspection of perishable freight is permitted the carriers do not assume any liability for shortage of or loss or damage by reason of such inspection should be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 564, 565.

(kk) Rule 105, governing the handling of bananas, under which carriers undertake no responsibility for icing, reicing ventilation, or protection beyond compliance with instructions as may be given in writing by the shipper, owner or caretaker in charge, should be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I C. C., 449, 565.

(ll) Rule 110, governing the transportation of caretakers with bananas, approved with modifications. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 563, 566.

(mm) Rule 110 governing charges for disinfecting refrigerator, insulated or others cars, modified and approved. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 566.

(nn) Rule 145, governing shipments stored in transit, should be revised so as to provide for the application of protective service charges into and out of storage, respectively, applicable under the tariff at the time of the respective movements. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 566, 568

(oo) Rule 200, clause (A), of special rules and regulations applicable to c. l. shipments under stated refrigeration charges should be revised to provide that shippers of fruits, vegetables, or other perishable freight should have the option where no reicing in transit is required, of shipping under the modified cost-of-ice basis. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 568, 569.

(pp) Rule 200, clause (B) and (E), of special rules and regulations applicable to c. l. shipments under stated refrigeration charges should be revised in such manner as to permit of their country-wide application. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 569, 573.

(qq) Rule 200, clause (C), of special rules and regulations applicable to c. l. shipments under stated refrigeration charges providing that when one or more commodities are loaded in car under refrigeration, stated refrigeration charges will be on basis of the highest refrigerationn charge on any of commodities in car approved. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 569, 570.

(rr) Rule 225, clause (D), governing charges for icing at intermediate stop, hold, or reconsigning point, should be amended to provide that when cars are held between origin and final destination, a charge will be made for ice supplied at such intermediate point in addition to other charges, except when point at which car is stopped is an established icing station. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 571, 572.

(ss) Rule 225, clause (E), governing charges for reicing at final destination, should be amended to provide that a charge for all ice supplied after arrival of cars at final destination and after tender to consignee for delivery, without allowance for free time, will be made in addition to all other charges. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 571, 573.

(tt) Rule 200, clause (F), should be amended by eliminating therefrom provision that carriers will not assume any liability for loss or damage due to absence of refrigeration before car reaches point at which first placed under refrigeration when shipments are loaded in refrigerator cars without ice and subsequently placed under refrigeration at any point. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 573.

(uu) Rule 200, clause (G), providing that when shippers elect to tender freight loaded in cars the bunkers, tanks or body of which contain ice with instructions "Not under refrigeration, do not ice" (or when shipper neglects to give any refrigeration instructions) such instructions will be ignored and full stated refrigeration charges will be applied and bunkers and tanks will be given the necessary icing. or reicing should be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 574.

(vv) Rule 200, clause (I), providing that carriers will not supply or place ice or salt in the body of refrigerator cars equipped with ice bunkers or tanks, should be amended by adding "except in case of emergency and, or on request of shipper." Ice furnished under such circumstances will be charged for in accordance with section 4. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 575.

(ww) Rule 200, clause (J), providing that stated refrigeration charges do not include the cost of ice used in packages or in body of cars, found unnecessary. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 575, 576.

(xx) If salt is provided without extra charge for fresh meat, packing house products, dairy products, etc., the shippers of fruits and vegetables should have the same privilege. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 576.

(yy) Rule 200, clause (M), providing that the terms fruits, apples, berries, vegetables, and melons, means fresh fruits, apples, etc., and providing that when crushed fruits, apples, etc., and, or fruit juices (not beverages), are transported under refrigeration, the lowest rated charge from point of origin to destination will apply, approved. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 576.

(zz) Rules 245 and 250, governing precooled and preiced cars of citrus fruit from California and Florida. Recommended that clause (D), in which the giving and acceptance of special instructions from the shipper releases carriers from all liability for loss and damage caused by non-icing in transit or at destination, be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 582, 586.

(3a) Rule 255, limiting half-tank refrigeration service to citrus fruits from Florida, should be revised to include apples from Virginia and fruits from Michigan, formerly afforded; and clause B), providing that shipments will be transported solely at owner's risk of loss and damage resulting from insufficient refrigeration not caused by carrier's negligence, should be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 586.

(3b) It costs practically as much to refrigerate a car loaded with 100 pounds of perishable freight as one carrying 20 000 pounds, and carriers are fairly entitled to take this into consideration in formulating their rules and charges. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 607.

(3c) Respondents proposed (1) to amend paragraph G or rule 200 C in perishable protective tariff No. 2, I. C. C. 1, on fruits and vegetables, so as to provide specifically that only in the case of cars moving under full standard refrigeration will ice and salt be supplied by the carriers in the body of refrigerator cars equipped with ice bunkers or tanks, in case of emergency and or on request of shippers, and (2) to amend paragraph H of the same rule to provide new charges for the furnishing of salt by the carriers in connection with refrigeration charges on fresh fruits and vegetables. At the hearing, respondents stated that, insofar as the tariff provision covering the charges for salt was concerned an agreement had been reached with all the interested parties whereby a modified basis of charges for this service would be imposed in lieu of the suspended charges, and the agreed charges were made effective March 10, 1924. While section 2 of the tariff does provide stated charges for refrigeration of carload shipments of the commodities previously mentioned therein from and to various points in this and adjacent countries, it provides, also that under certain circumstances, as in connection with shipments which have been precooled or preiced by the shippers, charges will be assessed which are in some instances substantially less than those contained in the tables of "stated refrigeration charges." Under respondent's interpretation of the present rule shippers would be entitled, logically, to have ice placed by the carriers within the car upon such shipments, if shippers so request, upon the same terms as cars moving under stated refrigeration charges. The suspended rule, by restricting this privilege to cars moving under full standard refrigeration would exclude such shipments if, as stated by respondents, the effect would be to limit the service to cars moving under the stated refrigeration charges. No evidence to justify the increased charges has been submitted. HELD, suspended schedule providing that ice and salt will be supplied by the carriers in the body of refrigerator cars equipped with ice bunkers or tanks only when the cars are moving under full standard refrigeration not justified. Furnishing ice and salt, 88 I. C. C. 361.

PERSONAL INJURIES

See Employer's Liability Act; Telephone and Telegraph Companies IV; Safety Appliance Act.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The complainant having offered evidence of pecuniary damages as a basis for an award for injuries done in his violent removal from the car and for reasonable fees of attorneys he has been compelled to employ and the defendant railroad company under the Seventh amendment of the Constitution of the United States being entitled to a trial by jury, the Commission, because it could not give such a trial, declined to go into that question leaving the complainant to his appropriate remedy in the courts for the alleged trespass and assault upon him, in which, under section 8 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, the defendant may be held liable for counsel or attorneys' fees "to be fixed by the court." Council v. Western & Atlantic R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 638.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Under the Employers' Liability Act, §34, the remedy afforded by that act excludes all other remedies, including the right of action for death given by the Louisiana Law, giving a right of action for wrongful acts. Thaxton v. Louisiana Ry. & Nav. Co., (La. 1923), 95 Sou. 773.

(c) Under the federal Employers' Liability Act, contributory negligence does not bar recovery, but minimizes the damages. Thornhill v. Davis, (S. C. 1922), 113 S. E. 370.

(d) Where plaintiff, caretaker of stock, was injured while in caboose, by violent starting of train, failed to give notice of injury within 60 days, as required by bill of lading in case of "injury to property," was immaterial. Davis v. Adkins, (Texas. 1923) 251 S. W. 285.

(e) A news agent employed by a news agency, which, under contract with defendant railway company, had agreed to indemnify the latter against personal injuries to its employees and by contract with its news agents has required the latter to assume all risk of accident or injury, cannot recover for personal injuries received by him while riding free in the course of his employment and business as news agent on one of defendant's trains. Neville v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co., (Tex., 1923), 252 S. W. 483.

(f) Where plaintiff, a newsboy in the employ of a news agency, had entered into a contract whereby he assumed all risk of accident and injuries of every kind that he might sustain in the course of his employment, and the news agency in turn had contracted with the defendant railway company to manage and operate railway hotels, lunch stands, dining cars, and the business of selling newspapers, periodicals, and other articles of merchandise, in consideration of which, among other things, the railway company agreed to transport such goods, merchandise, and employees of the news agency free, and the news agency agreed to idemnify the railway company for sums paid out on account of personal injuries sustained by employees, HELD, that the provisions of plaintiff's contract with the news agency insured to the benefit of defendant railway company in an action by such news agent for personal injuries. Neville v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co., (Tex., 1923), 252 S. W. 483.

(g) A railroad company, though a common carrier, when acting outside the performance of its legal duties, may contract as a private carrier and stipulate against liability for injury to persons caused by its negligence. M'Cree v. Davis, 280 Fed. 959.

(h) The remedy given to an employee of the United States for an injury incurred through negligence of Panama Railroad Company, under federal employees' Compensation Act, is not exclusive, and he may at his election maintain an action against the company. Panama R. Co. v. Strobel, 282 Fed. 52.

(i) Where a caretaker in charge of stock was told by a railroad employee that the train would stop, so he could get on board, the employee's subsequent query as to whether he could not board the train while it was moving slowly, without any express or implied threat that he would miss the train, if he refused to board it while moving, was not a waiver of requirement of contract, under which he was carried, that he should remain in the caboose while the train was in motion. Hulet v. Payne, 282 Fed. 401.

(j) Where claimant, suing for injuries sustained while being transported as caretaker of stock under contract requiring him to remain in caboose while train was moving, pleaded that he was a passenger by virtue of such contract, and did not plead waiver, he could not claim a waiver of such requirement by reason of conductor's alleged direction to him to board car while moving. Hulet v. Payne 282 Fed. 401.

(k) The tracks, bridges, roadbed, and equipment of a carrier in actual use in interstate commerce have a definite interstate character as instruments of such commerce, and give such character to those employed on them. Industrial Accident Commission of State of California v. Payne. 42 Sup. Ct. 489.

(l) The test of employment in interstate commerce, which determines the application of the federal Employers' Liability Act, is whether the employe at the time of the injury was engaged in interstate transportation, or in any work so closely related to it as to be practically a part of it. Industrial Accident Commission of State of California v. Payne, 42 Sup. Ct. 489.

PHYSICAL VALUATION

See Advanced §10½; Evidence §49.

§50; Interstate Commerce Commission §8; Reasonableness of Rates §39½.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) There can be no doubt of the power of Congress to devise and provide for carrying into effect a plan for assuring to the nation's interstate railroads a fair return upon the value of their property; and the full control by Congress of this matter is not to be denied on the ground that the carriers' aggregate earnings are a commingling of intrastate and interstate revenue. Rates, Fares and Charges of N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 59 I. C. C. 290, 294.

(b) The act requires the Commission to determine upon a valuation for the total property of the carriers and not for the property that might by some necessarily arbitrary method or formula be assigned to interstate traffic, and in arriving at the estimated value used in Increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C. 220, that course was followed. Interstate Rates within Illinois, 59 I. C. C. 350, 364.

(c) The Commission understands the Interstate Commerce Act to require it to determine upon a valuation for the total property of the carriers and not for the property that might by some necessarily arbitrary method or formula be assigned to interstate traffic, and that is the course the Commission followed in arriving at the estimated value used in Increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C. 220. Interstate fares within Illinois, 59 I. C. C. 350, 364.

(d) The law requires the Commission to fix rates, fares and charges so that the carriers shall, under specified conditions, earn, as nearly as may be, a certain return upon the aggregate value of the railway property held for and used in the service of transportation, and it follows that to the extent that intrastate rates, free and charges do not contribute their proportionate share to such return they unjustly discriminate against interstate commerce. South Carolina fares and charges, 60 I. C. C. 290, 297.

(e) Neither the value of property nor the reasonableness of rates can be determined with mathematical exactness. The final test to be applied is a matter of informed judgment. Differences in judgment as among the several state commissions, if each could and would create a rate group of its own, would obviously nullify the fundamental purpose of the Transportation Act. Nebraska rates, fares and charges. 60 I. C. C. 305, 313.

(f) The valuation of railroad land for rate making purposes can not be increased beyond the fair average market value of similar land in the vicinity because of conjectural cost of acquisition and consequental damages. Switching and absorption at Minneapolis, 61 I. C. C. 646, 652.

(g) While the valuation of the railroads under section 19a of the act is still incomplete, it has progressed to such an extent that the commission may accept the results with fuller assurance, both as to particular roads and as showing general trends and principles. Reduced Rates. 1922 68 I. C. C. 676, 684-685.

(hi) That the ascertainment by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the present cost of condemnation and damages, or of purchase of the property of common carriers, in excess of the original cost or present value, as required by Act March 1, 1913, c. 92, §19a, amending Act Feb. 4, 1887, c, 104, will necessarily open a wide range of proof, and call for the exercise of close scrutiny and scrupulous analysis in its consideration and application, affords no basis for the refusal of the commission to hear evidence and ascertain such present cost. U. S. v. I. C. C. 40 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187.

(j) As Congress had authority to require the Interstate Commerce Commission, in ascertaining the value of the property of common carriers, under Act March 1, 1913, c. 92 §19a, amending Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104 to ascertain the present cost of condemnation and damages, or of purchase in excess of the original cost or present value, it is its duty to do so, even assuming that the Supreme Court decides in a railroad rate case that such matters were beyond the possibility of rational determination. U. S. v. I. C. C. 40 Sup Ct. Rep. 187.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) If an oil company owns common carrier pipe lines which do or may compete with its steamers, such situation is within the Panama Canal Act. S. P. Co. Ownership of Oil Steamers, 34 I. C. C. 77, 82.

(b) The Act as amended in 1906, conferred upon the Commission authority to examine the accounts, records, and memoranda of common carriers engaged in the transportation of oil by pipe lines. Conditions Affecting Crude Petroleum, 36 I. C. C. 429.

(c) The Commission may not require rail carriers to reduce rates not shown unreasonable in and of themselves in order that the users may better compete with others who are in a position to utilize the less costly service of pipe lines. Winona Oil Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 152, 154.

(d) Natural gas, procured by a company or its receiver in one state and piped into and sold in another state, is an article of interstate commerce, and does not lose that character because it is mixed in the pipes with a small quantity of gas (probably not exceeding 40 per cent of the total) procured in the state in which it is sold. The company, or its receiver, conducting such business, is engaged in "interstate commerce," and the enforcement by the state in which the sales are made of any law or regulation which substantially burdens the business, or renders it impossible to conduct it at a fair profit, is an undue interference with interstate commerce, in violation of the commerce clause of the federal Constitution. Landon v. Public Utilities Commission 234 Fed. 152, 164.

(e) The clause of the federal Constitution, prohibiting impairment of the obligation of contracts by state action, does not interpose any obstacle to exertion by the state of its power to regulate the rates and practices of a common carrier, as a petroleum pipe line, after the carrier has made contracts for future transportation, mortgaged its property, or pledged its income. IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Construing the provisions of the Act of June 29, 1906, relative to corporations and persons engaged in the transportation of oil by pipe lines as intended to include existing pipe lines controlled by that combination of companies carrying practically all oil offered between the oil fields east of California and the Atlantic seaboard provided the offerer first sells it to them on their own terms, it cannot be said that Congress has in, enacting the Act, exceeded its powers. United States v. Ohio Oil Co., 34 Sup. Ct. 956, 958; 234 U. S. 548; 58 L. ed.—.

(b) If a petroleum pipe line was constructed solely to carry oil for particular producers under strictly private contracts and never was devoted by its owner to public use, that is, to carrying for the public, a state could not, by mere legislative flat or any regulating order of a commission, convert it into a public utility, or make its owner a common carrier, for so to do would be taking private property for a public utility without just compensation, in violation of the due process of law clause of the Forteenth Amendment of the federal Constitution. II AS COMMON CARRIER.

§3. In General.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Standard Oil Co., having of itself and through its subordinates, obtained control of practically all the pipe lines east of California with a view to avoiding the amendment to the first section declaring pipe lines to be common carriers, refused to carry any oil except such as was sold to it or its subordinates on terms dictated by the company. HELD, that the provisions of the Act applied to anyone engaged in the transportation of oil by means of pipe lines. It would not only be a sacrifice of fact to form, but would nullify the Act if the carriage to the seaboard of nearly all the oils east of California were held not to be transportation within its meaning, because by the exercise of their power these carriers imposed as a condition to the carriage a sale to themselves. As applied to them, while the amendment does not require them to continue in operation, it does require them not to continue except as common carriers. United States v. Ohio Oil Co., 34 Sup. Ct. 956; 234 U. S. 548; 58 L. ed.—., reversing in part 204 Fed. 798, enjoining the enforcement of the Commission's order in 24 I. C. C. 1.

(b) The Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended in 1906, conferred upon this Commission authority to examine the accounts, records, and memoranda of common carriers engaged in the transportation of oil by pipe lines. Conditions Affecting Crude Petroleum, 36 I. C. C. 429.

(c) A pipe line company which had equipped its line for that business, and was holding itself out as ready to transport for hire oil for all persons who might tender oil to it for transportation, and was exercising such calling as a public business, was a common carrier. Hall v. Cumberland Pipe Line Co. (Ky., 1922), 237 S. W. 405.

(d) A pipe line company having a pipe line used only in conveying oil from its oil wells in one state to its refinery in another state is not a common carrier within the provisions of the act of June 29, 1906, declaring pipe lines to be common carriers in certain cases. IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The conveyance of oil in pipe lines is interstate commerce, where the owners of such lines are carrying all oil offered, if only the offerers will sell it at their price. United States v. Ohio Oil Co., 34 Sup. Ct., 956, 958; 234 U. S. 548; 58 L. ed. —.

(b) The gathering within the state by a pipe line company of oil which it is required to hold in storage for the owners until it receives directions for shipment, but which it was authorized to mingle with the general mass of oil in its pipes and tanks, is interstate commerce as to such oils as it subsequently sends out of the state, regardless of whether it is merely a bailor of the oil or becomes the owner thereof and indebted to the producer for the value Eureka Pipe Line Co. v. Hallanan, 42 Sup. Ct. 101, 102.

(c) Oil transported by pipe line from state to state, is in interstate commerce, though, as incidental to such commerce, quantities of the oil accumulate temporarily in collecting tanks which are part of the pipe line system. West Virginia Pipe Line Co. v. State (W. Va., 1923), 120 S. E. 759.

§6. Reasonableness of Rates.

See Reasonableness of Rates.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Respondents proposed to cancel their joint rate for the transportation

by pipe line of crude oil from Kansas and Oklahoma to Lacy Station, Pa., leaving no rate in effect. At the hearing the issuing carrier stated that the attempted cancellation was due to the withdrawal by the National Transit Company of its concurrences in the rate; that the National Transit Company had subsequently renewed its concurrence, and that respondents were willing to continue the rate in effect, subject to the blanket increases that had been made in their rates subsequent to the suspension. No objection to this was offered by protestants. HELD, the proposed schedule not having been justified an order will be entered requiring its cancellation. Crude oil from Kansas and Oklahoma to Lacy Station, Pa. 59 I. C C. 483.

(b) Complainant attacked defendants rates on crude oil from Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas to Franklin and Lacy Station, Pa., and their tariff rule requiring that shipments be tendered in quantities of not less than 100,000 barrels as unreasonable. Defendants are pipe lines. Pipe line service is of two parts. The first, known as gathering service, is performed entirely by the Prairie Pipe Line Co. and consists of gathering the oil from the producers tanks at the wells and transporting it by gravity or propulsion to trunk line stations. It also includes the measuring of the oil, which in turn includes the measuring and strapping of the tanks and computation of their capacity. At time complaint was filed gathering charge was 12c, but it was increased to 20c, Sept. 20, 1920. The gathering charge is a flat charge for whatever service may be entailed, whether of 1 mile or of 50 or more miles. Frequent extensions of the pipes to new producing properties and withdrawals from exhausted properties must be made. Second part is trunk line transportation which is performed by a series of pumpings, pumping stations being located about every 40 miles along the line. It does not appear that there has ever been a shipment of midcontinent crude to Lacy Station. Moreover, the gallonage delivered at Franklin, is but a small percentage of the total gallonage transported by defendants. Defendants have shown that the increased rates in issue are reasonable as compared with other rates for pipe line service. If defendants earnings are excessive such fact might require a general reduction in all of their rates, but the Commission would not be warranted in requiring any reduction in these particular rates below the level of other rates. Under the minimum tender rule the initial line will not accept oil for transportation unless the shipper has 100,000 barrels above ground ready for transportation. Having 100,000 barrels above ground, he may, after tender, hold it in storage, and defendants will accept the current runs from his wells or his current purchases until the tender is filled. If the shipper desires to continue shipping, he makes further tenders from time to time as the preceding tenders near completion, and defendants will continue to take his oil in small lots as produced or purchased. The identity of midcontinent oil is not preserved-that is, there is no assurance that the consignee will receive at destination the same oil which comprised the shipment at points of origin. It is permissible under the minimum tender rule for different shippers to combine their gallonage to meet the minimum. While this would reduce the cost to each shipper, it does not generally constitute a satisfactory way of shipping, as it conditions shipment by any one operator on his ability to find other operators who have the required amount of oil which they are willing to ship to the same point to which he desires to ship. There is considerable loss from evaporation where oil is held in storage for any great length of time. There is also present in the case of the small operator danger of irreparable loss through falling prices on oil stored to meet the minimum. As an operating matter midcontinent oil is at present received in small lots and delivered as the refiners can use it. A reduction in the minimum would not seem to necessitate radical charges in the operating practices of the carriers. While the Commission must, in dealing with questions of the character here presented, give careful consideration to the interests of the general public as well as those of the litigating parties, there is nothing of record in this case to justify the conclusion that a reduction of the minimum will react to public detriment. The transportation of oil by pipe line is essentially a bulk business, and that fact must not be lost sight of in determining the issue. The pipe lines can not be successfully operated on a driblet basis, and there is a reasonable minimum below which they should not be required to accept oil for transportation. But the minimum must be reasonable, and it is clear that fixed by defendants does not square with the law in this respect. Rather it reserves the pipe lines to a few large shippers and essentially deprives the lines of the common carrier status with which they were impressed by the act. HELD, increased rates reasonable, but minimum tender of 100,000 barrels unreasonable to extent it exceeds tender of 10,000 barrels. Brunder Brothers v. Prairie Pipe Line Co. 68 I. C. C. 458.

(c) The transportation of oil by pipe line is essentially a bulk business, and that fact must not be lost sight of in determining the minimum which will be accepted for transportation. The pipe lines can not be successfully operated on a driblet basis and there is a reasonable minimum below which they should not be required to accept oil for transportation; but the minimum must be reasonable. Brundred Bros. v. P. P. L. Co. 68 I. C. C. 458, 466.

VI OPERATION

§7. In general.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Rule requiring shipments of crude oil for transportation by pipe line to be tendered in quantities of not less than 100,000 barrels found unreasonable to extent that it requires tenders in excess of 100,000 barrels. Minimum fixed by carriers reserves the pipe lines to a few large shippers and essentially deprives the lines of the common carrier status with which they were impressed by the act. Minimum herein fixed should be sufficiently low to enable all producers and refiners to utilize the pipe lines and should be sufficiently high to mitigate operating difficulties. Brundred Bros. v. P. P. L. Co., 68 I. C. C. 458.

(b) A pipe line usually recives its greatest gallonage from any district when first laid, the supply of oil thereafter gradually diminishing until exhausted. This is in contrast with rail transportation, where the tonnage usually increases as time elapses. A pipe line may, at great outlay of money, extend its pipes into a new field that has the brightest prospects only to have the venture prove a disappointing failure. Brundred Bros. v. P. P. L. Co., 68 I. C. C. 458, 461.

(c) It is not one of the common-carrier functions of pipe lines to protect the unwary from the irresponsible or unscrupulous, and where such protection is afforded through a rule which deprives legitimate shippers of the privilege of using their facilities the rule can not be sanctioned. POOLING OF TRAFFIC

(a) An agreement for the pooling of traffic between a carrier by rail subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce and a carrier by pipe line does not fall within the description of contracts prohibited by section 5 of that Act. Independent Refiners' Asso., v. Western New York & P. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 162, 180.

(b) The agreement of the Trans-continental Association on file with the Commission is not on its face a "contract, or agreement or combination," for the "pooling of freights" or "division of earnings" between different and competing railroads, such as is declared unlawful by section 5 of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Duncan v. Atchison T. & S. T. R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 385.

(c) It is illegal for a railroad company to enter a "pool" whereby a parallel railroad has preference over it in rates, where its charter, granted by Congress, forbids discrimination against any connecting or intersecting road, and a state land grant to the railroad forbids it to enter into any combination with any parallel road in the state that will allow the latter to control rates on it. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 428.

(d) A Federal court will not refuse to abrogate an illegal pooling contract of a railroad in the hands of its receiver, upon the prayer of the representatives of other lines connected with it, because the receiver is willing to enter into such combination with such objecting lines, and they may also be willing. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. (C. C. E. D., La.), 4 I. C. R. 428.

(e) A pooling contract between several railroad companies which control the business of a large section of country by which all their roads are to be run as one so far as through business is concerned, and each company is to receive certain proportion of the gross earnings, by either a diversion of business or of receipts, is void as against public policy. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 578.

(f) An action will not lie to compel a railroad company to pay over its earnings in excess of its share under an illegal pooling contract by which several companies agree to divide the earnings from a certain class of business by either giving each its share of business or of the earnings, since it is not a suit merely to compel an accounting ot moneys received, but is one to compel specific performance of the contract. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. &. P. R. Co. (C. C. App. 8th C.), 4 I. C. R. 578.

(g) The "fines" or "penalties" imposed by the provisions of the agreement of the Southern Railway & Steamship Association on members for violation of association rules appear on the face of that agreement to be available as substitutes for payment which would be exacted under a regular pooling system, and the arrangement under which they are imposed is tantamount to a combination, contract, or agreement "for the pooling of freights of different and competing railroads, or to divide between them the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings of such railroads or any portion thereof," which are forbidden by the statute. Cincinnati Freight Bureau v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 592.

(h) The requirement of the agreement of the Southern Railway & Steamship Association that its members apply "full local rates upon all traffic subject to the Association Agreement coming from or going to" connecting lines which do not maintain Association rates, while to traffic from other connecting lines conforming to such rates full local rates are not applied, is repugnant to that clause of section 3 of the Act to Regulate Commerce which forbids carriers to "discriminate in their rates and charges between connecting lines." Freight Bureau v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 592.

(ij) The agreement of the Trans-Continental Association on file with the Commission is not on its face a "contract, or agreement or combination," for the "pooling of freights" or "division of earnings" between different and competing railroads, such as is declared unlawful by section 5 of the Act to regulate commerce. Blanton Duncan v. A. T. & S. F. R. R. Co., et al. 6 I. C. C. 85.

(k) A contract between competing railroads relating to traffic rates for the transportation of articles of commerce between the States, the direct effect of which is to produce a restraint of trade or commerce, is within the provision of the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, declaring that every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations is illegal. U. S. A. v. Trans—Mo Freight Asso. 7 I. C. C. App. CI.

(l) The question whether defendants pool their citrus fruit traffic or divide the earnings therefrom, whether the blanket rate of 1.25 per 100 pounds upon oranges and other citrus fruits from southern California to points on and east of the Missouri River, and the minimum carload weight of 26,000 pounds, are unjust or unreasonable, and whether the statute applies to the charges for refrigeration, and if so, whether such charges are unjust or unreasonable, are retained by the Commission for further hearing and investigation. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 182.

(m) There is no discrimination against localities by an arrangement among carriers dividing the traffic of transporting immigrants from Atlantic ports westward in agreed proportions, where the immigrants are transported at domestic published rates. Re Transportation of Immigrants from New York, 10 I. C. C. 13.

(n) It is at least doubtful whether section five of the Act to Regulate Commerce, which forbids the pooling of freights, applies to a practice whereby the transportation of immigrants from Atlantic ports westward is divided between the carriers in agreed proportions based upon the proportion of the domestic passenger traffic done by each line, where such a practice cannot be made effective in respect to any other class of passenger business, and the immigrants are carried at domestic published rates, and the arrangements adopted by the carriers in connection with the immigration authorities of the United States have efficiently promoted the protection and greatly improved the treatment and comfort of immigrants. Re Transportation of Immigrants from New York, 10 I. C. C. 13.

(o) Defendants are unlawfully engaged in pooling the traffic in citrus fruits originating in southern California and carried by them and their connections to eastern markets, but further action upon this branch of the proceeding is reserved by the Commission, in view of the pendency in the United States Supreme Court of an appeal from a like decision of the circuit court for the southern district of California, in a suit brought by this Commission, to enforce its order herein prohibiting the defendants from continuing to apply and enforce a provision in their tariff reserving to themselves the routing of this traffic to eastern destinations, and depriving the shippers of their right to determine which of various established routes shall be used for the transportation of their property. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 10 I. C. C. 590.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(p) Upon investigation, pursuant to paragraph (1) of section 5 of the Act, proposed contract providing for the division between the Orange & Northwestern R. R. and the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Ry., of traffic originating at and destined to points on the Gulf & Northern Ry., approved. PORT HANDLING CHARGES

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Respondents proposed to restrict their proportional rates on rough lumber, in carloads, shipped interstate between points in Arkansas; from Arkansas and Louisiana points to Memphis, Tenn.; and between points in Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri and Oklahoma on traffic "moving interstate from a point in one state to a point in another state," for manufacture at points on their lines and reshipment therefrom. In the tariffs now in effect the application of the inbound proportional rates on the rough lumber is conditioned upon the outbound tonnage of finished articles being not less than specified percentages of the weight of inbound material. As to certain articles, including ceiling, flooring, moldings, and partitions, it is provided that the outbound tonnage shall be not less than 40 per cent of the weight of inbound lumber or rough lumber. In the suspended schedule it is provided that the outbound tonnage shall be not less than 40 per cent of the weight of inbound rough green lumber. If these schedules become effective, under other provisions of respondent's tariffs, the weight required will be 60 per cent of that of inbound dry lumber. The proportional rates are lower than the rates applicable if the outbound tonnage does not equal the required percentage of the inbound lumber proposed schedules have not been justified and must be canceled. Absorption of handling charges at New Orleans, La., 59 I. C. C. 597.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Contention that the Commission's suspension power is limited to an increase in rates previously on file and subject to its jurisdiction, and that it has no authority to suspend the port-to-port rates, New Orleans to New York, under investigation. HELD, Commission's jurisdiction is full and complete. Cotton from New Orleans, 49 I. C. C. 751, 752.

(b) Port to port rates filed prior to those filed by the Director General not subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission. New Bedford Board of Commerce v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 274, 275.

(c) All-water rates applying locally between Norfolk and Richmond, Va., on the one hand, and Philadelphia, Pa., New York, N. Y., and Boston, Mass., on the other, are not subject to the act. Corporation Commission of N. C. v. Director General, 62 I. C. C. 64, 83.

(ca) Port-to-port rates were filed with the Shipping Board but not with the commission. Water lined formed part of a combined rail-and-water system of transportation taken into Federal control by proclamation of the President, and thus came under the provisions of the Federal control act, and was under Federal control and operation during the period of movement. HELD: Charges were collected "by or through the President" as contemplated by section 206 (c) of the Transportation Act, 1920, and are within the commission's jurisdiction. New Bedford Board of Commerce v. Director General, as Agent 68 I. C. C., 85, 86.

(cb) Contention that in the exercise of the commission's undoubted jurisdiction over interstate rail-and-water transportation, it may protect such transportation against injury from port-to-port rates of participating water carriers upon somewhat the same theory as in the Shreveport cases, wherein jurisdiction was exercised over rail carriers engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce, in order to protect interstate traffic from injury by the intrastate rates, not sustained. Corona Coal Co. v. Secretary of War, 69 I. C. C. 389, 391, 392.

(cc) In the transportation act, 1920, Congress set forth explicitly the commission's power and duty to deal with intrastate rates which unjustly discriminate against, or unduly prejudice persons or localities engaged in interstate commerce. Wherever specific mention is made of local port-to-port rates the intent is disclosed to exclude them from the commission's jurisdiction. The commission is not warranted in deducing such a power merely from a fine spun web of inference. Corona Coal Co. v. Secretary of War, 69 I. C. C. 391, 392.

(d) Conference rates maintained by water carriers operating in transcontinental service from the north Atlantic and Gulf ports and established at a conference under a "gentlemen's agreement." Appendix 1, Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 55, 96.

(e) Complaint attacking failure of Pacific Ocean carriers to comply with routing instructions shown in through prepaid bills of lading in connection with shipments from Australia and New Zealand to Boston, Mass., in that shipments were forwarded all-water instead of water-and-rail as routed; assessment of failure to refund amounts in excess of charges on such shipments in addition to those collected at point of origin; charges applicable over route of movement; and seeking establishment of through routes and joint rates on such shipments; dismissed, for want of jurisdiction. Complainant's members must seek recourse against Pacific Ocean steamship companies under their contracts of carriage elsewhere than before this commission. Boston Wool Trade Asso. v. A., T. & S. F. PORTO RICO

(a) New Organic Act of Porto Rico, March 2, 1917, §38 (Comp. St. 1918, §3803p), declaring that the Interstate Commerce Act and its amendments shall not apply to Porto Rico, means the local and intra-island affairs and rates, and not rates by cable lines with other countries, over which otherwise, the Interstate Commerce Commission has jurisdiction. Benedicto v. West India & Panama Telegraph Co., 256 Fed. 417.

(b) Where a carrier threatened to tear up complainant's private switches and side tracks, and refused to receive and deliver cars there, unless complainant paid illegal greasing charges, not included in any tariff of rates filled with the Public Service Commission, Laws Porto Rico 1917, No. 70, § 28, prohibiting an action to recover because of wrongful collection of an alleged excessive rate, in the absence of a previous decision of the commission that the rate was excessive, does not prevent equitable relief. American R. Co. of Porto Rico v. South Porto Rico Sugar Co. 293 F. 671.

PRECOOLING

See Interstate Commerce Commission, I; Refrigeration.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A carrier's entire duty is discharged when it places the precooled car on its train and hauls it to destination. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 116.

(b) When shipments are precooled by the shipper at the packing houses the car is delivered sealed to the carrier with instructions not to open nor reice until destination is reached. HELD, that the carrier under such circumstances assumes no liability for defective refrigeration, and if it handles the precooled car with due diligence it is not liable for any damage due to deterioration of the shipment. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 117.

(c) A carrier may insist upon furnishing all equipment needed for movement of precooled shipments and might decline to use equipment furnished by shippers. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 118.

(d) A shipper is not obliged to submit fruit to the hazard of a system of precooling by the carrier which the carrier declines to guarantee, but a shipper has the right himself to precool and preice his shipment. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 119, 120.

(e) Precooling is of two kinds: that furnished by the carriers and that which is furnished by the shippers. That furnished by the shipper is performed immediately after the fruit is picked; that furnished by the carriers can only be done after the cars are loaded and hauled to the precooling stations at San Bernardino or at Colton, when whole train loads and carloads are precooled at once, whereas the shippers precool each box separately. After being precooled by the carriers the shipments must be reiced before reaching destination, which does not appear to be the case when precooled by the shippers. HELD, that the precooling system of the shipper is superior to that used by the carriers and that the shippers have a right to precool and preice their shipments. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 120.

(f) The car used for the shipment of oranges and lemons from California is exactly the same whether the movement is under ventilation or refrigeration, or is precooled and preiced. The use of this special car is taken account of in the rate. Carriers are not, therefore, in case of shipments precooled by the shipper, entitled to additional compensation by reason of the fact that a car of this type is necessary and furnished. Arlingon Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 120.

(g) The system of refrigeration known as precooling is essentially different from the standard form of refrigeration. In actual practice it takes two forms. Precooling by the shipper and precooling by the railroad. In precooling by the shipper the basic idea is to bring the fruit under the influence of a low temperature at the earliest possible moment. The oranges are brought from the tree to the packing house, packed in a box, which is immediately deposited in a cold room. At the end of twenty-four to forty-eight hours all parts of the fruit and all parts of the box have been reduced to a uniform temperature of from 33 degrees to 35 degrees F. The box remains in the cold room until it is loaded. The box is taken directly to the car and packed solid and not with air space between, as in case of ordinary refrigeration or ventilation. The bunkers of the car are filled with large blocks of ice, especially intended for that purpose, and the bunkers and vents sealed up so as to make the car as nearly airtight as possible. This is all done by the shipper, and the car is then delivered to the railroad with instructions to transport to destination without reicing and without breaking the seal. By this method an additional tier of boxes can be loaded, thereby increasing the paying load of the car one-sixth. Under this system the fruit is in cold storage from the beginning and can be held without danger, and thereby minimizes the effect of car shortage. The cost of precooling and preicing a car in this manner, including interest on the investment and depreciation of the plant on a fair average, is about $32.50. There is an expense in repairing the ice bunkers of about $5.00 per car per trip. The average weight of the ice during the entire journey is about 5,000 lbs. The extra tier which can be loaded when precooled by the shipper adds a revenue in the case of the Santa Fe lines of $53, and in case of the S. P. Co., $55 on a haul from California points to Chicago, while the actual additional cost of moving the car does not exceed half these sums. HELD, that the shippers who have devised and perfected this system of precooling should not be compelled to pay for the privilege of using it more than the fair cost to the carrier of providing the additional facilities which are not included in the ventilated rate, with a fair profit, and that the precooling charge of $30.00 per car charged by defendants when car is precooled by the shipper is unreasonable to the amount that it exceeds $7.50 per car. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 121.

(h) Precooled shipments, without additional compensation, are more desirable traffic than either the ventilated or refrigerated movement. Arlington Heights Fruit Exhange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 121.

(i) Discrimination, it seems, will not result in favor of the larger shipper from allowing shippers to precool their own shipments. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 122.

(j) The public is not required to make good a carrier's blunders in erecting facilities. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 122.

(k) Complainants attacked the minimum weight on peaches from Georgia to markets east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers in refrigerator cars, of 22,500 lbs., which compels complainants to load peach crates five tiers high. HELD, that the ordinary refrigeration method will not perfectly cool the two top tiers, because Georgia peaches are picked and packed in very hot weather and moved through hot regions of the country; that the proper method of shipping these peaches would be to precool the crates before loading into the car; that comparisons cannot be made with the transportation of California peaches (these peaches being cooled by exposure to the cool night air or in precooling stations, and subject to a cool mountain haul shortly after moving), nor in the northern states, where there is a short haul. Complaint dismissed. Georgia Fruit Exchange v. S. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 623.

(l) Fruit may be safely transported under the precooling method. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 113; Georgia Fruit Exchange v. S. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 623, 626.

(m) Shippers, being entitled to precool upon a reasonable charge, the Commission has authority to determine that reasonable charge and require carriers to file tariffs establishing it. In Re Regulations and Practices With Regard to Precooling and Preicing, 23 I. C. C. 267, 268, 271.

(n) Carriers involved herein, complying with an order of the Commission in Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. So. Pac. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, filed tariffs establishing the rate of $7.50 per car for precooling oranges shipped from points in southern California to the east, and immediately thereafter filed other tariffs canceling these tariffs and withdrawing the privilege of precooling altogether. Upon protests from interested shippers the Commission suspended the tariffs canceling the precooling privilege. HELD, that shippers have the right to precool; that $7.50 per car is a reasonable charge to be made by the carriers for their service in that connection; that the tariffs withdrawing this charge are unlawful; and that the present tariffs or their equivalent, granting this privilege, should be continued in effect. In Re Regulations and Practices with Regard to Precooling and Preicing, 23 I. C. C. 267, 271.

(o) Where a precooling service is maintained in connection with traffic moving under refrigeration, and such service is furnished only upon request of those desiring it, it seems proper that the additional expense involved in the maintenance of such service should be charged only to the shippers who request the service, and not be imposed as a burden upon those who do not require and are not given it. R. R. Com. of California v. A. G. S. R. R. Co., 32 I. C. C. 17, 22.

(p) Complainants attacked the rule that on shipments of lettuce from San Benito and Mercedes, Tex., to St. Louis, Mo., standard refrigeration charges would be assessed though the lettuce was precooled, initially iced by the shipper, and tendered with the instructions not to reice in transit, as unreasonable. Whether precooling was necessary to the safe transportation of vegetables, and whether precooled vegetables loaded in fully iced refrigerator cars would carry safely without reicing in transit, were controverted points. When shipments were moved under refrigeration the carriers furnished pre-iced refrigerator cars, which were reiced at all regular icing stations enroute, regardless of instructions to the contrary. In the re-icing of precooled shipments to St. Louis about 3,000 pounds less ice was required then in the case of non-precooled shipments. The charge for precooling lettuce ranged from $52 to $90 per car; while the cost of initially icing a car varied from $21 to $27. HELD, that the rules and practices attached were not shown to be unreasonable. Complaint dismissed. Unit Marketing System v. St. L. B. & M. Ry., 48 I. C. C. 510.

(q) Rules 245 and 250, governing precooled and preiced cars of citrus fruit from California and Florida. Recommended that clause (D), in which the giving and acceptance of special instruction from the shipper releases carriers from all liability for loss and damage caused by nonicing in transit or at destination, be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 582, 586.

(r) Rules 246, governing precooling by carrier of shipments from California moving under full refrigeration, should be eliminated. Perishable Fruit Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 583, 586.

(s) In 20 I. C. C. 106, the Commission found that standard refrigeration charges on oranges from California were not unreasonable, but that the precooling charge of $30 should not exceed for the future $7.50 per car. Reparation denied. Rehearing granted on request of complainant. In order that there may be no misapprehension as to the principles upon which the conclusions of the Commission herein are based, complainant was entitled to a finding as to the reasonableness of the charges in the past; and upon a finding that the charges attacked had been shown to have been unreasonable, to an award of reparation on shipments on which it paid and bore the charges. The fair inference to be drawn from the decision of the Commission of June 20, 1917, was that the then prevailing charge had not been proved to have been unreasonable. It does not appear that any additional evidence that complainant might offer would modify the essential facts upon which our conclusions are based. HELD, the charges attacked have not been shown to have been unreasonable prior to the effective date of the order establishing the $7.50 charge. Reparation denied. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. 57 I. C. C. 580.

(t) In the exercise of "the flexible limit of judgment which belongs to the power to fix rates," finding in former reports 39 I. C. C. 88 and 45 I. C. C. 248, denying reparation on precooled and pre-iced oranges from California points to destinations in other states and in Canada, reaffirmed on reargument. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 57 I. C. C. 580.

(u) Because the shipper voluntarily loaded the cars in excess of the minimum loading requirements on which the charge is based, it by no means follows that the higher charge with the lower minimum should be found to have been unreasonable. Futhermore, in establishing the $7.50 for the future with the requirements that the cars must be loaded seven tiers wide, the Commission was prescribing a new rate and minimum for a new service, a method of shipment which up to that time had been in a largely experimental state. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P., 57 I. C. C. 580, 582.

(v) The withdrawal of the right from the shipper to pre-cool and pre-ice is a practice which affects rates and which the Commission under section 15 of the Act has the right to suspend. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v U. S., 204 Fed. 647, 650.

(w) Under section 1 of the Hepburn Act the carrier has the exclusive right to furnish such refrigeration as may be required in connection with the transportation of fruits, but this does not mean that because a carrier has ice on hand it can compel the shipper to have it refrigerated, where the shipper prefers to precool his fruit and have it forwarded under ventilation only. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. United States, 34 Sup. Ct. 291, 294; 232 U. S. 199; 58 L. ed. —.

(x) Under section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the Hepburn Act authorizing the Commission to determine what practices, in respect to rates, are unreasonable, to determine what practices, in respect to transportation, are just, and to require the carriers to conform to those prescribed by the Commission, that body has power to cancel a tariff withdrawing a precooling privilege previously recognized by it, and to require the carrier to conform to its order establishing a certain charge on precooled shipments. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. United States, 34 Sup. Ct. 291, 296; 232 U. S. 199; 58 L. ed. —.

(y) Where shipments of citrus fruits from California to eastern points were precooled by the shippers so as to require no reicing en route, the order of the Commission fixing $7.50 per car as the charge which carriers might make for services rendered in connection with the shipment will not be disturbed on the ground that the carrier is entitled to pay for hauling the ice placed in the bunkers by the shipper, where the Commission evidently proceeded upon the theory the charge for hauling the ice might be considered as absorbed by the carrier in view of the fact that where the shipper precooled the fruit cars are loaded heavier than where standard refrigeration is employed. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. United States, 34 Sup. Ct. 291, 296; 232 U. S. 199; 58 L. ed. —.

PREPAY STATIONS

See Non-Agency Stations.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) If, without notifying the initial carrier to collect the full prepay charges, or requesting instructions, the terminal carrier assumes the responsibility of forwarding the shipment to a station beyond the named destination, a prepay station, it must accept the resulting liability for increased charges. Young v. P. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 42 I. C. C. 183, 185.

(b) On a shipment consigned to a non-agency station, carrier's agent was instructed to forward to destination without prepayment, if possible, otherwise, to bill to a point short of destination, At Bristol the Southern refused to accept because charges had not been prepaid, whereupon destination was changed to Bushnell, later reconsigned to Judson. Rate charged found legally applicable, although a lower through combination rate was in effect. Western Carolina Lumber & Timber Asso. v. V. C. Ry. Co., 48 I. C. C. 445.

(c) In a typical case the shipper was notified by telephone that the destination specified was a prepay station and that charges would have to be paid. The shipment held pending settlement of charges and demurrage accrued. The shipper contends that check was sent the day following such notice. HELD, demurrage legally applicable, and the mere mailing of the check, which was not received, did not satisfy the tariff obligation to prepay charges. Ruddock Orleans Cypress Co. v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 236, 238.

(a) Practice and proceedings shall be as simple as possible. Associated Wholesale Grocers v. Missouri P. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 321.

(b) It is the desire of the Commission that the practice and proceedings shall be as simple as possible, and that final hearings be had forthwith, without the interposition of dilatory motions, etc. Associated Wholesale Grocers of St. Louis v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 321.

(c) The Interstate Commerce Act contemplates that when a complaint is made against a carrier on the ground of exorbitant rates, the carrier may change its rates before a hearing is had, so as to remedy the matter complained of, if it shall see proper so to do. Fulton v. Chicago, St. Paul, M. & O. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 375.

(d) Letter of Chairman Cooley in response to communication expressing desire that Commission would go to certain State and there hear testimony in certain cases then pending at issue, and such other cases as may have arisen in that state; suggestion in letter that facts be put in writing and that counsel make diligent effort to bring within smallest possible compass the necessity for oral evidence. Rice v. Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 446.

(e) When an important question is raised by the pleadings, but the parties neither by evidence nor by argument supply the Commission with information as to it, it will not be decided. Rice v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 722.

(f) The Commission will not order a rehearing involving expenses to parties, unless satisfied that the result might be changed. Riddle v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 773.

(g) Answers, verified, must be filed with the Commission within twenty days from notice, unless a shorter time is prescribed, and a copy served upon complainant. Rule 5, Appendix I, 1 I. C. R. 841.

(h) Upon failure to answer, the Commission will take proof and make order. Rule 8. Appendix I, 1, I. C. R. 842.

(j) Affidavits may be taken before any officer authorized to administer oath. Rule 12, Appendix 1, 1 I. C. R. 842.

(k) Carrier deeming complaint insufficient may serve notice for hearing on it without answer; facts stated are admitted. Motion to dismiss for insufficiency may be made at hearing. Rule 6 Appendix 1, 1 I. C. R. 842.

(l) Adjournment and extension of time is within discretion of Commission. Rule 7. Appendix 1, 1 I. C. R. 842.

(m) Upon issue being joined, time and place of hearing will be assigned; witness examined orally before Commission, except where otherwise ordered; petitioner has burden of proof. Rule 8. Appendix 1, 1 I. C. R. 842.

(n) A case cannot be decided on a theory which is neither presented by the complaint nor advanced in the taking of the testimony. Martin v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 32.

(na) When, in a proceeding, evidence is introduced by a party and he is permitted to do so for the single purpose of the bearing it may have upon the reasonableness of the rate, which would be inadmissible for any other purpose, and it tends to show a difference of rates of the carrier by which a combination could be made of those rates upon the different tariffs that would be improper and unjust, the carrier not being allowed to controvert it upon the hearing, as to any other feature, except so far as it had a bearing upon the reasonableness of rates, because it would involve a collateral inquiry, the Commission will not determine this collateral inquiry or question it presents until an opportunity has been furnished the parties to be heard in a proceeding such as is provided for by the Statute. For example: where the complaint of the petitioner makes no allegation that under the tariffs of the carrier freight may be shipped from Chicago to St. Peter at one rate, there unloaded, and then subsequently reshipped from St. Peter to each of the stations between St. Peter and Pierre at a rate which added to the rate from Chicago to St. Peter in considerably less than the direct rate from Chicago to each of these stations, but on the hearing the complainant is allowed to introduce evidence upon this subject simply for the purpose of showing that the rates between St. Peter and Pierre are unreasonable and for no other purpose, the carrier having at the time the complaint was made a number of tariffs, as follows: a distance tariff for the State of Illinois, a distance tariff for the State of Wisconsin, a distance tariff for the State of Minnesota, a distance tariff for the Territory of Dakota, local tariffs to and from all points on its line in each of the States through which it passes and the Territory of Dakota, and a tariff from and to Chicago and all points along its line, extending to Pierre, a distance of 781 miles. Business Men's Asso. v. Cg. & N. W. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 48.

(o) A case involving local rates was ordered to be heard before the Interstate Commerce Commission at a central point in the territory immediately affected by the rates. Delaware State Grange v. New York, P. & N. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 187.

(oa) Where it is obvious that there are many parties interested as directly as is the complainant in the question before the Commission, opportunity will be given them to appear on the taking of evidence. Spartanburg Board of Trade v.

Richmond & Danville R. R. Co. 2 I. C. R. 193.

(p) A complaint made for the purpose of retaliation for a fancied wrong —as, to get even with a carrier for the revocation of complainant's pass—does not commend itself to the Commission. Slater v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 243.

(q) When a question of general interest is involved, the Commission, in its own discretion, and in furtherance of justice, may open a case to give parties the benefit of a more extended investigation of the same subject matter in other pending cases. Rice Robinson & Witherop v. W. N. Y. & P. R. 2 I. C. C. 496.

(r) Where a case involving the reasonableness of rates has been disposed of by the carrier assenting to the rates demanded no opinion will be expressed on the rates which have been abandoned, even though the parties request it. Pennsylvania Co. v. Louisville, New Albany & Chicago R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 603.

(ra) The Commission does not give opinions on abstract questions. Pennsylvania Co. v. Louisville, New Albany & Chicago R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 603.

(s) The Rules of Practice of the Commission not only do not provide for a replication to the answer, but in effect, though not in terms, exclude it. Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. Northern Pacific R. Co. 2 I. C. C. 639.

(t) Under the rules of practice issued by the Commission, a replication to an answer is not required or allowed. Oregon S. L. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co., (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 639.

(u) An averment that parties are interstate common carriers subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce is not sufficient to warrant an inference, under a motion to dismiss the complaint for insufficiency, that wheat delivered to their elevator was for interstate commerce. White v. Michigan C. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 641.

(v) When applied to by petition, the Commission must investigate matters complained of, and must, to enforce the Act, make investigations and prosecute inquiries instituted on its own motion. Re Rates & Charges on Food Products (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 151.

(w) No question is presented in this case as to whether the rates charged by the all-rail carriers at intermediate points are just and reasonable or not, but, on the contrary, the case was so presented and tried as to distinctly indicate to the Commission that no decision was desired in regard to this matter, for no evidence was offered concerning it by either side; and the case being one that is inter parties, commenced, prosecuted and defended by able counsel for the respective parties, the Commission has heard, considered and determined it as presented by the parties and their counsel. Rice v. Atchinson, Topeka & Santa Fe R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 263.

(x) A special finding must be considered as a whole, and cannot be assailed in parts; and if, taken as a whole, the finding legitimately supports the judgment, it will be upheld. A finding containing more facts than necessary is not objectionable, if such facts do not establish another cause of action. Cleveland C. C. & Q. R. Co. v. Closser 3 I. C. R. 387.

(y) Special proceedings applicable to specified subject matter, and conformable to the rules requiring notice and the acquisition of jurisdiction, and which affect all persons alike whose property or rights come within the lawful scope of the proceedings, are prosecuted with "due process of law." Burlington, Cedar Rapids & N. R. Co. v. Dey 3 I. C. R. 585.

(z) The complaint was that the defendants' charges for the transportation of specified perishable articles of truck-farming from stations on their lines of railroad to Jersey City and Philadelphia were excessive and unreasonable, and that the charges were higher for the shorter distances from their stations on the Peninsula in Delaware and Maryland than for the longer distance from Norfolk, Virginia. It was found that the charges on certain articles specified from stations on the Peninsula were excessive and a reduction was ordered. The reduced rates are, however, in many cases still considerably above the rates on the same articles from Norfolk, and, the showing not being sufficient to enable the Commission to determine satisfactorily how far the lower Norfolk rates were justified by the differences in the conditions and circumstances, that subject is left for future consideration. Delaware State Gauge v. N. Y. & N. R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 554.

(aa) When a carrier fails to answer a complaint filed under action 13 of the Act, the Commission will take such proof of the facts as may be deemed proper and reasonable, and make such order thereon as the circumstances of the case appear to require. Tecumseh Celery Co. v. C. J. & M. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 318, 320.

(bb) Where a complainant has invoked the aid of the law to secure what he, with the acquiescence of the carrier had previously obtained in apparent contravention of the law, the carrier cannot plead violations of the law by complainant in bar of a decision on the merits, nor will the individual interests of the complainants be taken into consideration; but the Commission will examine the evidence and make such report thereon as, under the provisions of the law, the rights of other shippers and the public generally may require. Page v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 525.

(cc) It was the intention of Congress that the procedure before the Commission should substantially conform to that before a court charged with the duty of finding the facts, and giving judgment thereon, or to the investigation and report of a referee or special master in chancery, passing on both facts and law. Interstate Commerce Commission v. L. & N. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 656.

(dd) It appearing that the discrimination and preferences complained of in these proceedings would be removed through compliance, by carriers operating in the same territory, with the decision and order of the Commission in other cases (The Chicago & Cincinnati Freight Bureaus Cases, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 592, 6 I. C. C. Rep. 195), and that suits are pending in the courts for the enforcement of such order, the proceedings herein were stayed until final determination by the courts in such other cases. Southern Paint & G. Co. et al v. Lake E. & N. R. Co. et al. 6 I. C. C. 284.

(ee) In a case before the Commission, instituted by complaint and strictly inter partes, matter not expressly put in issue by the pleadings or necessarily involved in issues so presented, cannot be authoritatively determined by the Commission. Commercial Club of Omaha v. Chicago R. I. & P. Ry. Co. 6 I. C .C. 647.

(ff) The question whether on traffic from the Middle West the present rates to intermediate points which are higher than those to Pacific Coast terminals are lawful was not litigated at the hearing, and while the Commission will not of its own motion proceed in that branch of the case complainants are granted leave to do so if they desire. Business Men's League v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 318.

(gg) This proceeding is in the form of a general investigation, and although the respondent carriers were fully heard by their traffic representatives, and in some instances through their attorneys, the proceeding is in a manner ex parte, and facts not brought out in this inquiry, with further discussion of the subject, might lead to a different conclusion. No order, therefore, can be made upon this record, but further proceedings will be commenced unless the respondent carriers readjust their rates on grain and grain products in accordance with the views herein expressed on or before May 15, 1903. Re Proposed Advances in Freight Rates 9 I. C. C. 382.

(hh) Analogy of interstate commerce Commission to court of equity. Railroad Commission of Ohio v. Hocking Valley Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 398.

(ii) Interstate Commerce Commission is without authority to issue mandumus. Jones v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 144.

(iia) The Commission is not the proper forum to which to appeal for the enforcement either of a charter, statutory, or a common law obligation to maintain a station at a given point. The Commission has no authority to issue the writ of mandamus, nor has it any common law jurisdiction. While it may draw upon the wisdom of the common law for guidance in the consideration of many questions, its jurisdiction as an administrative and quasi-judicial body rests wholly upon the provisions of the act. Jones v. St. L. & S. F. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 144, 148.

(jj) The Commission is essentially an administrative body, and in the examination of formal complaints ought to get at the real substance of the issue presented unembarrassed by technical considerations. Missouri & Kansas Shippers Asso. v. M. K. & T. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 483, 484.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(kk) Complaints may be filed even where there is no direct damage to the complainant. Washer Grain Co. v. M. P. Ry., 15 I. C. C. 147.

(ll) The Commission is an administrative body, created to effect substantial justice in the matters under its control, and is not bound or limited by the strict rules of pleading. Nollenberger v. M. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 595, 598.

(mm) It is not the proper course of procedure for complainants to file complaint and proceed no further. Some obligation rests upon a complainant who seeks reparation to prosecute his case with due diligence. Advance Thresher Co. v. Orange & N. W. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 599, 600.

(nn) However strongly the Commission might feel inclined to relieve conditions complained of, its actions must be within the provisions of law and with due and proper regard for the rights of every affected interest. Commercial Club of Hattiesburg v. Alabama Great Southern R. R. Co., 16 I. C. C. 534, 545.

(oo) It is improper practice for a carrier to decline to make application for the informal adjustment of an unreasonable charge, thereby compelling the shipper to file formal complaint, and then, by answer and stipulation, admit the allegations of the complaint and agree to submission of the case on the pleadings. Davenport Pearl Button Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 193, 194.

(pp) The Commission is given a reasonable discretion in entertaining and refusing to entertain complaints that are presented to it. Even if it had the power to entertain a complaint seeking general damages, that discretion is reasonably exercised when it declines in the general public interest and in deference to the other important work before it to deal with matters about which it can know but little, and which the courts, where such matters properly belong, can deal with much more efficiently. Joynes v. Penn. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 361, 367.

(qq) The practice rule of the Commission, while not overlooking the definite requirements of the law in respect to filing complaints, were intended to relieve complainants, so far as possible, from observance of the technical rules of pleading, in order that shippers unskilled in such matters might bring their troubles to the Commission in their own proper persons. Memphis Freight Bureau v. St. L. S. W. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 67, 69.

(rr) The Commission has endeavored to simplify its practice and procedure, without permitting technical matters to interfere with substantial results. Cincinnati & Columbus Traction Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 486, 489.

(ss) Liberal rules of pleading are applied by the Commission. Stonega Coke & Coal Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 17, 25.

(tt) No order should be made until after a full hearing as provided in section 15. Augusta & Savannah Steamboat Co. v. O. S. S. Co. of Savannah, 26 I. C. C. 380, 382.

(uu) The Commission does not hold itself bound by the technical rules of evidence, but the law requires that its findings must be based on evidence of record. It is entitled to the submission of such facts as will enable it to properly decide the matter before it. Commercial Club of Omaha v. A. & S. R. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 302, 310.

(vv) The burden of proof as to reasonableness of rates rests with complainants as to all rates increased prior to the effective date of the amendmnt of 1910. As to those increased subsequent to that date, the burden is with the carrier. Crawford & Bunce v. P. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 32 I. C. C. 12, 13.

(ww) A copy of the transcript of the evidence in a former case is inadmissible, where no copy has been furnished defendants in compliance with rule 13 of the Commission's Rules of Practice, by express provisions of the Act it was contemplated that the Commission should make rules of practice and compliance with the rules is in the interest of justice to all parties. Paducah Board of Trade v. I. C. R. R., 43 I. C. C. 537, 542.

(xx) When a party feels that evidence is being introduced beyond the scope of the issues, it is not only his right but his duty to object, even though he feels that such objections will be unavailing if made. Utah Idaho Millers and Grain Dealers Assn. v. D. & R. G. R., 44 I. C. C. 714, 717.

(yy) Hearsay evidence objected to. The Commission does not require a strict adherence to the rules of evidence in its proceedings and hearsay evidence may be considered. Western Trunk Lines Iron and Steel, 47 I. C. C. 109, 122.

(zz) Complainants having failed to name carriers over whose lines rates applied as parties defendant in addition to the Director General, although opportunity afforded, no order for the future entered. Inland Steel Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 339, 342.

(3a) In every case which puts in question intrastate rates, the decisive factor is whether or not they affect interstate commerce injuriously to a considerable extent. If they do they are brought under the Commission's jurisdiction and control, even though the whole rate structure of a state should be involved. Rates, Fares and Charges of N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 59 I. C. C. 290, 292.

(3b) Action of carriers in bringing a matter involving state rates before the Commission in advance of filing an application with the state commission, deprived the Commission of the benefit of such investigation and findings as the state authorities might have made; furthermore, the Commission is not vested with appellate power under which carriers might be remanded to the state tribunals. Arkansas Rates and Fares, 59 I. C. C. 471, 473, 474.

(3c) And a mere comparative statement of charges unsupported by a showing of the conditions under which they are maintained can not be accepted as proof that charges at a given point are unreasonable. Holly Ridge Lumber Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 60 I. C. C. 121, 122.

(3d) Because the act requires the Commission to give preference to suspension proceedings over all other questions pending before it and to decide such proceedings as speedily as possible, the Commission proceeded to a disposition of such a proceeding in advance of other cases with which it had been consolidated. Coal from Detroit, Toledo & Ironton R. R. Mines, 64 I. C. C. 564, 565.

(3f) The act gives party injured through carrier's violation of its provisions election to make complaint to the commission or bring suit for recovery of damages in a Federal court; and, as said by Supreme Court in L. & N. R. R. Co. v. Ohio Valley Tie Co., 242 U. S. 288, 291, "the rule of damages in one hardly can be different from that proper for the other." Proctor & Gamble Co. v. Director General as Agent 81 I. C. C., 361, 363.

(3g) Complainant introduced no evidence in support of contentions that rules, regulations, and practices relating to weighing and reweighing of anthracite and bituminous coal and coke are unreasonable and otherwise unlawful; but relied upon section 15 (7) of the act, placing burden upon carriers to justify any rate, fare, or charge increased since January 1, 1910. Defendants explained establishment of rule which they contended was only greater burden imposed on shippers since that date. HELD, as basis for entry of order directing changes in tariffs and practices of carriers the commission must have some reasonable ground upon which it can be satisfied that the law is being violated. In so far as burden rests upon defendants, it has been sustained. Coal Merchants' Asso. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 328.

§1a. Investigation by Commission.

See Interstate Commerce Commission §6.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Interstate Commerce Commission has authority to institute investigations and to deal with violations of the Law independently of a formal complaint, or direct damage to a complainant. Matter of Grand Trunk Railway Co. 2 I. C. R. 496.

(b) No order will be entered at the time by the Interstate Commerce Commission in an investigation instituted by it on its own motion upon a complaint against a given railroad company, where it manifests a disposition to remove just cause of complaint by materially reducing the rates of freight complained of, although it appears that there should be a further revision as to certain points. Re Alleged Unlawful Transportation Charges, 6 I. C. C. 624.

§2. Form and Issues Tendered.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A complaint, no reasonable ground for investigation of which appears, will not be filed. La Crosse, M. & J. Union v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 9.

(ab) Applications for the official action of the Commission shall be made by petition, which shall set forth the facts on which they are founded, and be verified by the oath of the applicants or some authorized agent or attorney. Rule as to Applications for the action of the Commission, 1 I. C. C. 15.

(b) Application for exception under Act will only be granted after investigation upon verified petition. Re Southern Pac. R. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 16.

(c) Complaint under Section 13 must be by petition, stating facts claimed to be a violation of the Act, and verified; as many written or printed copies of the complaint must be presented as there may be respondents; names and addresses must be set forth and indorsed upon the writ; and a copy is to be served upon each respondent by mail or personally with notice, to satisfy the complaint or answer within the time specified. Rule 4, Appendix I, 1 I. C. R. 841.

(d) Where the complaint does not state a case within its jurisdiction, the Commission will not express an opinion. Re Iowa Barb Steel Wire Co. 1 I. C. R. 605.

(e) When an important question is raised by the pleadings in a case, the determination of which will affect others quite as much as the parties before the Commission, but the parties give their attention almost exclusively to other questions, and neither by the evidence nor in argument supply the Commission with the information to enable it to be understandingly determined, the Commission will decline to decide it, and leave the parties to bring it forward again as they may be advised. Rice v. Louisville & Nash R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 722.

(f) The Commission will not make any ruling where petitioner alleges legality of practice sought to be authorized. Re export Trade of Boston I. I. C. R. 25.

(g) Applications must be made by petition stating relief desired and points between which authority is asked to charge less; and verified by officer or agent of petitioner. Rule 2, Appendix I; 1 I. C. R. 841.

(h) Carrier deeming complaint insufficient may serve notice for hearing on complainant without answer, and facts stated are admitted. Motion to dismiss for insufficiency may be made at hearing. Rule 6, Appendix I, 1 I. C. R. 842.

(i) A complaint, of which no reasonable ground for investigation appears, will not be filed. La Crosse etc. v. Chicago etc R. Co. 2 I. C. R. 9.

(j) Where a petition alleges that a contract was made with the agent of a railroad company regarding the shipment of grain, states its terms, avers a breach thereof, and states the amount of damages claimed, the defendant is not entitled, under Mo. Rev. Stat. § 3529, to require the petition to be made more definite. Christie v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 2 I. C. R. 22.

(ja) A complaint made for the purpose of retaliation for a fancied wrong —as, to get even with a carrier for the revocation of complaint's pass—does not commend itself to the Commission. Slater v. Northern P. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 243.

(jb) Under the rules of practice issued by this Commission a replication to an answer is not required or allowed. Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. Northern Pacific R. Co. 2 I. C. R. 639.

(jc) When a complaint charged that the respondent Railroad Companies, which were common carriers subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce, were accustomed to make deductions of from five to ten pounds of wheat per load from the true weight when delivered by the farmer to the buyer at the elevators of the respondents, and gave receipt to the farmer for the amount as thus diminished, upon which the latter was paid by the buyer, thereby suffering a loss to the extent of such reduction, but failed to charge that the wheat was delivered for interstate transportation, or, indeed, for transportation anywhere, it was HELD, that the complaint was insufficient in substance to show violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and that the respondents were entitled to have it dismissed on their motions to that effect, but that the dismissal should be without prejudice. White v. Michigan Central R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 641.

(k) An averment that the respondents were interstate common carriers subject to the Act is not of itself sufficient to warrant an inference, under a motion to dismiss a complaint for insufficiency, that wheat delivered at an elevator of the respondents was for interstate commerce. White v. M. C. R. Co. 2 I. C. C. 641, 642.

(l) The fact that a complaint fails to show that plaintiff is entitled to all the relief asked does not make it demurrable as failing to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Bayles v. Kansas P. R. Co. (Colo.) 2 I. C. R. 643.

(la) A demurrer will not be sustained upon the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, if there are facts well pleaded sufficient to entitle the party to any relief; and the fact that the complaint fails to show that plaintiff is entitled to all the relief asked is immaterial. Bayles v. Kansas Pacific R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 643.

(m) Complainants though brought in the name of an individual, may challenge the entire schedule of rates to competing towns, and such cases, as distinguished from those involving grievances only, are peculiarly public in their nature, since they embrace in one proceeding the various business and industrial interests centered in cities and towns, as those interests may be affected by the charge of public carriers whose facilities are employed in the interchange of commerce. Daniels v. Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co. et al., 6 I. C. C. 458.

(n) Matter which is not expressly in issue by the pleadings or necessarily involved in issues presented in a strictly inter partes case instituted by complaint before the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot be authoritatively determined by it. Commercial Club v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. R. 647.

(o) In a case before the Commission, instituted by complaint and strictly "inter partes," matter not expressly put in issue by the pleadings or necessarily involved in issues so presented, cannot be authoritatively determined by the Commission. Commercial Club of Omaha v. C. R. I & P. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 647, 676.

(p) An averment that the fixing or naming of Turner and Rochelle as the pretended termini of shipment under joint tariffs when destined to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, or Baltimore was a device to evade the law, and that the property was in fact transported to Chicago and there sold on the market or delivered to connecting roads for eastern points, without stating what evasion was intended or how the device operated to make an evasion of the law, and without denying that there was a joint tariff established or alleged that the tariff itself was a pretense,—is not sufficient to show a violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Parsons v. Chicago & Northwestern Ry. Co. 7 I. C. C. App. XCI.

(q) A petition against a carrier for making unreasonable charges under the Interstate Commerce Act must aver either that the carrier failed to publish its schedule of rates, or charged in excess of the rates as published and then in force. Kinnavey v. Terminal R. Asso. of St. L. 8 I. C. C. App. XXVI.

(r) Although the allegations concerning reparation contained in the original petition asking the Commission to order the defendants to desist from imposing an unreasonable and unjust terminal charge are plainly sufficient to constitute the basis for an award of damages, the defendants are entitled, before the hearing, to a specification showing in detail the amounts for which recovery is sought. Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 83.

(s) Where the statute establishes a method of procedure for the enforcement of a right of action which finally results in bringing that matter by the prescribed course before a court for determination, the principle established by leading cases is that the first step which must be taken in the proceeding to enforce the claim should be treated as the beginning of the suit which finally results. Therefore when a party elects to proceed before this Commission for the recovery of damages his petition filed with the Commission should be considered the beginning of his action in all its subsequent stages. Cattle Raisers' Asso. of Texas v. C. B. & Q. R. R. 10 I. C. C. 83, 104.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(t) The Commission has little doubt that where the defendants are before it upon notice of the matter which will be examined into, where a full hearing is had and a conclusion reached, it may in its sound discretion establish rates to points not referred to by any intended complaint. Florida Fruit & Vegetable Ass'n v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 552, 556.

(uv) Where three omnibus complaints involving class rates and commodity rates on over 100 commodities from Trunk Line and Central Freight Association territories via all-rail, acrosslake and rail-lake-and-rail, and including some 63 defendants, makes comparisons of rates drawn from tariffs, but presents specific testimony in reference to only a few commodities, the Commission is confronted with insuperable difficulties, and is justified in determining the scope of the issues by the evidence introduced at the hearing. Escanaba Business Men's Ass'n v. A. A. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 11, 19.

(w) The complaint must state the facts with sufficient clearness so that the commission may apprehend the point in issue and so that the defendant may be adequately advised of the thing which it is called upon to answer and defend. Augusta & Savannah Steamboat Co. v. O. S. S. Co., 26 I. C. C. 380, 382.

(x) A prayer for general relief can hardly be construed as permitting complainants to present an issue entirely different from that explicitly stated in the pleadings. Wisconsin & Arkansas Lumber Co. v. G. R. & I. Ry. Co., 33 I. C. C. 33, 35.

(y) Where the question of differentials is not properly presented by the pleadings, no opinion can be expressed. Class Rates Between Stations in Louisiana, 33 I. C. C. 302, 306.

(z) The Commission can not grant relief where there is no prayer in the complaint for it. Michigan Bean Jobbers' Asso. v. G. R. & I. Co., 33 I. C. C. 318 320.

(aa) The Commission's rules of practice do not require strict conformity to the technical rules of pleading. They do require, however, that complaints shall conform to the more elementary requirements of pleading; that they shall be so sufficient, clear, and certain in their averments that the Commission may be informed of the issues and the carriers fully advised of the nature and extent of the case they are called upon to defend. Brooks Coal Co. v. Wabash R. R. Co., 39 I. C. C. 426, 428.

(bb) Where no violation of section 3 is alleged and the complaint nowhere indicates in respect of what person or persons section 2 is contravened, the complaint is too general to appraise carrier of what discrimination it must defend. Major Stave Co. v. M. D. & G. R. R., 39 I. C. C. 573, 574.

(cc) Where the complaint and answers put in issue reasonableness of rates, but this allegation is not referred to in subsequent proceedings, the record affords no basis for any conclusion upon this point and it will not be decided. Brown v. Vandalia R. R. Co., 41 I. C. C. 317, 320.

(dd) Neither as to form of complaint nor as to parties thereto are the rules of the Commission technical; but complainants should not omit to join as defendants carriers directly and immediately interested in the rates attacked or the rates necessarily resulting from a granting of complainant's petition. Sioux City Com. Club v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 41 I. C. C. 518, 521.

(ee) It is the view of the Commission that the issues should be clearly stated and definitely determined not later than the opening of the hearing. With that end in view it has instructed its examiners to state the issues when the case is called for hearing, and to request the parties to agree at that time as to the matters specifically presented for determination. This plan was adopted because it was found that no procedure could be successful, or result in substantial fairness to all parties, which permitted a complainant to shift his position after the evidence was submitted. The New York Harbor Case, 47 I. C. C. 643, 647.

(ff) The Commission has held in a number of cases that it can not sanction unwarranted broadening of issues or the fashioning of a case along lines not so explicitly stated at the outset as to enable defendants to come before the Commission with reasonable certainty of the things to be defended. Gazette Publishing Co. v. B. F. & I. F. Ry., 58 I. C. C. 503, 504.

(gg) Where matters apparently outside of issues are presented at the hearing, and the complaint is broad enough to include them, and evidence thereon introduced without objection on part of defendants, the Commission thinks it is proper to dispose of the questions thus raised. Railroad Commissioners of Florida v. Director General, 61 I. C. C. 438, 451.

(hh) Where the pleadings put in issue only the inbound rates to specific points, the outbound rates from those points can be considered in the proceeding only for the purpose of determining whether there is any maladjustment of the inbound rates in issue. Certain-Teed Products Corp. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 63 I. C. C. 65, 67.

(ii) Where question in issue is whether a charge was just and reasonable, it is immaterial, so far as this question is concerned, whether the service be designated a line haul or switching movement if the charge was on file with the Commission as a legal charge. Swift & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 63 I. C. C. 389, 390.

(jj) The Commission must look to the substance of a complaint rather than to its form. Wasatch Coal Co. v. Director General, 68 I. C. C. 118, 120.

(kk) One of the essential elements of a complaint before the Commission is allegation of violation of a law which the Commission has jurisdiction to administer. Wasatch Coal Co. v. Director General, 68 I. C. C. 118, 120.

(ll) Complainant attacked the reasonableness of through charges but showing of unreasonableness was largely as to the factor maintained by an electric line. HELD, since the electric line was not under Federal control, the director general not named as a party defendant, and no violation of the Federal control act alleged, shipments which moved during the Federal control period can not be considered. Buckeye Pipe Line Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C. 19, 22.

(mm) The Commission must look to the substance of the complaint rather than the form. Standard Rail & Steel Co. v. M. P. R. R., 73 I. C. C. 219, 220.

(nn) Complaints alleged that rates "are unjust and unreasonable in violation of section 4 of the Interstate Commerce act, in violation of the aggregate of intermediate rates." Contention that since this presents an issue under the fourth section it is incumbent upon complainant to prove damage in order to entitle it to reparation. HELD, the commission must look to the substance of a complaint rather than to its form. The fourth section makes it unlawful "to charge any greater compensation as a through rate than the aggregate of the intermediate rates." although such a through rate might otherwise be reasonable per se. By its averment that these rates were unreasonable complainant alleges a violation of section 1 of the Act. Standard Rail & Steel Co. v. M. P. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C. 219, 220.

(oo) Complaint clearly designated destination territory, the rates to which were in issue as "trunk line territory." Fact that carriers serving New England were named as defendants did not of itself enlarge the issue to include rates to that territory since eastern trunk-line territory, as that expression is generally understood ,does not embrace New England. Peoria Board of Trade v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 73 I. C. C. 532, 534, 535.

(pp) Complainant stated that its primary object in bringing its complaint is to restore a relative adjustment previously existing, or to better that adjustment so that shippers may again compete upon a fairly equal basis, so far as transportation charges are concerned, with competitors situated at other points HELD, in so stating, complainant is not understood as abandoning its allegation that the rates attacked are unreasonable. South Dakota R. R. Commrs. v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 347, 351, 352.

(qq) An issue cannot be considered or disposed of in a proceeding where it was not raised in the complaint but was stressed by intervenor, and by complainant at the hearing and upon brief. South Dakota R. R. Commrs. v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 347, 360.

(rr) Contention that transportation service was a switching movement and that increases in switching charges were not contemplated by General Order No. 28 of the Director General. HELD, whether or not charges assessed were authorized by that order, the fact is that they were published and were the applicable charges, and it is immaterial, so far as the issue of their justness and reasonableness is concerned, whether the movement be designated a switching or line-haul service. Minnesota Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C. 571, 573.

(ss) In determining what are reasonable maximum rates, the issue is whether the rates prescribed are just, reasonable, nonprejudicial and nonpreferential. Farley & Loetscher Mfg. Co. v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 704, 705.

(tt) Following Schlicher case, 62 I. C. C. 181, contention that a general allegation of undue prejudice does not properly raise an issue of undue prejudice between particular points, sustained. Green Felt Shoe Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 363, 365.

(uu) Evidence was admitted at hearing as to various commodities not specifically mentioned in complaints, over objection of defendant that the commission's Rules of Practice require commodities to be specifically named in complaints seeking reparation. HELD, in view of the fact that complaint named certain commodities and "various other commodities," stating that detailed information would be furnished by complainants; that reparation is sought on basis of a rate which applied irrespective of contents of cars; and that informal correspondence preceded one of complaints; defendant was sufficiently advised of the issues raised. New Orleans Board of Commissioners v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 664, 666.

(uua) On complaint attacking reasonableness of rates for short-haul movements, conflict presented by record as to whether they were switching or line-haul movements. HELD: Question for determination is not description of service but reasonableness of charge for service. Midvale Steel & Ordinance Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 78 I. C. C. 721, 723.

(uub) Where complaint places in issue alleged undue prejudice against interstate commerce in favor of intrastate commerce, reasonableness of interstate rates must necessarily be determined before determination of issue of preference and prejudice can be made notwithstanding the complaint may contain no specific allegation with regard to reasonableness of interstate rates. Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 81 I. C. C., 1, 3.

(vv) The Commission has repeatedly held that allegations in complaints filed with it need not be technically pleaded, and the courts have sustained this position. If a complaint is filed within the statutory period and contains the essential elements of a complaint, that is sufficient. E. A. Tovrea v. Director General, 81 I. C. C. 583.

(ww) The commission has repeatedly said that complaints filed with it need not be technically pleaded, and the courts have sustained this position. Williams v. U. S., 168 U. S. 382, at 389. Therefore, if complaint is filed within statutory period and contains essential elements of a complaint, that is sufficient. Wasatch Coal Co., 68 I. C. C. 118. Tovrea & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 81 I. C. C., 583, 584.

§3. Notice of Complaint.

See Notice.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Where a complaint was filed against the company owning a certain railroad, stating that the road had previously been in the hands of a receiver but was then in possession of the company, and that the former receiver was then president of such company, and such complaint was served on the receiver as president, and the company answered, and on the case coming on for hearing it appeared that the receivership was still in existence and that the receiver was not president of the company, leave was given to amend the complaint so as to show the existence of the receivership. Reynolds v. Western N. Y. & Pa. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 685.

(b) The Commission having entered upon inquiry and investigation as to the reasonableness of transportation rates on food products, and given notice of the time and place of taking testimony, and afforded opportunity for calling and cross-examination of witnesses, HELD, that such proceeding was a substantial compliance with the statute. Re Rates & Charges on Food Products (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 151.

(c) A railroad company succeeding another within a few days after the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission forbidding unlawful charges by the latter and its receiver, and receiving a copy of the opinion and order of the Commission, is bound by such order. Behlmer v. Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. App. XXXIV.

(d) While the service of a complaint upon a controlling company may not be legal service upon a subsidiary company, it does in fact, for all practical purposes, inform the other company of the proceedings. Mayor and City Council of Wichita v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 534.

(e) The St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Company would have been a proper but it is not a necessary party in this case, and while service of complaint upon the Missouri Pacific, the controlling company, may not be legal service upon the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern, a subsidiary company, it does, in fact, for all practical purposes, notify the latter company of this proceeding. Mayor, etc. of Wichita v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., et al., 9 I. C. R. 534.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(f) Proceedings before Commission given wide publicity, and any interested carriers are given opportunity to defend the rate or provision in a classification, either by intervention or by request of original defendant that such carriers may be made defendants. Bennett v. M. St. P. & S. Ste. M. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 301, 303.

(g) The decision in the present case was based on a decision as to hard wood lumber rates made in a former case. Some of the defendants in the present case were not defendants in the former case, but were duly notified of the hearing in that case, and full opportunity was given them to make a showing why reparation should not be awarded against them, but none of them appeared. HELD, they had had their day and could not be heard to say that reparation based on the decision of the former case could not be awarded against them in the present case. Kindlon v. S. P. Co., 17 I. C. C. 251, 255.

(h) Full publicity attends every step of all proceedings before the Commission and it must be assumed that parties interested will take notice of what is going on. Lum v. G. N. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 558, 561.

(i) Section 13 requires that any carrier complained of shall be supplied by the Commission with a copy of the charges and be given an opportunity to answer. Fels & Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 483, 486.

(j) Section 13 of the Act requiring the Commission, when a complaint stating the facts is filed, to forward the same "to such common carrier, who shall be called upon to satisfy the complaint or to answer the same in writing within a reasonable time to be specified by the Commission," requires that notice should be given to the party immediately interested and not to those remotely concerned. L. & N. R. R. Co. v. I. C. C., 184 Fed. 118, 127.

§4. Amendment.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Complaint against railroad company stating that it had been previously in the hands of a receiver who was now president, was allowed to be amended so as to show existence of receivership which it appeared on hearing was still in existence. Reynolds v. Western New York & P. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 685.

(b) Amendments to a complaint, seeking to introduce new grievances and charges not allowed. Riddle, Dean & Co. v. Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co., I I. C. R. 701.

(c) Practice of the Commission in allowing amendments is to be limited under rules of law; amendments to complaint, introducing new charges, not allowed. Riddle v. Baltimore & O. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 701.

(d) Although the practice of the Commission in allowing amendments to complaints and answers is liberal, it is still to be limited under the rules of law. Amendments to a complaint, seeking to introduce new grievances and charges not allowed. Riddle Dean & Co. v. B. & O. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 701, 702.

(e) Pleadings may be amended in discretion of Commission. Rule 10, Appendix I, 1 I. C. R. 842.

(f) Amendments of pleadings are in discretion of Commission. Rule 10, Appendix I, 1 I. C. R. 842.

(g) Amendment is not necessary to bring in matters that would have been the subject of proof under the complaint as originally filed. Delaware State Grange v. N. Y. P. & N. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 187, 188.

(h) The Commission is liberal in allowing amendments to complaints, but will not allow one that would be in effect making a new case. Delaware State Grange v. N. Y. P. & N. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 187, 188.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(ha) If a question of discrimination in rates is not specifically alleged in the complaint, but is actually tried upon the hearing, the Commission may allow an amendment upon such terms as would properly protect the defendants, but cannot decide that question when raised for the first time in the briefs. The remedy of complainants is to file a separate complaint to that specific end. United States Leather Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 323, 324.

(i) When the two-year period has elapsed the jurisdiction of the Commission cannot be restored by amendment. Michigan Hardwood Mfrs. Assn. v. Transcontinental Freight Bureau, 27 I. C. C. 32, 37.

(j) Amendment of complaint may be permitted at hearing. Town of Pelham v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 28 I. C. C. 433, 437; Bryant Co. v. Ft. W. & D. C. Ry. Co., 28 I C. C. 594.

(k) Complainant at the hearing asked leave to amend its complaint to include a prayer for reparation on additional shipments. HELD, claim, at the time amendment presented, found barred by the statute of limitations and can not be considered. Lackawana Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 465, 468.

(l) Complainant was not real party in interest but overcharges were paid and borne by an allied corporation. Complainant asked leave to amend so as to include such corporation as party complainant. Objection by defendant that cause of action of real party in interest was barred by the statute of limitations. HELD, not sustained, since amendment filed within statutory period as provided under amendment of February 24, 1922, to section 206 of the Transportation Act, 1920. Amendment permitted. Terre Haute, Indianapolis & E. T. Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 658, 662.

(m) Request for leave to amend complaint, to seek reparation to basis of declared values during period when there were no "declared-value" or released rates in effect between points involved, denied. Question of what value might have been declared if such rates had been in effect with permission or authority of commission under section 20 of the act, would be hypothetical. Arlington Silver Mining Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 753, 755.

(ma) Amendment to complaint, introducing new basis to which reparation is sought, allowed, over the objection by defendant that claim for greater amount of money than claim originally enlarges issues raised by original complaint. In 15 I. C. C. 595, at 598 it was said, "The commission is an administrative body created to effect substantial justice in matters under its control and is not bound or limited by strict rules of pleading," and "in our view actual damage sustained is a matter for determination by commission from facts before it." Taylor Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 81 I. C. C. 663, 665.

(mb) Permission to amend complaint to substitute Director General James C. Davis, as Agent, for John Barton Payne, against whom complaint was filed, granted over objection by defendant that substitution was not within statutory period. Answer to complaint was filed by Director General Davis, admitting himself to be agent under transportation act and as such exercising powers vested in him and his predessor, John Barton Payne. There was duly filed in record herein copy of commissioner's order substituting James C. Davis, as Agent, by his consent and at this request, for John Barton Payne in all procedings pending at termination of Federal control or which might thereafter be filed with commission as provided in section 206 of transportation act, 1920. Taylor Co. v. Director General, 81 I. C. C., 663, 665.

(n) Where a complaint to the Interstate Commerce Commission was filed January 12, 1910, and dealt only with transactions prior to that date, the Commission had power to permit an amendment of the complaint so as to incorporate transactions occurring to the date of the hearing and to make findings and orders, including such transactions as fully as if a new complaint had been filed to cover the same. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. American Hay Co., 219 Fed. 539, 540.

(a) Final hearing shall be had forthwith without dilatory motions, etc. Associated Wholesale Grocers v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 321.

(b) Investigation will be made by Commission at time and place designated where testimony will be received. Rule 3. Appendix I, 1 I. C. R. 841.

(c) Upon the question of the reasonableness of the uniform milk rate complained against, the petition is retained by the Commission to enable the complainants to produce evidence of additional facts, if they so desire.. Howell v. New York, Lake Erie & Western R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 162.

(d) On failure of the petitioner to appear at the hearing, though duly notified thereof or to offer proof in support of the information and belief upon which his allegations were made, the complaint must be dismissed. Rice v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. (Com.), 4 I. C. R. 321.

(e) While the Commission will not, of its own motion, proceed in a branch of the case not litigated at the hearing, it will grant leave to the parties to do so if they so desire. Business Men's League of St. Louis v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 318.

(f) Complainant was granted leave to apply within a limited time for a further hearing, where its proof failed to indicate with any degree of certainty the damage caused by the wrongful discrimination, and the amount which it was entitled to recover by way of reparation. Richmond Elevator Co. v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 629.

(g) Evidence relating to damages found unsatisfactory and inconclusive, and complainants allowed until May 20, 1905, to apply for further hearing in respect thereto. Gallogy & Firestone v. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 1.

(h) Complainants allowed to apply for further hearing, where the evidence relating to damages was found to be unsatisfactory and inconclusive. Gallagly v. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 1.

(i) This case was decided in favor of complainant August 16, 1905. Subsequently complainant's motion for additional and more specific findings was granted, and the case again taken under advisement. The Act to Regulate Commerce was amended June 29, 1906, and thereafter complainant filed its petition praying in substance that the Commission proceed in the case with a view to making an order therein under the new fifteenth section in said act. The new section 15 confers upon the Commission power to enforce what has always been required in the statute, namely, just and reasonable rates, by the application of a new remedy, and, as applied to cases like this, in that way alone has the jurisdiction of the Commission been enlarged. The new section provides as conditions that there shall be formal complaint and full hearing. Both of these prerequisites have been practically complied with in this proceeding, but both complainant and defendants should have leave to submit whatever additional testimony they desire, and thereupon it is not only the right, but the imperative duty of this Commission, to make an order for or against the defendants under the new fifteenth section. To hold otherwise, this case and many others in which large sums of money and much time have been expended must fail, since the old section is superseded by the new, and the amending act contains no provision continuing the old section in force as to cases previously brought before the Commission; the law should not be so interpreted in the absence of explicit provision to that effect. Case set down for further hearing, re-examination of the whole record by the Commission, and procedure under the new fifteenth section. Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. M. K. & T. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 1.

(jk) When an order has been made, the case before the Commission should be treated as closed, and ought not to be reopened except upon a showing that some wrong or injustice has been or will be effected. Cattle Raisers' Asso. of Tex. v. C. B. & Q. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 6.

(l) Parties must appear on day of hearing. Producers' Pipe Line Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 186.

(m) In formal proceedings before the Commission, complaints must be prosecuted with reasonable diligence, and the Commission particularly insists that when a case has been formally assigned for hearing on a day certain, the parties shall appear and present such evidence as they may wish to offer in support of their contentions, or, in advance of the date set, request postponement on stated grounds, showing good and sufficient cause for delay. Producers' Pipe Line Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 186, 187.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(n) Where a case is set for hearing and the parties notified by mail and telegraph, and complainant fails to appear by reason of his absence in another state and failure to receive notice until a few days before the date set, his complaint will not be dismissed for want of prosecution and opportunity will be given him to present, in the form of a written communication, evidence bearing upon the unreasonableness of the rate in question. William Patten v. Wisconsin entral Ry. Co., 14 I. C. C. 189.

(o) While the Act does not presume to cast the burden of proof upon the complainant to establish the unreasonableness of a rate complained of, as would be the case in a court of law, nevertheless a complainant is not relieved of all responsibility as to his case upon the mere filing of a complaint, and where after due notification he appears neither in person nor by counsel, at the hearing and his application is primarily one for reparation, his complaint must be dismissed. Taylor v. M. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 165.

(p) Carriers notified of hearing and failing to appear have had their day in court and cannot now be heard to say that no order can be made against them to share in the reparation awarded. Kindelon v. S. P. Co., 17 I. C. C. 251, 255.

(q) The Commission cannot be expected to supervise the conduct of cases before it to the extent of reminding the parties of the necessity of following up their complaint, and may fairly dismiss a complaint for lack of diligent prosecution. Ocheltree Grain Co. v. T. & P. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 412, 413.

(r) The Commission is not vested with authority to find any rate unreasonable except after full hearing. Douglas & Co. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 541, 543.

(s) As the complainants allege specifically a violation of sections 1 and 2 of the Act to Regulate Commerce and section 10 of the federal control act, and no evidence whatsoever has been submitted tending to show a violation of either of these acts, and the propriety of the allowances as tested by section 15 of the Act to Regulate Commerce is not before the Commission, the complaint should be dismissed. Richardson Co. v. Director General, 56 I. C. C. 731, 733.

§6. Briefs.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Cases before the Commission are not like private lawsuits; parties do not stand like litigants before courts, and the Commission cannot upon the agreement of parties grant applications for continuances and extensions of time to accommodate parties and their counsel. Ullman v. Adams Express Co., 14 I. C. C. 585, 586.

(b) Statement contained in a brief of alleged facts of which there is no proof, and which are entirely outside the record cannot be accepted as contradicting testimony furnished by a party at the hearing. Break-Bulk Rates on Grain, 30 I. C. C. 357, 362.

§7. Oral Argument.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Although it is probable the Commission may, in its discretion, require the submission of a case upon the testimony taken by a single Commissioner, or an examiner, and upon written briefs, the application of a party to be heard orally will not be refused except under peculiar and unusual circumstances, but such application for oral argument must be made when the testimony is concluded and not after the expiration of the time for filing briefs. Ullman v. Adams Express Co., 14 I. C. C. 585.

(b) Under ordinary circumstances oral argument will be permitted in proceedings before the Commission in which an order reducing a rate or changing a regulation or practice is prayed for, but requests for such argument should be made not later than at the close of the taking of the testimony. Ullman v. Adams Express Co., 14 I. C. C. 585, 586.

§8. Rehearing.

(a) Rule stated in reference to applications for rehearing; The Commission will promptly and carefully examine an application for a rehearing with a view to the immediate correction of any error of law or fact found to exist, but will not direct a rehearing involving the expense to parties of appearing before the Commission for a reargument, unless satisfied that such reargument might have the effect of changing the result of what the Commission has already done. The statute is construed as dealing with the substance of things, and as contemplating as far as this is possible, methods of procedure that are speedy and which come at once to the very right of questions arising in the transportation of persons and freight. Riddle, Dean & Co. v. Pitts. & Lake Erie R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 773.

(aa) Rule stated in reference to applications for rehearings: The Commission will promptly and carefully examine an application for a rehearing with a view to the immediate correction of any error of law or fact found to exist, but will not direct a rehearing involving the expense to parties of appearing before the Commission for a reargument, unless satisfied that such reargument might have the effect of changing the result of what the Commission has already done. The statute is construed as dealing with the substance of things, and as contemplating, so far as this is possible, methods of procedure that are speedy and which come at once to the very right of questions arising in the transportation of persons and freight. Where relation of any carrier to the matter complained of is such that it is in whole or in part materially responsible for alleged grievance and has direct interest in any investigation of the subject matter involved, and the merits of the controversy can not be determined in the absence of such carrier as a party, then that carrier should be made a party to the proceeding and if not a party, no relief may be had against it. The report and findings of the Commission upon the evidence relate only to the ascertainment and presentation of all the material facts necessary to fairly and justly present the merits of the controversy, and the Commission does not report evidence which is only cumulative, or which is immaterial or irrelevant,, or mere details of evidence already embraced in substantial facts stated, upon which the findings and conclusions of the Comission are made. Riddle, Dean

(b) After a complaint upon elaborate pleadings and proofs has been heard and determined by the Commission, an application for a rehearing, made only by those who were not parties to the proceeding, will not be granted, although, if upon a new or different complaint, it should appear that any conclusion in the case so decided has been erroneous, the Commission would feel it to be a duty to correct such conclusion. Re Petition of Toledo Produce Exchange (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 412.

(c) After a complaint upon elaborate pleadings and proofs has been heard and determined by the Commission, and no party to the proceeding has applied for a rehearing, an application for a rehearing made by others who were not parties to the proceeding will not be granted. Re Produce Exchange of Toledo, 2 I. C. C. 412.

(d) After a case has been decided by the Interstate Commerce Commission, a petition to open it for further testimony and a rehearing should be verified, and should indicate the nature of the new testimony and its purpose. Rice v. Western New York & P. R. Co., (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 496.

(da) When a question of general public interest is involved, the Commission, in its own discretion, and in furtherance of justice, may open a case to give parties the benefit of a more extended investigation of the same subject matter in other pending cases. Rice, Robinson & Witherop v. Western N. Y. & Pa. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 496.

(e) Where an application for rehearing is insufficient in these respects, and only asks for a rediscussion of the facts and law already considered, with no offer of new evidence that can change the result, the application will be denied. Myers v. Pennsylvania Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 544.

(f) A petition to reopen a case that has been decided, and for a rehearing, should show prima facie that some material testimony has been overlooked or misapprehended, or some error in the findings of fact or conclusions of law. When the application is insufficient in these respects, and only asks for a rediscussion of the facts and law already considered, with no offer of new evidence that change the result, the application will be denied. Myers v. Pennsylvania Co., 2 I. C. C. 544, 545.

(fa) Such a course is particularly advisable and proper when it is apparent that other parties than the one complained of are interested in the question and have not had the opportunity to be heard upon it. Pennsylvania Co. v. Louisville, New Albany & Chicago R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 603.

(g) If upon a rehearing of a case before the Interstate Commerce Commission, additional evidence warrants a finding contrary to what appeared and was found in the original hearing, the former order may be vacated. Bates v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 296.

(h) A petition or motion for rehearing cannot be granted on mere allegation of error in the findings of fact, and such a petition or motion must be supported by proof showing prima facie at least that there was such error. The affidavits in this case fail to make such showing. Proctor & Gamble v. Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 374, 375.

(i) Error. None claimed in facts or order. Rehearing denied. Cattle Raisers' Ass'n of Texas v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 6.

(j) In this case final order was entered by the Commission November 16, 1905, but has not been obeyed by defendant carriers. Complainants' petition to set aside such order and reopen the case for further proceedings with a view to decision and order under the act of June 29, 1906, denied. Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. C. B. & Q. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 6.

(k) A rehearing is discretionary with the Commission. City Council of Atchison v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 254.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(l) When full opportunity for hearing has been accorded, carriers must show as ground for a rehearing that the evidence which they now offer either could not or ought not to have been introduced upon the first hearing, and also that this evidence, if introduced, would probably lead to a reversal of the previous conclusion. It is no hardship to require carriers in the trial of their cases before the Commission to observe to a very moderate degree the same rules which would obtain in a trial at law. Whenever the Commission is convinced that its order works substantial injustice it will unhesitatingly set aside that order, but cannot continually retry cases upon the mere statement of the carrier that it desires to introduce some further testimony and believes that the decision of the Commission is wrong. Whiteland Canning Co. v. P. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 23 I. C. C. 92, 94.

(m) A rehearing is not denied merely because of the form of the petition. Arkansas Fertilizer Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 266, 267.

(n) Where a complaint was not in the form of a motion for rehearing, but amounted to that in all respects, since the Commission observes the substance and not the form of pleadings, it was considered as a motion for rehearing. Arkansas Fertilizer Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 266, 267.

(o) Failure of the Commission in taking notice of the results reached by it in other cases to enumerate such cases in the record, so that matters of law may be saved, is cured by the enumeration of such cases on rehearing. Wickwire Steel Co. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. Co., 30 I. C. C. 415, 425.

(p) From section 16a it is plain that the Commission may grant a rehearing in a case in which no order is made, there being only a "decision." In such a case no time limit upon a rehearing could be contemplated. No provision is made for any different treatment of a rehearing on a "decision" and a rehearing of a case where an order is made, and no distinction can be drawn under this language. This being true it can not be said that this section contemplated necessarily that the rehearing and reconsideration of a case in which an order is made must be completed before that order expires. Again, under this section, an application for a rehearing may be made "at any time." A case in which an order is made might therefore be reopened, and reheard after the effective period of the order had expired. Incidently, the Commission, may, on rehearing, make just such an order giving effect to its views on rehearing as it may make on an original hearing. This must be held to confer upon the Commission the power to fix the period during which its supplemental order shall be effective as well as conferring the power to draft supplemental orders in other particulars. Stonega Coke & Coal Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 39 I. C. C. 523, 535.

(q) Inasmuch as no order issued, contention that petition for rehearing filed too late, under rule XV of Rules of Practice, is not well founded. Lamb-Fish Lumber Co. v. Y. & M. V. R. R., 51 I. C. C. 6, 7.

(r) On rehearing, original report 57 I. C. C. 170, reversed, and rates on fresh meats and packing-house products, in mixed carloads, from Waterloo, Iowa, to Galesburg and Macomb, Ill., found unreasonable as compared with rates to Chicago, Ill., between numerous points in western trunk-line territory, to Galesburg and Macomb from many points at which packing-houses are located, from some of which traffic moves through Waterloo, and as compared with commodity rates established after shipments moved. Reparation awarded. Rath Packing Co. v. Director General, as Agent,, 73 I. C. C. 203.

(s) Since the application to the Interstate Commerce Commission for a rehearing does not operate to stay the execution of the Commission's order, unless the Commission, by special order, grants a stay, carriers objecting to an order for division of joint rates are entitled to regard it as final, for the purpose of bringing suit to enjoin its enforcement, without first making application for a rehearing. Abilene & S. Ry. Co. v. United States, 288 Fed. 102.

Newport News & M. V. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 626.

(nc) The Act to Regulate Commerce makes it the duty of this Commission "to investigate any complaint forwarded by the Railroad Commissioner or Railroad Commission of any State or Territory at the request of such Commissioner or Commission." The complaint in this case was brought by and in the name of the Railroad Commission of Florida, but the real parties in interest are large classes of growers, buyers and shippers in the State of Florida. Since the complaint was filed the nominal complainant has ceased to exist. HELD, that the repeal of the law creating the Railroad Commission of Florida could not operate as a withdrawal or dismissal of the complaint, that Commission having been only an instrument for the transmission of the complaint to this Commission, and having fully performed that function before an end was put to its existence. To abate or dismiss the proceeding on that ground would be to sacrifice substance to form in contravention of the spirit and letter of the Act to Regulate Commerce and of the rules of courts of law in analogous cases. HELD FURTHER, that under the provision of the Act to Regulate Commerce authorizing this Commission to "institute any inquiry on its own motion in the same manner and to the same effect as though complaint had been made," neither complaint nor complainant is necessary to confer jurisdiction. Railroad Commission of Fla. v. Savannah F. & W. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 688.

(nd) The statute provides that "no complaint shall at any time be dismissed because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant," and defendants are therefore not entitled to a dismissal of the complaint on the ground that the petitioners, being merely commission merchants, can sustain no direct or material damage under the rates in question. James & Abbott v. Canadian Pacific R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 274.

(o) Defendants are not entitled to a dismissal of a complaint of unlawful rates, on the ground that the petitioners, being merely commission merchants, can sustain no direct or material damage under the rates in question. James v. Canadian P. R. Co., (Com.), 4 I. C. R. 274.

(oa) Some of the grievances alleged in the complaint were subsequently removed by defendants as a result of the Commission's order in other cases. The other charges were denied by the defendants in their verified answers, and that denial was fortified by the positive testimony of witnesses. The petitioner did not appear at the hearing, though duly notified thereof, and offered no proof in support of the information and belief upon which his allegations were made. HELD, that as to these charges the complaint must be dismissed. George Rice v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 321.

(ob) That persons complaining before the Interstate Commerce Commission of the violation by a certain railroad company of the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act had no real grievance, but were instigated to their prosecution by a rival of the company, will not cause the dismissal of a suit brought by the Commission to enforce an order which it has made in the cause. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 722.

(oc) After complaint and investigation, but before decision by the Commission, the carriers complained against the reduced rate to the extent that it was alleged to be excessive. HELD, that any order in respect of the rate of charges is unnecessary now that they are no longer excessive. Michigan Box Co. v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., et al., 6 I. C. C. 335.

(p) The Interstate Commerce Commission will dismiss without order a complaint of discriminating rates where, since the hearing, the control of the road has been changed and the cause of complaint removed so that the statute is substantially complied with. Boyer v. Chesapeake, O. & S. W. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 55.

(q) A defendant carrier is not entitled to have a complaint dismissed as to it because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant, and it is the duty of the Commission under direction of the act, to execute and enforce the provision of the statute. Milk Producers' Protective Asso. v. D. L. & W. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 92, 163.

(r) The Interstate Commerce Commission dismissed an investigation before it as to freight rates charged during a rate war, where such war had been discontinued and the prior rates restored. Re Tariffs & Classifications of Pa. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 177.

(s) A combination rate of 72 cents on potatoes in carloads from Cadillac, Michigan, via Grand Rapids, Michigan, to Texas common points, made effective since this proceeding was instituted, was a reduction of 5 cents in the rate complained of, and was a substantial satisfaction of the complaint; but it appeared that local rates in force to and from the Mississippi River were charged on shipments from Cadillac, while defendants, operating west of that river, accepted less than their said charges west of the river on like shipments which originated at Grand Rapids, Michigan, and other points in so-called Detroit-Cleveland territory. HELD, That without approving defendant's system of shrinking rates, the complaint should be dismissed without prejudice. Freeman v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 202.

(t) Complaint against discrimination in rates will be dismissed without prejudice by the Interstate Commerce Commission, notwithstanding substantial satisfaction of the complaint, where it appears that less charges are accepted by defendants west of the Mississippi River on shipments originating at other points than from the complaining point. Freeman v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 202.

(u) On complaint of violation by defendants of sections 3 and 4 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, through charges on coal in carloads from Cumberland, Md., which were greater for the shorter distance to North Garden, Va., than for the longer distance over the same line to Lynchburg, Va., it appeared at the hearing that defendants had withdrawn and discontinued the lower rate to the longer-distance point. HELD, That such action by defendants obviated the infractions of the law so complained of. Montell v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 412.

(v) Discontinuance by carriers of a lower rate to a longer distance point obviates the previous infraction of the law. Montell v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 412.

(w) Complainant alleged defendant had unjustly discriminated in rates on sand from Dock Siding, McCool and Willow Creek, Ind., to Chicago, Ill., but the evidence was not sufficient to show breach of legal duty on the part of defendant, complaint dismissed. Castle v. B. & O. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 333.

(x) Complainant's claim for reparation having been settled by defendants, the case was, in view of the limited testimony presented by the complainant, dismissed without prejudice. Sayles v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 492.

(y) The defendants having removed the cause of complaint by establishing rates on sugar from Sugar City and Rocky Ford, Colo., to Wichita and Hutchinson, Kans., no higher than those in effect from the same points to Kansas City, Mo., no order is necessary in this proceeding. Wichita v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., et al, 9 I. C. C. 507.

(z) No order was deemed necessary, and none was made, where the defendants had removed the cause of complaint, by establishing rates on sugar from Sugar City and Rocky Ford, Colorado, to Wichita and Hutchinson, Kansas, no higher than those in effect from the same points to Kansas City, Mo. Mayor and City Council of Wichita v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 507.

(aa) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity rates on sugar from Sugar City and Rocky Ford, Colo., to Wichita and Hutchinson, Kans., higher than those in effect to Kansas City, Mo. HELD, inasmuch as the defendants removed the cause of complaint by establishing rates to Wichita and Hutchinson no higher than those to Kansas City, Mo., no order is necessary, complaint dismissed. Mayor and City Council of Wichita, Kansas v. A., T. & S. F. Ry., 9 I. C. C. 507.

(aab) Where a proceeding as to the legality of a transaction was merely one of inquiry, the Commission contented itself with expressing an opinion, and did not make an order in the premises. Re Transportation of Salt from Hutchinson, 10 I. C. C. 1.

(bb) The defendant, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co., removed the discrimination complained of as to its lines, and it appeared that the defendant, the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Co., does not participate in the rates in question. Complaint as to those lines dismissed. Chicago Live Stock Exchange v. C. G. W. R. Co., et al, 10 I. C. C. 428.

(cc) Neither the International & Great Northern Railroad Company nor the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company was a party to the transportation here in question, and as to those carriers the complaint is dismissed. H. B. Pitts & Son v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., et al, 10 I. C. C. 691.

(dd) This case, involving the reasonableness and justice of freight rates from Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville, and other Ohio River and Mississippi River points, is similar to, and was held to await the final disposition of, the case of Wilmington Tariff Asso. v. Cincinnati, P. & V. R. Co., et al, 9 I. C. C. Rep. 118, in which proceeding the Commission entered an order requiring correction of rates from the same points to Wilmington, N. C., but such order the United States Circuit Court declined to enforce. During the present year the rates from Chicago to Ohio River crossings have been materially reduced on shipments destined to southeastern points, resulting in reduction of through rates from Chicago to Charleston and Wilmington. HELD, That in view of the decision of the Circuit court in the Wilmington case, no enforceable order of relief can be predicated upon the facts shown in this case, and the complaint must be dismissed. Bureau of Freight & Transportation v. Norfolk & W. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 235.

(ee) Case retained with the expectation that the defendants will make a substantial readjustment of the rates in accordance with the views expressed in the opinion. A. J. Phillips Co. v. Grand Trunk W. R. Co., et al, 11 I. C. C. 659.

(ff) Complainant attacked as unjust and unreasonable rates on commodity basis charged on coal from St. Louis, Mo., to Oklahoma City, Okla., as compared with rates from mines in West Virginia. The case is held to present no question of practical importance in view of the proximity of coal fields in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Kansas, and also the much shorter distance from Colorado and Missouri, but in case the unreasonableness of the rate should become of actual consequence hereafter, the complaint is dismissed without prejudice. J. B. Harrell v. M. K. & T. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 28.

(gg) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unduly discriminatory rates charged on oil originating at Pittsburgh, Pa., from East St. Louis, Ill., and St. Louis, Mo., to Joplin, Mo., as compared with rate from St. Louis to Joplin on oil originating at St. Louis.

Rate charged from St. Louis to Joplin locally was prescribed by the Missouri Commission and was then in litigation in the courts. In view of this situation complainant was willing to withdraw the complaint. HELD, complaint dismissed. E. M. Wilhoit v. M. P. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 138.

(gga) Complaint alleged that rate on shipments of oil originating at Pittsburgh, Pa., from East St. Louis, Ill., and St. Louis, Mo., to Joplin, Mo., is excessive and discriminatory as compared with rate from St. Louis to Joplin on shipments of oil originating at St. Louis. Upon request of complainant, on defendant suggesting probability of rate adjustment, complaint dismissed. Wilhoit v. Missouri Pacific Ry. Co., et al, 12 I. C. C. 138.

(hh) Complainant having abandoned the case, complaint dismissed for want of prosecution. Producers' Pipe Line Co. v. St. L. Iron Mt. & So. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 186.

(ii) Complainant attacked commodity rates on oil from Nowata, Ind. T., to points in Texas as unjust and unreasonable. Case was set for hearing but complainant failed to appear, stating that his complaint was being adjusted direct with defendant. HELD, complaint dismissed. Producers' Pipe Line Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 187.

(iia) The facts, circumstances, and conditions bearing upon the question of the reasonableness of the rates in issue have not been sufficiently developed to afford a proper basis for satisfactorily determining that question. Complaint dismissed. R. R. Shiel & Co. v. Ill. Cent. R. R. Co., et al, 12 I. C. C. 211.

(jj) At hearing of complaint it was disclosed that substantial reductions in rates on all classes and commodities from Chicago and Omaha to Lead (about which complaint was made) were made in tariffs in press. It also appeared that the building of new lines had injected into the situation a competition which would probably affect further reduction. Tariffs filed subsequent to the hearing and prior to rendering decision contained the reductions referred to, and in view of them and the probable effect of the new competition, it is held that under the circumstances and upon the record in this case no order changing the rates will now be made. Complaint dismissed. Lead Commercial Club v. C. & N. W. and C. B. & Q. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 460.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(kk) No complaint shall at any time be dismissed because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant. Burford v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 31 I. C. C. 182, 185.

(llmm) The Act provides that "no complaint shall at any time be dismissed because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant." Car Float Service, New York Harbor, 49 I. C. C. 259, 261.

(nn) A complainant before the Commission can not, as a matter of right, withdraw his complaint and the undesirable consequences of permitting a complainant to terminate a proceeding whenever in his opinion his interests would thus be served than by having it proceed to a conclusion, are obvious and require no exposition. Royster Guano Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 34, 40.

§10 (2) Adjustment since filing.

(a) Complaint for over charge withdrawn where complainants receipt in full settlement for over charges was shown by respondent. Stahl v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co., 1 I. C. R. 314.

(b) Complainant attacked rates charged on freight from Chicago to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., as unreasonable. HELD, the Act contemplates that when a complaint is made against a carrier on the ground of exorbitant rates, the carrier may change its rates before a hearing is had, so as to remedy the matter complained of, if it shall see proper so to do. Petition dismissed without prejudice, where it appeared from a reply filed by the complainant to defendants answer, that the rates originally complained of had been reduced, and no complaint was made against such reduced rates. Fulton v. C. St. P. M. & O. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 375.

(c) Petition charging exorbitant rates will be dismissed where rates are reduced before hearing. Fulton v. Chicago, etc. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 375.

(d) Petition dismissed without prejudice, where it appeared from a reply filed by the complainant to the defendant's answer, that the rates originally complained of had been reduced, and no complaint was made against such reduced rates. Fulton v. Chicago, St. Paul M. & O. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 375.

(e) Where after the examination of witnesses and documentary evidence upon a petition to require the respondent to so adjust its tariffs on freights from the City of Chicago, that its rate to the City of Mankato, Minnesota, and to all other points west of Waterville and between Waterville and Mankato, on its line of railroad on all classes of freight, shall hereafter be no higher than the rates established by said Company from the City of Chicago to said Village of Waterville and points east on said line of railroad between Waterville and the City of Red Wing and points north on said main line, between Waterville and the City of Minneapolis, and after submissions upon the petition, answer and evidence and full consideration of the matters involved, but before the announcement of the report and opinion, the respondent railroad company conceded the relief sought and made, and published a tariff of rates in accordance with the prayer of the petition, the Commission only deemed it necessary to make the report to complete the record of the case. Manufacturers & Jobbers' Union v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co., 1 I. C. R. 630.

(f) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates from Chicago to Mankato, Minn., as compared with class rates from Chicago to Waterville, Minn. HELD where after the examination of witnesses and documentary evidence upon a petition to require the respondent to so adjust its tariffs on freight from Chicago that its rate to Mankato, Minn., and to all other points west of Waterville and between Waterville and Mankato on its line of railroad on all classes of freight, shall hereafter be no higher than the rates established from Chicago to Waterville and points east between Waterville and Red Wing and points north on said main line between Waterville and Minneapolis, and respondent company conceded the relief sought and made, and published a tariff of rates in accordance with the prayer of the petition, the Commission only deemed it necessary to make the report to complete the record. Manufacturers & Jobbers' Union of Mankato v. M. & St. L. Ry., 1 I. C. C. 630.

(g) When, pending a proceeding begun to test the reasonableness of rates, the rates are reduced and made satisfactory to the complainants, the Commissions will not consider the question whether the rates before reduction were or were not excessive;—that question having by the reduction made become purely abstract and speculative. Bishop v. Duval, 2 I. C. R. 514.

(ga) Where a case involving the reasonableness of rates has been disposed of by the carrier assenting to the rates demanded no opinion will be expressed on the rates which have been abandoned, even though the parties request it. Such a course is particularly advisable and proper when it is apparent that other parties than the one complained of are interested in the question and have not had the opportunity to be heard upon it. Pennsylvania Co. v. L. N. A. & P. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 603, 604.

(gb) Where a tariff complained of was abandoned by the carriers for a long period of time before the complaint was made and shortly after the tariff was put in force, the Commission will not make an order requiring the carriers to cease and desist from enforcing such tariff, because such an order would be vain and useless. The amendment of March 2, 1889, expressly provides that it shall have no application to pending proceedings. Rawson v. N. N. & M. V. Co., 2 I. C. C. 626, 630.

(h) It has been the well known and established practice of this Commission in administering the provisions of the Act, that, in cases where a carrier has abandoned a practice deemed unlawful or questionable prior to the commencement of proceedings against it, or at any time even before the hearing of such proceedings when commenced, and is obeying the law as construed by the Commission, the Commission will make no order against it to cease a practice which it had already abandoned, because such order would be vain and useless, and the statute does not require it. New York Board of Trade & Transportation v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 417, 446.

(i) Where a carrier corrects the inequality of rates complained of and thus makes all the reparation asked in the complaint, or that the Commission could afford, no order is required, and none will be issued. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. L. M. O. & T. R. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 523, 526.

(j) The rates on melons complained of in this case having been materially reduced by the defendant carriers since the commencement of this proceeding and there being no satisfactory evidence that the rates so reduced are unreasonable or excessive, the complaint is dismissed. Laud v. South Carolina R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 205.

(k) No order in respect to excessive charges by railroad companies on certain products is necessary where, after the commencement of the action and before its decision, the rate is reduced to that asked by the complainant. Michigan Box Co. v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 335.

(l) Upon complaint forwarded by the Railroad Commission of Mississippi, and investigation thereon instituted by the Commission on its own motion, respondent materially reduced its rates of freight between Memphis, Tenn., and Coldwater, Miss., and other stations on its Memphis division, such rates having been the principal subject of testimony in the proceeding, but it also appearing that such rates should be further revised as to certain points and traffic specified,—HELD, upon such action of respondent, and the disposition thus manifested to remove just cause of complaint and make the further revision required, that no order be entered at this time, and that all the matters involved be held open for such further action or investigation, as upon the application or petition of any interested party, may appear necessary. Alleged Unlawful Transportation Charges By I. C. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 624.

(m) The defendant carriers charged 29 cents per 100 pounds on cotton-seed meal from Memphis to Philadelphia, and 34 cents from Dyersburg, a shorter-distance intermediate point on the same line. After hearing, the line or road of one of the companies complained against passed into the control of, and was being operated by, a company not a party to the proceeding. This company on being made a party answered that it had put in effect the same rate, 26 cents, from both Memphis and Dyersburg, which on further investigation was found to be the fact. HELD, the cause of complaint being removed, the statute substantially complied with, reparation was made. No order was necessary, and the case was dismissed. Boer & Co. v. Chesapeake, O. & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 55.

(n) The defendants having removed the cause of complaint by establishing rates on sugar from Sugar City and Rocky Ford, Colorado, to Wichita and Hutchinson, Kansas, no higher than those in effect from the same points to Kansas City, Missouri, no order was made in the proceeding. Mayor and City Council of Wichita v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 507.

(o) The respondents having removed the differential of 5 cents on corn meal, no order is considered necessary. Re Rates on Corn and Corn Products from Missouri River Points to Points in Louisiana, 11 I. C. C. 227.

(p) Complainant attacked commodity rates charged on scrap iron, carloads, from Cedar Rapids, Iowa to Chicago and East St. Louis, Ill., and St. Louis, Mo., as compared with rates to the same destinations from St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., as unreasonable, Cedar Rapids being intermediate via some lines. During the pendency of the proceedings rates from St. Paul, Minneapolis and Cedar Rapids were changed, with the result that the rates from those points to Chicago were made the same and rates to St. Louis were made 20c less from Cedar Rapids than from St. Paul. HELD, complaint dismissed on request of complainant. Ohsman & Effron v. C. R. I. & P. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 63.

(q) This case involves rates on scrap iron, carloads, from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to Chicago and East St. Louis, Ill., and St. Louis, Mo., as compared with rates to the same destinations from St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn. During the pendency of the proceeding, rates from St. Paul and Minneapolis and from Cedar Rapids were changed, with the result that the rates from those points to Chicago were made the same and the rates to St. Louis were made 20 cents less from Cedar Rapids than from St. Paul and Minneapolis, East St. Louis taking St. Louis rates. Upon complainants' request the complaint is dismissed without prejudice. Ohsman & Effron v. C., R. I. & P. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 64.

(r) Complainant attacked rates charged on all classes of merchandise to McRae and Helena, Ga., from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and points in adjacent territory, as unreasonable and as compared with rates to Cordele and Fitzgerald, Ga. HELD, complaint having been satisfied through the readjustment of tariffs, showing considerable reductions in the rates satisfactory to complaints. Complaint dismissed. McRae Grocery Company v. Southern Ry., 12 I. C. C. 84.

(s) This case having been settled through the readjustment of tariffs, showing considerable reductions in the rates complained of, and to the satisfaction of complainants, the complaint is dismissed. McRae Grocery Co. v. W. B. Folsom v. So. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 84.

(sa) Complainant alleged that defendants' rate on sugar in carloads from New Orleans, La., to McAlester, Ind. T., of 38 cents per 100 pounds, was unreasonable and unduly discriminatory because their rate on sugar from New Orleans to Muskogee, Ind. T., a nearer point over the same line, was only 35 cents. Defendants having reduced their rate to McAlester to 35 cents, the Muskogee rate, the complaint is dismissed. Hale-Halsell Co. v. Mo., Kans., & Tex. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 136.

(t) Complainant alleged that rates on petroleum and its products from certain points in Pennsylvania and Ohio to Pacific coast terminals are unreasonable and discriminatory, and that the charge of $105 each for the return of empty cylinder oil cars from Pacific coast terminals to Missouri River points should be abrogated. After answers were filed and case assigned for hearing defendants made considerable reduction in the rates and abrogated the empty-car charge. Upon request of complainant, complaint dismissed without prejudice. National Petroleum Association v. Penn. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 151.

(u) Complainant alleged that the through rate on petroleum and its products over defendants' lines from Oil City, Pa., to Freeport, Ill., via Chicago, was 25½ cents per 100 pounds, whereas the combination rate on Chicago was only 23 cents. Defendants in their answers signified willingness to reduce the rate to 23 cents and subsequently put this rate in effect. Upon request of complainant, after case had been assigned for hearing, complaint dismissed without prejudice. National Petroleum Association v. Penn. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 153.

(v) Complaint that rates on hogs and cattle from Bliss, Okla., to Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., were unreasonable, upon request of complainants and showing of satisfactory rate adjustment, dismissed. Miller Bros. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 157.

to Chicago. Upon complainant's motion complaint dismissed. Manufacturers' Club of Terre Haute v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 157.

(x) Complainant attacked as unreasonable commodity rates charged on hogs and cattle from Bliss, Okla., to Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo. Subsequently the carriers published rates which were satisfactory to complainant who requested that complaint be withdrawn. HELD, complaint dismissed. Miller Bros. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 158.

(y) Complaint alleged that rates on hogs and cattle from Bliss, Okla., to Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., were unreasonable. Upon request of complainants and showing of satisfactory rate adjustment, complaint dismissed. Miller Bros. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 158.

(z) Complaint alleged that the rate on refined oil from Erie, Kans., to Springfield, Mo., was unreasonable of itself and also as compared with the rate on such commodity from Erie to St. Louis, Mo., and from Neodesha, Kans., to Springfield; but after the hearing defendants made the rate from Erie to Springfield the same as the rate from Neodesha to Springfield and from Erie to St. Louis. The relief demanded by complainant having been conceded, the complaint is dismissed. E. M. Wilhoit v. Mo., Kans., & Tex. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 159.

HELD, complaint dismissed. E. M. Wilhoit v. M. K. & T. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 159.

(bb) Complaint alleged that defendant's carload rate on apples from Kansas City, Missouri, to El Paso, Texas, was unreasonable in that an arbitrary weight greater than the actual weight was imposed, but subsequently defendant amended its tariff so as to make it apply to only actual weights on such apples. Complaint dismissed. Payne v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co., 12 I. C. C. 190.

(cc) A carrier charged a rate of $1.05 per ton on coal in carloads from Mineral, Kans., to Freeman, Mo., while it had in force a rate of 80 cents per ton from Mineral to Harrisonville, Mo., a longer distance point by its line. At the hearing it was agreed that defendant should make the 80-cent rate effective to Freeman and that complainant should withdraw its claim for reparation. Order is entered accordingly. Geo. D. Hope Lumber Co. v. Mo., Kans., & Tex. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 191.

(dd) Complainant attacked commodity rates charged on crude petroleum and fuel oils of 39 and 49 cents from Indian Territory and Kansas points, to Amarillo, Tex., as unreasonable. Sioux City Commercial Club v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 253.

(eea) Complaint in this case brought in question the reasonableness of defendants' rates from Chicago to Sioux City, in themselves, and as compared with rates from Chicago to Sioux Falls; upon motion of complainant for dismissal of complaint, on the ground that defendants had given notice of compliance with prayer of complaint, so far as same refers to the relation of rates from Chicago to Sioux City and Sioux Falls, complaint dismissed. (ff) Complainant attacked class rates as unreasonable from Chicago, Ill., to Sioux City, Iowa, and as compared with rates to Sioux Falls, S. D. Complainant made motion for dismissal on the ground that defendants had given notice of compliance with prayer of complaint, so far as same refers to the relation of rates from Chicago to Sioux City and Sioux Falls. HELD, complaint dismissed. Sioux City Commercial Club v. C. M. & St. P. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 253.

(ffa) Complaint drew in question the reasonableness of rate on coal of $1.25 per ton from Centerville district, Iowa, to Albany, Mo., in itself and as compared with coal rate to St. Joseph, Mo. After case was submitted the rate to Albany was reduced to $1 per ton. As the record failed to show that the $1.25 rate was unreasonable in itself, or that the present rate of $1 is excessive, or that the facts and circumstances disclose unjust discrimination, the complaint is dismissed. Albany Produce Co. v. C. B. & Q. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 434.

(gg) Complainant attacked class rates from Chicago and Omaha to Lead, S. D., as unreasonable. At hearing it was disclosed that substantial reductions in rates on all classes and commodities from Chicago and Omaha to Lead were made in tariffs in press. It also appeared that the building of new lines had injected into the situation a competition which would probably affect further reduction. Tariffs filed subsequent to the hearing and prior to rendering the decision contained the reductions referred to, and in view of them and the probable effect of the new competition, it is held that no order changing the rates will now be made. HELD, complaint dismissed. Lead Commercial Club v. C. & N. W. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 460.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(hh) Where after a hearing a general outline of rates is agreed upon between complainant and defendant, the complaint will, at the request of the complainant, be dismissed without prejudice. Oklahoma v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 14 I. C. C. 147, 149.

(ii) The Commission dismisses a complaint where the carrier has voluntarily done all that the Commission would order it to do. Alan Wood Iron & Steel Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 27.

(jj) Where a complaint has been satisfied, an order requiring a continuance of present nondiscriminatory practices is not necessary. Humboldt S. S. Co. v. White Pass & Yukon Route, 25 I. C. C. 136, 141.

(kk) Where the conclusions of the Commission in a certain case have been complied with, no order is necessary. Sinclair & Co. (Ltd.) v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 48 I. C. C. 295, 296.

(ll) The Commission is not inclined to render judgment on matters voluntarily withdrawn from a proceeding by the complaining parties. Minneapolis Tariff Asso. v. C., B. & Q. R .R., 49 I. C. C. 308, 310.

(mm) Carriers having adjusted rates on pears from Delaware division of the P. R. R. to Hinton, W. Va., via Potomac Yard, Va., complaint will be dismissed. Hinton Fruit & Produce Co. v. C. & O. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. A-312.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) To extent petition of intervention goes beyond issues raised by original complaint it can not be considered Moore & Thompson Paper Co. v. B. & M. R. R., 34 I. C. C. 323.

(c) There is no provision in the Act for compelling any party to intervene in a proceeding before the Commission. R. R. Comm. of La. v. A. H. T. Ry. Co., 43 I. C. C. 45, 48.

(d) Original complaint brought to recover reparation for account of complainant only, and not as agent for vendors. Amending of complaint by permitting intervention of the latter who paid and bore the freight charges can have no effect as they were not joined as parties within the statutory period. Intervener's claim for reparation found barred. Oden & Elliott v. S. A. L. Ry., 57 I. C. C. 698, 699.

(e) Complaint filed by parent company in its own name. Subsidiary company which paid and bore freight charges as such out of funds furnished by the parent company filed informal complaint covering shipments within the period of limitation, and petition of intervention, which was equivalent to presenting the claim formally, within six months after notification that adjustment on the informal docket was declined. HELD, intervener found party damaged and entitled to reparation. Lackawana Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 465, 469.

(a) The Commission will not undertake to say in advance what rates railroad companies shall or shall not make for any class or organization of persons. Re Theatrical Rates 1 I. C. R. 18.

(b) The Commission has no power to construe, interpret or apply the Interstate Commerce Act in advance of an actual act or omission on the part of a common carrier in contravention of the provisions of the Act. Re Order of Ry. Conductors 1 I. C. R. 18.

(c) Application of the National Amusement Protective Association as to what rates will be applicable to their members. HELD, the Commission will not undertake to say in advance what rates railroad companies shall or shall not make for any class or organization of persons. Re Theatrical Rates, 1 I. C. C. 18.

(d) The Commission can not construe the Act before violation thereof charged. Re Order of Railway Conductors, 1 I. C. C. 18; Re Inmates of Nat. Homes, 1 I. C. C. 73, 75.

(e) The Commission cannot make an order or give an opinion in advance of an actual complaint and hearing. So HELD, in the case of an application on behalf of the inmates of the national homes for disabled volunteer soldiers and sailors, for a ruling as to whether the granting to them of half rate fares by railroads would be "unjust discrimination" within the meaning of section 2 of the Act. Re Inmates of National Homes 1 I. C. R. 75.

(f) The Commission does not give opinions on abstract questions. Pennsylvania Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 603.

(g) Complainant attacked the publication of an unreasonable rate for the transportation of iron ore from Grand Rapids, Minn., to Allouez Bay in the city of Superior, Wis. Complainant and his associates had spent about $50,000 in work preliminary to the opening of ore mines owned by them at Grand Rapids. The actual opening and operation of them would require an expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Defendants published a distance-tariff rate of 8.1c per 100 lbs., which complainant alleged depressed the value of his lands so that it was impossible for him and his associates to sell, lease or develop the same. Defendant moved to dismiss the complaint at the close of complainant's case, principally because it contended it could not be required to publish a rate until ore should actually be offered for shipment, and also because complainant had ulterior motives in the filing of the complaint and could not be in a position to ship ore within the maximum order the Commission could enter, namely two years. Defendant claimed it would publish a suitable rate when ore was offered it for shipment. HELD, a difference in the rate of transportation may determine whether certain ore lands have commercial value or not; whether they shall be developed or lie idle. Without in the least questioning the good faith of the statement, the promise of the defendant to publish a rate in line with the then established rate from common territory, when complainant's mine shall have actually been opened and ore offered for shipment, can scarcely be regarded as sufficiently definite and certain to warrant hundreds of thousands of dollars being invested upon the strength of it. If it is necessary under the Act to have the freight actually upon the ground before the Commission can assume jurisdiction and prescribe a just and reasonable rate, what is there to prevent a railway company, if its agents should see fit, to resort to such perversity, from refraining to publish a rate on potatoes, for instance, until the potatoes are actually within sight, and from refusing to publish such a rate before the potatoes are planted, or while they are being cultivated and growing, and after they have been dug, but not yet brought to the station. Any man who is situated as is the complainant has a right to know what the lawful published rate on his proposed product is and will be for a reasonable period of time in the future. The fact that complainant could not possibly ship within two years of the effective period of an order of the Commission is not a material point. If the Commission prescribes a reasonable rate to-day for the movement of traffic which possibly may not move within two years, and the railway company refuses voluntarily to continue that rate for a period longer than two years, it becomes the plain duty of the Commission to institute a new investigation at the proper time, and prescribe a rate which shall be just an reasonable, under the circumstances and conditions prevailing at such time. The fact that all the carriers operating in the Mesaba district, and all of the carriers and parties interested in the ore rates are not made parties to this proceeding is immaterial, in its bearing upon the legality of this complaint. A complainant cannot be expected to search public and private records, with the view of discovering all parties that may be interested in a certain proceeding. Full publicity attends every step of all proceedings before the Commission, and it must be assumed that parties interested will take notice of what is going on. The complainant in the present proceeding was clearly within his legal rights when he filed his complaint, and it is the duty of the Commission after full hearing and investigation to render a decision with reference to the reasonableness of the rate under attack. If the complainant has ulterior motives or hopes for indirect benefits not directly arising out of the rate in controversy, that is a matter which should not restrain this Commission from performing its plain duty under the law. Motion overruled. Lum v. G. N. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 558, 560, 561, 562.

IV. ORDERS OF COMMISSION.

See Advanced Rates §21½; Interstate Commerce Commission §17.

§11. Modification, Validity and Effect.

See Commerce Court §2; Interstate Commerce Commission §5 §17.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Any order for suspension must be based upon investigation. Jurisdiction of the Commission v. 1 I. C. R. 73.

(bc) The report and findings of the Commission upon the evidence relate only to the ascertainment and presentation of all the material facts necessary to fairly and justly present the merits of the controversy, and the Commission does not report evidence which is only cumulative, or which is immaterial or irrelevant, or mere details of evidence already embraced in substantial facts stated, upon which the findings and conclusions of the Commission are made. Riddle, Dean & Co. v. Pitts. & Lake Erie R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 773.

(d) The Commission does not report cumulative evidence or mere details of evidence already embraced in substantial facts stated, upon which its findings are made. Riddle v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 773.

(da) The Commission does not report evidence which is only cumulative, or which is immaterial or irrelevant, or mere details of evidence already embraced in substantial facts stated, upon which the findings and conclusions of the Commission are made. Riddle, Dean & Co. v. Pittsburgh & Lake Erie R. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. 773, 774.

(e) Where a tariff complained of was abandoned by the carriers for a long period of time before the complaint was made and shortly after the tariff was put in force, the Commission will not make an order requiring the carriers to cease and desist from enforcing such tariff, because such an order would be vain and useless. Rawson v. Newport News & Mississippi Valley Co., 2 I. C. R. 627.

(f) When carriers other than the respondents of record are committing the same violations of the Act to Regulate Commerce as the respondents, an order may issue against the respondents, and the cause be held open for the purpose of bringing such other carriers into it to be proceeded against unless they comply with the order. Bates v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 715.

(g) The final judgment in a suit or proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission, unreversed and remaining of record in full force and effect, is a bar to an action in the United States circuit court brought to recover damages from the same violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Riddle v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. (C. C. W. D. Pa.) 3 I. C. R. 230.

(h) The gist of the present complaint is that the rate on peaches from the Delaware district to Boston is unreasonably high and oppressive, and, the fact being so found, a reduction is ordered. Boston Fruit & Produce Exch. v. New York & N. E. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 493.

(i) Upon finding that the defendant's rates are in many instances unreasonably high, the defendant is required to submit within thirty days a revised schedule and put the same in force as provided by law; and the case is retained for such further order as may become necessary. Re Freight Rates between Memphis and Points in Arkansas, 11 I. C. C. 180.

(j) It is not only the right, but the imperative duty, of the Commission to make an order under the new 15th section as revised by the amendment of June 29, 1906, in cases brought before the Commission before the enactment of the new 15th section, since the new section simply gives a new remedy, and the amending act contains no provision continuing the old section in force as to cases previously brought; but both complainant and defendants should have leave to submit whatever additional testimony they desire. Cattle Raisers Asso. of Tex. v. M. K. & T. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 6.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(k) The Commission is an administrative body. The rates, regulations, and practices which it establishes within its jurisdiction become rules of action which may and must enter into the business dealings of the court. It may be necessary to change from time to time these rulings as varying conditions require, but they should never be changed except upon due notice to the public, which is affected by them, and it would be altogether intolerable if the change could be made retroactive. Nebraska-Iowa Grain Co. v. U. P. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 90, 93.

(l) An order of the Commission for the payment of money does not have the effect of an order, decree or judgment of a court, nor is it enforceable by process, nor does it become a lien upon the property of the defendant. Washer Grain Co. v. M. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 147, 155.

(m) The Commission has complete power to suspend or modify its orders. Loftus v. Pullman Co., 19 I. C. C. 102, 104.

(n) While it has great respect for the official actions of state commissions the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot withhold proper action in an Interstate situation because it is anticipated that some opposing or retaliatory action will be taken by a state body. In Re Advances in Rates by Carriers Operating Between the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, 21 I. C. C. 546, 552.

(o) The Commission can at any time recall and amend its order, and it ought to do so whenever it appears that an order is erroneous, but it must also be assumed that judgment of Commission was correct upon facts as presented. Traugott Schmidt & Sons v. M. C. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 684, 685.

(p) While in certain cases the courts have held that where the affairs of two or more corporations are so intermingled as to obscure their separate existence except in name, the corporate fiction should be disregarded, the authority of the Commission to issue orders in a proceeding is nevertheless limited to the defendants before it, and since if this ruling of the courts were construed to mean that an order against a parent company could run against all its subsidaries, endless confusion would result. It is the practice of the Commission to definitely name each corporation to which its orders are intended to apply, regardless of the intercorporate relations which may exist between the parties to an order, and therefore no reparation can be awarded against a railroad which is a subsidiary to a carrier named as a defendant. Fels & Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 154, 155.

(q) The authority of the Commission to issue orders in a proceeding is limited to those defendants that are then before it. Fels & Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 154, 155.

(r) The findings of the Commission must be based on evidence of record. Commercial Club of Omaha v. A. & S. R. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 302, 310.

(s) The interests of the public can not go by default in any proceeding before the Commission. They must be considered as fully those of the parties. Unlike the decision of a court, which ordinarily is conclusive only of the rights of the interested parties, a report and order of the Commission prescribing rates, regulations, or practices for the future must effect many who are not directly represented before it. Jewelers' Protective Union v. Penn. R. R., 36 I. C. C. 71, 75.

(t) Parties seeking to have original order set aside should assume the burden of sustaining the attack. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. v. L. & N. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 558, 561.

(u) Counsel for defendant entered an objection at the hearing to the Commission's power to correct an error in its report or order except upon formal application for rehearing. As defendant did not avail itself of opportunity afforded for filing brief in opposition to a correction of the Commission's former report the objection was not well taken. Dodson & Co. (Inc.) v. C. R. R. Co. of N. J., 57 I. C. C. 381, 383.

(v) An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission is not invalid because it fails to correct the more serious discrimination found to exist by the Commission. If it removes one discrimination it is not inoperative because it fails to remove others. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. Co. v. I. C. C., 168 Fed. 131, 137.

(w) But an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission is not invalid from the fact that it goes beyond the issues technically presented by the pleadings where the parties in interest appear and the situation is fully considered so as to cover the ground involved in the order entered. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. Co. v. I. C. C., 168 Fed. 131, 139.

(x) Commission not without power to issue an order merely because the Pennsylvania Company has never been a party to any case in which the rate on condensed milk, Geneva to Pittsburgh, has been found unreasonable. Reymer & Bros. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op 2056.

(a) The Vermont State Grange may file a complaint and a proceeding is maintainable upon its petition. Boston & A. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(b) It is not held, however, that a complainant must necessarily have a pecuniary interest in order to entitle him to be heard; and it seems, under the provisions of the Act, that when an infraction of the Act would constitute a public grievance, it may be the duty of the Commission to investigate it, when brought to its attention by a responsible party in a duly authenticated form. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(c) Through business over the defendant companies' roads was done by the National Dispatch Line (a fast freight line, neither a corporation nor an association of persons, but a name under which business was done), the several roads paying milage for the cars used, furnished to such line by a car company, and the earnings of such line being divided among the roads in agreed proportions. The tariff for the long haul traffic in question was made by the manager of the Dispatch Line, who was the agent for all the roads over which it did business and was acquiesced in by them. HELD, that the defendant companies were responsible for the long haul rates. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(d) The person aggrieved should complain in his own name; a complaint by a ticket broker having no interest in the transaction will not be entertained. Ottinger v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 607.

(e) To test the reasonableness of a through rate, all the roads responsible for it should be made defendants. Allen v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 621.

(f) When complainants desire to test the justice or legality of through rates, the necessity of bringing in the parties who make the rates, is obvious. They have a right to be heard because an order made and purporting to control their action when they were not parties would be improper on its face, and in a legal sense ineffectual. Allen & Allen v. L. A. N. & C. R. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. 621, 627.

(g) Where the relation of any carrier to the matter complained of is such that it is in whole, or in part, materially responsible for the alleged grievance, and has direct interest in any investigation of the subject matter involved, and the merits of the controversy cannot be investigated and determined in the absence of such carrier as a party, then that carrier should be made a party to the proceeding and if not a party, no relief can be had against it. Riddle, Dean & Co. v. Pitts. & Lake Erie R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 773.

(h) Carrier must be made a party where merit of controversy cannot be determined without it. Riddle v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 773.

(i) The Memphis and Little Rock Railroad Company, as reorganized by the purchasers in 1877, at the sale under mortgage foreclosure, if a lawful corporation of Arkansas, was not the same corporation as that chartered by the Legislature in 1853, but was a new corporation, subject to the Constitution and laws in force when it came into existence. Dow v. Beidelman, 2 I. C. R. 56.

(j) In a proceeding to correct a classification by the initial carrier of freight which, before reaching its destination, must pass over the roads of several carriers, all such carriers should be made parties; but if the initial carrier alone is made defendant, the proceeding is not therefore defective. Hurlburt v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 81.

(k) Persons having an interest in a question pending before the Commission will be allowed to appear and be heard when the case is being submitted, without their being made formal parties. Hurlburt v. L. S. & M. S. R. 2 I. C. C. 81, 83.

(l) When a question of rates as between two carriers is involved, the Commission will express no opinion upon it in a case in which one of the carriers is not a party. In such a case, if upon a new or different complaint it should appear that any conclusion of the Commission in the case so decided has been erroneous, the Commission would feel it to be a duty to correct such conclusion. Kentucky & Indiana Bridge Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 102, 112.

(m) The reasonableness of rates cannot be fairly determined in a proceeding to which some of the parties responsible for such rates are not parties. New Orleans Cotton Exch. v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 289; Michigan Congress Water Co., v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. (Com), 2 I. C. R. 428; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 102.

(n) The reasonableness of rates can not be determined in a proceeding to which some of the parties responsible for such rates are not parties. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. N. O. & T. P. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 289, 293.

(o) Where a complaint is made against the reasonableness of through rates agreed upon by several connecting lines, it is necessary to make all of such connecting lines parties defendant. Michigan Congress Water Co. v. C. & G. T. R., 2 I. C. C. 428, 430.

(p) The Commission can make no order on a question of rates where the necessary parties are not before it. Michigan Congress Water Co. v. C. & G. T. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 428, 430.

(q) The Interstate Commerce Commission will not enter upon the consideration of the question of raising rates by railroad companies which are not parties to the proceeding, and which affect localities that have no opportunity to be heard. Poughkeepsie Iron Co. v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co., (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 248.

(r) All the carriers participating in the traffic, the rates for which were questioned in this proceeding, were not made parties, and the case, while showing that the through rates were discriminatory and unjust, failed to disclose sufficient facts upon which an accurate decision could be based, and accordingly it was held that the carriers who were parties to the proceeding be required to adjust their respective tariffs so as to avoid discrimination against Kramer, and that the carriers who were not parties be summoned to appear and show cause why a like order be not issued as to the business in which they participate, unless their tariffs are voluntarily adjusted so as to avoid the discrimination complained of. Hamilton & Brown v. Chattanooga, Rome & Columbus R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 482.

(sa) The Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange is a merchantile society, such as is described in the thirteenth section of the Act, and as such has the right to maintain a proceeding like the present, without showing special damage to itself. Boston Fruit & Produce Exch. v. New York & N. E. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 493.

(s) The repeal of the law creating the railroad commission of Florida does not operate as a withdrawal or dismissal of a complaint brought in its name before the Interstate Commerce Commission for the real parties in interest. Railroad Commission of Florida v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co., (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 688.

(t) One who appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission in a representative capacity as a member of a committee of a complaining mercantile society, in proceedings which were dismissed, is not thereby estopped in a similar case brought by him as an individual. Toledo Produce Exch. v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 830.

(u) Defendants are not entitled to dismissal of a complaint because complainants are commission merchants, and can sustain no direct or material damage under the rates in question. James & Abbott v. C. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 274, 276.

(v) A railroad company which participated in through rates is not a necessary, even if it is proper, party to a proceeding by the Interstate Commerce Commission against another company for disobedience of an order of the Commission in the matter of such rates. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 5 I. C. R. 405.

(w) Complaining parties are not bound to include as defendants in proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission all carriers maintaining the rates or indulging in the practices complained of, but may proceed against the particular carrier whose line is used by them. Page v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 548.

(x) In a proceeding before the Commission complaining parties are not bound to include all carriers maintaining the rates or indulging in the practices complained of, but may proceed against the particular carrier or carriers whose lines are used or required by complainants; nor can such carriers excuse disobedience of a lawful order of the Commission because other carriers, members of an association with them, were not made parties to the proceeding and have failed or refused to take action in conformity with the order. Page v. D. L. & W. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 548, 555.

(y) While a railroad company operating its road as part of a through line, in connection with other carriers defendants, in a case brought to test the legality of a through charge over such line, is a proper party, it is not a necessary party to the proceeding. Warren-Ehret Company v. C. R. R. of N. J. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 598, 603.

(z) The St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway company, although a proper, is not a necessary, party to proceedings against the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, the controlling company, to redress grievances in the matter of freight rates. Mayor and City Council of Wichita v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 558.

(aa) While carriers participating in the through rate would be proper parties, they are not necessary parties. Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. C. B. & Q. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 83, 110.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(bb) Only carriers that are before the Commission are bound by findings of the Commission in a particular case. Fels & Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 483, 486.

(cc) While a shippers' association attacked a rate and asked reparation, and expressly alleged that it did so in behalf of certain members of the association who were specifically named, and also in behalf of certain other individuals, not members of the association, who were named, HELD, these members and individuals were, for purposes of reparation, and as far as the statute of limitations was concerned, entitled to be considered as the real complainants. Michigan Hardwood Mfrs'. Assn. v. Freight Bureau, 27 I. C. C. 32, 35.

(dd) Where a rate adjustment is found to result in undue prejudice by reason of separately established factors, the carriers parties to the components of the through rates which are not attacked and which do not in any way contribute to the undue prejudice found to exist, are proper but not necessary parties. Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 46 I. C. C. 547, 556.

(ee) Where a carrier is under federal control and an opportunity has been afforded to make the Director General of Railroads a party but no amendment has been filed, no finding or order for the future can be made. Sun Co. v. T. & O. C. Ry., 52 I. C. C. 12, 14.

(ff) But where a complaint was filed by a chamber of commerce, and shoe dealers in behalf of whom reparation is sought are not named, the prayer for reparation is nugatory. E. A. Wexelbaum & Co. v. Ocean Steamship Co., 59 I. C. C. 480, 482.

(gg) After complaint was filed, powers of attorney were executed by certain consignors, who were not named as parties in the complaint, in favor of a complainant who was so named. HELD, Introduction of such powers of attorney in evidence at the hearing over objection of defendants can not be treated as equivalent to amendment of the complaint, and such consignors, who bore the freight charges, have filed no complaint within the statutory period, reparation as to them must be denied. Tanners' Council v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C. 415, 419.

(hh) The fact that one company may be a subsidiary of another does not ipso facto entitle the latter to bring an action in its own name for a damage suffered by the former. American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C. 650, 651.

(ii) Complainant attacked the reasonableness of through charges but showing of unreasonableness was largely as to the factor maintained by an electric line. HELD, since the electric line was not under Federal control, the director general not named as a party defendant, and no violation of the Federal control act alleged, shipments which moved during the Federal control period can not be considered. Buckeye Pipe Line Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C. 19, 22.

(jj) Where a carrier is not named as defendant in a complaint, though it is the delivering line when shipments move over the shortest practicable route, it would be unjust to require a reduction in the rate via that route. Paragraphs (c) and (d) of Rule II of Rules of Practice. Silica Sand Producers' Asso. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C. 588, 592.

(kk) Where shipments moved during Federal control, over railroads under Federal control, and the Director General is not made a party defendant, such shipments will not be considered by the Commission. International Paper Co. v. M. C. R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C. 385

(ll) In C. G. W. Ry. Co. v. First Methodist Episcopal Church, 102 Fed. 85, it was held that the fact alone that an action was brought in the name of the wrong party as plaintiff is not ground for reversal but the appellate court will direct the substitution of the proper party. Tanners Council of the United States of America v. Director General, 78 I. C. C. 27, 29.

VI. SET-OFF.

§14. In General.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Commission has no authority in a proceeding by a shipper to recover reparation to award a set-off to the carrier for unpaid freight bills due from the shipper, since to award set-off amounts to the same thing as adjudicating the claim of a railroad company against a shipper, whereas, the only authority of the Commission is to adjudicate a claim of a shipper against a railroad company for violation of the interstate commerce law. Laning-Harris Coal & Grain Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 37, 38.

VII. EFFECT OF EVIDENCE.

§14½. In General.

See Evidence.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A complaint of the unreasonableness of a rate on coal from St. Louis, Mo., to Oklahoma City, Okla., as applied to shipments originating in W. Virginia, covering a total distance of over 1,200 miles, held to present no question of practical importance in view of the proximity of coal fields in Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Kansas, and also the much shorter distance from Colorado and Missouri, and dismissed without prejudice in case the unreasonableness of the rate should become of actual consequence hereafter. Harrell v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 27.

(b) In view of substantial reductions in rates on all classes of commodities from Chicago and Omaha to Lead, S. Dak., and the probable effect of new competition, it is held that under the circumstances and upon the record in this case no order changing the rates will now be made. Lead Commercial Club v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 460.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) In some cases the testimony of shippers is essential. This is especially true where reparation is to be awarded. However, comparison with rates in nearby territory or elsewhere where the same general conditions exist may often suffice without other showing to indicate that the rates complained of are discriminatory or excessive. Minneapolis Civic & Commerce Assn v. C. M. & S. P. Ry. Co., 30 I. C. C. 663, 669.

(d) When a complainant challenge reasonableness of rates on a commodity from only one point and it appears that because of competitive or other practical trade or transportation considerations, a number of points of origin are grouped under common rates, and also that there is a relationship between two or more groups, the commission must give due consideration to other factors than rate comparisons. §14½a. Burden of Proof.

See Burden of Proof.

(a) Complainant attacked rates on twine from Chicago, Ill., to Hudson, Wis. as unreasonable. HELD, on a petition charging the exaction of unreasonable rates, the burden of proof is on the petitioner to sustain the charges by evidence which shows with reasonable certainty that they are in substance true. Petition dismissed, where the answer denied that the rate was unreasonable, and showed that it had been reduced, and neither party offered any evidence. Harding v. C. St. P. M. & O. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 375.

(b) On a petition charging the ex-action of unreasonable rates, the burden of proof is on the petitioner to sustain the charges by evidence which shows with reasonable certainty that they are in substance true. Harding v. C. St. P. M. & O. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 375, 376.

(c) The Interstate Commerce Commission will not determine the relative reasonableness of rates at many stations and in a large extent of territory, upon the mere face of tariffs and without further proof. Spartanburg Board of Trade v. Richmond & D. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 193.

§14¾. Depositions.

(a) Depositions may be taken as provided by U. S. R. S., § § 863, 864, without application to Commission. Rule 9 as amended. Appendix II., 1 I. C. R. 843, 410.

(b) There are several modes of procedure by which the inconvenience to the defendant carriers of producing books and the delay and labor of going over their entries, might be avoided by petitioner. For example: If one or more witnesses should be subpenaed from the different companies proceeded against and a notice should be served with the subpena requiring the witnesses to furnish the published rates and tariffs of such company, for a specified period and also requiring them to furnish statements of the actual charges made and car facilities furnished, during such period, to the Standard Oil Trust and the other named in the application if different from the published tariffs and schedules, it would probably be sufficient for all the purposes of these proceedings; or if the parties would take depositions, by consent, in advance of the hearing, it would answer the same purpose. Rice v. Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore R. Co. 2 I. C. R. 584.

(c) This case was heard solely upon the respondent's motion to dismiss the complaint for insufficiency of its allegations to show violations of the Act to Regulate Commerce; but the complainant having filed some depositions taken before the hearing of said motions, the Commission looked into this evidence with a view of seeing what light it shed upon the general claim of unlawful practice by the respondents and upon the duty of the Commission to proceed against them on its own motion. White v. Michigan Central R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 641.

(d) Defendants offered to waive objection to depositions taken without notice on behalf of complainant, the Toledo Produce Exchange, if all the evidence taken in certain proceedings which involved questions similar to those herein should be treated and considered as evidence in this case, and the offer was accepted, but complainant's agent afterwards sought to rescind the agreement although complainant had leave to put in whatever additional evidence it desired. HELD, that the case should be considered according to the original agreement. Toledo Produce Exchange v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 830.

(e) The records of the Interstate Commission may be proved by the deposition of the secretary of such Commission, as such records cannot be reached by the process of the court, and there is no statutory provision authorizing certified copies to be used in evidence. Gulf Colorado & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Dimitt, 8 I. C. C. App. II.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(f) Where depositions authorized by section 12 are not in accordance with Commission's Rules of Practice, they may not be received in evidence. Boston Potatoe Receivers' Asso. v. B. & A. R. R. Co., 42 I. C. C. 454, 456.

§15. Equities of Cause.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) There are cases in which "tainted hands" unquestionably compel a peremptory dismissal; but the Commission does not inquire into equities not connected with the issue before it. Lum v. G. N. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 558, 562.

(a) Where affidavits offered in evidence by certain complainants to a proceeding to show that they made shipments and paid and bore the charges thereon were objected to by the carriers upon ground that they were not accorded the right of cross examination it was HELD, as to such complainants reparation must be denied. Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corp. v. Director General,

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Exhibits compiled by Commission's examiners of accounts, offered in evidence at a duly appointed hearing, without objection from interested parties, properly identified by the official stenographer and filed in the record along with all the other evidence in the case, are lawfully a part of the record Stonega Coke & Coal Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 39 I. C. C. 523, 539.

(b) The Commission can not allow a disregard of the rule providing for the time and manner in which exceptions to its examiners' proposed reports may be filed. Fidelity Cotton Oil Co. v. A. & V. Ry., 47 I. C. C. 542, 543.

(c) If the proposed examiners' report is contrary to the evidence submitted, it is the complainant's duty to point out in exceptions specifically and clearly where in the evidence submitted differed from the facts as stated in the proposed report. The only evidence before the Commission, that submitted by complainants, shows no violation of the act to regulate commerce or federal control act and discloses no damage to complainants flowing from any shown violation of either of such acts. Richardson Co. v. Director General, 56 I. C. C. 731, 733.

(d) The rule of the Interstate Commerce Commission regulating the offer in evidence of reports and tariffs, part of which only is relevant, does not make the annual reports of carriers filed with the Commission evidence to be considered by the Commission at a hearing on the division of joint rates, where no attempt was made to bring the relevant parts of such reports before the Commission in the manner prescribed by the rule. Abilene & S. Ry. Co. v. United States, 288 Fed. 102

(a) Contracts and tariffs filed with the Commission under the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 6, may be considered although not specifically introduced in evidence on the hearing. Boston Fr & P. Exch. v. New York & N. E. R. Co., (Com.), 3 I. C. R., 493.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) In the general adjustment of rates, individual instances of seeming discrepancy are noticed, which are inexplainable from a cursory examination, but often when such instances are made the subject of specific complaint, circumstances and conditions before unknown are brought out tending to justify the apparently unreasonable relation. The Commission consequently moves with great caution in condemning a rate or practice, and does so only when the facts before it amply warrant such action. Sanford v. Western Express Co., 16 I. C. C. 32, 36.

(c) In reaching a decision which cannot be limited in application to the claim in controversy, but must necessarily affect all rail carriers, the Commission may refer to the evidence of record in other cases bearing upon the general question in dispute. Miller v. C. L. R. R. Co., 29 I. C. C. 526, 528.

(d) The Commission is not confined in its consideration to the facts and figures specifically stated pertaining to matters referred to in the record, but may consider and, in support of its conclusions, may rely upon the actual facts and figures pertaining to matters referred to in the record, as verified by the tariffs and other official documents and records which the law requires carriers to file with it. Oklahoma Cottonseed Crushers' Assn. v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 39 I. C. C. 497, 500.

§17. Res Adjudicata.

See Evidence V §69;

CASES 1887-1908

(a) There is sufficient reason for following a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission which determines that companies carrying on a certain kind of business are not subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, if all such companies have acted upon the faith of the decision, unless it is clearly erroneous. United States v. Morsman, 3 I. C. R. 112.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Where reparation has been awarded for an excessive charge on hay, the Commission will not enter an order establishing for the future the lower rate upon which such reparation is based where the rate situation between the points in question has been determined by a previous decision. Arkansas Fuel Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 95, 99.

(c) When a given rate situation has been fully considered and deliberately passed upon by the Commission, the decision ought to be, if not binding upon it, certainly of very great weight with it in considering the same situation in a later proceeding between different parties, but this rule applies only where the same state of facts is involved in the latter as in the former proceeding. Receivers & Shippers' Ass'n. of Cincinnati v. C. N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 440, 445.

(d) Rates reasonable at the present time may within the period of two years become very unreasonable by reason of changes in circumstances and conditions economic, transportation, or the like. It should be just as apparent that a rate which was unreasonable two years or more ago may become reasonable by reason of such changes in conditions. A plea of estoppel by reason of former adjudication is not good in so far as an investigation of present rates is concerned, although in a former proceeding a decree of a court was a general finding for the defendants on all the issues of fact. National Hay Ass'n. v. M. C. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 34, 37.

(e) The doctrine of stare decisis has little application in proceedings before the Commission involving economic questions of transportation. Hillsdale Coal & Coke Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 356, 361.

(f) While an order of the Commission in a particular case must necessarily fix the rights of a party to the proceeding so far as past shipments are concerned, and must necessarily restrain until further order the continuance of a rate or practice condemned and compel the carrier to observe the rate or practice prescribed for the future these great questions of transportation are not foreclosed of further discussion and consideration upon further complaint. Additional experience with the actual operation of rules that combine commercial with physical capacity in the rating of coal mines for car distribution, may throw new light upon a matter that has vexed the Commission, as well as many carriers that have endeavored to do equity as between different mines on their lines, and if so the Commission shall not hesitate to modify what has been said in this and in other cases before it on that question. The principle of stare decisis has little application in proceedings involving questions of this nature. Hillsdale Coal & Coke Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 356, 361.

(g) The technical doctrine of res adjudicata as enforced in courts of law is not applied by the commission. Goss v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C. 649, 653.

§18. Requesting Information of Carrier.

(a) The books of the defendant carriers as to rates charged, facilities furnished, and general movements of freight, being in the nature of semi public records, to any extent that they can fairly and justly save time, labor, or expense to complainant, or to their companies, by giving to him, in response to any calls he may make, statements of facts shown by their books, records, or files which may probably have importance on the hearing, the officers and agents of the defendant carriers under the direction of defendants, ought to give such statements, and ought to do so as promptly as may be found reasonably practicable. Much unnecessary controversy, inconvenience, and delay might well be avoided in the first instance, as well as in subsequent stages of proceedings, if carriers would exhibit without technical objection, what their books show in reference to a transaction in question to anyone who calls for the information in good faith, believing, though perhaps erroneously, that it is, or may be, important to his interests, and when the application is seasonably and properly made, with a due regard for the convenience of the carrier's agents and officers; and in the instances are numerous in which it would put an end to the controversy, and in many others that the party would not then trouble the carrier for the production of the books. Rice v. Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 584.

(b) Application of petitioner for subpoenas duces tecum for the production of books, vouchers, accounts, and papers by various parties. Where the application is made to compel one who is a party to the proceeding, and who is a carrier engaged in interstate commerce, to produce its books for the purpose of evidence in a pending proceeding, it is sufficient for the application to indicate in writing in a general way what books of the carrier should be produced, and that there is reason to believe that in the course of the hearing they will become of service, on account of the light they will throw upon the questions in controversy in the proceeding, and as an evidence of good faith in making the application the applicant should make an affidavit, as part of the application, that such application is made in good faith, and not for the purpose of vexing or harassing the defendant, and upon such a showing, as a general rule, the process should issue. Rice v. L. & N. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 584, 592.

(c) An application to the Interstate Commerce Commission for subpoenas duces tecum may be denied, as applicable to contracts and papers of third persons not before the Commission, on the ground of injustice that might be done such persons. Haddock v. Delaware L. & W. R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 302.

(d) A ruling by a referee that the petition in a case be taken as true because of the defendant's failure to produce books and papers and answer interrogatories is not reversible error where plaintiff's evidence establishes the facts pleaded without conflict and defendant introduces no evidence whatever. Cook & Wheeler v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 383.

(da) Although the motion for the production of books and papers is defective, or the order made upon it too broad yet if such instruments of evidence are used in the mode required by law on the trial, there is no prejudicial error. Cleveland, C. & C. & I. R. Co. v. Closser,

(e) Inspection of books and papers denied. Mason v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 61.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(f) In a complaint charging an express company with unjust discrimination in transporting money, a subpoena duces tecum will not issue to compel defendant to furnish voluminous information with respect to its financial and business transactions where it does not appear necessary so to do and the information sought is not pertinent to the questions involved. American Bankers' Ass'n. v. American Express Co., 15 I. C. C. 15, 24.

(g) The Interstate Commerce Commission cannot enlarge its powers to compel testimony from a corporation, which, not being subject to regulation by the Commission, is simply in the position of a witness interested in, but a stranger to, the inquiry, by making such corporation a party to the proceeding and serving it with notice. Ellis v. Interstate Com. Com., 35 Sup. Ct. 645, 647; 237 U. S. 434; 59 L. Ed.

§18½. Reparation Statements and Pleadings.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A general description in the complaint of the shipments on which reparation is asked is sufficient to meet the requirements of the statute. Coakley v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 141, 144.

(b) Incomplying with Rule V of the Commission's Rules of Practice, complainants may be authorized to submit proof in the form of affidavits that freight charges were paid and borne by them where the carriers do not object to this form of proof. Boston Chamber of Commerce v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C. 142, 144.

(c) Complainants indicated that if a showing of the ultimate destinations of shipments was essential before reparation could be awarded they would ask the commission to require carriers to furnish that information. HELD, such information would be insufficient without further data as to rates ultimately applied and amount of charges collected and the commission does not regard it as reasonable or appropriate that carriers should be called upon to furnish information necessary to the establishment of claims for reparation. Peoria Board of Trade v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 73 I. C. C. 535.

(d) While ordinarily a complainant should present his entire case at the time of the original hearing, it is often to the best interest of the commission and the parties to defer the taking of testimony on the question of the details of the damage until the main issue has been decided. National Preservers & Fruit Products Asso. v. A. & S. Ry., 74 I. C. C. 179, 183.

(e) Shipments made subsequent to hearing authorized to be included in reparation statement under Rule V of the commission's Rules of Practice if accompanied by proof in the form of an affidavit that shipments were made and charges were paid and borne by complainants, with understanding that if carriers object to proof in affidavit form complainants may request further hearing with respect to reparation. §19. Tests of Revenue.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Commission reduced commodity rates from the east to Spokane but held that before making the final order it will be advisable to learn the result of an actual test, and that carriers will be required for the months of July, August and September, 1910, or for such other representative months as may be determined upon by the Commission, after conference with the carriers, to furnish an accurate and detailed account, showing the revenue which accrued upon business actually handled under present rates, and the revenue which would have accrued upon the same business had the rates here prescribed been in effect. This account should be confined to traffic covered by the rates named, but the carriers may, if they elect, indicate what other changes will be required which are not covered by the rates prescribed in this and other cases, and may keep separate accounts showing the loss as applied to actual transactions. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 162, 178.

§19½. Unreported Opinions.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Unreported opinions of the Commission are as carefully considered and have the same binding effect and force as reported opinions. Fish & Solomon v. P. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. A473.

VIII. DEFENSES AND EVIDENCE.

§20. In General.

See Evidence; Reasonableness of Rates; Special Contracts §6; Undercharges §3.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Act to Regulate Commerce does not afford a remedy for transactions which occurred before it took effect. Ottinger v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 607.

(ab) A claim of exemption from discovery on the ground that it would fix a penal liability upon the party cannot be sustained where a prosecution for the penalty is already barred by the Statute of Limitations. Manchester & Lawrence R. Co. v. Concord R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 319.

(b) Where it appears that a complainant has invoked the aid of the law for the purpose of securing what he,

with the acquiescence of the carrier, had previously obtained in apparent contravention of the law, such acquiescing carrier will not be held entitled to plead violations of the law by complainant in bar of a decision on the merits, nor will the individual interests of the complainant be taken into consideration; but the Commission will examine the evidence and make such report thereon as, under the provision of the law, the rights of other shippers and the public generally may require. If, independently of any action or interest of complainants, the conduct of defendants with reference to the transportation which is the subject of the proceeding is shown by the evidence to be unlawful, it is the duty of the Commission to execute and enforce the statutory provisions applicable thereto. Page v. D. L. & W. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 525, 534.

(c) Under its rules and practice shippers have ample opportunity for personally laying their troubles before the Commissin and thus showing the actual results of the rates complained of upon their business. Upon a complaint in which no person directly interested in such rates appeared as a witness having no personal knowledge of the effect of the rates upon the merchants dealing in the commodities involved and whose testimony is limited to a comparison of the rates attacked with rates on the same commodities for equal distances in other parts of the country, where the traffic is much more dense, the net revenues per mile greater, and where the other transportation conditions are entirely different: HELD, that the record discloses no sufficient basis for an order by the Commission. The complaint is therefore dismissed without prejudice. Dallas Freight Bureau v. Mo., Kans. & Tex. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 428.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) Technical defenses have no place before the Commission and will not be permitted to defeat the broad principles of the Act. Flour City S. S. Co. v. L. V. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 179, 187.

(e) An objection by a state commission to the introduction of evidence relating to intrastate rates on stone and gravel when for use in construction of public highway and consigned to federal, state, county or municipal authorities or their agents, on the ground that no order affecting such rates could be made by the Commission because of the provision of section 22 of the Act. HELD such a construction of section 22 would make it mandatory on carriers to maintain lower rates on such traffic; that section has been construed as being permissive in character; and in granting such reduced rates carriers must not violate sections 2 and 3 of the Act. Tennessee Rates and Charges, 63 I. C. C. 160, 172.

§21. Immunity.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Commission proceeds on the theory that it is better to expose wrongdoing, even if in doing so it would be necessary to use a few witnesses whose testimony might bring them immunity, than through fear of bestowing immunity on some, leave facts unknown and uncovered and thereby give immunity to all, not only as to prosecution, but as to stigma of exposure as well. Financial Investigation of N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co., 31 I. C. C. 32, 68.

(b) The purpose of the immunity statute was to aid in the search for facts by removing the obstacle of witnesses refusing to testify on the ground of self-incrimination. Financial Investigation of N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co., 31 I. C. C. 32, 68.

§21a. Moot Question.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Commission will not say in advance of violation of Act what rates company shall make for any class or organization of persons. Re Theatrical Rates, 1 I. C. R. 18.

(b) The Commission can not construe the Act before violation thereof. Re Theatrical Rates, 1 I. C. R. 18; Re Order of Railway Conductors, 1 I. C. R. 18.

(c) The Commission has no power to advance of an actual act or omission on the part of a common carrier in conconstrue, interpret or apply the Act in travention of the provisions of the act. The Commission is confined to entertaining and deciding applications presented to it under section 4 of the Act for relief from the provisions of that section, and complaints under section 13, in relation to acts or omissions in contravention of the provisions of the Act. HELD, applications averring that the railroad companies do not now violate the law and do not wish to do so, and asking the ruling of the Commission (in advance of any action by the railroads) as to the effect of the act in reference to the granting of free passes to railroad employees and their families, and in reference to an additional allowance of free baggage to commercial travelers, can not be entertained. Re Petition of the Order of Railway Conductors, 1 I. C. C. 18, 19.

(d) A desire to obtain a construction of the Interstate Commerce Act is not sufficient to support a proceeding. Boston & A. R. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(e) When, pending a proceeding begun to test the reasonableness of rates, the rates are reduced and made satisfactory to complainants, the Commission will not consider the question whether the rates before the reduction were or were not excessive; that question having by the reduction made become purely abstract and speculative. The question whether the rates paid ought to be refunded having been presented to a judicial tribunal, where it is now pending, the Commission will not take cognizance of it. Harris v. Duval, Rec'r. F. Ry. & Navigation Co., 2 I. C. C. 514.

§22. Witnesses and subpoena duces tecum.

(a) Subpoenas will be issued by any commissioner and will be required to be obeyed. Rule 9, Appendix I, 1 I. C. R. 842.

(b) As the application in these cases does not conform to the rules herein stated in reference to making a prima facie showing for the compulsory production of the books, papers and documents, either as against the defendant carriers or those who are strangers to these proceedings, the relief it seeks cannot now be granted, and for the present must be denied; but this does not preclude the petitioner from renewing his application, provided, in doing so he conforms to the rules indicated. Rice v. Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 584.

(c) In prescribing the contents of an application for subpoena duces tecum, the Commission, while guided by the Interstate Commerce Act, will consider and apply rules of the United States courts and those laid down by the federal statutes, so far as applicable. Rice v. Cincinnati, W. & B. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 584.

(d) An action to compel parties not carriers, or third parties, to produce books, papers, or documents should be in writing, and should specify the things whose production is desired, should be accompanied by an affidavit that the things are in the witness's possession or under his control, and should show prima facie the materiality and necessity of the evidence. If directed against a carrier who is a party, it is sufficient to indicate the things desired in a general way, and state a belief that they will be of service, and that the application is in good faith. Rice v. Cincinnati W. & B. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 584.

(e) The difference that exists in what should be a prima facie showing for compulsory process for the production of books, papers and documents as between parties not engaged as carriers in interstate commerce, or strangers to the proceeding, on the one hand, and, on the other hand, carriers who are engaged in interstate commerce, is one that is very manifest. The books of carriers engaged in interstate commerce, whether made up from shipping tickets, way bills, expense bills, or otherwise, are supposed to give the exact particulars of the consignment, showing the weight, rate, and amount of charges to be paid to the company's agent, and are put in this enduring form at the time of the consignment, as part of the transaction, upon rates that the Law requires to be open and public, and thus they give a history of the details of the transaction, and are in the nature of semi-public records. Shippers, consignees, and even the public, may well have an interest, under certain circumstances, in the evidence these records afford as to rates, charges, facilities furnished, and the general movements of freight. The books of strangers to the proceeding and of parties not engaged as carriers in interstate commerce, do not necessarily occupy any such relation to these transactions, though there may possibly be such a showing as would make them material and competent evidence in proceedings in which these transactions come into controversy. Rice v. Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 584.

(f) Where the application is made to compel one who is a party to the proceeding, and who is a carrier engaged in interstate commerce, to produce its books for the purpose of evidence in a pending proceeding, it is sufficient for the application to indicate in writing in a general way what books of the carrier should be produced, and that there is reason to believe, and that the applicant does believe, that in the course of the hearing they will become of service, on account of the light they will throw upon the questions in controversy in the proceeding, and as an evidence of good faith, in making the application. the applicant should make an affidavit, as part of the application, that such application is made in good faith, and not for the purpose of vexing or harassing the defendant, and upon such a showing, as a general rule. the process should issue unless the number of books called for should be so large, or from other exceptional circumstances, the Commission should order the testimony to be taken at such place as would avoid oppression in producing the books at a far-distant hearing, and expedite the progress of the investigation. Rice v. Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 584.

(g) In proceedings between parties, when an application is made to the Commission to compel parties who are not engaged as carriers in interstate commerce, or others who are strangers to the proceeding, to produce books, papers, and documents, the application should be in writing, addressed to the Commission, and should specify, as nearly as may be, the books, papers, or documents for the production of which process is desired, and be accompanied by an affidavit that the books, papers, or documents described are in the possession of the witness, or under his control, and should set forth facts which make a prima facie case that these contain evidence that is material and necessary to the party seeking their production in the pending proceeding; and in such a case the prima facie showing that what is required to be produced will be legal evidence for the party demanding it ought to be very clear and full. Rice v. Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 584.

(h) In laying down rules upon the subject of what an application shall contain for the compulsory production of books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements, and documents relating to any matter under investigation, the Commission is governed by the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and the objects and purposes of this Statute, but in connection with these will also consider the practice in the courts of the United States, as well as the rules prescribed by federal statutes in proceedings which seem to be most nearly analogous to proceedings in which such application to the Commission is made. Rice v. Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 584.

(ha) In a proceeding for a subpoena Duces Tecum, by a complainant who alleged that the defendant granted preferential rates to the Standard Oil Trust, and sought to compel production of all papers showing the relation between the carriers and such preferred competitor, it is enough to show the rates actually charged, if there are or have been any such to certain shippers or consignees different from the published tariff rates, or the preferential facilities, if any such, furnished by the defendants to some shippers or consignees, and not to others, or the comparative rates on the different commodities named in the complaints, and from and to designated points. Innumerable shipments, with all their minuteness of detail, over the various lines, that were made for many years before the Act to Regulate Commerce took effect, as well as since that date, and the names of the consignors and consignees at so many different points, through these long periods of time, seem to be immaterial. It appears to be sufficient for all the purposes of these cases to show the rates published, the rates actually charged, and the facilities furnished from and to designated points since the Act to Regulate Commerce went into effect, and for whatever light these may throw upon the question of the reasonableness and justness of the rates, if any, and the fairness of the facilities afforded by way of comparison what these were for a reasonable time—for example, for a period of twelve months before the Act to Regulate Commerce went into effect. Rice v. Cincinnati, Washington, Baltimore R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 584.

(i) A proceeding to compel the attendance of a witness before the Interstate Commerce Commission, or to require him to answer questions put to him, or to compel the production of books, documents, or papers in his possession is a case of which, under the Constitution, a court of the United States may take cognizance. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 4 I. C. R. 545.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(j) It is not only proper but essential that undisclosed facts, necessary to the adjudication of issues presented, be impartially elicited by the presiding Commissioner or examiner; therefore, no error was committed in recalling a witness for interrogation after the party introducing the witness had closed its case. Interstate Packing Co. v. C., M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 41 I. C. C. 396, 399.

(k) Testimony as to comparative transportation conditions must of necessity be somewhat general, and to require a witness to have an intimate familiarity with the physical conditions existing on each of two roads before he can be permitted to testify that transportation conditions on the two roads are similar would ordinarily exclude as witnesses all persons who had not been actively employed in the operation of both roads. Old Vincennes Distillery Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R., 45 I. C. C. 447, 450.

(l) But a witness who had not seen the shipment and knew nothing except by hearsay is not a competent witness. Northern Merchantile Co. v. S. I. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. A-207.

(m) A refrigerator car company, owned by a large packing company, which builds and owns refrigerator tank and box cars which it leases to railroads and shippers has the same immunities as an ordinary witness in an investigation brought by the Interstate Commerce Commission wherein the Commission subpoenas it to testify, unless it is shown that such refrigerator company is a tool of the users of its facilities and a device for the purpose of evading some provision of the Act. Ellis v. I C. C. 35 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646, 647; 237 U S. 434; 59 L. Ed.—

(n) The Commission may not require witnesses to testify against their will concerning the cost of production of articles moving in interstate commerce. Stonega Coke & Coal Co. v. L. & N. R R. Co., 39 I C. C. 523, 549.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) In one sense proportional rates are but divisions of through rates. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 33 I. C. C. 384, 391.

(b) A proportional rate, limited to shipments over a particular line, is unjustly discriminatory. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 33 I. C. C. 384, 391.

(c) Where a proportional tariff contained no provision governing application of a flat increase in the combination rates on through shipments, but carriers parties thereto were also parties to tariffs naming joint rates containing such a provision, they are bound by the rule which prescribed a specific method for constructing combination rates on through shipments. Bell Lumber Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 63 I. C. C. 225, 228.

(d) The proportional or reshipping rate applicable on a reshipment from the transit point is that in effect when the inbound shipment moved from the point of origin. Bell Lumber Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 63 I. C. C. 225, 228.

(e) It is well settled that reshipping and proportional rates are inseparably connected with and form parts of the rates applying to through transportation. A proportional rate means a part of or the remainder of, a through rate, or it means nothing at all. Kansas City Board of Trade v. A., T. & S. F. R. R. 69 I. C. C. 185, 188.

(f) A reshipping or rebilling rate is a proportional rate under which after a commodity has been shipped to a distributing market and unloaded for the purpose of storage or treatment in transit, the same commodity or an equivalent amount may be reshipped to final destination. There is a close analogy between reshipping rates and transit. Kansas City Board of Trade v. A., T. & S. F. R. R., 69 I. C. C. 185, 188.

(g) The reshipping rate is usually less than the local rate from the distributing or transit point to the final destination and must be regarded as part of the through rate or charge from the point of origin through the transit point to the ultimate destination. Kansas City Board of Trade v. A., T. & S. F. R. R. 69 I. C. C. 185, 188.

(h) A rate on coal delivered to a vessel and thereafter used for bunker purposes may fairly be regarded and treated as a proportional or transshipment rate. Rates on Bunker Coal, 73 I. C. C. 62, 76.

(i) Proposal to except proportional rates of the Midland Continental R. R., on petroleum and products, from application of the combination rule, which provided a method by which through rates were given specific or flat increases under General Order No. 28 of the director general, when made up of separately established rates, found not justified. Tariffs specificially provided for application of the combination rule; use of the Midland's proportional rates is not therein prohibited; and proposed exception would result in conflicting tariff provisions. Cancellation of Combination Rule on Petroleum,73 I. C. C. 146.

(j) Contention that the combination rule, which provided a method by which through rates were given specific or flat increases under General Order No. 28 of the director general, when made up of separately established factors, was not intended to apply to a proportional rate established without relation to any rate in effect June 24, 1918. HELD, rule is subject to no such restriction. Cancellation of Combination Rule on Petroleum, 73 I. C. C. 146, 148.

(k) Proposed establishment of proportional rates which would have the effect of threatening the stability of the present rate structure, found not justified. Iron and Steel Articles from New Orleans, 74 I. C. C. 146.

(l) Following Proportional Rates on Grain and Grain Products, 69 I. C. C. 203 proposed proportional rates on grain and products from Sioux City, Iowa, to points in Arkansas and Missouri, based differentially over Omaha, Nebr., found not justified. The effect of the proposed rates would be to give Sioux City additional routes over which to ship grain under rates which place Kansas City at an unreasonable disadvantage, and result in violations of section 4 of the Act Proportional Rates on Grain and Grain Products, 74 I. C. C. 341.

(m) Proposed elimination of class D proportional rates from west-bank Mississippi River points in Iowa and Missouri to stations in Iowa constructed on basis prescribed in Interior Iowa cases 46 I. C. C. 39, from application on hard or bituminous coal, leaving in effect increased combination rates found not justified. Desire of carriers to effect uniformity in the coal rate situation in Iowa would not be served by such cancellation, and elimination of class rates on coal furnishes no justification for increased rates. Proportional Rates on Coal to Iowa, 74 I. C. C. 729.

(ma) Contention that charging proportional rate lower than local rate to defendant's terminal, or charging a proportional rate to terminal lower than local rate to an intermediate point, are departures from fourth section of the act, rejected as untenable. Southern Illinois Millers Asso., 23 I. C. C., 672; Rates on Grain and Grain Products to Texarkana, Ark., 29 I. C. C., 35. Ohio Refining Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 81 I. C. C., 688, 690.

(n) Respondents proposed generally to increase the present proportional rates on petroleum and petroleum products between points in official classification territory, including proportional rates on these commodities from East St. Louis, Ill., and other Mississippi River crossings and related points on shipments originating at points west of the Mississippi River destined to points in official classification territory. The increases are to be effected in some instances by cancelling existing proportional rates and in other instances by increasing the proportional rates to the level of the local rates. For many years the rates from Oklahoma to the destination territory were a combination of the local rates on East St. Louis. On June 25, 1918, the rates were advanced 25% and on July 1, 1918, a flat increase of 4.5c was substituted for the 25% increase, and established proportional rates to and from East St. Louis lower than the local rates to and from that point, each of which had been increased 4.5c. The through rate from Group E on refined or fuel oil to the official territory made up of the combination of locals on East St. Louis, was 4.5c higher than the combination of proportional rates from Group E. The difference between the local and the lower proportional rates east of the Mississippi River was 2.5c. On August 26, 1920, the local and proportional rates west of the river were increased 35% and those east of the river 40%. The difference between the local and proportional rates east of the river then became 3.5c and west of the river 3c. The issues to be decided are whether the maintenance of the lower proportional rates from East St. Louis resulted in discrimination against or undue prejudice to complainants to the undue advantage and preference of shippers from mid-continent field and whether the carriers have justified their proposed cancellation of or increases in the proportional rates. If the tariffs under suspension are allowed to become effective, the difference in favor of group 3 will be eliminated. Petroleum and its products are sold by refiners, wherever located, at the Group 3 price, f. o. b., Group 3. The Group price may be described as the prevailing price among refiners in group 3, but it is not a fixed, definite figure on any particular day. In addition to other advantages naturally arising out of the location of their plants at East St. Louis, complainants have an advantage in rates on refined and fuel oils shipped from their plants to points in destination territory as compared with the rates on these commodities from Group 3 to the same points. The rates on refined and fuel oils from the mid-continent field to destinations in Indiana, Ohio and Michigan, made on the East St. Louis combination, will be increased 2.5 to 3c if the rates under suspenion are allowed to go into effect. The Commission must consider not merely the proportional rate in and of itself as compared with the local rate but also its use as a factor of the through rate from the mid-continent field. There have been numerous decisions with respect to the propriety of the establishment of proportional rates less than the local rates and many rates have been so established. The establishment of through charges upon the basis of the aggregate of proportional rates is but one method of stating such charges. If the carriers east of the river and the carriers west of the river were to establish joint through rates equal to the present through rates and cancel the separately published proportionals the service of the carriers east of the river would not be different from what it is now and complainants allegation of discrimination and undue prejudice because of the existence of lower proportionals east of the river would obviously have no foundation. HELD, rates from East St. Louis to official territory not unjust, unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory, or unduly preferential of refiners in the mid-continent field; the cancellation of proportional rates not justified. Petroleum and Petroleum Products between Points in Official Classification Territory, 78 I. C. C. 162.

(o) A "proportional rate," as the term implies, is simply a part of a through rate. It is the share of the aggregate charge from origin to destination which one or more of the carriers accepts for performing a definite portion of the whole transportation service. It is a matter of common knowledge that through rates are generally less than the sum of intermediate local rates; and when all the participating carriers do not join in establishing the through rates, it is a common practice for one or more of them to name proportional rates up to some point of connection with another carrier which completes or continues the transportation. The propriety and lawfullness of proportional rates to the point of transfer which are less than local rates to that point have frequently been affirmed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and are sanctioned by considerations of public policy. Hocking Valley Ry. Co. v. Lackawanna Coal & L. Co., 224 Fed. 930, 931.

II. DISCRIMINATION AND REASONABLENESS.

See Discrimination.

(a) The proportional rates per 100 lbs., charged by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company, on shipments of hay over its road and the road of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company, from Robinson and La Junta, Colo., and Dodge City, Kans., to Marshall, Jefferson, and Kildare, Tex., were excessive and unreasonable to the extent that they exceeded 21 cents for the transportation to Ft. Worth, Tex., and those of the Texas Company were excessive and unreasonable to the extent that they exceeded 15 cents for the transportation from Ft. Worth to the destinations named. H. B. Pitts & Son v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 691.

(aa) Facts stated concerning shipments of hay by complainant over the railways of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and Texas & Pacific Companies, from Robinson and La Junta, Colo., and Dodge City, Kans., to Marshall, Jefferson and Kildare, Tex. HELD, that the proportional rates per 100 lbs. charged by the former company were excessive and unreasonable to extent that they exceeded 21 cents for the transportation to Fort Worth, Tex., and those of the latter company excessive and unreasonable to the extent that they exceeded 15 cents for the transportation from Fort Worth to the destinations named, and that complainant is entitled to reparation from the A., T.

& S. F. R. Co., in the sum of $196 84. and from the T. & P. Co., in the sum of $51.95, with interest from August 1, 1903. H. B. Pitts & Son v. Atchison T. & S. F. R. Co., et al, 10 I. C. C. 691.

(b) Complainant attacked rates on hay from points on the E. & T. H. R., to points in the south as unreasonab e and unjustly discriminatory. The E. & T. H. does not make through rates with the other defendants from points in Indiana to destinations south of the Ohio River but has established on hay a local rate of 8c to Evansville and a proportional of 6.5c to Evansville when the shipment is billed through to a specified destination. The E. & T. H. refused to apply a proportional on shipments billed to Evansville in care of a southern line for points beyond, having discontinued a tariff providing therefor which was effective from Nov. 10, 1903, to July 19, 1904. The rate from Evansville by the other defendant lines is the same whether shipped locally from or through Evansville. HELD, it is unreasonable and unjust for the E. & T. H. to insist upon the billing of these shipments to a specified destination in order to secure application of the lower proportional rate, while it declines to assume responsibility for such billing and does not post in its stations the tariffs from which the shipper can him self ascertain the rate at which the shipment should be billed; and that while the proportional rate is kept in force it is reasonable and just that these shipments shall be billed to Evansville in care of the road leading southerly there from, as was actually done in 1903 and 1904. HELD, complainants are entitled to reparation on a shipment of one carload of hay from Johnstown, Ind., to Charleston, S. C., amounting to $4.36 from the E. & T. H. and $5.97 as admitted overcharge by the Georgia R. T. M. Kehoe & Co. v. E. & T. H. R. R., 11 I. C .C. 172.

(c) Complainant attacked as unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory and unduly prejudicial commodity rates on gacoal, carloads, from mines in Pennsylvania to Baltimore, Md., according as the coal may be finally forwarded or re consigned by water to Norfolk, Va., to points inside the capes, not including Norfolk or to "points outside the capes." Defendant carries coal to Baltimore destined finally to points outside the capes, (largely to New England points) and shipments of the same coal may be made to Norfolk, an Atlantic seaport. The rate to Baltimore on coal reshipped to points outside the capes points is forced by the competition of lines from other mines, and under such rate defendant secures a large annual tonnage via its lines to the port of Baltimore. The rate to Baltimore on coal for Norfolk is the local rate to Baltimore. If the shipments to Norfolk and points outside the capes be regarded as through shipments on what are in essence through rates, the competition stated might justify a higher rate to Baltimore when the final destination is Norfolk, then when it is a point outside the capes; but if this coal is all purely local to Baltimore, there is much doubt whether, as a matter of law, defendant can charge for the haul to Baltimore more in one case than in the other. Defendant also transports coal from Pennsylvania mines to Baltimore which may be carried from Baltimore by water to Norfolk and to various other points on the Bay inside the capes points. The rate to Baltimore on coal reshipped by water to points inside the capes is materially less than its rate to Baltimore on coal reshipped by water to Norfolk. Defendant's service and expense to Baltimore is the same whether the coal finally goes to Norfolk or to other points on the Bay. By agreement between the carriers of coal from the various mines to Norfolk, Newport News and other Chesapeake Bay points, competition has been suppressed, and while defendant does want to carry traffic to designated inside the capes points, it does not desire to participate in the coal traffic to Norfolk. HELD, that this constitutes wrongful prejudice and unjust discrimination, and that while defendant continues to give a rate less than its local to Baltimore on coal destined to inside the capes points, it can not lawfully deny the same rate on coal forwarded by water from Baltimore to Norfolk. Reparation awarded. City Gas Company of Norfolk v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 371.

(d) Complainant attacked commodity rates on the N. C. & St. L. Ry. and I. C., on oak staves and headings from Hollow Rock and other Tennessee points of origin to East St. Louis when destined to South Omaha, Nebr., as unreasonable when compared with the rates on such commodities over said roads from the same points of origin to East St. Louis when destined to Alexandria, Mo. or Keokuk, Iowa. The South Omaha rate is a combination of the 14c rate of the N. C. & St. L., and I. C., plus the local rate of 10c of the C. B. & Q., whereas the Keokuk or Alexandria rate is a joint rate of 19c, 14c to the first two carriers and 5c to the C. B. & Q. No complaint was made against the C. B. & Q. rate. It appeared that some years ago the division gave the C. B. & Q. its full local from East St. Louis to Keokuk and Alexandria, and the two eastern carriers 2c less than their joint rate to East St. Louis, but the division as now made gives these two roads the same earnings on cooperage products carried from Tennessee points to East St. Louis, whether destined to South Omaha, Alexandria or Keokuk. HELD, complaint dismissed. Omaha Cooperage Co. v. N. C. & St. L. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 251.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) Lower proportionals from points served by foreign carriers afford no basis for a charge of discrimination against a complaining point served by other carriers. Indianapolis Freight Bureau v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 56, 66.

(f) A proportional rate is nothing more or less than a separately established rate, as that phrase is used in section 6 of the amended Act, applicable to through transportation. And it has not been understood that a separately established rate can be other than an open rate available to all. Bascom Co. v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 17 I. C. C. 354, 356.

(g) Failure to apply proportional or shrinkage rates on shipments of grain may result in unjust discrimination. Indianapolis Freight Bureau v. C., C., C. & St. L. Ry., 26 I. C. C. 53, 60.

(h) The principle that where joint or proportional rates are made by all carriers leading to certain points of destination, it is proper to end a discrimination as between points of origin by a reduction in the rate from a certain point that was subject to discrimination, has application only where the traffic from both groups of origin is necessarily transported to destinations by the same connecting carrier or carriers, and where it is possible for the delivering carriers to put an end to the discrimination by the exercise of their power to refuse to enter into preferential joint or proportional rates. Memphis Freight Bureau v. B. & O. Ry. Co., 28 I. C. C. 543, 548.

(i) The withdrawal of proportional rates via circuitous line may be justified. Rates on Grain and Grain Products, 30 I. C. C. 16, 17.

(j) By withholding proportional rates from traffic handled in connection with a boat line, while according them on traffic handled in connection with a rail carrier operating between the same points as the boat line, a railroad unduly discriminates against the boat line and shippers who may choose to avail themselves of the water-and-rail route. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R., 33 I. C. C. 384, 390.

(k) Proposed elimination of class D proportional rates from west-bank Mississippi River points in Iowa and Missouri to stations in Iowa, constructed on basis prescribed in Interior Iowa Cases, 46 I. C. C. 39, from application on bituminous coal, leaving in effect increased combination rates, found not justified. Desire of carriers to effect uniformity in the coal-rate situation in Iowa would not be served by such cancellation, and elimination of class rates on coal furnishes no justification for increased rates. Proportional Rates on Coal to Iowa, 74 I. C. C. 729.

(l) Proposed extension to all ports of northern California of application of proportional rates on lumber and products from San Francisco Bay points to transcontinental destinations, now proposed elimination of restriction of such traffic to vessels filing tariffs with the commission, found justified. Purpose of extension is to place water-locked points more nearly on parity with points served by rail, and can only be effected by establishment of proportional rates somewhat lower than coast-ground all-rail rate. Lumber from San Francisco Bay Points, 78 I. C. C. 760.

(m) Proportional or transshipment rates may lawfully be made lower than local rates between same points. Lumber from San Francisco Bay Points, 78 I. C. C., 760, 767.

III. LEGALITY.

See Legality of Rates; Tariffs §14.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Evansville & Terre Haute

Railroad Company having, instead of making a through rate from points in Indiana to destinations south of the Ohio River, established a local rate on hay of 8 cents per hundred pounds to Evansville, and a proportional of 6½ cents to Evansville when the shipmennt is billed through to a specified destination, acts unreasonably and unjustly in insisting upon the billing of these shipments to a specified destination in order to secure application of the lower proportional rate, while it declines to assume responsibility for such billing, and does not post in its stations the tariffs from which the shipper can himself ascertain the rate at which the ship ment should be billed. While the proportional rate is kept in force it is reasonable and just that these shipments shall be billed to Evansville in care of the road leading southerly therefrom T. M. Kehoe & Co. v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 172.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Proportional rates are nothing more or less than separately established rates, as that phrase is used in section 6 of the Act, applicable to through transportation, and in order to be lawful must be established, within the meaning of section 6, by publication and filing with the Commission. Greater Des Moines Committee (Inc.) v. Director General, 60 I. C. C. 403, 407.

(c) The charging of a local rate for a shorter distance higher than a proportional rate for a longer distance over the same line or route in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, is not a violation of the fourth section. Iowa Railroad Commissioners v. Director General, 63 I. C. C. 405, 406.

(d) It is generally recognized that proportional or transshipment rates may lawfully be made lower than local rates between the same points. Rates in Bunker Coal, 73 I. C. C. 62 ,75.

(e) Proposed waiver of surrender of inbound-freight bills on grain shipments as a condition precedent to the application of proportional rates, and to accept in lieu thereof a certificate that shipments are to be forwarded by boat found not justified. The practice of permitting the application of proportional rates and stop-over privileges without surrender of inbound freight bills was condemned in 69 I. C. C. 185, and it is doubtful if such provision would have the intended effect as expressed in the holding of the commission that the rate in effect at the beginning of a transit movement must be applied on a shipment to final destination. Nonsurrender of Inbound Billing, 73 I. C. C. 455.

(f) Carriers may lawfully publish rates on coal for transshipment to vessels, when the coal is consigned to ultimate destination in this country, or abroad, which are lower than the coal rates from the same points of origin to the same ports. Proportional or transshipment rates of this character may lawfully be made lower than the local rates between the same points. No restrictions as to filing of tariffs were imposed. Lumber from San Francisco Bay Points, 78 I. C. C. 760, 767.

IV. EVIDENCE.

See Evidence §13 (5); Reasonableness of Rates.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Where a proportion of a through rate for part of a through haul is greatly disproportionate to the balance of the through rate, the knowledge of the circumstances and conditions (if any), justifying such disproportionate rate being peculiarly in the possession of the carrier, the burden is on the carrier to make proof of such justifying circumstances and conditions. Board of Trade v. Alabama Midland R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 348.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) The idea of differing proportional rates for the same service depending upon the origin or destination of the traffic did not originate with the Commission. It originated with and has been used by carriers to a greater or less extent, and is now and for a long time has been in effect on the lines of some of these defendants. The Commission is not insensible to the force of competitive conditions and is not disposed in these premises to insist upon the application of that theory in the face of the combined and harmonious judgment of complainants and defendants that it is undesirable and impracticable to apply it to traffic originating in Atlantic seaboard territory or in territory east of the Indiana-Illinois state line and moving to the Missouri River through Mississippi River crossings. In Re Advances in Rates by Carriers Operating Between the Mississippi and Missouri River, 21 I. C. C. 546, 551.

(c) A carrier cannot maintain a proportional rate on traffic reaching its line via one or more specified routes and at the same time maintain a higher proportional rate on the same traffic from the same point of origin and destined to the same point of consumption that comes to it at the same point via the same connecting carrier but over another route formed by different intermediate connecting carriers. Rosenbaum Bros. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 62, 65.

(d) Proportional rates applying to through traffic might well be lower than corresponding local rates. R. R. Comm. of Kan. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 407, 415.

(e) While local and proportional rates are not ordinarily comparable, comparisons of such rates may be considered in connection with other evidence in determining the reasonableness of a particular rate. Lindsay Bros. v. L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 516, 517.

(f) Proportional rates should not be compared with local rates in determining a violation of section 4. Rates on Grain and Grain Products to Texarkana, 29 I. C. C. 35.

(g) Proportional rates as such may not be attacked as unreasonable or otherwise in violation of the Act unless the through rates are also attacked, whether there be a claim for reparation or not, for even in cases where reparation is not demanded the proportional rate could not be considered by itself, as it is necessarily always a part of a through rate and can not be used alone. Local rates, however, when used as parts of through rates partake of the nature of proportional rates, and may be regarded as, in effect, local and proportional rates. So far as they are strictly local rates they may, of course, be brought in question without questioning the propriety of any other rate; in so far as they are used in through transportation they could be treated as other proportional rates and many not be considered unless the through rate be attacked as a whole. Stevens Grocer Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 42 I. C. C. 396, 398.

(h) Proportional rates are necessarily parts of through rates and differ from local rates used as parts of through rates in that before the proportional rate may be attacked at all there must be an allegation that the through rate is unreasonable because of the unreasonableness of the particular proportional rate; whereas local rates, as such, may be attacked separately when used separately. Stevens Grocer Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 42 I. C. C. 396, 398.

(i) The Commission has frequently held that proportional rates may properly be somewhat lower than the corresponding local rates. Swift & Co. v. Director General, 66 I. C. C. 409, 413.

(j) The Commission has never held that the local rate to a junction point must be paid on shipments that are going beyond that point. What it has said is that the local rate to the junction point shall be the same for all shippers to that point, and that the through charge on shipments going beyond the junction point shall be alike for all shippers to the same destination. Rates on Bunker Coal, 73 I. C. C. 62, 72.

(k) A rate on coal delivered to a vessel and thereafter used for bunker purposes may fairly be regarded and treated as a proportional or transhipment rate. Rates on Bunker Coal, 73 I. C. C. 62, 72.

V. CONTROL AND REGULATION.

See Control and Regulations.

§1. Jurisdiction of Commission.

See Interstate Commerce Commission I.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) When a carrier publishes a proportional rate, made applicable by its terms only to interstate shipments, that rate is subject to the jurisdiction of the Act and the Commission may determine whether the rate itself or the terms or conditions on which the rate is applied are just and reasonable. Kehoe & Co. v. E. & T. H. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 172, 179.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) The Commission has authority to reduce an excessive proportional rate where it is found to result in an unreasonable through rate. Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 46 I. C. C. 480.

(c) The power of the Commission under section 6 "to establish maximum proportional rates" by rail to and from ports is not confined to establishing such rates with only those water carriers who own docks, nor does provision of section 15 limit the power. B. & C. S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 176, 180.

(d) Proportional rates as defined by the Congress are "those which differ from the corresponding local rates." B. & C. C. S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 176, 181.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where interstate proportional or reshipping rates are named on shipments originating beyond reshipping or transit points such rates are applicable only in case the inbound charges are based on the inbound interstate rate. Kansas City Board of Trade v. A. T. & S. F. R. R., 69 I. C. C. 185, 190.

VII. REPARATION.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Proportional rate assailed found unreasonable. Reparation denied, due to failure of complainant to attack through rate. Boston Wool Trade Asso. v. B. & A. R. R. Co., 78 I. C. C. 178, 186.

PROTECTIVE SERVICE

See Facilities and Privileges §10½; Perishable Freight; Precooling; Refrigeration; Ventilation.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The railroads are solely and directly responsible for the protective service, even when performed through the agency of a carline company, and the question of justice or injustice to a separate entity does not enter in. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 464.

(b) The essential governing principle in determining the extent to which protective service might be required and the rates that should be charged for the same, is that one carrier may not be made to suffer for the shortcomings of another. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 464.

(c) In many respects protective service against heat or cold is closely intermeshed with the freight haulage service. It is not unlawful to secure compensation for all or any part of the protective service through the line haul rate on perishable freight, and that no presumption exists that compensation is not secured in this way. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 465.

(d) It was evident it was not the intent to prohibit the carrier, if it wished to do so, from regarding the haulage of the freight and incidental protection against heat or cold as one combined transportation service for which a single charge might be made, or from treating certain elements of the protection in this way and making a separate charge for others which could be more readily segregated from the haulage service. Manifestly, the intent was merely to require where a separate charge was in fact levied, that it be published and filed, so that it might be uniformly available and uniformly applied without discrimination. In other words, while all charges must be separately stated, the statute does not make it lawful to secure compensation for the protective service by regarding it as an integral part of the service of transportation. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 465.

(e) It is quite impossible to determine mathematically what weight has been given to any particular factor or that it has been given weight at all. The fact is not conclusive that the same rates are applicable whether or not protective tariff is afforded, for it is consistent with rate making practices to average the effect of such service on particular traffic, just as weather conditions throughout the year are averaged. No higher rates are charged in winter than in summer, although the cost of operation in winter is greater than in summer, at least in the northern territory. Nor is the fact conclusive that a rate or rating has remained unchanged for many years, for the increase in cost brought about by the development of protective service may have been offset by an increase in the volume of the traffic or a decrease in the cost of haulage, or both. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 466.

(f) Undoubtedly the best means of ensuring full justice in dealing with proposals to establish separate charges for protective service where none has heretofore existed or covering elements of cost which have not been so covered hitherto, is to consider at the same time the level of the corresponding line haul rates. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 466.

(g) Separate charges for protective service should not be established where none are now maintained, or covering elements of cost which have not hitherto been included, unless the carriers are prepared to justify as reasonable, if complaint be made, the increase which would result in the aggregate charge for haulage and protective service combined. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 467.

(h) It is obvious that the carriers are fairly entitled to reasonable compensation for the protective service which they furnish, and if the conclusion be reached that such compensation is not now afforded by the line haul rates there are only two ways in which it can be obtained, one being to increase these rates and the other to establish separate charges. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 480.

(i) Carriers are entitled to reasonable compensation for protective service they furnish, and if the conclusion be reached that such compensation is not afforded by the line haul rates, the only two ways in which it can be obtained are by increasing these rates or establishing separate charges. The latter system is deemed more equitable. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 480, 481.

(j) An opportunity in protective service for conservation of carrier revenues and food products exists in the harvesting or manufacture of ice, methods and facilities used at icing points, loading of freight and the proper encouragement of precooling, as well as in the construction and equipment of cars. Wastage in the service is a burden upon the country and can gradually be corrected. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 489.

(k) There is a vast opportunity in protective service against both heat and cold for conservation not only of carrier revenues but of the food products of the nation. This opportunity exists in the harvesting or manufacture of ice, in the methods and facilities used at icing points, in the loading of the freight, and in the proper encouragement of precooling before shipment, as well as in the construction and equipment of the cars Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 489.

(l) Shipments moving under Carriers' Protective Service require much closer attention and supervision than do shipments moving under refrigeration, due to danger from overheating with resulting damage, and also risk of damage from gas and smoke. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 533.

(m) Considerable risk attends Carriers' Protective Service, even with suitable equipment and reasonable transportation conditions, and is properly to be considered in estimating the cost of the service. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 540.

(n) It is not reasonable to require the shipper, who is much better informed in regard to the characteristics of his freight than the carrier can be, to specify the kind of protective service he desires, and further, if he desires protective service against cold, to specify whether he desires Shippers' Protective Service or Carriers' Protective Service upon the northwest lines, if his shipment is to move either wholly or partly within that territory. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 595.

(o) The value of protective service against cold to the shipper in insuring against loss and damage, to the carrier in stimulating traffic, and to the nation in conserving the food supply, makes it imperative that no individual railroad be permitted to hinder its further development. Heater Service for Fresh Fruits and Vegetables, 64 I. C. C. 283, 288.

(p) Proposed cancellation of note in rule of perishable protective tariff, which provides for saving of shipper's right to kind of protective service specified by him when carrier furnishes car of other type than that ordered, found not justified. There is no evidence that note has been misinterpreted or that it has been burdensome to carriers with respect to defending claims for loss and damage. On contrary, it is of benefit to carriers and informative to shippers. Rules for Protective Service on Perishable Freight, 83 I. C. C. 275, 277, 279, 281.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A quarantine order by the director of agriculture, excluding from the state shipments of alfalfa from weevil-infested territory outside the state, pursuant to the Washington law, HELD not ineffectual for want of formal proclamation by the Governor, as authorized by section 3 after his approval thereof, where it was filed in the secretary of state's office, as required by section 2, and all the railroad companies of the state were furnished copies. State v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co. (Wash. 1924), 223 P. 600.

(b) A state may exclude from its territory, without specific inspection at the state line, all of any commodity brought from territory, which its duly constituted authority, pursuant to its law, has in good faith found so afflicted with some blight or disease as will probably result in material injury, by infection, to a considerable part of property within the state, especially when it is a relatively large resource of the state. State v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co. (Wash., 1924), 223 P. 600.

RAIL-AND-WATER RATES

See Bill of Lading §3; Equalization §4 (3); Evidence §14 (4); Panama Canal Act; Port-to-Port Rates; Routing and Misrouting §6½; Water Carriers.

(a) Several railroads engaged in interstate commerce cross or touch a navigable river leaving a large space of territory along and near the river and between their lines that can be served only by steamboats, and in connection with steamboats these rail carriers carry freight to and receive it from this territory at points where they touch or cross the river respectively, but as to it they make through rates with only one line of steamboats and refuse to make such through rates with other steamboats on the river. HELD, the rail carriers may do this and it is not unjust discrimination or unlawful preference. Through rates and through billings are matters of agreement among carriers and the Commission has no power to compel them against their consent to enter into arrangements for through rates and through billing. Capehart v. L. & N. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 278.

(b) Where there were two routes from the place of shipment to the place of destination, one much longer and much more expensive to operate than the other, the longer and more expensive being operated by one, while the more direct and less expensive route was over continuous lines operated by more than one common carrier. HELD, that the rate must be reasonable for the transportation by the shorter and less expensive route. A. S. Newland v. Northern Pacific R. R. Co., et al, 6 I. C. C. 131.

(c) Rail lines between St. Paul and Duluth are part of lake and rail routes to New York, and such lines, operating under through rates with the lake carriers, can not be heard to set up water carriage as competition via the lakes, in excess of the rates which they themselves make in furtherance of that competition. George Tileston Milling Co. v. N. P. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 346, 356.

(d) On complaint that a rate of $1.61½ per 100 pounds on knit goods from New York and New York rate points via water and rail through Galveston, Tex., to Wichita, Kans., is unlawful, and with which is compared defendant's rate of $1.31 on that traffic through Wichita to Topeka, Kans. HELD, (1) that the difference in rates is justified by competition for traffic to Topeka which does not exist and apply with like force at Wichita; (2) that the rate to Wichita is not, under the circumstances, shown to be unreasonable. Johnston-Larimer Dry Goods Co. v. N. Y. & T. S. S. Co., 12 I. C. C. 58.

(e) Lake and Rail rates available eight months, influence as competitive rate extends through year. Johnston-Larimer Dry Goods Co. v. New York & T. S. S. Co., 12 I. C. C. 58.

(f) Complainant attacked class rates charged on knit goods from New York and New York rate points via water and rail through Galveston, Tex., to Wichita, Kans., as unreasonable. Rate charged to Wichita, Kans., $1.61½, through Wichita, to Topeka, Kans., $1.31. The difference in rates is justified by competition for traffic to Topeka which does not exist and apply with like force at Wichita. HELD, rate attacked not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Johnston-Lartimer Dry Goods Co. v. N. Y. & T. S. S. Co., 12 I. C. C. 58.

(g) Complainant attacked lake and rail rates charged on grass twine matting and rugs from St. Paul, Minn., to Boston, Mass., via rail and water through Duluth, Minn., as unreasonable. There were no through rates via Duluth at the time of shipment and rate charged was 23c to Duluth and 39c beyond, whereas at the same time rate via Lake Michigan ports was 45c and all rail 49c. Shortly afterwards the through rates for the open season basis of 44c which subsequently became the rate via Lake Michigan ports. HELD, rate attacked unreasonable to extent it exceeded 45c, reparation awarded. American Grass Twine Co. v. C., St. P., M. & O. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 141.

(h) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and discriminatory rate of 41c charged by ocean and rail from Augusta, Ga., to New York on cotton piece goods. For a period of ten years prior to the filing of the complaint the rate was 37c.

The rates complained of are the result of concerted action of defendants but this fact alone does not warrant a finding of unreasonableness. The rates on the manufactured products are not greatly in excess of the rates on the raw material of which they are made, while the values of the former are much in excess of the value of the latter, and the expense of handling the goods is materially greater than that of handling the cotton. HELD, rates attacked not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Warren Mfg. Co. v. Southern Ry., 12 I. C. C. 381.

(i) Complainant attacked as unreasonable class rates from Boson, Mass., and Providence, R. I., etc., rail and water, to Aiken, Graniteville, Langley and Blackville, S. C. It appears that class rates from north Atlantic ports were the same to a group of suburban mills as to Augusta, Ga., for ten or twelve years before the absorption of the S. C. & G. Ry. by the Southern; that subsequent to such absorption the long existing rates to these suburban points were increased by the concerted action of the carriers, though the mill group is still recognized on shipments in the opposite direction, and that this grouping system is still effective to the extent of classing together some of these suburban points which are as far apart as Augusta is from the nearest. It also appears that water lines by way of the Savannah River secure most of the freight of the heavy and bulky classes for these mills, and that a restoration of the Augusta rates to these suburban points would divert much of this traffic to the defendant lines and thus increase their revenue. HELD the rates to these suburban mill points in excess of those to Augusta are unjust and unreasonable. J. L. Quimby v. Clyde Steamship Co., 12 I. C. C. 392.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(j) As to whether a boat line or the rail line should publish a joint-rate tariff is a matter for the carriers themselves to determine and is of no concern to the Comission. Lake and Rail Rate Cancellation, 44 I. C. C. 745, 747.

(k) The Commission has never exercised jurisdiction over the individual or companies performing the intermediate services on lake cargo coal between the lower and upper lake ports going to interior points. Lake Cargo Coal Rates, 46 I. C. C. 159, 185.

(l) While rail-and-water rates have generally been lower than all-rail rates, there is no rate-making principle that requires such a relationship in all cases, nor that requires the Comission to condemn water-and-rail rates as unreasonable merely because they are on a higher basis than the all-rail rates between the same or adjacent points. Eastern Shore of Virginia Produce Exchange v. A. & St. L. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 436, 447.

(m) Fact that there is a water route affording a low rate from a given point to a certain destination does not justify the Commission in permitting the rail carrier to charge an unreasonable rate to that given point. Anaconda Copper Mining Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 723, 733.

(n) Portion of lake-and-rail rates accruing to water carriers not subject to the Commission's jurisdiction. National Supply Co. v. C., M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 57 I. C. C. 739, 741.

(o) The Commission has jurisdiction over the rail transportation which takes place wholly within a state on traffic moving to the ports by water from interstate or foreign points of origin. International Agricultural Corp. v. Director General, as Agent, 60 I. C. C. 726.

(oa) Contention that shipments delivered unrouted should have been forwarded via rail-water-and-rail routes at rates lower than those applied for the all-rail movement of the shipments. HELD: If a shipper desires his shipment to move via. a water-and-rail route that is cheaper than the all-rail route, he must in delivering it to the initial carrier specify such routing, otherwise it is understood that the shipment is to move via all-rail. Conf. Ruling 190. When the movement is all-rail, with certain exceptions, the initial carrier assumes the responsibility for the movement over the cheapest available route unless the consignor gives directions to the contrary. Conf. Ruling 214 (c). Schuhle's Pure Grape Juice Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 68 I. C. C. 485.

(p) Rail-and-lake on small-arms ammunition from Kings Mills, Ohio, via Cleveland, Ohio, to Duluth, Minn., found not unreasonable, but the participation of defendant Great Lakes Transit Corp., and the director general during Federal control, in joint rates from Bridgeport, and New Haven, Conn., to Duluth via rail lines to Erie, Pa., or Buffalo, N. Y., and the Great Lake company beyond less than 11 cents lower than those maintained from Kings Mills found to result in undue prejudice in favor of Bridgeport and New Haven. Peters Cartridge Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C. 311.

(q) It is not necessary to have the same rate by water as by rail to afford the two sets of carriers equality of opportunity from any given point of shipment. The slower service, the necessity for making arrangements for transshipment at the ports, the irregularity of ship movements, special requirements as to marking, and other considerations operate to the disadvantage of the water lines. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 60.

(r) Section 500 of the Transportation Act, 1920, wherein it is declared the policy of Congress to foster and preserve rail and water transportation, was Congress' way of saying that the commission should follow a less liberal policy in dealing with departures from the long and short haul rule than had been followed in former years. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 70.

(s) The commission is required to accord due observance to section 500 of the Transportation Act, 1920, which indicates the purpose of Congress to foster and preserve rail and water transportation. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 70, 71.

(t) It clearly would defeat the intent of Congress to foster transportation by rail and water in full vigor if rail carriers were permitted, at practically little or no profit to themselves, to operate so as to deprive water carriers of traffic which the water carriers would naturally handle. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 70, 71.

(u) That water transportation is cheaper than rail transportation is an elementary proposition. Crude Oil from Louisiana Points, 74 I. C. C. 623, 629.

(v) Whatever may be the case as between rail lines, joint rates over rail-and-water routes ought to be divided without regard to the extent to which rail carriers are short-hauled, and not upon a plan designed to discourage or render impracticable the use of such joint rates. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 355.

(va) Routing instructions designated two roads "and connecting lines" but did not specify rate. Tariff under which charges assessed named certain steamship lines as participating carriers. Contention by complainant that such steamship lines are "connecting lines" under routing instructions given and that reparation be awarded to basis of rate that would have resulted from rail-and-water movement, not sustained. If complainant desired to have shipment move over cheaper rail-and-water route, it should have specified such routing to initial carrier. Schule's Pure Grape Juice Co., 68 I. C. C., 485. Shipment not misrouted. Zelnicker Supply Co. v. S. L. Ry. Co., 81 I. C. C., 189.

(vb) Equation of 3 miles of water haul to 1 mile by rail adopted as measure of rail-and-water rates. Reduced Rates from New York Piers, 81 I. C. C., 312, 323, 324.

(vc) Section 15 (a), paragraph (5) of the act, which authorizes "uniform rates upon competitive traffic which will adequately sustain all carriers engaged in such traffic," and section 5, which contemplates "uniform rates in movement of competitive traffic," are not construed as prohibiting differentials for rail-and-water routes under all-rail routes between same points. Reduced Rates from New York, 81 I. C. C., 312, 329.

(vd) Provisions of section 15, paragraph (3), of the Act, restricting commission's regulatory power over rates of water lines, is inapplicable to water lines owned, controlled, or operated by rail lines, which, by section 5, paragraph (11) of the Act, have same status as controlling railroad. That commission has same power to fix minimum rates over such water carrier as though it were an all-rail line was decided in Rail-and-Water Rates from Atlantic Seaboard 63 I. C. C., 267. Reduced Rates from New York Piers, 81 I. C. C., 312, 330.

(w) Morgan, Mallory and Southern lines, respondents, in conjunction with rail carriers operating from Texas ports, proposed to establish local, proportional, and joint commodity rates on roasted coffee, less carloads, by water and rail from New York and Philadelphia to Galveston, Houston and interior Texas points. Roasted coffee, less carloads, from Atlantic seaboard territory to Texas destinations, is subject to third and fourth class, dependent upon the method of packing, which are the bases generally applicable within, to and from southwestern territory. The proposed adjustment will result in less carload commodity rates substantially lower than the class basis. The water lines cannot control the all rail rates to the interior points of destination, and only for the reason that the rail carriers participate in the joint rate of 66c at the same time maintaining higher rates to the same points of destination could the 66c rate be said to subject shippers under the all rail rates to undue prejudice. HELD, proposed rates not unduly prejudicial or otherwise unlawful. Roasted Coffee from Atlantic Seaboard, 83 I. C. C. 131.

(wa) The commission has no power to prescribe minimum rates over a through route where one of the carriers is a water line, except where such water line is owned or controlled by a rail carrier. Roasted Coffee from Atlantic Seaboard, 83 I. C. C., 131, 134, 135.

(wb) Section 15 (3) of the act authorizes commission to establish through routes and joint rates applicable to transportation of property where one of the carriers is a water line. However by that same section and paragraph it is provided that commission shall not "have right to establish any route classification, or practice, or any rate, fare, or charge when transportation is wholly by water." Boston Wool Trade Asso. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 83 I. C. C. 445, 449.

(x) Where goods transported under a joint water and rail rate were in fact unloaded from the vessel into the cars at a dock which made the total haul a greater distance than the haul by vessel alone, for which a greater rate was charged, the fact that the vessel could have been discharged at a dock nearer the point of destination, so that the haul would have been shorter, does not make the rate valid especially where the tariffs of the steamship company provided that cargoes would not be discharged other than at its regular landing place. Davis v. Parrington, 281 Fed. 10.

§1. In General.

(a) The Commission has the power and duty to fix maximum rates in cases of complaints against rates as unjust, excessive and unreasonable. Murphy, Wasey & Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 725, 727.

(b) The Act to Regulate Commerce expressly requires that transportation charges shall be reasonable, and empowers the Commission to enforce its provisions. Wherever the power of enforcing reasonable rates exists there must also exist the power to ascertain what is reasonable. The Commission is not restricted to finding that an existing rate is unreasonable and forbidding its continuance, but has the further authority to ascertain, order and enforce a rate that is reasonable. The power to determine and declare what is a maximum reasonable rate also results from those provisions of the Act which require the Commission to determine what reparation, if any, should be made by carriers to parties injured by their violations of law, and in cases of unreasonable rates the measure of reparation due to such a party is the difference between the rate actually charged and the reasonable rate which should have been charged. Perry v. Fla. Central & Peninsular R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 740.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) The Act creates a special administrative tribunal clothed with power to hear and determine causes of action involving a right which has long existed at common law, viz., the right to recover for an unreasonable transportation charge. The Act did not abrogate this common law right, and by the express language of section 22 the remedies already existing for its enforcement are saved. Where the special reme is lost by a subsequent act ousting the jurisdiction of the Commission, this does not affect the right of claimant to pursue his common law remedy. Hussey v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 13 I. C. C. 366, 368.

(d) Under the Hepburn amendment the Commission has jurisdiction over carriers engaged in the transportation wholly by railroad from one state to another, irrespective of "common control, management or arrangement," and the test of jurisdiction is not the arrangement under which the freight is delivered, but rather the character of the transportation itself. Leonard v. K. C. S. Ry. Co., 13 I. C. C. 573, 578.

(e) Complainant attacked rates from Billings, Mont., to points in Wyoming on branch lines of defendant. HELD, that these branch lines traverse a new country, where transportation conditions are difficult and the volume of business comparatively small. These lines, however, are operated as part of a great and prosperous system; they are feeders to the main line and help to swell the revenue of that line. A part of any great railroad system might be selected, and, counting cost of operation and fixed charges, such part be shown to be unprofitable. This, however, would not truly indicate its value and profitableness as an integral part of the whole property. The fact that these branch lines, considered by themselves, fail to show large earnings does not justify the charging of unreasonable rates. Billings Chamber of Commerce v. C., B. & Q. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 71, 75.

(f) The Commission is not a court of law. Its function is to apply the mandatory and restrictive provisions of the Act to stated conditions of fact. It must regard the problems presented from as many standpoints as there are public interests involved. The making of a rate is in ultimate analysis, the exercise of a taxing power on commerce. The reasonableness of a rate is to be determined by no mere mathematical calculation, though figures of cost and revenue must play a not inconsiderable part in arriving at a final judgement. The unrestricted power to make rates, however, should not rest in the hands of those whose tendency must be by reason of human nature to exact to the limit the highest return that can be procured. In Re Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 315.

(g) It is doubtless true that in its control over the charges which railroads may make, the Commission exercises a power so extensive as to justify the broadest consideration of the economic and financial effects of its orders. By its decisions in the Abilene Cotton Oil case, 204 U. S. 426, and in the Illinois Central case, 215 U. S. 452, the Supreme Court has erected the Commission into what has been termed "an economic court," or to give it a more commonplace definition, but one of stricter legal analogy, a select jury to pass upon the reasonableness and justness of railroad rates, rules and practices. Within broad lines of discretion the courts regard the conclusions of the Commission on questions of fact as final. There is an appeal upon questions of law by the carriers to the courts, but unless a constitutional guaranty is violated the order of the Commission is final, provided, of course, the Commission does not overstep the jurisdictional limits placed upon it by the statute. And as to the shipper this tribunal is his one and only resort against injustice. In Re Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 317.

(h) The Commission alone has the power to determine the reasonableness of a rate. In Re Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 317.

(i) The Commission has power to determine the reasonableness of differences in rates on various commodities. In Re Advances of Coal to Lake Ports, 22 I. C. C. 604, 623.

(j) The first section of the Act declares that every unjust or unreasonable charge, or any part thereof, is unlawful. In Re Wool, Hides and Pelts, 25 I. C. C. 675, 676.

(k) In removing unreasonableness of rates and unjust discriminations the Commission must take into consideration the effect of a drastic reduction in the revenues of the carriers. The Mississippi River Case, 28 I. C. C. 47, 59.

(l) The experience of shippers and carriers in the past resulted in the enactment of the Act., and the law limits such principles of rate making, at least to the extent that the rates on the low grade commodities must be just and reasonable to all shippers, and not discriminatory. Rates for Transportation of Anthracite Coal, 35 I. C. C. 220, 282.

(m) However reluctant the Commission may feel to sanction changes in rates which tend to impair or destroy the value of investments made in expectation of their continuance, it cannot on that ground deny to carriers the right to charge rates which are just and reasonable. Chattanooga Log Rates, 35 I. C. C. 163, 168.

(n) The Commission will not refuse to approve a rate basis which seeks merely to secure for the carriers a fair return in transportation charges on all tonnage actually hauled and to supplant a rate basis which has failed of this effect. Straw Rates from St. Louis to Anderson, Ind., 36 I. C. C. 30.

(o) The Commission has no power to substitute a new rate for a just and reasonable rate on the ground that it was a wise policy to do so, or that the railroad had so conducted itself as to be estopped in the future from being entitled to receive a just and reasonable compensation for the service rendered. S. P. Co. v. I. C. C. 219 U. S. 433, 443, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288, 55 L. Ed. 283.

(p) It is not within the authority of the Commission to reduce rates not merely against the weight of the evidence produced to sustain them, but without anything substantial to warrant the conclusion reached or the reasons assigned therefor. L. & N. R. R. Co. v. I. C. C., 195 Fed. 541, 564.

(q) The authority granted the Interstate Commerce Commission under section 15 of the Act to prescribe reasonable rates does not confer absolute or arbitrary power to act on any considerations which the Commission may deem best for the public, the shipper, and the carrier. Its order must be based on transportation considerations. While it may give weight to all factors bearing either on the cost or the value of the transportation services, it must disregard as well the demand of the shipper for protection from legitimate competition, domestic or foreign, for unlimited markets, or for the enforcement of equitable estoppels arising from a justifiable expectation that past rates will be maintained, and the demand of the carrier for the maximum rate under which the traffic will move freely. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. I. C. C., 190 Fed. 591, 594.

(r) When the legislative power concerns the administrative affairs of the Commission, it may be delegated to an officer, or a board already existing or created for the purpose, and, when so delegated, the power may be as fully exercised as the legislature might have exercised it subject to any limitations imposed by the legislature itself. Under this rule the power vested in the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix rates for the future is constitutional. L. & N. R. R. Co. v. I. C. C., 184 Fed. 118, 122.

(s) Congress did not in the Act and its amendments intend to vest administrative authority in the courts in the matter of fixing rates, but on the contrary committed the power to and imposed the duty to ascertain facts and determine what is reasonable in regard to rates and charges in view of such facts on the Commission. L. & N. R. R. Co. v. I. C. C., 184 Fed. 118, 124.

(t) What rates, involved in a complaint before the Commission, should be, whether they should remain as fixed by the railroad company or whether there should be other rates, is a matter committed by the statute to the Commission to be settled by its opinion as to what is just and reasonable, and when so settled, its determination is binding, and is not subject to judicial review, unless it is made to appear that the Commission in making it has not merely erred in the exercise of its power, or has proceeded upon grounds and reasons which to a court might seem unsatisfactory, but has violated some distinct paramount right secured by the Constitution or otherwise vested in the carrier, or in the public. L. & N. R. R. Co. v. I. C. C., 184 Fed. 118, 128.

II. ELEMENTS DETERMINING REASONABLENESS.

§2. In General.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Where from Wabasha, the junction of the "narrow gauge" branch with the main line of defendant's railway, the distance over the main line northwest to Lake City is twelve miles, and to Red Wing twenty-nine miles and over the branch line the distance west from Wabasha to McCracken is eighteen and to Mazeppa fifty-two miles, and the distance north from Mazeppa to Red Wing by wagon road is twenty-two miles, and nearly the same to Lake City, and both are competitors with Mazeppa for the grain and other trade with the territory intervening; the distance from Chicago to Mazeppa being 392 miles from Red Wing, 369 miles from Lake City 352 miles, and to Milwaukee the distance is less than to Chicago by 107 miles and the complainant alleged that the discriminations made by the defendant against the locality of Mazeppa were unjust and sufficient to divert largely its grain business; that the excess charged of eight cents in the Mazeppa rates over Lake City and Red Wing rates was and, any difference or excess in such rates above two cents would be an undue preference in favor of Lake City and Red Wing and an unreasonable prejudice against Mazeppa in respect of the grain and other trade in which complainant was and is interested, and the only evidence in support of complainant's statement that the Mazeppa rate, now 12½ cents, is unreasonable, is afforded by comparison of this and other rates on the branch line with the Red Wing, Lake City and other rates on the River Division of the main line; the Commission declined to declare 12½ cents an unreasonable charge for the services rendered, or that a rate nearly a third lower than it had ever been previous to the Act to Regulate Commerce is unjust and unlawful of itself, or within the meaning of the first section of the said Act. Raymon v. Chic., Milwaukee & St. Paul R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 627.

(b) A variety of practical considerations must enter into making of freight rates and determine to a great extent whether rates are reasonable. Evans v. Oregon Railway Navigation Co., 1. I. C. R. 641.

(c) The length and character of the haul, the cost of service, the volume of business, the conditions of competition, the storage capacity and the geographical situation of the different terminal points are all elements of importance bearing upon the relative reasonableness of the respective charges for transportation. Boston Chamber of Commerce v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 754.

(de) To determine the reasonableness and justness of any freight rate made by a railroad company, all the surrounding circumstances and conditions must be considered as well as the rights of the shipper, and if these circumstances and conditions are so compulsory or imperious that they fairly and justly exercise any controlling influence in the making of the rate, they cannot be disregarded in a proceeding in which the reasonableness and justness of the rate is presented for determination. Business Men's Asso. v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co, 2 I. C. R. 41.

(f) The provision of the Act to Regulate Commerce, that all rates shall be just and reasonable, was intended for the protection of the general public, and not for that of the carrier against the action of its own officers or the action of rivals. Re Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 137.

(g) The provisions in the Act that all rates shall be just and reasonable, was a provision for the protection of the general public, and not for the protection of carriers against the action of their own officers or against the action of rivals. The carriers were supposed to have means of self protection against unreasonably low rates in the power they had to make the rates themselves. Re Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 137, 147.

(h) The question of the reasonableness of rates is always a perplexing one; a great variety of considerations are necessarily involved in each instance; theory and conjecture merely are not enough; a comparison of one isolated rate with another is not sufficient; the whole field must be considered in order to approximate justice, and at best the result can not be regarded as other than an approximation. Howell v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 162, 171.

(i) A prima facie case of unreasonableness of rates is not made out by showing that the rates for a certain commodity are higher in certain cases than certain other rates, and that they produce a large profit to the carrier. When a question of reasonable rates is presented, the whole subject would be laid open, with all the attending circumstances and relations. Howell v. N. Y., L. E. & W. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 162, 172.

(j) Rates that are just and reasonable from selected manufacturing points through the entire territory east of Missouri River and west of the Atlantic Seaboard, are prima facie just and reasonable from all other points in the same territory. Re Tariffs of the Trans-Continental Lines. 2 I. C. R. 202.

(k) To be reasonable the rate from Meridian to New Orleans should not exceed $1.50 per bale, compressed cotton. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 289.

(l) To protect the rights of shippers rates must be reasonable of themselves. They must be reasonable and equitable in their relation to prevent undue prejudice or disadvantage to any person or kind of traffic. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. C., N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 289, 293.

(m) Complainants have the right to be protected against unreasonable and unjust rates; but their reasonableness and justice must be determined not alone by the exigencies of complainants business but with due regard for the circumstances of the carrier as well. Rice Robinson & Witherop v. N. Y. & P. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 298, 300.

(n) A railroad company is under special obligation to give reasonable rates for its local business; but there are many influences which may affect through rates while not bearing upon local rates at all, or, if at all, in less degree. Lippman v. Illinois C. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 414.

(o) No presumption arises that a rate is reasonable from the mere fact that it has been put in effect; and when it is prima facie disproportionate or relatively unequal, the burden is on the carrier to justify its charges when challenged on those grounds. McMorran & Co. v. G. T. R. R. of Canada, 2 I. C. C. 604, 607.

(oa) In solving questions concerning the reasonableness of rates, the Commission will look at and consider every fact, circumstance and condition surrounding the traffic and of the service performed in its transportation, and if the competition of water carriers at any point is such as to be large, active, and of controlling force, the all-rail lines competing for the traffic at the same point may make rates that are reasonable and just, in view of such competition, and which will enable them to participate in the carriage of the traffic, and are not obliged to go out of the business and leave it as a monopoly to water carriers. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. Illinois Central R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 777.

(p) The rates of forty-six cents per hundred pounds on grain and fifty-one cents on flour and meal between the grain region in Kansas and a large district in Texas are the same for distances shorter than two hundred and fifty and longer than eight hundred miles and are unreasonably high for the longer and grossly excessive and extortionate for the shorter distances. Rates and Charges on Food Products, 3 I C. R. 93.

(q) The charge of twenty cents on the hundred pounds of corn and oats from the Missouri River to Chicago, and five cents less to the Mississippi River, is excessive, and to be reasonable should not exceed seventeen cents to Chicago and twelve to the Mississippi River, east side. Rates and Charges on Food Products, 3 I. C. R. 93.

(r) The question of the reasonableness of a rate of charge for transportation by a railroad company is eminently a question for judicial investigation, requiring due process of law for its determination. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, Minnesota R. & W. Com. (U. S. Sup. Ct.), 3 I. C. R. 209.

(s) If the company is deprived of the power of charging reasonable rates for the use of its property, and such deprivation takes place in the absence of a judicial investigation, it is deprived of the use of its property, and, in effect, of the property itself, without due process of law and in violation of the Constitution of the United States. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. State of Minn., 3 I. C. R. 209.

(t) A carrier does not and can not expect to receive equally remunerative rates from each of the different kinds of freight carried by it over its line. It is entitled to a fair, reasonable and just rate upon each of these; and what is a fair, reasonable and just rate depends upon a variety of considerations. Harvard Company v. Pennsylvania Co., 3 I. C. C. 257, 262.

(u) A common carrier cannot lawfully make unreasonable charges for his services nor unjust discrimination between his customers. Cook & Wheeler v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 383.

(v) A common carrier can not be required to move interstate traffic without the payment of reasonable charges for its service, and can exact only a reasonable charge from the traffic. The reasonableness of the charge may depend on a variety of considerations, and the relations of one article to another, or of one locality to another, may be among those considerations. Kauffman Milling Co. v. M. P. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 400, 407.

(w) There is no unbending rule by which to determine what common carriers may reasonably charge for their services, and the reasonable rate must be ascertained from the facts of the particular case. To be reasonable, rates must be just, both to the parties immediately interested and to the public Coxe Bros. & Co. v. L. V. R. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 460, 478.

(x) The requirement of the Statute that all rates shall be reasonable and just involves a consideration of the commercial value of the traffic, and implies that rates should be so adjusted that producers of traffic as well as carriers may carry on their pursuits successfully, if practicable for both and without injustice to the carrier. The public good requires what is plainly the spirit of the Law, that the transportation interests are not alone to be considered, but that in the just exercise of regulation care should be taken that the lawful and necessary occupations of citizens are not unjustly burdened. Delaware State Grange v. N. Y. P. & N. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 554.

(y) The rates on wheat and barley of 50 and 56 cents per hundred weight, respectively, charged from Ritzville, Washington, to St. Paul, Minnesota, a distance of 1,576 miles, in view of the circumstances and conditions surrounding the traffic, are held not to be unreasonable. Buchanan v. Northern P. R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 655.

(z) The increasing or diminishing volume of business, the market price of the articles to be transported, the relation of local to through freights, the articles of freight upon which the railroad must depend as compared with other roads transporting similar commodities through more populous communities, the development of competition, the opening of new lines of communication, the course of business which may concentrate empty cars at either terminus of the line, all have a bearing upon the making of reasonable rates. Buchanan v. N. P. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 655, 658.

(aa) In passing upon the reasonableness of rates, the question whether they afford the carrier a proper return for the service rendered is to be considered as well as the result of the business to the shipper or producer of traffic. Laud v. South Carolina R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 205.

(bb) When the reasonableness or relative reasonableness of charges is challenged every material consideration which enters into the making of such charges including the apportionment thereof to connecting roads in a through line, is pertinent to the inquiry. James & Abbott v. C. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 274, 281.

(cc) All charges made for any service in the transportation of any passengers or property, or for receiving, delivering, storing, or handling property, must under the Interstate Commerce Act be reasonable and just; and no discrimination can be made in rates, charges, or facilities. Cutting v. Florida R. & Nav. Co., (C. C. N. D. Fla.), 4 I. C. R. 424.

(dd) In the absence of some prohibition or restraint, common law or statutory, a common carrier may lawfully demand or contract for such compensation for carriage as he may be able to obtain, without regard to its unreasonableness. Swift & Co. v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 633.

(ee) There is no hard and fast test which can be laid down to determine whether or not the rates of railroad freight charges established by the legislature are just and reasonable. Ames v. Union Pacific R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 835.

(ff) Under the 1st section of the Act to Regulate Commerce, the question may be made as to whether a given rate is, in and of itself, unreasonable and unjust. In the consideration of such a question rates to other places or points of shipment are unimportant, except as evidentiary circumstances; but where the conditions are similar, proof of rates charged by other roads is of great value. Interstate Commerce Commission v. L. & N. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 656.

(gg) The terms "reasonable and just," "unreasonable or unjust," "undue or unreasonable preference or advantage," "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever," as used in the statute, imply comparison of relative locations, of natural and acquired advantages, of the reasonableness of charges per se and in their relation to other rates on the various lines which serve competing localities, and consideration of all the facts and circumstances which affect rates to different communities. Daniels v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., et al, 6 I. C. C. 458.

(hh) The value of the goods, the cost of the services, and the degree of risk to the carrier, among other considerations, have an important bearing on the relation of the rates on different kinds of traffic, as well as the reasonableness of a rate on a specified article. Colorado Fuel & I. Co. v. Southern P. Co., 6 I. C. C. 488.

(ii) Upon complaints of unreasonable and unjust rates for the transportation of wheat from Walla Walla and Dayton, Wash., to Portland, Ore., and after investigation and consideration of all the facts and circumstances in each case. HELD, that the rates complained of were unjust and unreasonable; that reduced wheat rates put in force between said points during the pendency of these proceedings are still above reasonable and just charges for the service rendered; that the wheat rate from Walla Walla to Portland should not exceed 19½ cents per hundred pounds, or $3.90 per ton; and the rate for the somewhat longer distance from Dayton to Portland should not exceed 20 cents per hundred pounds, or $4.00 per ton. Complainant's claim for money reparation denied. Evans v. Union Pacific R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 520.

(jj) Complainant attacked as unjust and unreasonable rates on wheat from Walla Walla and Dayton, Wash., to Portland, Ore. Rate charged on wheat $4.70 per ton, distance from Walla Walla, 246 miles. In Milton Evans v. O. R. & N. R. Co., decided Dec. 3, 1887, the Commission found the rate charged unreasonable to extent it exceeded 23½ cents per 100 pounds during the grain season of that year with the further statement that the defendants were to make further reductions after the season had closed. The carriers did not take any affirmative action on their statement to that effect. HELD, rate attacked unreasonable to extent it exceeded 19½ cents from Walla Walla and 20 cents from Dayton, a longer distant point. Evans v. U. P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 520.

(kk) The charges of the Eureka Springs Railway Company between Seligman and Eureka Springs on first class goods to or from the Harrison district are 19 cents per 100 pounds, and on the business of Eureka Springs proper are 35 cents, with proportionate rates on all classes, which Eureka Springs rates are found to be unreasonable and unlawful. Cary v. Eureka Springs R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 286.

(ll) Freight rates from Chicago and other eastern points to Kearney, Neb., made by combining rates to and from Omaha, a point on the Missouri River, are not unreasonable in amount, and the evidence was insufficient upon the question whether such rates subject Kearney merchants to unlawful disadvantage. Gustin v. Atchinson, T. & S. F. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 277.

(mm) Rates can not be said to be reasonable which are not reasonably remunerative to the carrier, and rates which do not pay their full proportion of operating expenses, fixed charges and reasonable dividends are not per se or in and of themselves reasonably remunerative. Board of Trade of Hampton, Fla., v. N. C. & St. L. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 503, 524.

(mma) As a matter of general application, rates at Denver to or from the east, or to or from the Pacific Coast, ought not to be higher than those between San Francisco and other Pacific Coast terminals and the Missouri River or points east. Kindel v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 608.

(nn) A reasonable rate is the only remedy available to an independent coal operator competing with a railway owning most of the mines upon its system, where the carrier conducts its mining operations at a loss, and relies for its profit upon the revenue derived from the carriage of the product. McGrew v. Missouri P. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 630.

(oo) There is no absolute rule by which the reasonableness of a rate can be determined. That depends upon competitive, commercial and operating conditions which are constantly varying. A conclusion eminently proper upon the facts of today would, perhaps, be entirely wrong tomorrow. The authority which is exercised by the Commission in the making of an order to cease and desist from charging a particular rate is rather administrative than judicial and in the nature of things of a continuing character. It would be most unfortunate both for the railway and the public and most illogical to apply to the exercise of that power the doctrine of res judicata. Cattle Raisers Asso. v. C., B. & Q. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 83, 106.

(pp) The rate of 47 cents on sugar from New Orleans to Wichita is unreasonable. Lehman-Higginson Grocery Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 460.

(qq) The test of the reasonableness of a rate is not the amount of profit in the business of the shipper or manufacturer, but whether the rate yields a reasonable compensation for the service performed. Carriers necessarily and justly participate in the prosperity of their patrons in the resultant enlargement of their own business. Central Yellow Pine Asso. v. I. C. R. R., 10 I. C. C. 505, 535.

(rr) The elements to be considered in determining the reasonableness of an entire system of rates are widely different from those involved in the question of the reasonableness of the rate upon a single commodity. Central Yellow Pine Asso. v. I. C. R. R., 10 I. C. C. 505, 539.

(ss) The rate of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company for the transportation in carload lots of snapped corn from Grove, I. T., to Paris, Tex., is excessive and unreasonable to extent it exceeds 21 cents per 100 lbs. H. B. Pitts & Son v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 684.

(tt) Upon the evidence as presented it does not appear that a rate of 62 cents per hundred pounds on "wool in the grease" from Philadelphia, Pa., to Ft. Wayne, Ind., is unreasonable. Weil v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 627.

(uu) While the law requires all rates to be reasonable and just, and forbids unreasonable discriminations, it does not prescribe any measure or test of reasonableness in either case. It is manifest that the reasonableness of every rate or discrimination called into question must be determined and measured by the circumstances and conditions affecting the business. The potency of any particular fact, circumstance or condition in a given case is to such an extent dependent upon or modified by others, so that that which is of great importance in one case may be of minor consequence in another. It follows that it can not be required in reason that rates must in all cases be the same in both directions between the same points any more than they can be made on a strictly uniform mileage basis. Weil v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 627, 629.

(vv) The rate of $1.75 per ton on anthracite coal and $1.40 per ton on bituminous coal from Superior, Wis., to Hastings, Minn., are unreasonably high, and should not exceed $1.50 per ton on anthracite and $1.25 per ton on bituminous coal. Hastings Malting Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 675.

(vva) Complainant shipped 13 carloads of beer between January 20, 1901, and March 4, 1902, as through shipments over defendant's lines, from Milwaukee, Wis., to Woodward, Okla., upon 8 carloads of which he was charged a rate of 73 cents per 100 pounds, and upon 5 carloads 75 cents; whereas during the time of such shipments defendants' rates on beer from Milwaukee to Oklahoma City, Okla., more distant than Woodward, were only 53 cents per 100 pounds. It appears that the rate to Woodward was 53 cents in 1892 and up to March 1, 1899, while the rate to Oklahoma City was 76 cents in 1892, which was reduced in 1893 to 53 cents, and so continued to 1899; and it also appears that on April 9, 1902, defendants reduced such rates to Woodward to 53 cents, where they have ever since remained. Upon all the facts and circumstances, HELD, that the rates charged upon complainant's shipments were unjust and unreasonable to the extent of $715.05, and that complainant is entitled to reparation in that amount. Cutler v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., et al, 11 I. C. C. 689.

(ww) Class rate of $3.80 per ton, on brick, carloads, from Frederick, Md. to Elberon, N. J., 236 miles, unreasonable. Frederick Brick Works v. Northern C. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 13.

(xx) Ninety-six cents on cotton goods from producing points in Texas compared with 50 cent rate to Kansas City and St. Louis, and 55 cent rate to Omaha and Chicago, unreasonable. Johnston v. A., T. & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 47.

(yy) Coal to Enid, Okla., from Henryetta District, Ind. Terr., 180 miles, of $1.95 for lump and $1.50 for slack, excessive and unreasonable. Johnson v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 73.

(zz) Coal to Enid, Okla., from San Bois District, Ind. Terr., 225 miles average distance, $2.10 per lump and $1.50 per slack, excessive and unreasonable. Johnston v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 73.

(3a) Rates per ton on coal, carloads, of $1.95 for lump and $1.50 for slack from the Henryetta District, Indian Territory, to Enid, Okla., 180 miles, over the St. Louis & San Francisco road, are excessive and unreasonable, and should not exceed $1.60 for lump and $1.25 for slack. Action of carrier in making effective March 31, 1907, rates of $1.65 for lump and $1.25 for slack is noted. Complainant is allowed thirty days to file statement of shipments under his claim for reparation, as to which claim the case is reserved. Johnston v. St L. & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 73.

(3b) Rates per ton on coal, carloads, of $2.10 for lump and $1.50 for slack from the San Bois District, Indian Territory, to Enid, Okla., 225 miles everage distance, over the Fort Smith & Western and Denver, Enid & Gulf roads, are excessive and unreasonable, and should not exceed $1.85 for lump and $1.35 for slack. Reparation is denied. Johnston v. St. L. & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 73.

(3c) Rates per ton on coal, carloads, of $1.65 for lump and $1.35 for slack from the Lehigh district, Indian Territory, to Enid. Okla., 235 miles, over the Missouri, Kansas & Texas and Denver, Enid & Gulf roads, are not, upon the evidence, excessive or unreasonable. Johnston v. St. L. & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 73.

(3d) Rates per ton on coal, carloads, of $2.10 for lump and $1.40 for slack from the McAlester district, Indian Territory, to Enid, Okla., 290 miles, via the Missouri, Kansas & Texas and Denver, Enid & Gulf roads, are not, upon the evidence, excessive or unreasonable. Johnston v. St. L. & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 73.

(3e) Complainant made shipment of grass twine matting and rugs from St. Paul, Minn., to Boston, Mass., via Duluth, over defendants' lines, upon which it was charged a rate of 62 cents per 100 pounds; this rate was a combination of a rail rate of 23 cents to Duluth plus a lake and rail rate of 39 cents from Duluth to Boston; at the date of the shipment lake and rail joint through rates via Duluth were not effective, but a rate via Lake Michigan ports of 45 cents per 100 and an all rail joint through rate of 49 cents were in force; HELD, that under the special and peculiar circumstances disclosed upon the record, the 62 cent rate on such shipment was unreasonable, and that the 45 cent rate in effect from St. Paul to Boston via Lake Michigan ports at the time of the shipment affords a reasonable basis for fixing the rate for the service rendered at the same amount. Amer. Grass Twine Co. v. C., St. P. M. & O. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 141.

(3f) Rate of 81 cents on peaches from Macon and Atlanta, Ga., to Philadelphia and New York, and 78 cents to Baltimore and Washington, and refrigeration charge of 12½ cents per crate of 42 pounds, minimum carload 550 crates, unreasonable and unjust. Waxelbaum v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 178.

(3g) Defendants' rate of 28½ cents per 100 pounds for the transportation of wheat from Oklahoma City, Okla., to Gainesville and Fort Worth, Tex., found unreasonable and defendants required to establish in lieu thereof a rate of 20 cents to Gainesville and a rate of 22 cents to Fort Worth. Mitchell v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 325.

(3h) Shippers along the line of an interstate carrier are entitled to have their products moved in either direction at reasonable rates, and the Commission can not agree that a carrier may establish prohibitive rates on any commodity on the ground that it is not desirable traffic for that carrier. A. J. Poor Grain Co. v. C., B. & Q. Ry. Co., et al, 12 I. C. C. 418.

(3i) Rates of G., C. & S. F. Ry. Co. of 27 and 29 cents per 100 pounds of cotton seed in carloads from Marietta and Berwyn, Okla., respectively to Cleburne, Tex., are unreasonable, and should not exceed 16 and 18 cents per 100, respectively, and the joint rate of the G., C. & S. F. Ry. Co., and the St. L. S. W. Ry. Co. of Texas, of 45 cents per 100 pounds on cotton seed in carloads from Marietta, Okla., to Plano, Tex., is unreasonable and should not exceed 25 cents per 100 pounds. Pressley v. Gulf, Colo. & S. F. Ry. Co., et al, 12 I. C. C. 518.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(3j) The interstate rates of the country, having grown up under the operation of various forces and conditions and not on any consistent theory, must be dealt with by the Commission as it finds them; the Commission has no authority to establish general rate schedules; and, unless, therefore, the general result of all rates is to yield an undue revenue to the carrier, the Commission will not reduce a particular rate simply because it may think, in establishing the rate de novo as part of the general scheme that it ought to be somewhat lower or higher in proportion to others; the rate attacked must be so out of proportion as to be unreasonable, or must so discriminate as to be undue, or must be unlawful for some other special reason. Corn Belt Meat Producers' Assn. v. C., B. & Q. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 376, 394.

(3k) Rates cannot be established to shut out foreign products. Florida Fruit & Vegetable Shippers v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 476, 502.

(3l) In publishing a rate or schedule of rates the carrier must act under section 1 of the Act, requiring rates to be reasonable and just. If it establishes a rate which is excessive, such rate is not lawful when its reasonableness is subsequently questioned upon complaint filed. While it is the legal rate—the rate that must be paid by the shipper and collected by the carrier because it is the published rate—the mere publication cannot make a rate lawful that is unreasonable and excessive. No rate can be lawful in the sense of being immune from attack with respect to past or future shipments if it be excessive and unreasonable in amount. Arkansas Fuel Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 95, 97.

(3m) The American railroad rate has always been recognized as covering the full service which the carrier gives—in furnishing the car, a proper place at which to load it, the conveyance of that loaded car, and its terminal delivery. The charge for these various services is not in America broken up into its component parts and a charge imposed for each, as in England. The rate, which it requires shall be published, is a complete rate which includes not only the charge for haul, but the charge for the use of the terminals at both ends of the line. Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 310, 314.

(3n) Rates should be so adjusted as to permit the widest possible competition. Andy's Ridge Coal Co. v. So. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 405, 410.

(3o) Freight rates cannot be made solely with reference to the value of the article transported, or with reference alone to the loss and damage claims arising from transportation. The carrier is entitled to take into consideration the occupancy of its equipment and facilities, or in other terms, to charge for the service rendered. This charge for the service rendered may be tested relatively by means of the rate per ton mile, which is most helpful in connection with dense and heavy articles, or the value of the service and the reasonableness of the rate may be tested by means of the rate per car per mile, where articles of the same relative weight, density, direction and volume of movement are in question; but generally the ultimate test with the carrier itself must be the return for the occupation and use of its equipment and facilities. National Hay Ass'n. v. M. C. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 34, 47.

(3p) The standard of the law by which the validity of any rate as affected by its amount is determined is not more definite than that it must be reasonable and just. The test of reasonableness can be applied only by reference to and upon consideration of all pertinent facts, circumstances and conditions affecting the rate in effect at any particular time. In the nature of the case there can be no rule or process whereby the definite absolute maximum limit of reasonableness in the amount of a rate can be fixed with the certainty of a demonstration. Anadarko Cotton Oil Co. v. A., T. & S. F. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 43, 49.

(3q) Carriers are presumed to act in good faith in initiating rates, and their rates cannot be condemned except upon investigation and full hearing. A rate reasonable in view of the circumstances and conditions when it is established may in course of time become unreasonable by virtue of changed circumstances and conditions. It is manifestly impracticable for the carriers or the Commission in such a case to determine at what exact time in the gradual process of changes the rate becomes unreasonable. Anadarko Cotton Oil Co. v. A., T. & S. F. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 43, 50.

(3r) The railroad rates of this country have not been constructed, as a rule, upon any scientific basis, and this is especially true of the interstate rates. The traffic officials who have established these rates have generally done so without any special inquiry as to the total amount of revenue which ought to be produced, or as to the part of that burden which a particular commodity ought to bear. This Commission is called upon to deal with rates as they exist, and in so doing it ordinarily considers them not from the revenue standpoint, but rather from the commercial and traffic standpoint. At the same time it is now the settled law that there is a limit below which the revenue of railroads cannot be reduced by public authority, and if there were no such constitutional limitations it would, nevertheless, behoove every regulating body to permit the existence of such rate, when possible, as would yield just earnings to the railway The question of revenue is therefore fundamental and ever present in all considerations as to the reasonableness of railroad rates, although it may not be and seldom is, where single rates are presented, the controlling question. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 248.

(3s) Railroads should be kept in a high state of efficiency and rates should be sufficient to permit this. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 250.

(3t) The Commission must be conscious in its consideration of rate questions of their effect upon the policy of the railroads and ultimately upon the welfare of the state. This country cannot afford to have poor railroads, insufficiently equipped, unsubstantially built and carelessly operated. We need the best of service. Our railroad management should be the most progressive. It should have wide latitude for experiment. It should have such encouragement as would attract the imagination of both the engineer and the investor. Nevertheless it is likewise to be remembered that the government has not undertaken to become the directing mind in railroad management. The Commission is not the manager of the railroads. And no matter what the revenue they may receive there can be no control placed by the Commission upon its expenditure, no improvements directed, no economy enforced. Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 317.

(3u) The legislature may not make rates so as to confiscate the carrier's' property. The carrier on the other hand may not make rates which are unjust to those who by economic necessity are compelled to employ its services. Advances in Rates—Western Case 20 I. C. C. 307, 347.

(3v) Once the comparative cost for various services is learned a schedule of rates may be made which will approach justice as between services. Supplement cost with scientific classification of freight giving their due to all the various factors such as value, bulk and hazard—especially to value—adding return for use of plant, and force is given to every factor which the Supreme Court has said should be considered in the fixing of rates for public utilities. Advances in Rates—Western Case. 20 I. C. C. 307, 362.

(3w) What the public is primarily interested in is the charge for the transportation service rendered, irrespective of the divisions of the rate, and if the rate itself is reasonable and just the fact that it is unequally divided between the participating lines is not a basis for reduction. There may be many reasons why a particular carrier would be willing to accept a very small proportion of a joint rate in order to secure business, and it is within its rights in bargaining with its connections for tonnage so long as it does not undertake to haul one class of freight at rates so low as to thereby burden other traffic. Florida Mercantile Agency v. Penn. R. R. Co., 21 I. C. C. 85, 87.

(3x) The prohibition of the law is against charging differently for a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. In Re Advances in Rates by Carriers Operating Between the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, 21 I. C. C. 546, 552.

(3y) What is a reasonable freight rate cannot, strictly speaking, be the subject of agreement between carriers and shippers nor between carriers and the Commission. If in a given case, after hearing all that is to be said by the parties, the Commission is clearly of the conviction that the rates in effect are wrong, it is its duty to substitute for those rates others which it believes to be right. But it is not required to interfere unless clearly convinced that the schedule in effect is unlawful. Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 22 I. C. C. 149, 156.

(3z) A just and reasonable rate must be one which respects alike the carrier's deserts and the character of the traffic. The words "just and reasonable" imply the application of good faith and fairness, of common sense and a sense of justice to a given condition of facts. They are not fixed, unalterable, mathematical terms. Their meaning implies the exercise of judgement. In Re Advances on Coal to Lake Ports, 22 I. C. C. 604, 624.

(4a) While cost is an important element in determining the reasonableness of freight rates, it does not control, and a reasonable maximum rate is not ipso facto, only such a rate as pays a fixed distributing share of operating expenses. So long as freight is classified this cannot be, and the preservation of that classification calls for the exercise of "the flexible limit of judgement which belongs to the power to fix rates." L. & N. R. R. Coal and Coke Rates, 26 I. C. C., 20, 27.

(4b) While, in fixing reasonable rates and relative rate adjustments, distance must always be considered as bearing both upon the cost to the carrier in performing the service and the value of the service to the shippers, there are many other facts, such as density or sparsity of traffic over and along the lines of movement, comparative cost of construction and operation, and competitive conditions, which must be given weight. In some situations the other facts and conditions are so clearly uniform or similar that distance becomes the dominating factor in the relative adjustment of rates, while in others distance becomes, without limitations, a minor factor because of the dominating and controlling force of other facts and conditions. Union Tanning Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 159, 164.

(4c) Shippers in general, whether jobbers, retailers, or direct consumers, are entitled to rates comparatively reasonable, class for class and commodity for commodity, with the rates of their competitors to the extent of the similarity in transportation conditions, where complainant attacks not only alleged discrimination between competing jobbers, but also the reasonableness per se of the rates. State of Kansas v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 673, 688.

(4d) Act requires carriers to show affirmatively reasonableness of proposed advanced rates. Five Per Cent Case, 31 I. C. C. 351, 425.

(4e) It seems that a reasonable ore rate is one that takes into account both the lean years and the fat years. Lum v. G. N. Ry. Co., 33 I. C. C. 541, 555.

(4g) Commercial considerations presented can not be regarded as controlling in determining the reasonableness of proposed rates for the service performed. New England Lumber Rates No. 2, 43 I. C. C. 641, 646.

(4h) To enable the Commission to prescribe reasonable rates the Congress has delegated to it a quasi legislative or administrative power in the exercise of which there inheres necessarily and admittedly a wide but sound discretion aptly termed the "flexible limit of judgment which belongs to the power to fix rates." This "flexible limit of judgment" obtains equally whether the rate to be fixed is to apply as of the past, for the present or for the future. The discretion is just as wide and as broad in respect of a past as of a future rate, but in exercising the function the end to be attained in its exercise must be kept in mind. For the future the Commission is endeavoring to prevent a public wrong; as to the past it has to look only to the remedying of a private injury by awarding damages. The only effect of finding a rate attacked unreasonable or otherwise unlawful as of the past is to afford a basis upon which to predicate an award of damages. Moreover, section 16 of the Act provides "that if * * * the Commission shall determine that any party complainant is entitled to an award of damages," etc., it shall make an order directing the carrier to pay the complainant the sum to which he is entitled. Arlington Heights Fruit Exch. v. S. P. Co., 45 I. C. C. 248, 250, 251.

(4i) Because complainant is in an uneconomical transportation situation, placing him at a disadvantage compared with competitors who are under no necessity of backhauling their freight, is no reason why he is not entitled to all the benefits of reasonable and nondiscriminatory rates. Interstate Packing Co. v. C., M. & St. P. Ry., 45 I. C. C. 365, 368.

(4j) The misquotation of a rate affords no basis for a finding that the rate applied to a shipment is unreasonable. Lookout Point Mfg. Co. v. N. Y. C. R. R., 45 I. C. C. 539, 540.

(4ja) The admission of the carrier is not conclusive as to the reasonableness of a rate. Sunderland Bros. Co. v. C., B. & Q. R. R., 51 I. C. C. 21, 22.

(4k) Communities can not long prosper on rates which impair the ability of carriers to properly serve them, and carriers can not long prosper on rates which shackle the energies of the communities served. The adjustment must be reasonable and fair to both, and made to meet the traffic and transportation conditions which both encounter. Public Utilities Commission of the State of Colorado v. A., T. & S. F. Ry., 52 I. C. C. 439, 478.

(4l) Just as there are criteria by which the reasonableness of a rate may be measured, so there are tests whereby it may be determined whether a particular service is within the scope of a carrier's legal obligation. That a service such as spotting has been rendered for a long time under a transportation rate, is important evidence that the service was considered in arriving at the rate, and also of the carrier's obligation as to delivery. However, duration of time is not conclusive. United States Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 677, 682, 683.

(4m) A prima facie presumption of reasonableness attaches to a rate that has been long voluntarily maintained. But the continuance of a given rate is not conclusive evidence of its reasonableness, and certainly the existence of a lower rate in the past, especially in view of the abrupt economic changes since the date when the lower rates were established, does not necessarily prove of value in ascertaining the reasonableness of rates in force during the period of federal control. Anaconda Copper Mining Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 723, 729.

(4n) The manifest intent of Congress was to repose in the Commission authority to provide the revenues found necessary to yield the specified return by considering the entire structure of rates, both state and interstate, and the aggregate value of the railroad property held for and used in the service of transportation without regard to state lines, and to protect interstate commerce against any undue, unreasonable or unjust discrimination. Intrastate Rates within the State of Texas, 60 I. C. C. 421, 426.

(4o) In exercising the power to prescribe just and reasonable rates under section 1 of the Act, the Commission is now required by section 15a to initiate, modify, establish, or adjust rates so that carriers as a whole or in designated rate groups will, under proper standards of operation, earn an aggregate annual net railway operating income equal, as nearly as may be, to a fair return upon the aggregate value of the railway property of such carriers held for and used in the service of transportations. Rates on Grain, Grain Products, and Hay, 64 I. C. C. 85, 98.

(4p) The words "just and reasonable" are not fixed and unalterable mathematical terms. Reparation as relating to increase of rates. 68 I. C. C. 5, 6.

(4q) To what extent a rate was and is unjust or unreasonable in a particular case is a question of fact, to be determined by the exercise of good judgment informed by experience, in the light of all the pertinent facts of record in that case. Reparation as relating to increase of rates, 68 I. C. C. 5, 8.

(4r) If the rate charged is unreasonable, the absence of a request for a reduction in the rate prior to the commencement of the movement is immaterial. Proctor & Gamble Co. v. A. N. R. R., 68 I. C. C. 121, 123.

(4s) Failure to adhere strictly to the terms of an order of the Director General does not invalidate the published rates. The controlling question is whether the published rates were unreasonable or otherwise unlawful. Rock Products Traffic League v. B. & O. R. R., 68 I. C. C. 146, 148.

(4t) Failure to strictly observe the terms of General Order 28 does not of itself impair the validity of the published rate. That fact affords no basis for determining whether or not the rates in issue are unreasonable. Continental Paper Co. v. Director General, 68 I. C. C. 162, 163.

(4u) The determination as to the reasonableness of a rate rests upon the facts and circumstances present in each case. Riverside Coal Co. v. Director General, 68 I. C. C. 205, 210.

(4v) The fact that provisions of G. O. 28 were not complied with does not establish the allegation of unreasonableness. Swift & Co. v. Director General, 68 I. C. C. 287, 289.

(4w) Section 15a, reasonably construed, contemplates the determination of a return which the carriers, collectively, or in rate groups, may attain over a period of time under rates adjusted from time to time with that object in view. The phrase "from time to time" does not mean that the Commission should adjust and readjust rates to meet business fluctuations. Whether carriers may be able to earn an aggregate net railway operating income equal to a fair return must depend to a large extent upon business conditions. Reduced rates, 1922, 68 I. C. C. 676, 680.

(4x) Section 15a imposes upon the Commission an affirmative duty to fix rates and to take other important steps to maintain an adequate railway service for the people of the United States. Reduced Rates, 1922, 68 I. C. C. 676, 680.

(4y) Because the yield on some railroad bonds has declined to something over 5 per cent it does not follow that a fair return should approximate that percentage. Reduced Rates, 1922, 68 I. C. C., 676, 681.

(4z) The fact that a utility may reach financial success only in time or not at all is a reason for allowing a liberal return on the money invested in the enterprise. Reduced Rates, 1922, 68 I. C. C. 676, 682.

(5a) The net income under accounting procedure of the Commission is to the stockholder a tax exempt income, and this fact should be considered in determining what return shall be deemed fair. Reduced rates, 1922, 68 I. C. C. 676, 683.

(5b) It is not the function of the Commission to deal with wage scales and it expresses no opinion as to what the rates of pay should be. But it must recognize the connection between necessary revenues and present relatively high operating expenses. Reduced Rates 1922, 68 I. C. C. 676, 689.

(5c) The Commission refuses to approve the imposition by carriers of conditions which would benefit one or a few shippers and which might, and perhaps would, correspondingly injure many others. National Wholesale Grocers Asso. v. Director General, 69 I. C. C. 669, 672.

(5d) The fact that rates were not published in strict conformity with G. O. 28 does not, of itself, establish unreasonableness. Tampa Gas Co. v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 488, 490.

(5e) Contention that transportation service was a switching movement and that increases in switching charges were not contemplated by General Order No. 28 of the director general. HELD, whether or not charges assessed were authorized by that order, the fact is that they were published and were applicable charges, and it is immaterial, so far as the issue of their justness and reasonableness is concerned, whether the movement be designated a switching or line-haul service Minnesota Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C. 571, 573.

(5f) Without attempting to determine whether the terms of G. O. 28 were strictly observed, the lack of such observance does not establish the unreasonableness of the rates attacked. Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Director General 74 I. C. C. 611.

(5g) Neither the approval by the Commission of a tariff rule for future application in all classification territories, nor its existence in Western territory when shipments moved, is proof of unreasonableness of charges assessed under the provisions of the rule as stated in official classification. Kissel Motor Car Co. v. G. T. Ry. Co., 74 I. C. C. 45, 46.

(5h) The reasonableness of any rate can not be gauged solely by comparing its earnings with average earnings on all traffic. It it could be ,the inevitable result would be to bring all rates to a common level. Indiahoma Refining Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 392, 393.

(5i) Where there is no proof that rates are unreasonable, they can not be so regarded merely because they may have been published under a misinterpretation of prior triffs. Clark & Sons v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 396, 398.

(5j) Where a rate is attacked as unreasonable, the primary question for determination is the reasonableness of the rate charged and not the particular basis on which it was constructed. Sligo Furnace Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 74 I. C. C. 463, 464.

(5k) The lack of strict observance of the terms of General Order No. 28 of the director general does not establish unreasonableness. Nor does it follow that rates are unreasonable merely because they were subsequently reduced in the course of a rate adjustment Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 611.

(5l) The manner in which the rates were arrived at is only one of the elements to be considered in determining whether or not they were just and reasonable. Theo. Marcus Co. v. Director General, 77 I. C. C. 244, 246.

(5m) It would be in interminable task to take every station in an extensive territory and attempt to fix just and reasonable rates on each commodity from and to each of such stations. The best that can be done in a task of this kind, in a territory where operating conditions have been found to be substantially similar for rate making purposes, is to strike at the main cause of the inequalities and discriminations found to exist and to place each point and community, so far as is consistent with other valid considerations, upon the basis with relation to its competitors to which it is entitled by virtue of its location. Memphis-Southwestern Investigation, 77 I. C. C. 497.

(5ma) Contention that decisions of United States Supreme Court make it mandatory upon commission to fix rates at amounts which will not exceed operating costs and a reasonable return upon value of property and that therefore cost of service must be test of reasonableness of rates on traffic earning more than prescribed return, not sustained. Neither directly nor by implication do those cases lay down principle that rates must be fixed at amounts to yield not more than a stated percentage of value of carrier's property used in transportating a particular class of traffic. On contrary, such doctrine is distinctly disapproved in 236 U. S., 585, and in cases of this character the commission has never followed cost-of-service principle exclusively. Adriatic Mining Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 78 I. C. C. 611, 631, 632.

(5n) Though by no means the sole consideration, rate level necessary to move a commodity is an element to be weighed in determining a reasonable rate thereon. Penick & Ford v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 152, 156.

(5o) Unreasonable charges are unlawful, and it is the Commission's duty to afford relief when it finds that charges exacted were unreasonable. A tariff rule which is reasonable in its general application may operate unreasonably under certain conditions. It is impossible to draft a general rule which will meet justly all possible contingencies. Hawkins Sons v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 225, 227.

(5p) A rule which is reasonable in its general application may operate unreasonably under certain conditions. It is impossible to draft a general rule which will meet justly all possible contingencies. Hawkins & Sons v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 225, 227.

(5qr) Complainant attacked rates charged on 23 carloads of petroleum products during the period April 22, 1918, to Sparrows Point, Md., as unreasonable from Philadelphia, Shipments moved via the Pennsylvania, complainants refinery being served by the B. & O., and Pennsylvania, distance to Baltimore via Pennsylvania 110 miles and to Sparrows Point, 115 miles; by the B. & O., 97.5 and 99.1 miles. Prior to April 4, 1918, the rates had been the same between these points via both routes in both directions, 7.5c. Following 45 I. C. C. 303, Pennsylvania increased its rate to 8.5c and erroneously increased the rate in the opposite direction to 9c, the B. & O. increasing its rates to 8.5c in both directions. Under G. O. No. 28, the Pennsylvania rate was 11.5c and B. & O. 10.5c. Subsequently the rate in both directions and via both lines became 13c. The allegation was only supported by evidence of the rate in the opposite direction. HELD, rate attacked not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Atlantic Refining Co. v. Director General, 80 I. C. C. 298.

(5s) The fact that the rates paid represented a high percentage of increase over the rates formerly charged is not proof that the rates paid were unreasonable. French Battery & Carbon Co. v. C. N. W. Ry., 80 I. C. C. 344, 346.

(5t) Where proceeding is one of investigation into reasonableness and propriety of rates, the Commission's determination might well result in fixation of rates related to each other, although relationship of rates as such may not have been contemplated within issue as originally presented. Rates on Grain, Grain Products, and Hay, 80 I. C. C. 365.

(5u) When a complaint challenges reasonableness of rates on a commodity from only one point and it appears that because of competitive or other practical trade or transportation considerations, a number of points of origin of the particular commodity are grouped under common rates, and also that there is a relationship between two or more groups, the commission must give due consideration to other factors than rate comparisons. Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. B. & M. R. R., 44 I. C. C. 416, 422. Perry County Coal Corp.v. E. St. L. & S Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 711, 715.

(5ua) The statute does not cast burden upon a protestant to prove unreasonableness of a proposed rate. Class Rates to and from Delaware Division Stations, 81 I. C. C., 758, 761.

(5v) Failure to adhere strictly to the terms of a preliminary order of the director general can not be construed as defeating the validity of the rate concerned, nor does it prove the unreasonableness of such rate. Peninsular Portland Cement Co. v. Director General 83 I. C. C. 10, 12.

(5w) If the usual tests of the reasonableness of rates, approved by experience and valid in law, show the basis as to any commodity to be too high it would be the duty of the Commission under Section 1 of the Act to find such rates to be unreasonable. Kansas Public Utilities Commission v. A., T. & S. F. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 105, 115.

(5wa) Every shipper is entitled to a reasonable rate, whether class or commodity, on his traffic and where he attacks the reasonableness of a rate, whether class or commodity, that issue must be decided upon its merits. Armacost & Co. v. M. & M. T. Co., 88 I. C. C. 185, 187.

(5wb) The mere fact that rates attacked are greater percentages of the class rates than are commodity rates of the contemporaneous rates between other points does not establish the unreasonableness of the rates attacked. Radiant Glass Co. v. Director General 88 I. C. C. 295, 297.

(5wc) A rate may be reasonable and yet not reach the maximum or minimum limit of reasonableness. Valley Camp Coal Co. v. B. & O. R. R., 88 I. C. C. 682, 685.

(5x) Prior to the Transportation Act carriers were at liberty to establish or maintain unreasonably low rates providing they were not discriminatory. Keogh v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 43 Sup. Ct. 47, 49.

(5y) A public utility is only entitled to earn a fair return on the property investment. City of Cincinnati v. Public Utlities Commission, (Ohio, 1922), 137 N. E. 36.

§2½. Absorption.

See Absorption of Charges.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The reasonableness of charges maintained by one carrier can not be judged by the ability or inability of a connecting competitor to absorb them. Nashville Switching, 40 I. C. C. 474, 482.

§3. Actions of State Commissions.

See State Rates and Regulations.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) There are many reasons why state and interstate rates should be established in harmony with one another. When the Commission is asked to examine the reasonableness of an interstate rate, similar rates established by state authority in that territory must have great influence, especially where they have been long acquiesced in by the carriers. Still, these state rates have no binding force upon the Commission. They are standards of comparison of greater or less value, according as they appear to be just and reasonable. Corn Belt Meat Producers' Ass'n'. v. C. B. & Q. Ry. Co., 14 I C. C 376, 385.

(b) State rates afford standards of comparison of greater or less value, according as they appear reasonable, especially so when acquiesced in by the carriers; but when a state rate is under protest and being contested, and appears unreasonably low, it is not valuable as a comparison. Willman & Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 405.

(c) The acquiescence of carriers in state-made rates and their voluntary application of such rates to some interstate traffic adds to the weight which should be given them in a determination of their reasonableness on other interstate traffic, but such acquiescence by certain carriers in one state made pursuant to their own best interests should not be determinative against other carriers whose interests lie mainly in another state. Pulp & Paper Mfrs. Traffic Assn. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 83, 96.

(d) The Commission has always given due consideration to rates established by state commissions, but it cannot feel bound to apply to that part of interstate transportation taking place in another state, the rates prescribed by a contiguous state for transportation wholly within its confines. Pulp & Paper Mfrs. Traffic Assn. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 83, 96.

(e) Interstate fares prescribed by a municipal ordinance are not conclusively presumed to be reasonable, even if accepted by the interstate carrier as one of the conditions of a franchise. St. Louis, Mo-Illinois Passenger Fares, 41 I. C. C. 584, 590.

§4. Attractiveness of Traffic.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) There is no warrant in law for the maintenance of a rate for the purpose of restricting the movement of a certain class of traffic because it is unattractive to carriers. Indianapolis Freight Bureau v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 370, 373.

§5. Capitalization.

See Evidence §7; Express Companies §24; Finance Dockets; Interstate Commerce Commission §7.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The capital account of a railroad does not necessarily furnish a criterion by which the reasonableness of its freight rates is to be determined; and in order that the capitalization should be considered in cases involving the readjustment of rates it must be accompanied by a history of the capital account. Grain Shippers Asso. v. Illinois C. R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 158.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) The fact that a carrier has issued watered stock cannot be urged on a question of reasonableness of rates to deny the right of present holders of said stock to receive reasonable dividends thereon. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 410.

(c) The fact that a carrier's stock originally sold at less than par cannot be urged on a question of reasonableness of rates to deny the present holders thereof fair dividends t herefrom. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 411

(d) The market value of stock should be considered in fixing rates, but such rates cannot be allowed as will guarantee the prices at which the stock was bought. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 260.

(e) It is almost axiomatic that the investment in an American railroad is not represented by its capitalization. The Commission cannot accept capitalization as representing either investment or value. Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 320.

(f) There is no relation between capital and value and there is no relation between stocks representing value and bonds representing value. In Re Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 335.

(g) Record plainly indicated that carrier greatly overcapitalized and afforded no tangible basis upon which alone to determine what should be the measure of a reasonable system of charges on the basis of the value of its property devoted to the public use. Fares of the Washington-Virginia Ry. Co., 62 I. C. C. 200, 203.

§6. Car-mile or Train-mile Revenue.

See Evidence §6 §8.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Car revenue is an important element in determining the reasonableness of a rate. Merchants Mfrs.' Ass'n. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 467, 469.

(b) The earnings per car mile and per train mile of a carrier constitute a much fairer basis for determining the reasonableness of a rate than the earnings per ton mile. On account of the volume of traffic, the heavy load per car and the regularity of movement, most of the freight which pays the carrier the best is that which yields the lowest rate per ton mile. In Re Advances on Coal to Lake Ports, 22 I. C. C. 604, 620.

(c) While a fairer basis for determining the reasonableness of rates is found in the earnings per car-mile and per train-mile, the rate per ton per mile is instructive. Wisconsin Steel Co. v. P. & L. E. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 152, 162.

(d) The fact that the earnings per car are greater on certain materials than the earnings per car on articles manufactured therefrom does not of itself prove that the rates in either case are unreasonable. The earnings per car on the materials are frequently higher because of the heavier loading per car. Again this comparison disregards the considerations which influenced the establishment of the rates on the materials and the rates on the articles manufactured therefrom. Nor does the fact that the rate on the materials is higher than the rate on certain manufactured articles prove the unreasonableness of the one or the other. As a general proposition the principle that the rate on material should be less than the rate on its finished product has been approved by the Commission, but there are exceptions to this rule. The Iron and Steel Cases, 36 I. C. C. 86, 106.

§7. Changed Circumstances.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where present transportation conditions are likely to change, the Commission may take this fact into consideration in adjusting rates. Florida Fruit & Vegetable Shippers' Protective Ass'n. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 476, 488.

(b) Unless the Commission recognized changes in conditions with the development of traffic, there would never be any changes in rate levels and never any readjustments of rates. The primary question is whether the rates, in whatever manner they are constructed by the carriers are reasonable and free from undue discrimination. Western Cement Rates, 48 I. C. C. 201, 229.

(c) A charge, reasonable in its inception many years ago, may become unreasonably low in consequence of the construction of more adequate facilities, a change in the character of the service rendered, the increased level of operating cost generally, or one or more of these factors. But the existence of such general conditions alone affords no proper basis upon which to test the reasonableness of a specific material increase in charges. Space Rental Charges on Cotton, 66 I. C. C. 121, 125.

§7¼. Combinations of Rates.

See Evidence §10.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Whether railroad companies combine or act separately in making rates or charges is not so important; the essential requirement is that however made they shall be reasonable of themselves, and so fairly adjusted as to be reasonable in their relations to each other and in their results. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 289, 292.

(b) A rate which is advanced as the result of an agreement among carriers, even if such agreement be with color of violation of the antitrust act, will not on that ground alone be declared unreasonable; evidence of such violation is pertinent and must be considered; but the existence of such an unlawful agreement, even when proved, is not conclusive of the unreasonableness of the rates so advanced. Enterprise Manufacturing Co. v. Georgia R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 451.

§7½. Comparisons.

See Blanket Rates §18; Classification §20; Comparative Rates; Evidence §11; §12; §13; Through Routes and Joint Rates §15.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) When the reasonableness of rates is in question, charges on long through lines cannot offer a just basis for comparison with local rates for relatively short distances. Crews v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 703.

(b) The reasonableness and justness of rates on other portions of the carrier's line cannot be measured alone by the standard furnished by exceptional rates forced upon him for a portion only of the line, but must be governed by considerations which fairly and justly apply to them. Business Mens Asso v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 41.

(c) On the question of what are just and fair rates to any particular locality, it is necessary to see what rates are given to other localities. They cannot be considered by themselves. Re Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 137.

(d) A prima facie case of unreasonableness of rates is not made out by showing that the rates for a certain commodity are higher in certain cases than certain other rates, and that they produce a large profit to the carrier. Howell v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co., (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 162.

(e) In determining the reasonableness of rates a comparison of one isolated rate with another is not sufficient; the whole field must be considered in order to approximate justice, and at best the result cannot be regarded as other than an approximation. Howell v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co., (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 162.

(ea) The Commission is not willing to determine the relative reasonableness of rates at many stations, and in a large extent of territory, upon the mere face of tariffs, and without further proof. Spartanburg Board of Trade v. R. & D. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 193, 194.

(f) Where unreasonableness of freight rate on oil in carload lots is charged on short local hauls,—for example, from Titusville, Pennsylvania, to Buffalo, New York; and the charge is attempted to be sustained on a comparison of these rates with rates on what is usually an inferior grade of oil transported from Titusville, through Buffalo, to Perth Amboy, New Jersey for export, chiefly in the cars of another company; and it appears that upon such shipments destined to Buffalo there are expensive terminal charges, while upon such shipments to Perth Amboy these terminal charges are far less considerable,—the circumstances and conditions which control the making of the rates in each instance are substantially dissimilar. Rice v. Western N. Y. & P. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 298.

(g) Any transportation charges between the Mississippi River and New York City on wheat and flour based on a higher rate than twenty-three cents per hundred pounds from Chicago to New York City is unreasonable, and any rate on wheat and flour carried from any one place to another which is more than fifteen per cent above the rate on corn and oats between the same places is unreasonable. Rates and Charges on Food Products, 3 I. C. R. 93.

(h) The circumstances and conditions in the carriage of flour to New York are substantially dissimilar at Boston to what they are at Readville, an interior town about 8 miles from Boston, on the line of the all rail carriers, where no competition exists between the all-rail carriers and the water lines; and justifies the all-rail carrers in meeting the water rate at Boston by a joint through rate which is less from New York to Boston than the combined local rates to Readville from New York. King v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 272.

(ha) Complainant attacked rates on flour, grain and mill stuffs, carloads, from Milwaukee, Wis., to the Eastern seaboard, as unreasonable and unjustly prejudicial in that the carriers reduced the rate from Milwaukee 2½c on these commodities originating at Minneapolis passing through Milwaukee to the east without making a like change in the rate from Milwaukee. Upon the manifest and widely different circumstances and conditions of transportation this class of property from Minneapolis to eastern points as compared with those surrounding the transportation of similar freight from Milwaukee to the same eastern points, the division of the Minneapolis rate at Milwaukee west, so that the proportion of it from Milwaukee should be the same and no less than the rate upon the same class of freight originating at Milwaukee is a standard of comparison that cannot be sustained. Complaint dismissed. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. F. & P. M. R., 2 I. C. C. 393.

(i) Comparison with rates in other localities where dissimilar conditions and modifying circumstances are found, is not sufficient to establish the unreasonableness of the charges complained of. Where no discrimination is alleged as between points of production tributary to the same market, or on account of disproportionate rates on different kinds of traffic similar in character and volume, it must affirmatively appear that the charges assailed are unreasonable and ought to be reduced. Lincoln Creamery v. Union Pacific R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 794.

(j) Complainant attacked as unreasonable and unjust rates on lumber of 16½c, carloads and 31½c on shingles, carloads, from Fort Fairfield, Stevens Siding and Hurds Siding, Me., to Boston, Mass., distance 484 miles, compared with rates of 14½c on lumber, carloads, and 16¾c on shingles, carloads from Fredericton, Tracey and Russia-gornish, New Brunswick, Can. distance 433 miles. Subsequently the rate was reduced from complainants mills. The rail rate from the Canadian mill to market being fixed with especial reference to the effect of the log drive to and water competition for shingle traffic from the seaport the rate from the Maine mill should be fixed on the same basis, the log drive going past the Maine mill. HELD, rate from Fort Fairfield should not exceed the rate from Fredericton more than 6½c. James & Abbott v. C. P. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 274.

(k) Where the reasonableness of rates is in question, comparison thereof may be made, not only with rates on another line of the same carrier, but also with those on the lines of other and distinct carriers. Cincinnati Freight Bureau v. Cincinnati N. O. & T. P. R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 592; Morrell v. Union P. R. 4 I. C. R. Co. (Com.) 469.

(lm) Rates and charges in force on lines of rival companies or on different branches or lines of the same company are entitled to consideration in connection with the question of reasonable charges for transportation services rendered under like conditions. Morrell v. U. P. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 469, 473.

(n) Rates maintained and which may be reasonable under the conditions existing in one section or part of the country afford no safe criterion by which to measure reasonable charges in other localities where the expense of operating a road and other conditions affecting transportation are widely different. Morrell v. U. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 469, 473.

(o) Where the reasonableness of rates is in question, comparison thereof may be made not only with rates on another line of the same carrier but also with those on the lines of other and distinct carriers—the value of the comparison being dependent in all cases upon the degree of similarity of the circumstances and conditions attending the transportation for which the rates compared are charged. Freight Bureau v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 592, 611.

(p) The fact that the freight rates are higher in one state than in another is not of itself sufficient to justify an arbitrary reduction of them by the legislature in the former state for the purpose of equalizing rates. Ames v. Union Pacific R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 835.

(q) Where the reasonableness of rates is in question, comparison thereof may be made, not only with rates on another line of the same carrier, but also with those on the lines of other and distinct carriers. Freight Bureau v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 195 Morreil v. Union P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 121.

(r) Rates maintained and which may be reasonable under the conditions existing in one section or part of the country afford no safe criterion by which to measure reasonable charges in other lo calities, where the expense of operating a road and other conditions affecting transportation are widely different. Morrell v. Union P. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 121.

(s) Where the reasonableness of rates is in question, comparison thereof may be made, not only with rates on another line of the same carrier, but also with those on the lines of other and distinct carriers—the value of the same comparison being dependent in all cases upon the degree of similarity of the circumstances and conditions attending the transportation for which the rates compared are charged. Freight Bureau v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. et al. 6 I. C. C. 197.

(sa) A showing of substantial similarity in transportation conditions is necessary to make the rates of carrier in one section of the country proper standards of comparison in a case of alleged un just and unreasonable charges in another section. Evans v. Union P. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 520.

(t) A charge of 70 and 80 cents per 100 pounds on cotton from a given point is unreasonable where the carrier charges only 75 cents for a distance from 400 to 600 miles longer, and has long had in force rates of 60 and 65 cents from the former point when the value of cotton was higher and its transportation more expensive, and other roads in the same territory have much longer hauls for similar rates. Jerome Hill Cotton Co. v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 601.

(u) Rates from New Orleans to La Grange are unreasonable in themselves and relatively, as compared with rates at Atlanta, where the latter rates are such that an Atlantic dealer can ship from New Orleans to Atlanta and then back to La Grange as cheaply as the goods can be shipped from New Orleans to La Grange, and higher rates from New Orleans to La Grange than those charged to Atlanta are unlawful. Calloway v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 431.

(v) The comparative reasonableness of rates for transportation of grain to two different cities should, so far as distance is controlling, be tested by distance over the shorter available routes from the place of shipment to such cities. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 481.

(w) A carrier's charges on grain originating at points on its Southern Minnesota division, milled in transit at La Crosse, Wis., and forwarded as product to Milwaukee or Chicago, are not unjust or otherwise unlawful when not more than 2½ cents per 100 pounds in excess of its wheat rates from the same points of origin to Milwaukee or Chicago, either as related to the wheat rates or as affecting the competitive relation of the complainant with millers at Milwaukee. Listman Mill Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 47.

(x) Rates on barrel material from the West to Hawkinsville, Ga., were higher than those to Macon, Ga., from February 10, 1896, to January 22, 1897. At times prior to the date first mentioned, and uniformly since the date last mentioned, the rates to Hawkinsville and Macon have been the same. Rates on other commodities are, as a rule, higher to Hawkinsville than to Macon. The distance is greater to Hawkinsville, which is located on a branch line, competition is less active there than at Macon. HELD, that complainant failed to show that the rate on barrel material under the Act to Regulate Commerce ought from February 10, 1896, to January 22, 1897, to have been the same to Hawkinsville as to Macon, and that the complaint should be dismissed. Holmes & Co. v. Southern R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 561.

(y) It is competent to compare rates and distances on different roads in dealing with an alleged unreasonable rate, and these are to be considered in connection with the many other factors that enter into the adjustment of rates, but it does not necessarily follow that a rate is unreasonable because on the same or another road a particular kind of traffic is hauled a greater distance from a different point of origin at the same or a less rate. Cannon v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 537.

(z) Rates on flour from Louisville and Evansville by the Southern Railway to Berry, Ala., on the line of the Southern, and by the Southern and Mobile & Ohio to Gordo, Ala., on the line of the Mobile & Ohio, are less than those of the Mobile & Ohio from Ava and Cairo, Ill., to Gordo. The rate by the Southern from St. Louis to Gordo is the same as that of the Mobile & Ohio from St. Louis and Ava, although the distance by the former is about twice that from Ava by the latter, and much greater than that from St. Louis by the Mobile & Ohio. HELD, that these facts do not warrant the conclusion that the flour rates from St. Louis, Ava and Cairo to Gordo are unreasonable. S. J. & S. Cannon v. Mobile & O. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 537.

(aa) Lochland, Ky., rate of 21 cents per 100 pounds on brick machinery, C. L. to East St. Louis, Ill., compared with the rate of 15 cents from Louisville, Ky., 8 miles farther distant, to the same destination held not unreasonable under section 1 of the statute, it appearing that the rate from Louisville is fixed under competition. Durham v. Illinois C. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 37.

(bb) $1.61½ per 100 pounds on knit goods from New York points via water and rail, through Galveston, Tex, to Wichita, Kansas, as compared with rate of $1.31 to Topeka, Kan., not unreasonable. Johnston-Larimer Dry Goods Co. v. New York & T. S. S. Co., 12 I. C. C. 58.

(cc) Coal $1.70 per short ton and $2.75 per long ton from Birmingham, Ala., to Cordele, Ga., as compared with corresponding charges to Macon, Ga., of $1.60 and $1.65, unreasonable. Tomlin-Harris Mach. Co. v. L. N. R. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 133.

(dd) Grass twine and matting, St. Paul to Boston. Rate of 62 cents per 100 pounds via Duluth, which was a combination of a rate of 23 cents to Duluth plus a rail rate of 39 cents from Duluth to Boston, lake and rail point through routes via Duluth not being in effect at the date of the shipment, but a rate via Lake Michigan ports of 45 cents, and an all-rail joint through rate of 49 cents, being in force,—held, under the special and peculiar circumstances disclosed, to be unreasonable. American Grass Twine Co. v. St. Paul, M. & O. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 141.

(ee) Southwestern mills to the Orient, of $1.25 per 100 pounds, as compared with rate from New England mills of $11.25 for 40 cubic feet of measured space, equivalent to about 85 cents per 100 pounds, not unreasonable. China & Japan Trading Co. v. Georgia R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 236.

(ff) Complainant alleges that the rates of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis and Illinois Central roads on oak staves and headings from Hollow Rock and other Tennessee points of origin to East St. Louis when destined to South Omaha, Nebr., are unreasonable when compared with the rates on such commodities over said road from the same points of origin to East St. Louis when destined for Alexandria, Mo., or Keokuk, Iowa. The South Omaha rate is a combinatiion of the 14-cent rate of the N., C. & St. L. and Ill. Central plus the "local" rate of 10 cents of the C., B. & Q., whereas the Keokuk or Alexandria rate is a joint rate of 19 cents, 14 cents to the two first carriers and 5 cents to the C., B. & Q. Complainant made no complaint against the C., B. & Q. rate. It appears that some years ago the division gave the C., B. & Q. its full "local" from East St. Louis to Keokuk or Alexandria, and the two eastern carriers 2 cents less than their joint rate to East St. Louis; but the division as now made gives these two roads the same earnings on cooperage products carried from Tennessee points to East St. Louis, whether destined to South Omaha, Alexandria, or Keokuk. Complaint dismissed. Omaha Cooperage Co. v. Nash-Chat. & St. L. Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 251.

(gg) Relative rates to Hope, Arkansas, via Texarkana, from points north of Shreveport, Alabama, on cotton seed, joint through rate of 30 cents as compared with sums of locals, 17½ cents, held unreasonable. Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. T. & P. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 265.

(hh) Marquette and Phillips, Neb. 75 cents per 100 pounds on wheat to California terminals, compared with through rate on corn over same route, and through rates on both corn and wheat on other routes, unreasonable; should not exceed 65 cents. Poor Grain Co. v. C. B. & Q. Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 418.

(ii) Comparison with rates in other localities where different conditions and modifying circumstances are found is not enough to establish the unreasonableness of the rate attacked. Dallas

Freight Bureau v. M. K. & T. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 427, 433.

(jj) Rates maintained and which may be reasonable under the conditions existing in one section or part of the country afford no safe criterion by which to measure reasonable charges in other localities where the expense of operating a road and other conditions affecting transportation are widely different. Dallas Freight Bureau v. M. K. & T. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 427, 433.

(kk) Rate of 56 cents per 100 pounds on butter and eggs in carload lots from Granite Falls, Minn., to Chicago, as compared with 43-cent rate from Whitestone, Minn., on another branch, 41 miles farther distant, held unreasonable and unjust; should not exceed 43 cents per 100 pounds. Morse Produce Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 485.

(ll) Rates on denatured alcohol from Chicago and from Missouri River common points to Northern Pacific Coast terminals, and to certain points in Oregon, the record showing that denatured alcohol is manufactured in California and is sold in the North Pacific Coast cities at a price which could be made by the eastern product only by reducing the transportation charges to nothing, and that an effort to place denatured alcohol upon a parity with proof spirits would lead either to a large increase in the charges on the proof spirits, which would probably render futile all effort to compete with the California product, or to a practical wiping out of the charges on the denatured article,—not shown to be unreasonable per se. Railroad Commission of Oregon v. B. C. & A. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 541.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(mm) Comparisons of car earnings on the commodity involved with car earnings on analogous commodities moving from the same point of origin to the same points of destination is a fair test of the reasonableness of the rates in question, and the evidentiary force of such comparisons has not infrequently been recognized . Northwestern Woodenware Co. v. C. M. & P. S. Ry. Co., 28 I. C. C. 237, 240.

(nn) Comparisons may be resorted to, of course, as evidence of unreasonable rates, but to be effective their elements must have, as a common basis, similarity of conditions. A rate may be reasonable and yet higher than another rate for substantially the same service, for example, where the traffic density varies greatly. Commercial Club of Sioux Falls v. Pullman Co., 31 I. C. C. 654, 659.

(oo) The reasonableness of a rate may be judged in part from a comparison with revenue derived by carriers involved from transportation of other commodities under similar circumstances and conditions. Pacific Creamery Co. v. S. P. Co., 34 I. C. C., 586, 591.

(pp) When rate comparisons are offered in evidence in substantiation of a claim of unreasonableness, they should be accompanied by such testimony as is possible showing the transportation circumstances and conditions incident to the rates compared; such evidence is forceful until impeached by other evidence showing that the rate comparisons are not comparable. Rate comparisons may thus be discredited in a number of ways, among others by showing that the transportation conditions prevailing in the two territories from which the rates are compared are different; that competitive conditions by rail are different; that water or rail competition intervenes as a factor; and in many other ways. Lehigh Portland Cement Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R., 35 I. C. C. 20.

(qq) When rate comparisons are offered in evidence, the question arises whether these comparisons are of value in determining the reasonableness of the rates in issue. If these comparisons have been drawn from different territory it becomes important to know the traffic and transportation conditions prevailing in that territory. Eastern Live Stock Case, 36 I. C. C. 675, 682.

(rr) In passing upon the reasonableness of a scale or system of rates the Commission may not properly consider only the points of origin and destination. It is bound to consider and give due weight to what has been found in other cases involving rates applicable from and to points in the same general territory where transportation conditions are substantially similar. This must be done in order that the structure of rates in any given territory may be properly related, and from as a whole a harmonious and consistent adjustment. Each city or shipping point is entitled to advantages in rates which spring from its location, with the limitation that the rates must be reasonable and not unduly discriminatory. New Orleans-Texas Rates, 38 I. C. C., 1, 9.

(ss) Comparisons of the revenue per loaded car on a commodity with that on all freight handled by the carrier during a selected period, are entitled to consideration in determining the reasonableness of the rate on the commodity. Traffic Bureau of Nashville v. L. & N. R. R., 43 I. C. C. 366, 373.

(tt) In considering reasonableness of rates on a particular commodity, comparisons with rates in effect between the same points on comparable commodities are entitled to considerable weight. Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. B. & M. R. R., 44 I. C. C. 416, 421.

(uu) The fact that rates on a commodity are made the usual differential over those on a related commodity for the same movement is not conclusive of their reasonableness, where the latter are merely paper rates. Cameron & Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 286, 294.

(vv) In considering the reasonableness of rates on a particular commodity, comparisons with rates in effect between the same points on comparable commodities are entitled to considerable weight; but when a complaint challenges the reasonableness of rates on a commodity from only one point and it appears that, because of competitive or other practical trade or transportation considerations, a number of points of origin of the particular commodity are grouped under common rates, and also that there is a relationship in rates between two or more groups, we must give due consideration to other facts that rate comparisons. The grouping of a number of points does not, of course, justify the maintenance of a rate which is unreasonable per se from any of such points, but in the absence of a conclusive showing that the rates challenged from a point included in a group are in fact unreasonable it is impracticable to consider the reasonableness of the group rates except as applied from all points in the group. Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. B. & M. R. R. 44 I. C. C. 416, 421, 422.

(ww) If the reasonableness of any rate could be gauged solely by comparing it with the average earnings of the carriers on all traffic, the inevitable result would be to bring all rates to a common level. Utah-Idaho Miller's and Grain Dealer's Assn. v. D. & R. G. R. R. Co., 44 I. C. C. 714, 725.

(xx) One of the best tests of the reasonableness of rates under section 1 is to compare the rates in issue with rates prescribed by the Commission or with rates established by the carriers with relation thereto. Blackman & Griffin Co. v. A. C. & Y. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 649, 654.

(yy) Comparisons where there is no showing of similarity either in transportation conditions or in the varying influences that affect rates are not very helpful in testing the unreasonableness of the adjustment. Dawson Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 296.

(zz) When the rate compared is clearly shown to be less than that which the carrier could reasonably be required to publish, the Commission can not use that subnormal rate as a measure of the reasonableness of the rate on commodities, although they possess similar transportation characteristics. Carnation Milk Products Co. v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 665, 668.

(3a) And while value is an essential factor of a reasonable rate but is only one of the elements that must be considered. Other elemental tests must be supplied of which a comparison of revenue under the rates attacked with revenue derived from the transportation of other commodities under similar circumstances and conditions is one of considerable importance. Anaconda Copper Mining Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 723, 731, 732.

(3b) While rates assailed and rates cited in comparison depart from the usual canons of rate making in that there is considerable variation in the ton-mile earnings, and that for some what longer distances these earnings are greater than for certain shorter distances, this variation in relationships in itself is not probative of the unreasonableness alleged. Decker & Sons v. Director General, as Agent, 59 I. C. C. 67.

(3c) So a mere comparative statement of charges unsupported by a showing of the conditions under which they are maintained can not be accepted as proof that charges at a given point are unreasonable. Holly Ridge Lumber Co. v. Director General, 60 I. C. C. 120, 122.

(3d) Where rates are higher, distance considered, than those generally prevailing from near-by points to the same destinations or to points in that vicinity, over the same or other routes, whether they are unreasonable or unduly prejudicial can not be determined from that standpoint alone, but consideration must be given to all the circumstances and conditions surrounding the traffic. National Fireproofing Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 61 I. C. C. 49, 55.

(3f) Comparisons between the rates on crude anthracene and the rates on commodities moved in tank cars, and on such dry commodities as paper, copper, brass, soda ash, and other dissimilar commodities, are not helpful in determining the reasonableness of the rates on anthracene. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 129, 132.

(3g) Comparisons between the rates on a particular commodity and the rates on other commodities dissimilar in transportation and other characteristics are not helpful in determining the reasonableness of the rates on such particular commodity. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 129, 132.

(3h) While coconut and cottonseed oils should ordinarily take the same rate, it does not follow that the cottonseed oil rate is a proper basis for determining the reasonableness of the coconut-oil rate if it appears that the former is sub-normal. Wilson & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 438, 441.

(3i) The reasonableness of any rate can not be gauged solely by comparing its earnings with average earnings on all traffic. If it could be, the inevitable result would be to bring all rates to a common level. Indiahoma Refining Co. v. Director General, 74 I. C. C., 392, 393.

(3j) Fourth-class rate on nickel steel and special-treatment steel from Munhall Pa., to Seattle, Wash., found not unreasonable or otherwise unlawful as compared with lower commodity rates on ship steel and tank steel from eastern producing points to same destination Nickel steel and special-treatment steel are used only in construction of war vessels. There is at present no movement of this steel to the Pacific coast, and no similar movement in the future is probable. Todd Dry Dock & Construction Corp. v. C., M. St. P. Ry. Co., 74 I. C. C. 291.

(3k) Intrastate rates are not controlling in gauging the reasonableness of interstate rates, but, in connection with other facts, they are not without significance as a basis for comparison. East Coast Potato Distributors v. N. Y., P. & N. R. R. Co., 77 I. C. C. 607, 613.

(3l) Anthracite coal is competitive with bituminous coal for many purposes, particularly for domestic uses, but its sale is hampered by reason of excessive cost, due in large part to rates of transportation. Western Coal Rates, 80 I. C. C. 383, 439.

(3m) The most helpful evidence in determining reasonableness of rates is comparison of the rates on like traffic, moving under like circumstances, and in the same territory. Mississippi Railroad Commission v. A. & V. Ry., 89 I. C. C. 47, 61.

§8. Competition.

See Competition; Long and Short Hauls §4¾.

(1) In general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Rates can not be charged at the mere discretion of a carrier. They are to be equitably adjusted with regard to the public interests as well as the carrier. Reduced rates at points where competitive influences are controlling must not fall below some revenue from the traffic in excess of cost, and higher rates at other points, required for the necessary revenue of a carrier, must be reasonable in themselves, and also relatively reasonable in comparison with the competitive rate. Lehmann Higginson & Co. v. S. P. Co., 3 I. C. C. 80.

(b) Neither the absence nor the presence of competition by carriers alone, nor the extent of their operations measured solely by their financial interests, can be relied on to adjust rates reasonable and just to all. Mayor and Council of Tifton, Ga. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 160.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) A carrier may in its own interest, if it so desires, carry for a longer distance over its own line than would be necessary if carried between the same points over the line of its competitors, in order to obtain a portion of the competitive business upon terms that will afford some profit. It does not necessarily follow, however, that a carrier not competing for traffic in this way thereby subjects itself to an order compelling it to do so. Hydraulic Press Brick Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 13 I. C. C. 342, 347.

(d) So competition is an important element in determining reasonableness of rate. Corporation Commission of N. C. v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 303, 309.

(e) The Commission cannot overcome by an adjustment of freight rates natural advantages, such as water competition and climatic conditions, which one competing locality has over another. Truck Growers' Ass'n. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 190, 193.

(f) Most of the great systems in Official Classification territory have existed in substantially their present form for the past twenty-five years. Originally there was the most active competition in the rate of transportation by rail, and the tariffs in Official Classification territory are largely the product of that competition. There is a strong presumption that rates so arrived at are reasonable rates. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 259.

(g) Where at one point water and rail competition exists to an extent not present at another point the conditions are so dissimilar that the rates to the former are not necessarily a measure of a reasonable rate to the latter. Georgetown Railway & Light Co. v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 144.

(h) Cross-country competition considered in determining the relative reasonableness of rates. Superior Commercial Club v. G. N. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 342, 345; Lebanon Commercial Club v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 277, 279.

(i) The fact that there are more competing lines in one section than another considered in determining the relative reasonableness of rates. Philadelphia Veneer & Lumber Co. v. C. R. R. Co. of N. J., 25 I. C. C. 653, 654.

(j) The Commission has not recognized the right of a carrier to fix its rates to or from a given point on a higher level than they otherwise should be in order to prevent one community from competing with another, or to keep the products of one community out of a territory, the wants of which may be fully supplied by another community. Indianapolis Freight Bureau v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 53, 58.

(k) A rate fixed through competitive conditions is no measure of a rate to which such conditions do not apply. McKnight-Keaton Gro. Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 563, 564.

(l) Where the adjustment of rates in a territory is the result of competitive conditions which the carriers operating in that territory have to a certain extent inherited or have been unable to control, those rates can not fairly be used as the only basis for comparison in determining whether or not rates immediately beyond that territory are reasonable. But rates to and from points just without this territory should not be made on an entirely different basis and without any relation to those rates. In other words, if at near-by points these same conditions do not exist the rates to and from those points should be graded up to a basis that will bear a reasonable relationship to the rates to and from points in the so-called low rated territory. Lebanon Commercial Club v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 33 I. C. C. 204, 213.

(m) The voluntary reduction of a refrigeration rate to meet carrier competition does not establish unreasonableness of previous rate. Wattam v. N. P. Ry. Co., 37 I. C. C. 101, 102.

(n) Carriers have kept constantly before us the fact that the reductions in rates from time to time were due to the action of competitive forces and were not made with the conviction that rates previously in effect were unreasonable. But competition has often been the agency through which the public received reasonable rates. The Southeastern Sugar Cases, 48 I. C. C. 739, 742.

§8 (1½) Market Competition.

See Market Competition.

(a) Rates for the transportation of property should be arrived at and based so far as practicable upon permanently continuing fixed facts and conditions. The fluctuations of the markets of the country are so frequent, especially as to competitive articles, and oftentimes unexpected, that commercial considerations alone would not furnish a sufficiently stable and fixed rule for guidance in making a rate which ought to remain substantially permanent through all fluctuations. Squire & Co. v. M. C. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 515, 521.

(b) Each locality competing with others in a common market are entitled to reasonable and just rates at the hands of the carriers serving it and to the benefit of all its natural advantages, and no departure from the rule requiring rates in all cases to be reasonable in themselves can be justified on the ground that it is necessary in order to maintain existing trade relations, or to protect commercial conditions or to secure to carriers traffic from certain territory assumed to be exclusively theirs. Freight Bureau v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 592, 615.

(c) No departure from the rule requiring rates in all cases to be reasonable in themselves can be justified on the ground that it is necessary in order to maintain existing trade relations, or to "protect competing markets," or to "equalize commercial conditions." or to secure to carriers traffic from certain territory assumed to be exclusively theirs. Freight Bureau v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 195.

(d) Defendants' rates per 100 pounds on cotton goods from various producing points in Texas are 96 cents to Wichita, Kan., 50 cents to Kansas City and St. Louis, and 55 cents to Omaha and Chicago. The average distances range from 458 miles to Wichita to 1,038 miles to Chicago. Active market and carriers' competition exists for the sale and transportation of this traffic to the points other than Wichita, to which substantially agreed rates are maintained by the four carriers reaching that point from all markets. A rate from Texas producing points to Wichita of 50 cents per 100 pounds would be highly profitable to the carriers and complainant; a Wichita jobber formerly had, by the rebate system, a rate as low as 50 cents. Until recently the tariff rate to Wichita from these points was $1.16. The present rates to Kansas City and other Missouri River points and to Wichita exclude the Wichita jobber from competition. Under these circumstances complainant buys cotton goods in other markets. HELD, that the present rate of 96 cents to Wichita is unreasonable and unjust, and should not exceed 50 cents per 100 pounds. For reasons stated the rate from Galveston to Wichita is not included in the decision. Johnston-Larimer Dry Goods Co. v. A., T. & S. F. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 48.

(e) Defendant's rates on refined oil at the date of filing complaint from Erie, Kans., to Joplin, Mo., 69 miles, and to St. Louis, Mo., 400 miles, were 17 cents per 100 pounds; but later the rate from Erie to Joplin was reduced to 15 cents, which is the rate prevailing from other oil-shipping points in Kansas to Joplin. The rates to Joplin, St. Louis, and Kansas City from these producing points are apparently adjusted with a view to placing the shippers on an equitable basis and affording them equal opportunities in the markets. Complaint dismissed. Wilhart v. Missouri Kansas & Texas Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 139.

(f) The record showing the rate on coal from Jewett, Kan., to Kansas City, Mo., to be the same as from other mines in the same field, the same as that on competing railroads in the same field, and to be fixed in accordance with an established relation of rates on coal from other producing points in the same market; and it also appearing that such rate could not be changed without disturbing rates on coal, not only from other neighboring mines, but from all the local-producing centers the product of which is sent to Kansas City,—the Commission is not justified in ordering rate changed or declaring it unreasonable. Fellows Coal & Material Co. v. Missouri P. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 481.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) The fact that one market has higher rates inbound than its competitor is not a justification for rates outbound which are less than just and reasonable. La Crosse Shippers' Asso. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 38 I. C. C. 453, 458.

(h) There may be little or nothing which will aid in determining from a tranportation standpoint what is the just and reasonable rate to be applied on various commodities, made to meet the varying stress of commercial competition between foreign and domestic producers of those commodities. Chamber of Commerce, Houston, Tex. v. S. P. Co., 49 I. C. C. 316, 318.

(i) Ability or inability to market all the product is not in itself determinative of the justness and reasonableness of the rates. Ohio Valley Coal Operators Asso. v. I. C. R. R., 53 I. C. C. 148, 151.

(a) Exceptional cases of rates made lower than other rates by a carrier on one portion of its line by the action of a competitor, and in which it is without fault itself under the operation of the act, can not be adopted as the standard as to other rates upon a far distant portion of its line where no such exceptional conditions exist, and the reasonableness of its rates must be determined by altogether different considerations. Business Mens Asso. of Minnesota v. C. & N. W. Ry. 2 I. C. C. 48, 52.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) The competition of a circuitous line with a short line is considered in determining the relative reasonableness of a rate. Edwards & Bradford Lumber Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 93, 95.

§8. (4) Water Competition.

See Evidence §14 (5); Water Competition.

(a) The possible influence of water competition upon rates for the transportation of oranges and the non-existence of such competition in the carriage of berries, because the latter cannot be carried by water in any considerable quantity, does not authorize defendants to take advantage of the situation and charge unreasonable rates on berries. Perry v. Fla. Central & Peninsular R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 740.

(b) Competition in ocean transportation is to be taken into consideration in determining whether or not the rate for the carriage of goods imported on a through bill of lading from a foreign port, from the port of entry in the United States to the point of destination, violates the interstate commerce law; and the fact that the proportion of the through rate allowed for carriage in the United States is less than the rate scheduled for ordinary shipments between the same points does not necessarily render the rate charged unlawful. Southern Pacific Co. v. Redding & Son, 8 I. C. C. App. II.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Carriers can not be compelled to meet water competition; they do it of their own volition, or whenever the same is potent enough to compel them to do so in order to secure the traffic. In each instance the carrier determines for itself whether such water competition has sufficient influence on the traffic to make it reduce its rates. Bainbridge Board of Trade v. L. H. & St. L. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 586, 594.

(d) There may be water competition at each of two points, and yet a difference in rates to those points may be justified. Bainbridge Board of Trade v. L. H. & St. L. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 586, 594.

(e) While water competition may be availed of by a carrier as its justification and excuse for rates that are lower than would otherwise be lawful, the existence of such competition is not in itself a ground upon which shipper may demand a lower rate. Lindsay Bros. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co., 16 I. C. C. 6, 8.

(f) Potential competition, as well as actual, justifies low rates. Kentucky Wagon Mfg. Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 18 I. C. C. 360, 363.

(g) Terminal rates, such as a blanket rate from the Mississippi River to the Atlantic seaboard, to all Pacific terminals are low and not a fair measure of rates generally. Ohio Foundry Co. v. P. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 65, 67.

(h) The mere fact of water competition is not proof that rail rates are so low as to deprive a carrier of a reasonable return. R. R. Commission of Nev. v. S. P. Co., 19 I. C. C. 238, 250.

(i) The Commission cannot overcome by an adjustment of freight rates natural advantages, such as water competition and climatic conditions, which one competing locality has over another. Truck Growers' Ass'n v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 190, 193.

(j) Potential water competition is considered in fixing rates. Audley Hill & Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 225, 226;

(k) Lower rates which are forced by water competition cannot be accepted as a measure of reasonableness of rates from points where such competition does not exist. South Atlantic Waste Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 293, 296.

(l) Ocean competition, as well as circumstances and conditions beyond the seaboard, are to be considered in determining whether differences in rates as between foreign and domestic traffic are unreasonable or unduly discriminatory. Chamber of Commerce of Newport News v. S. Ry. Co., 23 I. C. C. 345, 355.

(m) A water-compelled rate is not the measure of a normal all-rail rate. Cohen & Co. v. Mallory Steamship Co., 23 I. C. C. 374, 377.

(n) Lower rates which are forced by water competition can not be accepted as a measure of reasonableness of rates from or to points where such competition does not exist. Class and Commodity Rates between St. Louis, East St. Louis, and Ohio River Points, 38 I. C. C. 411, 431.

(o) Transcontinental rates are affected by competition of ocean carrying vessels and other conditions, and it would be difficult to find in them any practical standard whereby to determine the reasonableness of rates directly involved. Tennessee Copper Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 41 I. C. C. 336, 356.

(p) A water compelled rate can not be taken as a measure of a reasonable rate, nor can the voluntary reduction of a rate without other evidence be considered a sufficient basis upon which to find the higher rate unreasonable. Du Pont De N. P. Co. v. Penn. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 363, 364.

(q) The fact that there is a water route from a given point to a certain destination affording a low and reasonable rate does not justify the Commission in permitting the rail carriers to charge a high and unreasonable rate on traffic between these points. S. P. Co. v. I. C. C., 219 U. S. 433, 451, 31 Sup. Ct. 288, 55 L. ed. 283.

(a) In arriving at what is a just and reasonable rate on freight transported by a carrier on a short local line having but a small volume of business, where the cost of transportation is exceptionally great, arising from steep grades, sparse population, and light traffic, these are circumstances and conditions of controlling weight in the making of the rates, and cannot be overlooked when a question of their reasonableness is involved; and under such circumstances the fact that an independent pipe line from Titusville to Buffalo transports oil between those points at lower rates than the railroad company constitutes no just reason why the railroad company should be required to reduce its rates to those of the pipe line. Rice v. Western N. Y. & P. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 298.

(b) It is not shown that the rate of 17½ cents on grain and grain products from Chicago to New York is unremunerative or disproportionate as compared with other rates; and whether tested by the cost of movement, by what the carriers have voluntarily accepted in the past, or by comparison with rates on somewhat similar kinds of traffic, it is not shown to be unprofitable or unreasonably low. It is 10 to 40 per cent higher than the rates actually received in recent years, and nothing appears from the financial conditions of the carriers to justify a greater advance. In the Matter of Proposed Advances in Freight Rates, 9 I. C. C., 302.

(c) Cost of service not conclusive as to the reasonableness of a rate on a particular article. Society of American Florists, etc. v. U. S. Express Co. 12 I. C. C. 120.

(d) Cost of service on a particular article is not conclusive as to the reasonableness of a rate thereon. Society of American Florists, etc., v. U. S. Express Co. 12 I. C. C. 121.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) An increase in the cost of labor and in the price of railway materials and supplies does not necessarily imply a decrease in the net earnings of a carrier or preclude the possibility of an increase in its net earnings, due to an increase in the volume of traffic. Shippers & Receivers' Bureau of Newark v. N. Y. O. & W. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 264, 265.

(f) In determining the cost of hauling ice from New Jersey and Pennsylvania points to Jersey City, Hoboken and other points the carrier obtained indirect line expense by assuming that the cost in the case of ice equaled the average cost of moving a ton of freight upon its line without presenting the slightest evidence to bear out the assumption. The indirect terminal expense was obtained by taking an average obtained by dividing the total terminal cost, including a proportion of the fixed charges, by the total number of cars of traffic of all kinds shipped on the railroad. Nearly one-third of the total amount which was used for the purpose of determining the ton-mile cost of hauling ice in case of indirect line expenses and of terminal cost was styled "fixed charges," which consisted mainly of rent and to a small extent of interest and taxes. The Commission held this method of computing the cost of transportation of the ice was unreliable. The indirect line expense might be greater or less, according to the nature of the entire traffic handled over the system. Some of the items which were included in the indirect line expense were due in part to the movement of the ice trains and others were not, and to assume that every ton of the ice should bear a proportionate share of all the expenses of the railroad of all kinds was to beg the whole question. It was erroneous to assume that ice should pay in proportion to the number of tons exactly the same contribution to fixed charges that all other traffic paid. Mountain Ice Co. v. D. L. & W. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 305, 316, 318, 319.

(g) Rates over the same lines, between the same points but under differing conditions, must be made with some consideration for the difference in the cost of service. Kindel v. N. Y. C. H. & H. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 555, 558.

(h) Certain portions of a system of railroad cannot be segregated from the whole and the expenses and earnings charged and credited to such portions on a mileage pro rata basis. In Re Investigation of Advances on Grain, 21 I. C. C. 22, 25.

(i) In fixing rates on competitive articles the relation should be determined on the basis of a difference in the cost of service, and many of the other considerations entering into the establishment of rates upon independent or isolated articles should be in a large part eliminated. Carstens Packing Co. v. O. & W. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 77, 81.

(j) Carriers may not haul a particular class of traffic or traffic for a particular community at less than the cost of the service, and recoup themselves from the charges levied against other traffic. In re Advances in Rates by Carriers for the Transportation of Single Package Lots, 22 I. C. C. 328, 335.

(k) Costs do not determine rates; yet most rates have within them as a constituent the element of cost. Cost is generally an important element in arriving at a judgment with respect to a rate. What weight shall be given to that element as compared with all the other elements entering into a particular rate is a matter to be decided in each individual case. Boileau v. P. & L. E. R. R. Co., 21 I. C. C. 640, 652.

(l) Information as to the cost of service is helpful in the determination of the reasonableness of rates. The cost of service is one of the factors to be considered in determining the reasonableness of rates. But neither the cost of the service, nor any one of the other factors, of which there are many, can be taken alone as conclusive. If cost of service were to be accepted as the controlling factor, it must necessarily follow that the rates on lines of light traffic must be much higher relatively than upon lines having great density of traffic. If adjusted upon that basis alone, it would seem inevitable that industry and commercial activity must more and more concentrate in great centers and in fewer hands. Aside from the risk of loss or damage, the cost of service between two points is presumably the same for two cars of equal weight loaded, one with a low-grade commodity, and one with a commodity of high value. If the rates were necessarily the same upon both, the apparently inevitable result would be great restriction upon the abandonment of the movement of the low-grade commodity. This would cause material shrinkage in the total revenue from transportation and increase the rates for the traffic that must move, whatever the rates may be. Coke Producers' Assn. of Connellsville v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 125, 140.

(m) Commercial and transportation conditions must not be confused, and the condition of the market as to any specific commodity is not to be considered the controlling element in determining the reasonableness of a rate. If, when viewed in the light of those considerations which enter into proper rate-making, a particular rate is fair and just for the service performed, the price at which the shipper markets his product cannot be accepted as the controlling factor in fixing the rate. Rates on Potatoes from Oklahoma to Points in Colorado, 28 I. C. C. 298, 300.

(n) The cost of transporting a commodity is an element properly to be considered in deciding what is a reasonable rate, but it is not necessarily determinative in all cases. Cost of transportation may be said to determine the minimum rate that may be charged as, on the other hand, the value of the service to the shipper marks the maximum of a reasonable rate or charge. Bituminous Coal to C. F. A. Territory, 46 I. C. C. 66, 112.

(o) When cost figures are used in determining the reasonableness of rates and are the result of painstaking efforts to arrive at just and reasonable results, such figures are not to be disregarded because they may not be correct in every detail and are based in part on estimates. Switching and Absorption at Minneapolis, 61 I. C. C. 646, 652.

(p) Cost of service includes not only expenses of operation but taxes and the proper capital charges incident to the continued functioning of the property. The Commission recognizes this when it makes allowances for density of traffic in the determination of reasonable rates. The share of overhead costs fairly attributable to interchange of traffic may likewise be greater, relatively, where this density is low. New England Divisions, 66 I. C. C., 196, 199.

(q) Proof that a carrier is not earning operating expenses on its State and interstate freight traffic as a whole does not establish that the joint interstate rates on a particular commodiy, if reduced in accordance with findings in Reduced Rates, 68 I. C. C., 676, would be less than just and reasonable. Reduced Rates, 1922, 73 I. C. C., 189, 191.

(r) Where a rate imposed by a regulatory body is under judicial review upon the allegation that the rate fixed is confiscatory, it has been held by the courts that a rate may not lawfully be fixed by such tribunal which is based alone on the out of pocket costs ascribable to that particular traffic, but that to be lawful the rate must be sufficient to cover a ratable proportion of the average cost of freight traffic generally, including a return on the property devoted to public service. To hold otherwise would compel the performance of a certain specified kind of service by the carrier at less than average cost. The extension of this principle to other classes of traffic, if pursued far enough, would bankrupt the road. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C., 48, 69.

(s) It has been held by the courts that a rate may not lawfully be fixed by a regulatory tribunal which is based alone on the out-of-pocket costs ascribable to that particular traffic, but that to be lawful the rate must be sufficient to cover a ratable portion of the average cost of freight traffic generally, including a return on the property devoted to public service. To hold otherwise would compel the performance of a certain specified kind of service at less than average cost. The extension of this principle to other classes of traffic, if pursued far enough, would bankrupt the road. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 69.

(t) Where cost studies appear to be the result of an earnest endeavor to determine the cost of a particular service they are entitled to some weight in arriving at a reasonable charge. Switching and Absorption at Minneapolis, 74 I. C.

(ta) Rates (including dock service charge) on iron ore from Mesabi, Vermillion, and Cuyuna Ranges in Minnesota to vessels at Two Harbors and Duluth, Minn., and Allouez Bay and Superior, Wis., found not unreasonable, discriminatory, or unduly prejudical. Evidence consists of statistics and cost studies of operation on roads controlled by U. S. Steel Corporation, upon doubtful assumption that such statistics are representative of all roads considered herein. Fact that Steel Corporation roads earn in excess of return prescribed in the act does not prove discriminatory or prejudice or preference, and general reductions of 1922, applied to ore rates, seem to have been fairly proportionate to decreased costs of operation. Adriatic Mining Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 78 I. C. C. 611, 617, 634.

(tb) Charges assailed can not be found unreasonable merely because defendant's operating costs were in excess of what they would have been if it had paid wages lower than those found unreasonable by Railroad Labor Board. Sugarland Industries v. Galveston Wharf Co., 80 I. C. C., 665, 667.

(u) The cost of the service includes not only expenses of operation but taxes and the proper capital charges incident to the continued functioning of the property. The Commission recognizes this when it makes allowance for density of traffic in the determination of reasonable rates. The share of overhead costs fairly attributable to interchange traffic may likewise be greater, relatively, where this density is low. Wichita Northwestern Ry. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. 81 I. C. C. 513, 516.

(v) While cost is an important element in determining reasonableness of rates it is not necessarily controlling. Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 429, 431.

§10. Distance

See Infra §36; Blanket Rates §9; Differentials; Distance Rates; Evidence §20; §58.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Where a road makes the same charge to one point that it does to another one third or two-thirds the distance on the same line, presumptively its charges to the last mentioned point are unjust and illegal. Re Chicago St. Paul & Kansas City R. Co. 2 I. C. C. 137, 147.

(b) Distance is not always the controlling element in determining what is a reasonable rate, but there is ordinarily no better measure of railroad service in carrying goods than the distance they are carried. And where the rates of freight charges over one line, on similar freight carried from neighboring territory to the same market, is considerably greater than over other lines for distances as long or longer, such greater rate is held to be excessive and should be reduced. James & Abbott v. E. T. V. & Ga. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 609, 613.

(c) In the absence of other influential conditions, distances may be fairly considered a controlling element in fixing reasonable rates. The distance being in favor of one of two competing points, and neither the cost, the value of the service nor other conditions of transportation in favor of the other, the shorter distance point cannot justly be denied at least equal rates with the longer. HELD, on the facts in this case, that any higher rate from Nashville, Tenn., to Cordele, Ga., than to Albany and Americus, Ga., is unreasonable and unduly prejudicial to complainants. S. J. Hill & Bro. v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. et al, 6 I. C. C. 343, 358.

(d) To make distance the sole factor in determining a reasonable rate would introduce undue discrimination and create chaotic commercial conditions. E. M. Wilhoit v. M. K. & T. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 139, 140.

(ef) Distance not sole factor in determining reasonable rates. Wilhoit v. M. K. & T. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 138.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) If strictly distance rates were applied to grain moving from points of origin it is apparent that at a certain distance the rate would be prohibitive. Kansas City Transportation Bureau v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 195, 204.

(h) Unquestionably mileage is a factor in the determination of the reasonableness of rates, but how important, or what effect it should have in judging the fairness of a challenged rate is a question which must be answered in the light of all the facts surrounding the exact-ion of the rate. The Commission will not compel the establishment of rates solely according to mileage; the public benefits, the greater volume of business of carriers warranting lower rates to all, the force of competition and many other potent considerations may far outweigh a claim of right founded only on geographic location. Fort Dodge Commercial Club v. I. C. R. R. Co., 16 I. C. C. 572, 581.

(i) It is well settled that distance is always a factor to be taken into consideration in determining either the reasonableness of a rate by itself or in considering its relation to rates to other points, but it is equally well settled that distance alone is not controlling. Competition is an important element and there are various other considerations, all of which must be taken into account in determining the fact whether a particular rate or a system is entitled as a matter of law to rates that are reasonable and that do not operate to unduly discriminate against them. Corporation Commission of North Carolina v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 303, 309.

(j) When long distances are under consideration, it often, and perhaps usually, happens that a considerable difference in mileage may be disregarded in fixing the total through charge, but where different packing-houses pay freight upon the animals which they slaughter in proportion to distance, the element of distance ought to be considered in fixing the proper relation in rates upon the product out. Investigation of Alleged Unreasonable Rates on Meats, 22 I. C. C. 160, 168.

(k) That rates are below the continuous-mileage scale is not conclusive of their unreasonableness. Middlesboro Board of Trade v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 14, 22.

(l) The Commission must consider the entire haul both rail and water in determining whether a rate is remunerative. In re Advances in Break-bulk Rates, 27 I. C. C. 78, 80.

(m) Ordinarily in the making of rates carriers must consider, among other things, distances and natural advantages. But this does not mean that they must or should so adjust rates as to give all shippers engaged in the same business equal access to markets or to prevent free access to the fields where raw materials are produced on part of others than those located in or immediately adjacent to such fields, and the Commission recognizes no exclusive right to supply consuming markets or to serve the fields of production. Stuart's Draft Milling Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 31 I. C. C. 623, 628.

(n) From the fact that the average distance from one district is substantially the same as from another it does not necessarily follow that higher rates from the former are unreasonable. San Toy Coal Co. v. A. C. & Y. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 93, 96.

(o) Average haul considered in determining reasonableness of rates. Transit Rates on Logs and Staves at Alexandria, La., 34 I. C. C. 169, 171.

(p) If a blanket or group arrangement is a reasonable one, the reasonableness of a rate from the group to a given point is properly to be determined with respect to the average distance from all points in the group. Midcontinent Oil Rates, 36 I. C. C. 109, 115.

(q) The element of distance is an important matter to be considered in determining the reasonableness of rates in their relation to other rates with which they are compared, but distance alone is not controlling, and in many cases must yield to other and more weighty circumstances and conditions. Corporation Commission of Virginia v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 40 I. C. C., 24, 29.

(r) But it is seldom that distance is the sole factor to be considered in fixing reasonable rate. Chamber of Johnson City v. S. Ry., 46 I. C. C. 527, 531.

(s) Rates on, sand and gravel, in c. f. a. territory, considered as a whole, found not unreasonable as compared with rates on slag. While earnings on sand and gravel were shown to be higher than those on all traffic, such comparisons are of little significance because of the comparatively shorter average haul on sand and gravel. National Asso. of Sand & Gravel Producers v. P. R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C. 615.

(t) The Commission has found that distance is only one of the elements to be considered in testing the reasonableness of rates, and that other elements may outweigh it. Union Sulphur Company v. A. & W. R. Co., 81 I. C. C. 382, 387.

§10½. Divisions.

See Divisions.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) And a division of rates is not forceful evidence of unreasonableness of rate. Charges being reasonable, division of rate between carriers, is not usually of special interest to public, though in some cases divisions may have controlling significance. Pardee

Works v. C. R. R. Co. of N. J., 29 I. C. C. 500, 502.

(b) The total rate which the shipper must pay determines the cost of transportation and the divisions of a joint rate are not generally speaking a sound test of the reasonableness of the through rate itself. The Alaska Investigation, 44 I. C. C. 680, 691.

(c) Comparison of divisions accruing to initial lines and earnings accruing to line-haul carriers on traffic from points situated on other short lines found to be of little value in determining the reasonableness of rates from points on short line here involved as it is the through charge for the through carriage in which shippers are interested. Peerless Coal Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 63 I. C. C. 335, 337.

§11. Earnings.

See Infra §36; Evidence §5 §51.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) An increase in the cost of labor and materials, accompanied by a decrease in the net revenues of the carrier, is not necessarily inconsistent with the possibility that its net earnings may still suffice to afford it a fair return on the investment without an increase in its rate schedules. Shippers' & Receivers' Bureau of Newark v. N. Y. O. & W. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 264, 265.

(b) The Commission is bound to consider whether any contemplated readjustment will result in serious impairment of business investments or undue depreciation in the revenues of the carrier. Black Mountain Land Co. v. So. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 286, 295.

(c) If the present system of private ownership of railways is to be continued, sufficient inducement must be extended to private investors. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 417.

(d) And the unfavorable financial condition of a carrier cannot lawfully be remedied by imposing unreasonable rates. Railroad Commissioners of Florida v. S. A. L. Ry., 16 I. C. C. 1, 5.

(e) Because the revenues of a carrier are high during a period of general prosperity, rates should not be reduced; the periods when it operated almost at a loss should be considered. Florida Fruit & Vegetable Ass'n v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 552, 564.

(f) The ultimate test of reasonableness of rates with the carrier itself is the return for the use of its equipment and facilities. National Hay Ass'n v. M. C. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 34, 48.

(g) The fact that the net revenues of a carrier from its ownership of a bridge on which an arbitrary is charged for passengers and freight carried across the same may be greater than the returns on ordinary business enterprises is not sufficient in itself to justify a holding that the bridge tolls are excessive. Bridges are and have been regarded as precarious property. They may be damaged or entirely swept away by floods, and erection of other bridges nearby may draw away their tenants, and thus seriously affect their earning capacity. The net revenues have an undoubted and also an important bearing upon the question of the reasonableness of rates, but the value of the service to the shipper and the other elements so often referred to as entering into the reasonableness of rates must also be taken into consideration. A railroad company may be operated with a less return than it ought to enjoy, or even at a loss, but neither condition of affairs would justify the exaction by it of rates that are higher than they reasonably should be for service performed, all things being considered. So also the fact that the net earnings of a carrier may be large does not of itself justify the Commission fixing a rate at less than is reasonable for the service, all other things being considered. Railroad Commissioners of Iowa v. I. C. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 181, 186.

(h) Commercial conditions may be considered in connection with other factors that determine the reasonableness of a particular rate, but the ad-equacy of the revenue for the service performed by the carriers must not take precedence over market conditions affecting the commodity transported. Lindsay Bros. v. P. M. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 368, 369.

(i) If any carrier is earning such a surplus that there ought to be a radical reduction in its revenue, the benefit of such reductions should be distributed, in some equitable manner among the various commodities. Pittsburgh Steel Co. v. L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 173, 185.

(j) Rates found not unreasonable where the average revenue per car was approximately 5 per cent of the value of the load. Slater v. S. P. Co., 64 I. C. C. 647, 657.

(ja) Congress in enacting section 15a of the act, directing that rates should be so fixed as to give carriers as a whole a fair return on aggregate value of their railway property, recognized right of individual carriers to earnings in excess of that return in permitting them to retain one-half of their excess income above 6 per cent. Adriatic Mining Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 75 I. C. C. 611, 617, 631, 632.

(k) While earnings may be considered in the fixing of a reasonable rate to be charged by a carrier for the transportation of freight, rates necessarily cannot be based upon earnings alone. This is made clearly to appear when it is considered that a just and reasonable rate is one which is just to the carrier and to the shipper. It is a rate which yields to the carrier a fair return upon the value of the property employed in the public service, and it is a rate which is fair to the shipper for the services rendered; and when this rate is established, if it results in large profits to the carrier, the carrier is fortunate in its business, and if it results in a loss of earning power, so that the business of the carrier is unprofitable, the carrier is unfortunate. But the rate may not be lowered or raised merely upon the ground that the carrier is either making or losing money, providing always the rate is a reasonable and just rate. Hooker v. I. C. C., 188 Fed. 242, 253.

§12. Economical Management.

See Advanced Rates §10; Transportation §13.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) It is for the public interest that every transportation service should be performed by the most economical method, since that must ultimately result in the lowest transportation charge. Albree v. B. & M. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 303, 316.

(b) It is unfair to take from the carrier whatever of profit it may secure by reason of improvement in its plant and adoption of the most modern methods. If our railroad systems are to remain in private hands, stimulus must be given to the initiative and imagination of railroad operators. The community may not take with justice whatever comes by the labor or time saving devices adopted by those who serve the public, nor may the carriers absorb the profits of the shipper resulting from similar efforts. In Re Advances on Coal to Lake Ports, 22 I. C. C. 604, 625.

§12½. Equalizing Commercial Condition.

See Equalization of Rates §6.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The interests of consumer and of producer must not be lost sight of in passing upon the reasonableness of rates. Commercial Club of Superior, Wis., v. G. N. Ry. Co., 24 I. C. C. 96, 102.

(b) The function of the market is not the controlling element in determining the reasonableness of rates. Commercial Club of Superior, Wis., v. G. N. Ry. Co., 24 I. C. C. 96, 121.

(c) A shipper's commercial needs cannot be made the basis of a finding that a rate is unreasonable. Slider v. S. Ry. Co., 24 I. C. C. 312, 313.

(d) Climatic conditions considered in determining reasonableness of rates. Michigan Copper & Brass Co. v. D. S. S. & A. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 357, 363.

(e) The inability of producers to realize profits under depressed market conditions will not of itself suffice to show that the rates are unjust or unreasonable. Nor is the desirability of developing a great wheat growing section in a particular region sufficient to show that rates which preclude such development are necessarily unjust or unreasonable. The national or public aspect of this matter is one of general governmental policy and not one which the law entrusts to the Commission for determination. Railroad Commrs. of Montana v. B. A. & P. Ry. Co., 31 I. C. C. 641.

(f) The reasonableness or unreasonableness of freight rates cannot be gauged solely by the ability or inabliity of shippers under depressed prices, to market their products at the existing rates with a reasonable margin of profit. Such a doctrine would lead to the conclusion that the different burdens of production arising from natural disadvantages, distance from market, and other economic difficulties of all communities and industries should be neutralized and absorbed by the carriers which serve them. Railroad Commrs. of Montana v. B. A. & P. Ry. Co., 31 I. C. C. 641, 644.

(g) The reasonableness of rates attacked cannot be determined solely by considering the geographical and economic disadvantages under which grain producers are laboring; nor can those disadvantages fairly be said to lessen materially the probative force of comparisons whose value the Commission has repeatedly recognized in determining the reasonableness of rates. Railroad Commrs. of Montana v. B. A. & P. Ry. Co., 31 I. C. C. 641, 646.

(h) A shipper's commercial needs can not be made the basis of a finding that a rate is unreasonable, and in the absence of unjust discrimination or undue prejudice it is for a carrier to decide whether or not, in order to meet competition, it will establish lower rates than might be found reasonable. Lamb-Fish Lumber Co. v. A. C. & Y. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 187, 192.

(b) Loss of use of equipment resulting from method of handling hay traffic is an important factor to be considered in determining the reasonableness of a rate. 1915 Western Rate Advance Case, 35 I. C. C., 497, 630.

(a) Rate on gasoline, in tank-car loads, from Shreveport, La., to Jacksonville, Fla., obtained by erroneous application of interterritorial increase under Increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C., 220, to through combination rate, found unreasonable to extent it exceeded rate that would have resulted from authorized territorial increase to each factor, which rate so computed was subsequently established. §14. Investment Relying on Rate.

See Evidence §15 §27;

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where a plant has been established and money invested on the faith of certain rates and conditions, the carrier may not increase those rates to the serious disadvantage of such investment without good cause or reason. Douglas & Co. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 232, 237.

(b) Under certain circumstances where a business has ben built up and maintained under a certain rate, that rate should not be disturbed. Corporation Commission of N. C. v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 303, 308.

(c) The Commission has never understood that it could dictate the policy of a carrier in the making of its rates in so far as there was just room for the exercise of a policy. It has several times explicitly so declared. It has, however, believed that it might consider what the policy of a carrier had been in determining whether the rates resulting from a change in that policy were just and reasonable. It often happens that the very existence of an industry depends upon the rate accorded to it. If, now, a carrier has established a particular rate for the express purpose of enabling an industry to exist, and if upon the strength of that rate money has been invested which must be destroyed if the rate is withdrawn, this fact might properly be considered in passing upon the reasonableness of the proposed change in the rate. Such fact is not controlling, but is one of the circumstances which may properly be kept in view. The Commission might in a proper case order the continued maintenance of a rate upon which the investment of money had been induced, even though it would not in the first instance as an original proposition have directed the establishment of that rate. Oregon & Washington Lumber Mfrs.' Ass'n v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 389, 394.

(d) The mere fact that shippers have invested money in reliance on certain rates during the period such rates were in force and built up their business, does not prove that such rates are reasonable, or that proposed increases are excessive. In re Advances on Furniture from Nappanee, Ind., to Chicago, Ill., 25 I. C. C. 331, 336.

(e) However reluctant the Commission may feel to sanction changes in rates which tend to impair or destroy the value of investments made in expectation of their continuance, it can not on that ground deny to carriers the right to charge rates which are just and reasonable. Chattanooga Log Rates, 35 I. C. C. 163, 168.

(f) Investments made in expectation of the continuance of existing rates will not be considered in determining the reasonableness of increased rates. Meyersdale Smokeless Coal Co. v. B. & O. R. R., 62 I. C. C. 429, 431.

§15. Investment of the Carrier.

See Advanced Rates §12 (2) Evidence §6.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The amount invested in a railroad cannot be ignored in determining the reasonableness of rates fixed by law to be charged thereon, although such amount is far in excess of the present value of the property. Ames v. Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.) 4 I. C. R. 835.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Any outlay which is not required to keep a railroad's property up to its present standards, but which is necessary to provide for the handling of increased business, and which, therefore, adds to the permanent earning capacity of the property, should, as between the railway and the public, when the railway demands the right to increase a rate for the mere sake of additional revenue, be made, not out of the earnings, but out of the capital or surplus. Cattle Raisers' Ass'n of Texas v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 13 I. C. C. 418, 432.

(c) The original cost of a carrier's property devoted to the public use is an element to be considered in determining the reasonableness of rates. Portland Chamber of Commerce v. O. R. R. & N. Co., 19 I. C. C. 265, 280.

(d) A carrier is entitled to ask a fair return upon the value of its property devoted to the public use, and the public is entitled to demand rates not higher than the services are reasonably worth. Morgan Grain Co. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 460, 471.

(e) Were it possible to determine the exact amount of money which has been put into the railroad properties inOfficial Classification territory, the amount of return which has been paid to the present time, the degree of prudence with which the property has been constructed and operated, the investment would furnish a very satisfactory basis in arriving at an equitable return. Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 258.

(f) The ordinary considerations of justice require that money invested in railroads by invitation of the government should be allowed a fair return. This does not mean that the Commission should permit rates which will guarantee all railroad investment, nor which will guarantee any railroad investment at all times, but it should allow rates which will yield to this capital as large a return as it could have obtained from other investments of the same grade. If rates formerly in effect have become insufficient, then higher rates should be permitted. Rates should be such as to render possible a high-class, not an extravagant, transportation service. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 262.

(g) The nearest approximation to the fair standard of rate regulation is that of bona-fide investment—the sacrifice made by the owners of the property—considering as part of the investment any shortage of return that there may be in the early years of the enterprise. and to the traffic and the earning power. Upon this, taking a life history of the road through a number of years, its promoters are entitled to a reasonable return. This, however, is limited; for a return should not be given upon wastefulness, mismanagement, or poor judgment, and always there is present the restriction that no more than a reasonable rate shall be charged. Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 347.

(h) Rates should be sufficient to guarantee a fair annual return on the investment and to provide reasonably for keeping the property up to the improved modern methods. Meeker & Co. v. L. V. R. R. Co., 21 I. C. C. 129, 161.

(i) Even if lower proposed rate should not afford a reasonable return upon the investment, an unreasonable rate is not justified on ground that a rate higher than reasonable is necessary to afford an adequate return. Ladd & Co. v. Gould S. W. Ry. Co., 36 I. C. C. 179, 182.

(j) Money thrown away, dishonestly or with wanton recklessness, or foolishly lost in nonrailroad enterprises, is not money put to public use upon which the rate payers are bound in law and in conscience to make a return. Proposed Increases in New England, 49 I. C. C. 421, 433.

§15½. Loading.

See Loading and Unloading.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The manner of loading is considered in determining the reasonableness of rates. Western Classification Case, 25 I. C. C. 442, 472.

(b) That an article loads heavily considered in determining reasonableness of rate. Duluth Log Rates, 29 I. C. C. 420, 422.

(c) The cost of loading one shipment is of little value in determining the reasonable charge to be levied on traffic in general. Roberts & Schaefer Co. v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 277, 278.

§16. Long Continued Adjustment.

See Evidence §29, §43, §66; Voluntary Rates.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) In the carriage of great staples which supply an enormous business and which in market value and actual cost of transportation are among the cheapest articles of commerce, rates yielding only moderate profit to the carrier are both necessary and justifiable, and where the carriers frequently put in force and continue for considerable periods of time tariffs of rates and charges, it is a fair inference that such rates and charges are profitable. In the matter of alleged excessive freight rates and charges on food products, 3 I. C. C. 93, 101.

(b) A railroad company by putting in force a rate of charges furnishes evidence that the rate is profitable, which is more convincing when such rate is long maintained; and where a carrier put in force and maintained for nearly two years, immediately after the Act to Regulate Commerce took effect, a scale of charges largely in excess of that maintained for two years next before the Act, and the lower rates were sufficient to meet all the obligations of the road, including income on investment,—HELD, The higher rate should be reduced. Cox Bro. & Co. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 460.

(c) A railroad company had in force for a period of more than two years next before the act took effect a scale of charges on anthracite coal considerably lower than its present rates, which are higher on coal than on iron ore, pig iron, and other low grade freight, and also higher than the charges of said road on general freight, the expense of carrying which is much greater than the expense on coal. HELD, that such higher rates on coal are unreasonable. Coxe Bros. & Co. v. L. V. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 460.

(d) Where carriers have maintained for a considerable period a relation of rates affecting an extensive territory, though somewhat more favorable to one community therein than appears to be justified, and commercial conditions there and elsewhere have become measurably dependent upon the continuance of that relation, it would ordinarily be inexpedient to increase rates at that point as the means of correcting relative injustice to another locality; in such case the only practicable remedy is to reduce the rates to the injured town. Daniels v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. et al. 6 I. C. C. 458.

(e) Prior rates raises a presumption against the carrier of their reasonableness. National Hay Asso. v. Lake Shore & Michigan S. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 264.

(f) The presumption as to reasonableness of rates long kept in effect by carriers as a voluntary Act on their part does not attach in a case where such rates have been established by carriers in compliance with the decision and order of the Commission. Proctor & Gamble Co. v. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 440.

(g) It may often happen that a single rate out of an entire system of rates may, when examined by itself, appear to be unreasonable, even though, when considered as a part of the whole system, it is justifiable. To reduce this single rate would perhaps disarrange the entire system of rates in effect, and in a case of this sort the Commission does not feel that it should interfere until strong reasons for such interference are presented. Hastings Malting Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 675.

(h) The long-continued carriage of any article of freight at certain rates, while establishing a presumption that such rates are reasonable and remunerative, is not alone conclusive, but to carry such presumption must show a settled practice or policy. Warren Manufacturing Co. v. Southern Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 381.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(i) Where a rate is voluntarily established and maintained for a considerable period, this fact, altnough not conclusive, is strong evidence of the reasonableness of the rate. The force of this presumption is greatly weakened, and may be altogether destroyed by the circumstances under which the rate was established and maintained, but if no particular reason is shown for the putting in of the rate, if no commercial or competitive condition prevents the maintenance of a higher rate, if the maintenance of this rate has been voluntary upon the part of the carrier, the force of the admission becomes exceedingly strong. Burgess v. Transcontinental Freight Bureau, 13 I. C. C. 668, 677.

(j) The fact that a reduction of an unreasonable rate or the correction of an unjust discrimination will require reductions or corrections at other points cannot be accepted as a valid defense of an unreasonable rate or an unjust discrimination. Milburn Wagon Co. v. L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 93, 101.

(k) To hold that a carrier may not withdraw a rate found by the Commission in another case to be unreasonably low merely because that rate was voluntarily established in the first place, would amount to requiring unjust preference, and to setting aside the fundamental principle that rates must be uniform under similar conditions. Fairmont Creamery Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 252, 254.

(l) The long maintenance of a given rate is an admission of the reasonableness of that rate. Where, upon the strength of a given rate, capital has been invested and industrial conditions have become established, the rate cannot be discontinued without taking into account its effect upon these commercial and industrial conditions, but there is no absolute rule requiring for any reason the absolute continuance of such a rate. It is always a question of what, under all the circumstances, is just and reasonable. Coal Rates from Virginia Mines, 30 I. C. C. 635, 642.

(m) The voluntary maintenance of rates for a long period is one fact to be considered in determining the reasonableness of the rates. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. L. & N. R. R., 36 I. C. C., 293, 301.

(n) The Commission has frequently held that a prima facie presumption of reasonableness attaches to a rate that has been long voluntarily maintained. But the continuance of a given rate is not conclusive evidence of the reasonableness of that rate and certainly the existence of a lower rate in the somewhat remote past, especially in view of the abrupt economic changes since the date when the lower rates were established, does not necessarily prove anything of value in ascertaining the reasonableness of rates in force during the period of federal control. Anaconda Copper Mining Co., v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 723, 729.

(o) Carriers may, to meet competition, establish lower rates than they could justly be compelled to make. Hence, a voluntary rate, established to meet competition, is not to be taken as the measure of what is reasonable. L. & N. R. R. Co. v. I. C. C. 195 Fed. 541, 558.

§16½ Low Prior Rate.
See Supra §16.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Low rates to one place may not be just and fair if still lower rates are given to another. Re Chicago, St. Paul, & Kansas City R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 137.

(b) On complaint for unjust and unreasonable rates—HELD, that a former special and preferred rate is not a fair test of the reasonableness of a present rate. Myers, Survivor of Hostetter & Co. v. Pennsylvania, 2 I. C. R. 403.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Many low rates have been established by carriers in times past because of competition or other circumstances which oftentimes have later ceased to exist. There is no principle of estoppel in the Act, and the Commission is vested with no power to restrain carriers from increasing unduly low rates to a basis which will yield just and reasonable compensation for the services rendered. A rate may be unreasonable because it is too low as well as because it is too high. The Commission regards as unreasonable a rate which is so low as to be noncompensatory or which may or does transfer a portion of the cost of transportation to other traffic, and has on occasion, refused to find a challenged rate to be unreasonable even when a carrier was willing, for self-serving purposes more or less obvious, to admit unreasonableness in the rate. It has power to suspend a reduction in rates to prevent discrimination. Excelsior from St. Paul, Minn., 36 I. C. C., 349, 364.

§17. Manufactured Products.

See Evidence §31.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The general rule is that manufactured products bear higher rates of transportation than does raw material, and is founded in reason, because ordinarily there is a substantial difference between the value of the one and that of the other, and frequently there is a greater degree of risk incident to the transportation and care of the manufactured product than of the raw material. The practice, however, is not universal, and is departed from in some instances because the reasons for the distinction are lacking, and in other cases because of countervailing commercial and market conditions and considerations. Within the last main class of exceptions would fall the case of grain and grain products, which are generally carried at the same rate. The rule, however, more nearly universally applies with respect to the primary or principal product or products than to the secondary products or by-products from the same raw material. East St. Louis Cotton Oil Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 37, 40.

(b) Carriers may make a reasonable differential between the rates on raw material and the article manufactured therefrom. Electric Malting Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 23 I. C. C. 378, 380.

(c) The relation of rates to and from transit points is frequently a matter of importance to carriers in its bearing upon the control of traffic, but in fixing rates on raw sugar the fact that carriers secure additional haul of the refined sugar can not be taken into account in judging the reasonableness of the rates in issue. Drews Sugar Co. v. S. P. Co., 44 I. C. C. 533, 539.

§18. Mineral Lands Owned by Carrier..

See Evidence §34.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where the coal lands owned by a carrier are leased to an independent company, which makes a profit out of their operation, the carrier should not be permitted to use the value of such property for the purpose of swelling the amount upon which it may demand an income from rates to be paid by the public. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 407.

(b) Ore properties belonging to carrier were transferred to an independent company in exchange for certificates entitling the holders thereof to participate in the profits of said company. These certificates were turned over gratis to the shareholders of the carrier. The Commission HELD, upon a question of reasonableness of rates such fact could not be urged to deny the right of the shareholders to receive a reasonable income on their stock. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 408.

§18½. Motive of Carrier.

See Evidence §34½.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The intent or motive actuating carriers in the establishment of rates cannot outweigh other considerations when determining the present reasonableness of such rates. But if it is sought to make use of a long existing basis of rates for the purpose of effecting reductions in other rates, it may be of special importance that consideration be given to the circumstances connected with the origination and continuance of the lower basis, in order to determine whether or not that basis is compensatory or reasonable and may properly be employed for testing purposes. Curry & Whyte Co. v. D. & I. R. R. R. Co., 32 I. C. C. 162, 164.

§19. Natural Advantages.

See Evidence §2.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Every city is entitled to the advantage of its location, and may not lawfully be subjected to high freight charges merely because carriers, for reasons of convenience or otherwise, include it with a number of other points in surrounding territory, which later points are not similarly situated. Corporation Commission North Carolina v. N. W. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 303, 309.

(b) It is not within the province of carriers to dictate where manufacturing shall or shall not be done, or by means of their rate adjustments or otherwise to select or control the markets where their shippers shall buy or sell. Every shipper is entitled to a reasonable rate; but if the nature or value of a commodity offered for transportation is such as to demand an unreasonably low rate, there is no lawful obligation upon the carrier to meet this demand. Boise Lumber Co. v. P. & I. N. Ry. 33 I. C. C., 109, 115.

(c) A point is entitled to the rate which its location and other advantages dictate, without taking into account conditions which bring about different rates to other points. Commercial conditions cannot be equalized by an adjustment of freight rates. Penn. R. R. v. International Coal Mining Co. 173 Fed. 1, 6.

§20. Need for Revenue.

See Infra §30 §36; Evidence §36 §51.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Rates on a branch line may lawfully be higher than on main lines through well-developed territory where the density of traffic is much greater. Commercial Club of Omaha v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 156, 159.

(b) So it has been said a new line ought to be worth what it cost and ought to earn a return upon that amount. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 162, 171.

(c) If the branch lines of a railroad are judiciously planned and constructed they should certainly be taken into account in determining the value of the railroad for although they may not earn a large return upon the cost considered as an independent proposition, they do add to the earning power of the entire system; but it must be assumed that the new branches which have been constructed are good investments, otherwise they would not have been built, and that they will add to the earnings of the property in proportion as they have added to its cost. No increase in rate should be called for on this account. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 162, 171.

(d) In considering the reasonableness of a whole schedule of rates the Commission may well at the outset make inquiries as to the general financial condition of the defendant railroad. R. R. Com. of Nev. v. N. C. O. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 205, 210.

(e) If, contrary to general impression and logical expectation, a more highly developed and better equipped railway cannot do business on as low a basis per unit of traffic as a railway less developed and with poorer equipment, that conclusion should be clearly and unmistakably demonstrated and proven, and not be accepted on vague impression or general allegations before consequential action is taken based upon it in fixing rates. Boileau v. P. & L. E. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 640, 651.

§21. Obsolescence.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The cost of construction should contain no factor of obsolescence; when a thing goes out of service, its value should be written off. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 271.

§22. Origin of Traffic.

See Origin of Traffic.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The fact which is made to appear in these cases, that rates on traffic of the numbered classes from Chicago and Cincinnati to southern territory are made higher than they otherwise would be, for the purpose of securing to the lines from northeastern cities the transportation of that traffic from the territory set apart to them under the Southern Railway & Steamboat Association Agreement, itself raises a prima facie presumption of the unreasonableness of those rates. Freight Bureau v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. et al. 6 I. C. C. 197.

(b) Shippers along the line of an interstate carrier are entitled to have their products moved in either direction at reasonable rates, and the Commission can not agree that a carrier may establish prohibitive rates on any commodity on the ground that it is not desirable traffic for that carrier. A. J. Poor Grain Co. v. C. B. & Q. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 418, 426.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) As a matter of everyday fairness a carrier should not be needlessly deprived of traffic which it originates. The Commission fully recognizes the right of a carrier to get the long haul out of traffic which it originates. But this right is strictly subordinate to the public interest, and when its assertion results in unreasonable and unjust rate or restrictions on the conduct of business it cannot be approved. Toledo Produce Exchange v. A. A. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 536, 543.

(d) The power and right to determine whether certain cities or persons must transact their business, is a power and a right which are not lodged either with the carriers or with the Commission. There is nothing in the Act to indicate that the Commission may thus limit the trade of any community or shipper, and it has consistently denied the right of carriers to assign territory to one city or another. Railroad Comm. of La. v. A. H. T. Ry. Co., 48 I. C. C. 312, 362.

(e) It is well settled that the desire of a carrier to get the long hauls on traffic does not warrant it in maintaining rates that are unreasonable or otherwise unlawful to particular consuming territories. United Verde Extension Mining Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 89 I. C. C. 95, 100.

§23. Ownership or Use of Commodity.

See Classification §10; Discrimination §6; Evidence §41½.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The determination of a reasonable rate rests in the service performed, the risk involved, the value of the article, and the degree of care required to be exercised, but the use to which articles are put, without any difference between them and dissimilarity in conditions under which the transportation is performed, may not lawfully be made the basis for a difference in charge. Davis v. West Jersey Express Co., 16 I. C. C. 214, 216.

(b) The rule is well established that a rate cannot be based upon the use to which the commodity is to be devoted; neither can a rate be confined in its terms to an individual or to a class; it must be open to all shippers alike. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 394, 397.

(c) A carrier cannot, when goods are tendered to it for transportation, make the mere ownership of the goods the test of the duty to carry, or discriminate in fixing the charge for carriage, not upon any difference inhering in the goods or in the cost of the service rendered in transporting them, but upon the mere circumstance that the shipper is or is not the real owner of the goods. I. C. C. v.

§24. Paper Rate.

See Paper Rates.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) To whatever extent long previous existence of lower rates in actual use may justify an inference or presumption that they are sufficiently high, the mere publication of such rates, under which there has been no appreciable movement of traffic, is not conclusive proof that they are reasonably remunerative. Shiel & Co. v. Ill. Central R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 210.

(b) Publication of paper rates not conclusive proof that they are reasonably remunerative. Shiel & Co. v. Ill. C. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 210.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) A proposed industry has the right to ascertain in advance what rates will be established relative to its business. Suffern Grain Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 178, 184.

(d) While the fact that traffic moves freely has some bearing upon the reasonableness of the rates, it is not true that merely because traffic does not move the rates are therefore unreasonable. Railroad Commissioners of Fla. v. S. Exp. Co., 28 I. C. C. 634, 635.

(e) An isolated movement during a comparatively short period from a nonproducing point is not proper basis for requiring establishment of rates for the future or for an award of reparation, but inasmuch as complainants are entitled to reasonable rates fact of shipments having been isolated is not sole determinative factor. Meigs Pulpwood Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 78 I. C. C. 473, 474.

§25. Past Rates.

See Supra §16; Evidence §29, §43, §66; Passenger Fares and Facilities §7.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A former special and preferred rate is not a fair test of the reasonableness of a present rate of freight, under the Act to Regulate Commerce. Myers v. Pennsylvania Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 403.

(b) A railroad company had in force for a period of more than two years next before the Act to Regulate Commerce took effect a scale of charges on anthracite coal considerably lower than its present rates, which are higher on coal than on iron ore, pig iron and other low-grade freight, and also higher than the charges of said road on general freight, the expense of carrying which is much greater than the expense on coal. HELD, That such higher rates on coal are unreasonable. Coxe Bro. & Co. v. Lehigh Valley R. Y. C. 3 I. C. R. 460.

(c) It appears that the rate charged on first class goods, in less than carload lots, from Cincinnati to Atlanta, in 1878, was $1.39 per 100 lbs; that afterwards it was $1.10; and subsequently $1.07; except for a short time, when it was $1.01. The only testimony offered to, or heard by the Commission, as to the reasonableness of the rate, was that of the Vice President of the C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co., that he considered a rate of $1.01 reasonable. Upon that testimony, and upon the fact that the rate from Cincinnati to Birmingham is 89 cents, as compared with $1.07 to Atlanta, the distance being substantially the same, the Commission ordered that the defendants should not charge more than $1.00 from Cincinnati to Atlanta. In this court, a number of railroad experts testified that the present rate of $1.07 is reasonable. As to the rate to Birmingham, there was evidence before this court, which was not before the Commission; viz: That the rate from Cincinnati to Birmingham, which was previously $1.08, was forced down to 89 cents, by the building of a new road, known as the K. C. M. & B. R. R. HELD: That the existence of a lower rate from Cincinnati to Birmingham furnished no sufficient reason to determine that the rate from Cincinnati to Atlanta is unreasonable, when such lower rate is caused by conditions at Birmingham which do not exist at Atlanta. HELD, further: That the evidence offered in this court is sufficient to overcome the prima facie case made by the findings of the Commission. On the whole testimony, as now before this court it is not believed that the Commission would have found the rate in question to be unreasonable. Certainly this court cannot so determine. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. 4 I. C. R. 332.

(d) Continuance of a given rate is not conclusive of the reasonableness of that rate; but when a railroad company advances a rate which has been for some time in force, the fact of its continuance is in the nature of an admission against that company, which tends to show the unreasonableness of the advance; and the force of this admission becomes great in view of the general decline in the average of railway rates and the lessened cost of service. Holmes & Co. v. Southern R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 561.

(e) Continuance of rate is admission of its reasonableness. Holmes & Co. v. Southern R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 561.

(f) The continuance of a given rate is not conclusive evidence of the reasonableness of that rate; but when a railway company advances a rate which has been for some time in force, the fact of its continuance is in the nature of an admission against that company which tends to show the unreasonableness of the advance; and the force of this admission becomes great in view of the general decline in the average of railway rates and the lessened cost of service. Holmes & Co. v. Southern R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 561, 568.

(g) Evidence of prior rates, raises a presumption against the carrier as to their reasonableness. National Hay Asso. v. Lake Shore & Michigan S. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 264.

(h) The continuance of a given rate is not conclusive evidence of the reasonableness of that rate; but when a railway company advances a rate which has been for sometime in force, the fact of its continuance is in the nature of an admission against that company which tends to show the unreasonableness of the advance. Central Yellow Pine Asso. v. I. C. R. R., 10 I. C. C. 506, 542.

(i) The existence of a lower rate in the somewhat remote past does not necessarily prove anything of value in ascertaining the reasonableness of a rate existing today. Enterprise Mfg. Co. v. Georgia R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 130, 133.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(j) The reasonableness of a rate must of necessity depend upon the conditions surrounding the traffic at the time it moves. The length of the haul, the competition to be met, the cost of the service, the value of the service, the density or volume of the tonnage, as well as the general transportation conditions then existing, are factors that have a more or less definite relation to the rate that a carrier may reasonably demand for a transportation service. And these factors, except, possibly, the length of the haul, the grades and other transportation conditions, are in their nature neither permanent nor fixed, but necessarily change with the general economic panorama. No presumption of law, therefore, can arise against an advanced rate simply because a lower rate previously existed. Memphis Cotton Oil Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 313, 318.

(k) Class rates, long in effect, forming the basis of a rate fabric, to which business has adjusted itself, are not disturbed upon the mere suggestion that a better scheme might have been originally devised. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 306.

(l) While the existence of a wrong cannot, of itself, justify its continuance, still, in determining what under all the circumstances is just and reasonable, in pursuance of the authority delegated to the Commission, it must be to some extent guided by conditions as it finds them. Bluefield Shippers' Ass'n v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 519, 525.

(m) From a finding that a rate at the present time is unreasonable, it does not necessarily follow that such a rate has been unreasonable in the past; and where reparation is claimed because of an unreasonable rate, it is incumbent upon the Commission to enter upon a further consideration of whether or not the rate has in the past been unreasonable, and if so, to what extent and for what period. Hires Condensed Milk Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 38 I. C. C. 441, 447, 448.

(n) Lower rates having been maintained for many years does not necessarily show that the present rates are unreasonable. Old Vincennes Distillery Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R., 45 I. C. C. 447 452.

(o) A prima facie presumption of reasonableness attaches to a rate that has been long voluntarily maintained. But the continuance of a given rate is not conclusive evidence of its reasonableness, and certainly the existence of a lower rate in the past, especially in view of the abrupt economic changes since the date when the lower rates were established, does not necessarily prove of value in ascertaining the reasonableness of rates in force during the period of federal control. Anaconda Copper Mining Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 723, 729.

§26. Permanent Improvements.

See Advanced Rates §6 (5); Evidence §43½.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Both the Supreme Court and the Commission are committed to the proposition that in fixing a fair return upon railroad property, for the purpose of determining whether a given advance is reasonable, the railway ought not to treat as a part of its operating expenses the cost of permanent improvements or extensions, and this must of necessity mean that the rates should not be sufficient to allow both the payment of dividends to stockholders and interest to bondholders, and an additional sum for the purpose of improving and increasing the value of the property. Each generation may well be required to bear its own burden, and the stockholder should not obtain both an adequate dividend upon his stock and an addition to the value of his property. In Re Advances in Rates —Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 266.

(b) A carrier cannot justify a higher rate from a mine on a connecting line to a certain destination because of the fact that it involves a haul across an expensive bridge, where published rates for mines on its own line to the same destination are materially lower than the one attacked. Sheridan Chamber of Commerce v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 26 I. C. C. 638, 651.

(a) This case, involving the reasonableness and justice of freight rates from Chicago, St. Louis, and other Ohio River and Mississippi River points, is similar to, and was held to await the final disposition of the case of Wilmington Tariff Asso. v. Cincinnati, P. & V. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. Rep. 118, in which proceeding the Commission entered an order requiring correction of rates from the same points to Wilmington, N. C., but such order the United States circuit court declined to enforce. During the present year the rates from Chicago to Ohio River crossings have been materially reduced on shipments destined to south-eastern points, resulting in reduction of through rates from Chicago to Charleston and Wilmington Case, no enforceable order of relief can be predicated upon the facts shown in this case, and the complaint must be dismissed. Bureau of Freight & Transportation of Charleston, S. C. v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 235.

(b) The Commission having upheld a rate of $1.15 per one hundred pounds on cotton goods from southern cotton mills to Pacific ports, in Enterprise Manufacturing Company v. Georgia R. R. Co. et al., 12 I. C. C. Rep. 130, and held a rate ten cents higher to Asiatic ports from the same points to be reasonable in China & Japan Trading Company v. Georgia R. R. Co. et al., 12 I. C. C. Rep. 236, the latter case is followed and the rate of $1.25 per one hundred pounds under present conditions again approved. Enterprise Mfg. Co. et al. v. Georgia R. R. Co. Et Al. 12 I. C. C. 452.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Past decisions of the Commission do not necessarily preclude it from arriving at a different result under certain circumstances and conditions. Sheridan Chamber of Commerce v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 26 I. C. C. 638, 651.

(d) A rate which has been prescribed by the Commission must be regarded as reasonable. Crowdus Bros v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 32 I. C. C. 355, 359.

(e) The inclusion of commission made rates in tables of rate comparisons has the effect of bringing the average level of all the rates, so that the average obtained can not be said to represent what the carriers themselves deem just and reasonable rates. Dimmitt-Caudle-Smith L. S. C. Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 47 I. C. C. 287, 305.

(f) Rates on coconut oil from Oklahoma City, Okla., to Chicago, Ill., found unreasonable to extent it exceeded the distance scale of rates on cottonseed oil prescribed in Oklahoma Cottonseed Crushers' Asso., 39 I. C. C., 497, projected to distance of movement, following Southport Mill, 68 I. C. C., 352. Reparation awarded and reasonable maximum rate prescribed. Morris & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 630.

§27. Profits of Shipper.

See Advanced Rates §6 (6); Equalization of Rates; Evidence §16; §27; §45; §62.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The mere fact that at a given time an article cannot be profitably shipped at the existing tariff rate is by no means conclusive evidence that such rate is unreasonable. Riddle, Dean & Co. v. N. Y., L. E. & W. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 787.

(b) That at certain time article can not be profitably shipped at existing tariff rate is not conclusive evidence that that rate is unreasonable. Riddle v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 787.

(c) Rates should bear a fair and reasonable relation to the antecedent cost of the traffic as delivered to the carrier and to the commercial value of such traffic as delivered to the carrier, but it is incumbent on parties invoking this rule to make satisfactory and reliable proof as to such antecedent cost and commercial value. Loud v. South Carolina R. Co., 4 I. C. R. R. 205.

(d) The reasonableness of a carrier's rate on fruit is not necessarily to be determined by the question of the profit or loss which the producer receives upon his product. Florida Fruit Exch. v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Fla.) 4 I. C. R. 400 Aff'd on 589.

(da) Excess of manufacturing costs to a shipper at one point over that of its competitors in other localities will not be considered in ascertaining the rightful relative adjustment of rates between the different places. Colorado Fuel & I. Co. v. Southern P. Co. 6 I. C. C. 488.

(e) Profits secured by complainant from the operation of a railway connecting with the defendant lines and from other lines and from other special advantages tending to diminish the amount of its transportation expenses would have very material bearing if the sole question involved was the reasonableness of rates charged to complainant, or if the rates exacted from it were drawn into comparison with those charged to competing soap manufacturers; but where, as in this case, the chief question is as to the justice of a change in the classification of soap, not only as regards complainant, but as affecting all soap shippers in the classification territory, no order could be made respecting such change in favor of complainant which would not apply with equal force on shipments of other soap manufacturers in that territory; and as the case mainly involves the general question of classification, it must be decided in accordance with the principles which properly govern the classification of freight articles. Proctor & Gamble Co. v. C., H. & D. Ry. Co., 9 I. C. C. 440.

(f) The test of the reasonableness of a rate is not the amount of the profit in the business of the shipper or manufacturer, but whether the rate yields a reasonable compensation for the services performed. Carriers necessarily and justly participate in the prosperity of their patrons in the resultant enlargement of their own business, and no rule is more firmly grounded in reason, or more universally recognized by carriers, than that the greater the tonnage of the article transported the lower should be the rate. Tift v. Southern R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 548.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) For a carrier to make rates for transportation based solely upon the ability of the shipper to pay those rates is to make the charge for transportation depend upon the cost of production, rather than upon the cost of carriage—to measure a public service by the economy practiced by the private shipper. This necessarily gives to the carrier the right to measure the amount of profit which the shipper may make and fix its rate upon a traffic manager's judgment as to what profit he will be permitted. This theory entitles the railroad to enter the books of every enterprise which it serves and raise the lower rates without respect to its own earnings, but solely with respect to the earnings of those whose traffic it carries. This is not regulation of the railroads by the nation, but regulation of the industries and commerce of the country by its railroads. Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 350.

(h) It has never been the view of the Commission that the prosperity of a shipper, a locality or a state was a reasonable excuse for the imposition of rates conditioned on such prosperity, but when coincident with very substantial reductions in rates the price of a commodity has nearly doubled in value and claims for loss and damage have materially increased, two of the essential factors of a reasonable rate, value and risk, have been charged in favor of the carrier's contention that proposed advances in rates should be allowed. In Re Investigation of Advances in Rates on Grain, 21 I. C. C. 22, 35.

(i) If the principle that a railroad should charge what the traffic will bear is the criterion of a railroad rates, no exception can be taken to the transcontinental situation, for it is masterfully designed to secure a maximum of revenue and yet develop such industries and benefit such communities as the railroad in its wisdom may wish to thrive, for the growth of the Pacific coast certainly is in no small part to be accredited to the discretion lodged in and exercised by the transcontinental traffic manager. Railroad Commission of Nevada v. S. P. Co., 21 I. C. C. 329, 368.

(j) The effect of a rate upon commercial conditions, whether an industry can exist under particular rates or particular adjustment of rates, are matters of consequences, and facts tending to show these circumstances and conditions are always pertinent. But they are only a single factor in determining the fundamental questions. A narrowing market, increased cost of production, overproduction and many other considerations may render an industry unprofitable without showing the freight rate to be unreasonable. R. R. Com. of Kans. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 407, 410.

(k) The Commission has never accepted the theory that if traffic moves freely under a given rate, that is the best test of the reasonableness of the rate; still the Commission has always deemed the state of an industry a pertinent fact in considering the reasonableness of a rate. In Re Transportation of Wool, Hides and Pelts, 23 I. C. C. 151, 156.

(l) Each shipper is entitled to have his freight transported at reasonable rates, and each carrier is entitled to charge a reasonable rate on each commodity transported and any method of rate making that results in subordinating these basic principles to the equalization of manufacturing cost through the adjustment of freight rates on the raw material can not be sanctioned. Iron Ore Rate Cases, 41 I. C. C. 181, 214.

(m) The reasonableness of rates is not to be gauged by the ability or inability of shippers to market their products with a profit. Virginia Pine Timber Co. v. N. Y. P. & N. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 327, 329.

(n) If it be true that the Commission may find existing rates unjust and unreasonable, and require that they be reduced below what would be justified by standards heretofore recognized, because an industry is not prospering, then the converse must be true, that at times when the industry prospers the Commission may find justified rates higher than those which under accepted standards would be just and reasonable. The foundation of what is just and reasonable are not set on such shifting sands. National Live Stock Shippers' League v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 63 I. C. C. 107, 116.

(o) The Commission has frequently held that the reasonableness of rates may not be measured by the commercial necessities of the shipper. Peninsular Portland Cement Co. v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 542, 544.

(p) The reasonableness of rates may not be measured by the commercial necessities of shippers. Peninsular Portland Cement Co. v. Drrector General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 542, 544.

(q) Contention that from an economic standpoint a rate relationship should be condemned because of the resulting disadvantage under which it places shippers at particular localities, whose business has in a large measure grown up and expanded under a previously existing rate relationship. HELD, it is not within the commission's power "to adjust rates so as to equalize commercial opportunities." Boston Chamber of Commerce v. O. S. S. Co. of S., 73 I. C. C., 233, 239.

§27¼. Public Interest.

See Public Interest.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) In determining reasonableness of proposed rates, the interest of the public is paramount to private rights of parties, and Commission can not be controlled by private agreement. St. Louis, Mo.-Illinois Passenger Fares, 41 I. C. C., 584, 591.

§27½. Rate Via Competing Route.

See Evidence §30; §47; Routing and Misrouting §5; Through Routes and Joint Rates §15½.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Complainant attacked commodity rates as unreasonable charged on coal from Glen Alum, W. Va., on the N. & W., to Alexandria, Ind., via N. & W., H. Va., and L. E. & W. Rate charged $1.90 per ton. During the period the rate via the N. & W., and Big Four was $1.65 per ton. There are two routes over which coal may be shipped and subsequently the rate via route of movement was reduced to $1.65. The evidence related solely to the rate itself, and the fact that a lower rate was in force over a competing short line. HELD, rate charged not unreasonable, and the tariffs did not provide for application of the rate via a competing route. J. J. Marley & Son v. N. & W. Ry. 11 I. C. C. 616.

(b) There is no provision in the law requiring that rates shall be the same over all lines between the same points, and the existence of a lower rate by a short line, while having some bearing, does not of itself indicate the unreasonableness of a higher rate by the route actually used. Marley & Son v. N. & W. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 617, 618.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Existence of lower rates over routes other than a particular route of movement and the subsequent reduction of the rate over the particular route are not sufficient to establish the unreasonableness of the previous rate. Horris & Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 42 I. C. C. 124, 125. Continental Paper Bag Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 42 I. C. C. 489, 490.

(d) The existence of a lower rate over another line is not enough to establish the unreasonableness of a rate attacked. Rosenblatt v. L. H. & St. L. Ry., 46 I. C. C. 325.

(e) No presumption of unreasonableness attaches to a joint through rate applicable over a particular route because of the fact that the intermediate rates over another route would make a lower charge. Zelnicker Supply Co., v. C. & N. W. Ry., 51 I. C. C. 90, 91.

(f) Where a shorter route is available for the movement of the traffic, the reasonableness of the rate, so far as the distance factor is concerned, must be tested by that route. Circuitous lines which desire to participate in the traffic and elect to meet the rate of the short line can not properly claim consideration on account of their longer haul. Commercial Club of Greeley v. C. & S. Ry., 53 I. C. C. 66, 69.

(g) A shipper is not to be denied a reasonable rate merely because he could have secured a lower rate by designating another route. Old Ben Coal Corp. v. Director General, 58 I. C. C. 42, 44.

(h) Different rates were in effect over two routes between the same points. Routes practically the same in length and subject to the same transportation conditions. HELD, in view of the fact that carriers were operated under a unified and co-ordinated national control, and not in competition, it was unreasonable for the Director General to maintain a higher rate over one route than contemporaneously applied over the other. American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C., 650.

(i) The Commission has found that without differences in transportation conditions or other justification, it was unreasonable for the director general to maintain a higher rate over one route than contemporaneously applied over another route between the same points. Kansas Rock Salt Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. 69 I. C. C. 745,751.

(j) Fact that numerous lines were included in a route of movement is a matter of but slight significance in measuring the reasonableness of rates, where such lines were under Federal control and were being operated as one unified system. Melcroft Coal Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 39, 41, 42.

(k) Rate on crushed phosphate rock from Mobile, Ala., to Shreveport, La., found unreasonable as compared with lower rate over routes other than route of movement. Transportation conditions over the various routes are substantially similar, and such lower rate compares favorably with rates on the same traffic between points in southern and southwestern territories generally, as well as with rates from Mobile to Shreveport on other similar commodities. Reparation awarded. Meridian Fertilizer Factory v. M. & O. R. R. Co., 77 I. C. C. 315.

(l) Rates on green coffee from New Orleans, La., to Jackson, Miss., via circuitous route involving a two-line haul, found unreasonable to extent they exceeded lower rate via direct routes involving a single line haul, which lower rate was subsequently established via all routes and was found reasonable in MacGowan Coffee Co., 66 I. C. C., 389. Reparation awarded. MacGowan Coffee Co. v. N. O. N. E. R. R. Co., 77 I. C. C. 385.

(m) The existence of lower rates over routes other than a particular route of movement and the subsequent reduction over the particular route are not sufficient to establish the unreasonableness of the previous rate. Winslow & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 387, 388.

(n) Where a higher rate was in effect over one route than over another between the same points, and the two routes were practically the same in length and subject to the same transportation conditions, the higher rate charged by the director general under unified and coordinated national control was unreasonable. Atlantic Refining Co. v. Director General, 80 I. C. C. 298, 299.

(o) The mere existence of a lower rate between the same points over another route and the subsequent reduction of a rate under attack do not furnish evidence sufficient to warrant a finding of unreasonableness in the absence of other supporting facts. C. Reiss Coal Co. v. P. M. R. Co., 87 I. C. C. 438, 440.

§27¾. Rate in Opposite Direction.

See Classification §17; Differentials; Evidence §30; §56; §66; Relative Rates; Through Routes and Joint Rates §8.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The fact that a rate in one direction is materially higher than that in the opposite direction does not, as in case of hauls over the same line in the same direction, establish prima facie the unreasonableness of the higher rate. This is especially true where the hauls are of great length. Duncan v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 385.

(b) Upon complaint that a rate of 62 cents per 100 pounds on "wool in the grease" from Philadelphia, Pa., to Fort Wayne, Ind., is unreasonable and also unjust in comparison with a rate on the same commodity of 43 cents eastbound from Fort Wayne to Philadelphia. HELD, upon the evidence as presented, that the 62-cents westbound rate is not shown to be unreasonable or unjust and that the complaint should be dismissed. Weil v. Penn. R. Co. et al. 11 I. C. C. 627.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Rates in one direction can not always be used as tests of the reasonableness of rates in the opposite direction. Massie & Pierce Lumber Co. v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 33 I. C. C. 14, 19.

(d) A rate in one direction in excess of the rate between the same points in the opposite direction does not demonstrate the unreasonableness of the higher rate, especially where it is a class rate and the movement of the particular traffic is not of sufficient volume to warrant the establishment of a commodity rate. Perlin & Orendorff Co. v. S. P. Co., 42 I. C. C. 29, 30.

(e) A rate in one direction in excess of the rates between the same points in the opposite direction does not demonstrate the unreasonableness of the higher rate, especially where it is a class rate and the movement of the particular traffic is not of sufficient volume to warrant the establishment of a commodity rate. Nor does the voluntary reduction of a rate, supplemented by the willingness of a carrier to make reparation on the basis of the reduced rate, in the absence of supporting proof, necessarily justify an award of reparation. Fern Glen Distilling Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 45 I. C. C. 101, 102.

(f) The fact that the rate in one direction is in excess of the rate between the same points in the opposite direction does not demonstrate the unreasonableness of the higher rate, especially when it is a class rate and the movement of the particular traffic is not of sufficient volume to warrant the establishment of a commodity rate. Mayo Milling Co. v. C. & O. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 26.

(g) A rate in one direction in excess of the rate between the same points in the opposite direction does not demonstrate that the higher rate is unreasonable. Multibestos Co. v. S. P. Co., 73 I. C. C. 491, 492.

(h) Class rate applicable on an isolated mixed carload shipment of breaklining fabric, brake linings, cabinets, metal signs, and advertising matter, from San Francisco, Calif., to Kansas City, Mo., found not unreasonable as compared with lower commodity rate in the opposite direction on "friction fabric." Multibestos Co. v. S. P. Co., 73 I. C. C., 491.

(i) Though maintenance of higher rate than that which applies for movement between same points in opposite direction ordinarily requires explanation, the higher rate can not be condemned solely on that circumstance. Hyman-Michael Co. v. Director General, as Agent 80 I. C. C. 705, 706.

§28. Relativity of the Rate.

See Class Rates §2; Classification §17; Comparative Rates; Differentials; Discrimination; Evidence; Relative Rates; Through Routes and Joint Rates §8.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Rates should be so relatively reasonable as to protect communities and business against unjust discrimination. Boards of Trade Union v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 608.

(ab) It is not a sufficient compliance with the Law that rates are reasonable in themselves, but they should be so relatively reasonable as to protect communities and business against unjust discrimination. That when the same carrier operates parallel lines, and for any cause accepts low rates on one line, it should furnish sufficient corresponding advantages to the patrons of the other line to prevent undue prejudice and disadvantages, and to preserve the substantial equality contemplated by the statute. Board of Trade Union v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. 608, 610.

(b) The purpose of the Interstate Commerce Act requires that when circumstances will fairly admit of it, charges to all points for like service should be made relatively equal. Crews v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 703.

(c) The relative reasonableness of rates on shipments from western points to cities on the Atlantic seaboard is to be determined by all the circumstances and conditions that affect the traffic to the respective points between which the rates are questioned, and not solely by one standard of comparison. Boston Chamber of Commerce v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 1. I. C. R. 754.

(d) The Commission is not willing to determine the relative reasonableness of rates at many stations, and in a large extent of territory, upon the mere face of tariffs, and without further proof. Spartanburg Board of Trade v. Richmond & Danville R. R. Co. 2 I. C. R. 193.

(e) A system of rates made by a number of carriers, covering a widely extended territory, and relatively fair and reasonable in themselves, will not be ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission to be changed at one important point, thereby rendering other changes unavoidable at other points and throwing the entire system into confusion, unless this is necessary to be done in order to enforce compliance with the law. Detroit Board of Trade v. Grand Trunk R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 199.

(f) Wherever cities and towns are relatively so situated with reference to transportation facilities, it is not enough that the rates to them should be reasonable in themselves, but it is necessary that they should be relatively fair and just to all of them. Detroit Board of Trade v. G. T. R. R. 2 I. C. C. 199, 202.

(g) Rates must be relatively fair and reasonable as between localities in essential respects similarly situated, having regard to the geographical position and relative positions of the localities, so that one will not be favored to the prejudice of the other. Detroit Board of Trade v. Grand Trunk R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. C. 199, 202; Milwaukee Chamb. of Com. v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. C. 393; Re Tariffs of Transcontinental Lines (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 203.

(h) Rates that are just and reasonable from selected manufacturing points east of the Missouri River and west of the Atlantic seaboard are prima facie just and reasonable from all other points in the same territory. Re Tariffs of Transcontinental Lines (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 203.

(i) The question of relative injustice must be viewed upon broader grounds than a mere balancing of one rate against another. A reduction which will throw into confusion an adjustment of rates over a large section of country which are not claimed to be unreasonable of themselves, should not be required without a clear right thereto exists under some direct provision of the Law. Rend v. Cg. & Northwestern R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 313.

(j) The Act does not require rates to be unreasonably low nor does it prevent the maintenance of rates that are just and reasonable to the carrier as well as to the shipper. On the contrary the act implies, first, the establishment of rates which are of themselves reasonable and fair; and next, their maintenance, without discrimination among shippers, and without capricious or arbitrary fluctuations. An exception arises when rates are so constructed that injustice is wrought by reason of their relation to other rates not withstanding that the rate attacked may not be itself unreasonable. Rend v. C. & N. W. Ry. 2 I. C. C. 313, 317.

(k) The doctrine of relatively fair rates to different localities is one that the Commission has frequently asserted. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. F. & P. M. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 393, 399.

(l) Where relative rates are the same at points not far distant from each other on the same system of railroads, it is the practice of the Commission, in determining the reasonableness of rates upon a complaint made at one of these points, to consider the bearings and relative equality of rates at all of the points so situated, before ordering a change at any one of them, in order to avoid preference to one and prejudice to another. Re Produce Exchange of Toledo, 2 I. C. C. 412.

(m) Transportation charges are required to be relatively reasonable as well as reasonable in themselves, to prevent unjust discrimination between localities. A locality not widely dissimilar in situation and in respect of the transportation service of the same carrier to other localities where lower rates are given, is entitled to rates that bear a just relation to the lower charges made. The Manufacturers' & Jobbers Union v. Minn. & St. L. 3 I. C. R. 115, 117.

(n) A business like that involving the preparation for consumption of such a large and leading staple and necessity of life as meat, with all the competition that exists for it in different and competing localities, brought near to each other by the fast rail lines of the country, is too large to be done in a corner, and is a conspicuous instance of a commodity that requires at the hands of carriers rates that are not only reasonable and just in themselves but relatively reasonable and just in their bearing upon these different localities. Board of Trade of Chicago v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 233.

(o) The element that must control in determining the reasonableness and justness of a rate, whether it be considered from the standpoint of relative reasonableness and justice or as to whether it is reasonable and just in itself, is one of substance. To make rates substantially reasonable and just is as much as can be done in either case. Mathematical equality of rates according to distance can rarely be obtained, nor does the law require it. The law only requires that rates shall be substantially reasonable and just in themselves, and that, as far as this can be done they shall be relatively reasonable and just as between localities and traffic. Poughkeepsie Iron Co. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 248, 254.

(p) The relation of rates ought to rest upon fixed and staple conditions. The fluctuations of markets are so frequent, especially as to competitive articles, and oftentimes unexpected, that commercial considerations alone would not furnish a sufficiently stable and fixed rule for guidance in making a rate that should remain substantially permanent through all fluctuations. The Commission does not, by a fixing of rates, attempt to overcome advantages which one producer or dealer may have in his geographical location, and to produce equality between competitors in all markets. It would be a useless task, even if it had the power, to attempt to accomplish such a result. The proper relation of rates for transportation of strictly competitive articles over the same line should be determined by reference to respective costs of service ascertained with reasonable accuracy. Squire & Co. v. M. C. R. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 515, 520.

(q) Defendants ordered to restore the relation of rates on shingles to Boston which they established after the filing of complainant herein but soon after discontinued, to wit, a rate from Fort Fairfield in Maine of not exceeding 6½ cents above the rate in force from Fredericton in Canada. Complainant's claim for reparation denied. James & Abbott v. Canadian Pacific R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 274.

(r) When the reasonableness or relative reasonableness of charges is challenged, every material consideration which enters into the making of such charges, including the apportionment thereof to connecting roads in a through line, is pertinent to the inquiry. James & Abbott v. Canadian Pacific R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 274.

(s) A given relation in rates between competing towns, fairly equitable at the time of its adoption, may become through business development and other changes in conditions, severely prejudicial to the town taking the higher schedule; and this is especially liable to occur when, additional lines of communication having been opened up to the latter locality, all the roads reaching that point agree to continue the old relation of rates to such points, notwithstanding its improved situation. Agreements between carriers, though designed to secure the orderly and lawful operation of the roads, cannot be permitted to fasten upon neighboring localities a relation of rates which is unnatural or unjust. The "basing point" method of rate making, to the extent it is now employed, believed to be unnecessary to an adequate scheme of tariff construction. Daniels v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 458; Page v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 6 I. C. 548.

(t) The terms "reasonable and just," "undue or unreasonable preference or advantage," "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever," as used in the Act to Regulate Commerce, imply comparison, and rates must bear just relation to each other as well as be reasonable per se, in order to be lawful. Daniels v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 458; Page v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 548.

(u) The rate upon corn and other grain than wheat to Chicago from all points in Iowa east of the Missouri River, and from Sioux City and points upon and east of the line of what was formerly the Sioux City & St. Paul Railroad, should not exceed 17 cents per 100 pounds; and other stations in Iowa west of said railroad, and in southeastern Dakota, should be readjusted in the same proportion. Grain Shippers' Asso. v. Illinois C. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 158.

(ua) Defendants are engaged in carrying traffic over the short-line distance from New Orleans to Atlanta and intermediate points, including La Grange, Ga., 71 miles southwesterly of Atlanta, and there is possible railroad competition between New Orleans and La Grange. The relations of rates from New Orleans, New York, and other supply markets at Atlanta are, and for a long period have been, the subject of agreement or arbitration between the various lines. The rates from New Orleans to Atlanta are not unreasonably low. The rates from New Orleans to La Grange are made by combining the New Orleans-Atlanta rates with the local rates of the A. & W. P. road back from Atlanta to La Grange. Under these charges the competing Atlanta dealer can ship from New Orleans to Atlanta and then back to La Grange as cheaply as complainant can ship direct from New Orleans to La Grange, and complainant is unable to sell at points on the line bteween Atlanta and La Grange. The defendant roads are all solvent, and the delivering carrier for both Atlanta and La Grange earns 12 per cent annually for its stockholders. HELD, Upon all the facts, that the rates from New Orleans to La Grange are unreasonable in themselves and relatively as compared with the rates to Atlanta, and that higher rates from New Orleans to La Grange than those charged from that city on like traffic to Atlanta are and would be unlawful. Calloway v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 431.

(v) Rates may be fair and reasonable for the service rendered, and, from the carriers standpoint, justly related to other charges; and yet if a low rate is granted upon conditions with which only a few can comply (a charge below the ordinary carload rate for shipments of a hundred or a thousand cars) that rate is presumably unfair and wrongfully prejudicial to all other shippers of like traffic, because they are practically unable to meet the terms upon which it is offered. This principle may properly be considered with reference to the class of cars employed by complainant, whcih only a limited number of dealers can afford to use for reaching their customers and exhibiting their wares. In the competitive struggle to supply consuming markets neither contestant should be favored through the facilities furnished or the rates enforced by public carriers. This is at once the aim of the law and the requirement of relative justice. Carr v. N. P. Ry. 9 I. C. C. 1, 14.

(va) Where rates from Cincinnati and Louisville to Norfolk are much lower than those from St. Louis and Chicago to Norfolk, and the competitive conditions governing rates from Cincinnati and Louisville appear to be of the same general character as those which apply from Chicago or St. Louis, and no substantial difference appears to exist in the real forceful conditions governing rates from these points of supply, except that of distance, which favors Cincinnati and St. Louis, just rate relations from Cincinnati and St. Louis to Norfolk and Wilmington are a fair basis for relative rates from St. Louis and Chicago. Wilmington Tariff Asso. of North Carolina v. Cincinnati, Portsmouth & Va. R. Co., 9 I. C. C., 118.

(w) The rates from Chicago to Norfolk, Neb., are unjust and unreasonable, and should not exceed those in force from Chicago to Columbus, Neb. And the rates in force from Duluth to Emerson, Neb., added to the present local rate in effect from Emerson to Norfolk. Johnson v. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 221.

(wa) The freight rates in effect from Chicago, Ill., to Norfolk, Neb., and from Duluth, Minn., to Norfolk are unjust and unreasonable; and upon the facts and circumstances shown in this case the rates from Chicago to Norfolk should not exceed those in force from Chicago to Columbus, Neb., and the rates from Duluth to Norfolk should not exceed the rate in force from Duluth to Emerson, Neb., added to the present local rate in effect from Emerson to Norfolk. Reparation denied. Johnson v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 221.

(x) The Act provides that railway charges shall be reasonable and it further provides that the relation of the charges imposed upon different shippers shall be just. Gardner & Clark v. Southern R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 342, 349.

(y) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates charged on cotton goods and cotton waste from Georgia and South Carolina points to San Francisco and other Pacific coast terminals. The fact that rates from the southeastern states are higher than those obtaining from the New England states does not in and of itself establish the unreasonableness of the higher rates, as the conditions existing at the two localities are dissimilar. The New England mills which suffer by the competition of the more favorably situated southern mills from the standpoint of production, are entitled to such advantage in rates as they have from being situated at points closer to ports where cheap water competition has been established to the Pacific coast points of consumption. HELD, rates attacked not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Enterprise Mfg. Co. v. Georgia R. R., 12 I. C. C. 130.

(z) Defendant's rates on cotton goods and cotton waste from Georgia and South Carolina points to San Francisco and other Pacific coast terminal points are $1.15 per 100 pounds, C. L., and $1.65, L. C. L., on cotton goods, and $1.12½ per 100, C. L., and $1.61, L. C. L., on cotton waste; in 1896 the rates on cotton goods were $1 per 100 pounds, C. L. and L. C. L., and on cotton waste 90 cents, C. L., and $1, L. C. L.; the rates on cotton goods from New York and Boston to such Pacific coast points are $1, C. L., and $1.50, L. C. L., and on cotton waste $1.10, C. L., and $1.50, L. C. L. Upon complaint of unreasonableness of the rates from such southeastern points to the Pacific Coast: HELD, That upon the present record such rates are not unreasonable. Enterprise Mfg. Co. v. Ga. R. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 130.

(aa) The rates on coal and pig iron from Birmingham, Ala., to Cordele, Ga., are $1.70 per short ton and $2.75 per long ton, respectively, and from Birmingham to Macon, Ga., are $1.60 per short ton and $1.65 per long ton, respectively, Cordele being a nearer point. Upon complaint that such rates to Cordele are unreasonable and unduly discriminatory: HELD, upon the facts shown, that the coal rate is not unreasonable or discriminatory, but that the pig-iron rate is unjust and excessive. Defendants ordered to put in a rate of $2.15 per long ton on pig-iron from Birmingham to Cordele. Tomlin-Harris Machine Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 134.

(bb) New Orleans to McAlester, Ind., T., sugar reduced to Muskogee rate. Hale-Halsell Grocery Co. v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co. 12 I. C. C. 136 .

(cc) Rates on coke from Kentucky and Virginia ovens to Terre Haute, Ind., made same as those to Chicago. Manufacturers' Club of Terre Haute v. L. & M. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 156.

(dd) Class rates from St. Louis to Amarillo, Tex., may properly be higher than from St. Louis to Ft. Worth. Nobles Bros. Grocery Co. v. Ft. W. & D. C. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 242.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(ee) It is not sufficient for a carrier when called upon to justify a rate, the reasonableness of which is questioned, to assert that its rates generally are fair and just, and that no change may properly be made in any particular rate because it would disturb the integrity of the system as a whole and produce inconsistencies. This proposition is too general and theoretical for acceptance in the application of the requirements of the law to a practical situation. In dealing with a particular rate it is the purpose of the Commission to consider such other rates, as affording a basis for comparison, but where a given rate is found to be unreasonable, it will not hestitate to order such rate reduced, although the reduction might disarrange the relative adjustment existing between that rate and other rates. Reynolds v. Southern Express Co., 13 I. C. C. 536, 540.

(ff) A system of making rates on certain basing lines should not be abolished, since no system of rate making has been devised successfully as a substitute for it; but it must not be assumed that a basing line for rates may be established, and be made an impassable barrier for through rates, or that cities or markets located at or upon such basing line have any inviolable possession of, or hold upon, the right to distribute traffic in or from the territory lying beyond, and development of natural resources, increase of population, growth of manufacturing or producing facilities and increased traffic on railroads may create changed conditions, warranting changes in rates, in order to afford just and reasonable opportunity for interchange of traffic between points of production and points of consumption. Burnham, Hanna,

Munger Co. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 14 I. C. C. 299, 312.

(gg) The Commission has no authority to establish general rate schedules but must deal with the interstate rates of this country, which have not been established upon any consistent theory, as it finds them. What the Commission takes off in one place it cannot add in another. Unless, therefore, the general results of all rates is to yield an undue revenue to the carrier, the Commission should not reduce a particular rate simply because it might think, if establishing that rate de novo as part of the general scheme, that it ought to be somewhat lower or somewhat higher in proportion to others. The rate attacked must be so out of proportion as to be unreasonable, or must so discriminate as to be undue, or must be unlawful for some other special reason. Corn Belt Meat Producers' Ass'n v. C. B. & Q. Ry. Co., 14 I. C. C. 376, 394.

(hh) The Commission is bound to consider the relation that rates involved in any case bear to rates at other points, and to take into account the probable result of a change in that relation. Board of Trade of Winston-Salem v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 12, 18.

(ii) Where rates on a particular commodity bear a uniform relation to rates of a certain class, any inequalities in those rates, as between different places, are those peculiar to that class. A finding, therefore, that rates on such commodities made to conform to a class are relatively unjust would inferentially condemn the adjustment with respect of the entire class, and this is also true of the reasonableness of the rate. Acme Cement Plaster Co. v. L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co. 17 I. C. C. 30, 35.

(jj) Rates can seldom be tested, even as to their reasonableness, strictly by themselves, but must be considered, to an extent, in reference to their environment. Southwestern Missouri Millers' Club v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 422, 427.

(kk) A departure by carriers from a rate relation established by the Commission can be justified only on the ground that the Commission was not fully advised, or on the ground that there has been a material change since that time in the conditions surrounding the movement in question. Rates from Walsenburg Coal Field, 26 I. C. C. 85, 87.

(ll) Relative ton-mile rates for various distances considered in determining reasonableness of rates on cement. Board of Improvement, Waterworks District No. 1, Fort Smith, Ark. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 539.

(mm) In considering questions of unreasonableness per se and of discriminations in rates, the Commission must look more to the entire adjustment of these rates under consideration than to particular comparisons. Much can be ostensibly proved by either party in controversies before the Commission by care in the selecting of individual rates convenient for the purpose. Rates of this character are ever present in tariffs and cover a wide range. This is so for many reasons. Competitive conditions may affect certain rates and not others. Again, rate making is not an exact science, and the judgment of traffic managers may differ as to the proper level of noncompetitive rates, even when made under substantially similar circumstances and conditions on their respective lines. The various tariffs of a given carrier may also show inconsistencies through any rates published inadvertently to which attention has not been specifically called, because such rates are of little use. State of Kansas v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 673, 689.

(nn) One of ways of showing unreasonableness of rates under Section 1 is by proving that rates are unduly high as compared with rates to other places similarly situated. Board of Trade of Carrollton v. C. of Ry. Co., 28 I. C. C. 154, 164.

(oo) Where one rate is compared with another for the purpose of showing it reasonable, the comparison is not of value without proof that the second rate is itself reasonable. Rates on Potatoes from Oklahoma to Points in Colorado, 28 I. C. C. 298, 299.

(pp) Comparisons of related rates by the Commission in determining reasonableness of rates criticized by shippers as "adjusting of differentials." The Commission decided that such a method may be employed in any proceeding before the Commission regarding the reasonableness of a rate and cannot be validly questioned. Wickwire Steel Co. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. Co., 30 I. C. C. 415, 423.

(qq) A rate may be relatively unreasonable and yet contain none of the elements of absolute unreasonableness. Transcontinental Commodity Rates, 32 I. C. C. 449, 452.

(rr) In passing upon the reasonableness of a scale or system of rates the Commission may not properly consider only points of origin and destination, but is bound to consider and give due weight to findings in other cases involving rates applicable from and to points in same general territory where transportation conditions are substantially similar, in order that the structure of rates in any given territory may be properly related, and form as a whole a harmonious and consistent adjustment. New Orleans Texas Rates, 38 I. C. C. 1, 9.

(ss) If places A and B are competing in or for same markets, the fact that carrier serving them both has elected to make its rates to or from A with regard or relation to rates to or from another place, and its rates to or from B with regard or relation to rates to or from still another place, cannot be accepted as justification for depriving either A or B of the benefits of its natural location or for unjust discrimination against either A or B. Goldcamp Mill Co. v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 39 I. C. C. 433, 444.

(tt) A shipper is entitled to a reasonable rate and one of the tests of a reasonable rate is its relationship to other rates on the same or analogous commodities between points in the same general territory for similar distances. D. Nagase & Co. v. Director General, 62 I. C. C. 422, 426.

(uu) A shipper is entitled to a reasonable rate and one of the tests of a reasonable rate is its relationship to other rates on the same or analogous commodities between points in the same general territory for similar distances. Reparation as relating to increase of rates. 68 I. C. C. 5, 6.

(vv) Carrier can not be stopped from changing a relationship if the resulting rates are not unreasonable or otherwise inviolation of the Act. Boston Chamber of Commerce v. O. S. S. Co. 73 I. C. C. 233, 239.

(ww) Rates on petroleum and products from Devol, Frederick, and Altus, Okla., to Texas destinations, found unreasonable and unduly prejudicial to extent that they exceed for like distance the rates from Shreveport, La. Constantin Refining Co. v. Director General, 73 I. C. C., 197, 201.

(xx) Complainant cited a number of cases in which the commission has condemned the disruption of long-established rate relationships. While the potency of this argument is recognized, carriers can not be estopped from changing a relationship if the resulting rates are not unreasonable or otherwise in violation of the Act. Boston Chamber of Commerce v. O. S. S. Co. of S., 73 I. C. C., 233, 239.

(yy) Proposed establishment of a proportional rate on iron and steel articles from New Orleans, La., and group points, to Houston, Galveston, Beaumont, and Orange, Tex., and points taking the same rates for application on traffic from beyond New Orleans, found not justified. The relationship which would result would place shippers in Pittsburgh, St. Louis, and Chicago districts at an unwarranted disadvantage as the rail-and-water movement from eastern points and the all-rail movement from Middle Western points would be reduced while at the same time the movement from Birmingham, Ala., via New Orleans, would be increased, thereby threatening the stability of the present rate structure. Iron and Steel Articles from New Orleans, 74 I. C. C. 146.

(zz) Class rate from Portland, Medford, and other Oregon points south of Portland to points in northern California and southern Oregon, as compared with the class rates from San Francisco, Sacramento, Oakland, Stockton, and Marysville to the same destinations, found unduly prejudicial to the Oregon points, unduly preferential of the central California jobbing centers, and unjustly discriminatory against interstate commerce. Reasonable and nonprejudicial basis of distance rates prescribed. Klamath County Chamber of Commerce v. S. P. Co., 74 I. C. C. 207, 220.

(3a) A rate can seldom be considered in and of itself. It must be taken almost invariably in relation to and in connection with other rates. Tileston Mill Co., 8 I. C. C., 246, 361. Atchison Board of Trade v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 350, 360.

(3aa) Where proceeding is one of investigation into reasonableness and propriety of rates the commission's determination might well result in fixation of rates related to each other, although relationship of rates as such may not have been contemplated within issue as originally presented. Rates on Grain, Grain Products, and Hay, 80 I. C. C. 362, 365.

(3ab) When a complainant challenges reasonableness of rates on a commodity from only one point and it appears that, because of competitive or other practical trade or transportation considerations, a number of points of origin of the particular commodity are grouped under common rates, and also that there is a relationship between two or more groups, the Commissions must give due consideration to other factors than rate comparisons. Atlas Portland Cement Co., 44 I. C. C. 416, 422; Perry County Coal Corp. v. E. St. L. & S. Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 711, 715.

(3ac) One test of a reasonable rate is its relationship to other rates on same or analogous commodities between points in same general territory for similar distances. Nagase & Co., 62 I. C. C., 422. Pittman Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 83 I. C. C. 380.

(3b) Mere reference to tariffs that the rate is higher in one direction than in the other does not in itself justify a finding of unreasonableness. Lewis v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. A-883.

§29. Reproduction Value of Road.

See Evidence §49.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) If any importance whatever is to be attached to the cost of reproduction in the establishment of railway rates, the valuation must be undertaken by the Government itself. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 403.

(b) In passing upon a question of reasonableness of rates the present value of the carrier's right of way is to be considered, despite the fact that its original cost may have been slight and its present value be great. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 415.

(c) The Commission has for many years felt the necessity of having information regarding the value of the physical properties of the carriers in the United States as an element in the valuation of their entire properties. Boileau v. P. & L. E. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 640, 652.

§30. Revenues of Road.

See Evidence §36; §50; §51.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) In determining what are reasonable rates the fact that a road earns little more than operating expenses is not to be overlooked; but it cannot be made to justify grossly excessive rates. Wherever there are more roads than the business at fair rates will remunerate they must rely upon future earnings for the return of investments and profits. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 289, 293.

(b) In fixing reasonable rates the requirements of operating expenses, bonded debt, fixed charges, and dividend on capital stock from the total traffic, are all to be considered; but the claim that any particular rate is to be measured by these as a fixed standard, below which the rate may not lawfully be reduced, is one rightly subject to some qualifications, one of which is that the obligations must be actual and in good faith. Re Rates & Charges on Food Products (Com.) 3 I. C. R., 93.

(c) In passing upon the reasonableness of rates, the question whether they afford the carrier a proper return for the service rendered is to be considered, as well as the result of the business to the shipper or producer of the traffic. Loud v. South Carolina R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 205.

(d) Neither the absence nor the presence of competition by carriers alone, nor the extent of their operations measured solely by their financial interests, can be relied on to adjust rates reasonable and just to all. Mayor and Council of Tifton, Ga. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 160.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) The fact that the net revenues of a carrier from its ownership of a bridge, on which an arbitrary is charged for passengers and freight carried across the same, may be greater than the returns on ordinary business enterprises is not sufficient in itself to justify a holding that the bridge tolls are excessive. Bridges are and have been regarded as precarious property. They may be damaged or entirely swept away by floods and erection of other bridges nearby may draw away their tenants, and thus seriously affect their earning capacity. The net revenues have an undoubted and also an important bearing upon the question of the reasonableness of rates, but the value of the service to the shipper and the other elements so often referred to as entering into the reasonableness of rates must also be taken into consideration. A railroad company may be operated with a less return than it ought to enjoy, or even at a loss, but neither condition of affairs would justify the exaction by it of rates than are higher than they reasonably should be for service performed, all things being considered. So also the fact that the net earnings of a carrier may be large does not of itself justify the Commission fixing a rate at less than is reasonable for the service, all other things being considered. Railroad Commissioners of Ia. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 181, 186.

(f) A railroad company may be operated with a less return than it should enjoy, or even at a loss, but neither condition of affairs would justify the exaction by it of rates higher than they reasonably should be for the services performed, all things being considered. So also the fact that the net earnings of a carrier may be large does not of itself justify the Commission in fixing a rate at less than is reasonable for the service, all things considered. The Five Per Cent Rate Case, 31 I. C. C. 351, 359.

(g) Prosperity of a carrier does not indicate that rates on a particular commodity are unreasonable or contribute to undue profits. Bridgeman-Russell Co. v. G. L. T. Corp. 61 I. C. C. 260, 267.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) An added and unusual terminal expense arising out of the special delivery of a certain class of express traffic does not justify any greater increase in the rate than will cover such terminal expense. Society American Florists Etc. v. U. S. Express Co. 12 I. C. C. 121.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Where special dock and terminal services are included in a flat rate it is impracticable accurately to test the reasonableness of such rates without tearing them apart to analyze the component parts. Iron Ore Rate Cases, 41 I. C. C. 181, 204.

(c) The special expenses incurred in transporting meats and products constitute an important element to be considered in determining the reasonableness of the rates upon those commodities. Rath Packing Co. v. I. C. R. R., 56 I. C. C. 303, 305.

See Branch Lines §2; Evidence §55; §56.

(a) In fixing reasonable rates the requirements of operating charges, bonded debt, fixed charges and dividend on capital stock from the total traffic are all to be considered, but the claim that any particular rate is to be measured by these as a fixed standard, below which the rate may not lawfully be reduced is one rightly subject to some qualifications, one of which is that the obligations must be actual and in good faith. In the matter of alleged excessive freight rates and charges on food products, 3 I. C. C. 93, 100.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Before the Commission can conclude that a rate on a given commodity is too high, because it is higher than some other rate named, it must know that the rate selected as the standard for a comparison is a reasonable and a fair one. Darling & Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 79, 83.

(c) What may be a proper rate as between separate railroads may become unreasonable and unjust when these railroads are absorbed by a large system serving an extensive territory. Black Mountain Coal Land Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 286, 292.

(d) In determining rates between two points, neither that railroad which can afford to handle traffic at the lowest rate nor that whose necessities might justify the highest rate should be exclusively considered. City of Spokane v. N. P. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 392.

(e) In a typical case the Commission said that in determining a freight rate which must of necessity be charged by competing lines the Commission would not look exclusively to that line which could handle the business the cheapest, or which was the strongest financially, but would consider as well the weaker rival. It has never intimated that the rate should be fixed solely with reference to the weakest line. So it said it would certainly be most unjust to the public in establishing rates to Utah common points to consider merely the expensive and circuitous route via the D. & R. G. R. R. The D. & R. G. R. R. handled about 40 per cent of the Utah business from the East at that time. It naturally would continue to handle a considerable part of it, and must accept a rate established by the Commission. This the Commission must and does take into account in the fixing of that rate, but it must be largely influenced by the cost of handling that business over the short and easy line, the U. P. R. R. While this traffic is important to the D. & R. G. R. R., its revenue from this source is but a small part of its entire income, and the Commission could not permit the maintenance of unreasonable rates simply because the entire result of the operations of this company might not be as favorable as would otherwise be proper. Commercial Club of Salt Lake City v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 218, 222.

(f) In determining the reasonableness of an advance in rates by all the railroads in Official Classification territory, the Commission ought not to make the most opulent nor the poorest railroad the standard by which to measure the reasonableness of the rates. In this territory the Pennsylvania system, the New York Central lines and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad may be taken as typical, and whatever rate might reasonably be imposed upon these three systems must be held to be a reasonable charge for that service by all lines. Under rates reasonable for these three systems there may be lines whose earnings will be extravagant, but that is their good fortune. There may be lines which cannot make sufficient earnings, but that is their misfortune. The Commission ought not to impose upon this territory, for the purpose of allowing defendants additional revenues, higher rates than are adequate to these three systems, considered as a whole. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 274.

(g) The interests of all lines must be considered in question of reasonableness of rates, and not alone those of the line that can handle the traffic with the least cost. Commercial Club of Superior, Wis., v. G. N. Ry. Co., 24 I. C. C. 96, 102.

(h) There is no exact standard by which the reasonableness of a rate can be measured. In re Wool, Hides and Pelts, 25 I. C. C. 675, 677.

(i) In case a new railroad line were built between two points, A and B, between which other rail lines had long been operating, is an obligation cast on the new carrier to carry the same rate from A to B as is carried by the older lines? The Commission does not think this can fairly be assumed to be the case. The new carrier might choose to observe the fourth section, for example, which the older lines may not have done, and thus might have warrant for carrying a different and a higher terminal rate. Manifestly, in the case supposed, it could make not the slightest difference that the new carrier had purchased or used equipment which had been used by the older lines. On the other hand, it is supposed a railroad had gone into the hands of a receiver, and that as the outcome a new corporate style or title had been assumed to distinguish the new corporation technically from its predecessor, it might well be argued that the new company, new in name only, succeeded to the obligations of its predecessor so far as the shipping public is concerned, and could not increase rates without justifying them under the requirement of section 15. If the new company were, of necessity, compelled to operate over the same physical route or routes as its predecessor, and were bound to serve the same shipping communities and to carry the same traffic, it would indeed be unreasonable to hold that it could escape the obligation to carry the same rate unless it sustained the burden of proving higher rates to be just and reasonable. Bay State Milling Co. v. Transit Corporation, 43 I. C. C. 338, 346.

(j) Rates of carriers in trunk-line and c. f. a. territories do not constitute a measure of reasonableness of rates maintained by southern carriers. Barnes Automobile Co. v. D., T. & I. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 350, 352.

(k) A carrier owning and operating a railroad, however strong financially, however economical in its facilities, or favorably situated as to traffic, is not entitled as a constitutional right to more than a fair net operating income on the value of its properties which are being devoted to transportation. Dayton-Goose Ry. Co. v. United States, 44 Sup. Ct. 169.

(l) Rates which as a body enable all the railroads, necessary to do the business of a rate territory or section, to enjoy not more than a fair net operating income on the aggregate value of their properties therein economically and efficiently operated, are reasonable from the standpoint of the individual shipper in that section; for each shipper, being interested in having no congestion, is properly required, in the rates he pays, to share in the burden of maintaining adequate railway capacity. Dayton-Goose Creek Ry. Co. v. United States, 44 Sup. Ct. 169.

§32½. Subsequent Reduction.
See Commodity Rates §4; Evidence §64; Reparation §16.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The continued reduction of relative rates when brought about by the removal of artificial and unnatural differences is not undesirable, but where the difference results from dissimilar circumstances and conditions, and the true difficulty appears to be a real and natural advantage which the one region has and enjoys over the other, such continuing disturbances of rates ought not to be inaugurated, especially when the charges are commodity rates not shown to be unreasonable in themselves. Anthony Salt Co. v. M. P. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 33, 39.

(aa) A reduction in rates by a carrier is not per se evidence that the former rates were unreasonable, as such reduction may, as in the present case, be accounted for because of a decrease in cost of transportation and an increase in the volume of traffic to which such rates apply. Loud v. South Carolina R. Co. (Com.) 4 I. C. R. 205.

(b) Complainant attacked rates on watermelons from Williston, Blackville and other points in South Carolina to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, etc., as unreasonable. Subsequent to the filing of the complaint, defendants reduced the applicable rate. HELD, the reduction of the rate does not mean that the previous rate was unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Loud, v. South Carolina R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 205.

(c) A railway company may from considerations of policy grant a reduction in its rates which the Commission could not order as a matter of right under the act. Holmes & Company v. Southern Ry. 8 I. C. C. 561, 568.

(d) The action of a railway company in reducing a rate upon complaint of a shipper is not conclusive evidence that the rate was unreasonable before the reduction. Holmes & Company v. Southern Ry. Co., 8 I. C. C. 561, 568.

(e) The act of a railway company in reducing a rate upon complaint of a shipper is not conclusive evidence that the rate was unreasonable before the reduction; but when the traffic manager of that company, after a careful examination of the facts, makes the reduction, that is in the nature of an admission against the reasonableness of the obnoxious rate at the time of the reduction. Holmes & Co. v. Southern R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 561.

(f) Complaint attacked rate charged on brick, carloads, from Cherryvale, Kan., to Duncan, Ind. T., via the Frisco to Chickasha thence Rock Island as unreasonable. Through rate charged 12c, while rate to Chickasha was 8c, beyond 3½c. Subsequently a rate of 11½c was published as a through rate. HELD, rate attacked unreasonable to extent it exceeded 11½c, reparation awarded. Coffeyville Vitrified Brick & Tile Co. v. St. L. & S. F. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 498.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) That prior lower rates were in effect for a long time and that complainants invested money on account of such rates, does not prove that present higher rates are excessive. In re Advances on Furniture, 25 I. C. C. 331, 336.

(h) Showing of a voluntary reduction in rates unsupported by other material and substantial evidence is not conclusive of the unreasonableness of the preexisting rates. American Trading Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 60 I. C. C. 272, 274.

(i) The Commission does not feel that particular reductions in rates should be encouraged during a period when it is considering the question of general reductions in rates, especially in view of the admissions and assertion that such proposed reduction, if allowed to become effective, would mark the beginning of a rate war between certain carriers. Reduced Rates on Coal to Kansas City, Mo., 66 I. C. C. 457, 467.

(j) Cancellation of the minimum car charge of $15 can not be considered as an admission that this charge was unreasonable. Edgar C. Foster v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 723, 724.

(k) A mere showing of a reduction in a rating or a difference between the rating in different classifications affords no basis for a finding of unreasonableness. State Highway Department of Texas v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 741, 742.

(l) Prior to the World War the limited tonnage of crude anthracene transported in official classification territory moved under apparently satisfactory first-class any-quantity rates. Subsequently, at request of shippers, lower c. l. rating established. HELD, this does not indicate unreasonableness in the former any-quantity rates for application on the comparatively few scattered shipments moved prior to the establishment of the c. l. rating. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C. 129, 132.

(m) A mere showing that rates were subsequently reduced is insufficient to warrant a finding of unreasonableness. Walsh Fire Clay Products Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 410, 412.

(n) A mere showing of a reduction in a rating or a difference between the ratings in different classifications affords no basis for a finding of unreasonableness. State Highway Department of Texas v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 741, 742.

(o) The voluntary reduction of a rate does not in itself constitute proof of unreasonableness. Salkeld Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. R., 74 I. C. C., 390.

(p) It does not follow that rates are unreasonable merely because they are subsequently reduced in the course of a rate adjustment. Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Director General, 74 I. C. C., 611, 612.

(q) Third-class l. c. l. rates assessed on c. l. shipments of dried sweet corn from Union, Ohio, to Chicago, Ill., and Kansas City, Mo., found unreasonable to extent they exceeded fourth-class c. l. rates on dried vegetables, vegetable roots, cocoa beans and other similar articles, which lower rates formerly applied on dried sweet corn, were erroneously withdrawn, and subsequently restored. Reparation awarded. Hostetter Co. v. D., T. & C. Ry. Co., 74 I. C. C. 17.

(r) To avoid embargo via the usual route, shipments were specifically routed by shipper over route taking higher combination rate. HELD: Fact that a lower joint rate was subsequently established over the route traversed, does not prove unreasonableness. International Paper Co. v. M. C. R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C. 385.

(st) Rate on bituminous coal from Walford, Pa., to Warren, Ohio, found not unreasonable as compared with lower rate subseqeuntly established. The voluntary reduction of a rate does not, in itself, constitute proof of unreasonableness. Salkeld Coal Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C. 390.

(u) The lack of strict observance of the terms of General Order No. 28 of the director general does not establish unreasonableness. Nor does it follow that rates are unreasonable merely because they were subsequently reduced in the course of a rate adjustment. Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 611.

(v) It is well settled that the subsequent establishment of a lower rate over the route of movement is not sufficient in itself to prove the unreasonableness of the preexisting rate. Zion Institutions & Industries v. E. N. & S. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 375.

(w) The subsequent establishment of a lower rate is not sufficient in itself to prove the unreasonableness of the preexisting rate. Zion Institutions & Industries v. E., S. & N. Ry. Co., 77 I. C. C. 375, 376.

(x) Subsequent voluntary reduction of rate over route of movement does not of itself establish unreasonableness of previous rate. Dubois Mill Co. v. S., P. & S. Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 31, 32.

(y) The commission does not regard the subsequent reduction of rates as establishing unreasonableness. Sprague Tire & Rubber Co. v. Director General, 80 I. C. C. 288.

§33. Surplus.

See Advanced Rates §6 (4)

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Commission in fixing rates cannot assume that the surplus accumulated by a railroad has been derived from unreasonable exactions, and establish low rates with a view of returning it to the public. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 416.

(b) In determining what will be reasonable rates for the future, the Commission may properly consider that under the rates in effect a large surplus has been accumulated in the past, but it should not make rates for the purpose of distributing that surplus to the public. City of Spokane v. N. P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 376, 416.

(c) It seems proper that the accumulation of a surplus should be allowed a carrier to provide for the depreciation of way and structures. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 271.

(d) A railroad in ordinary years should be permitted to show a substantial surplus over and above the payment of a reasonable dividend. This is necessary to provide for interest on capital invested in improvements which will not yield an immediate return, to take care of the element of obsolescence and to tide over years of depression, the amount of this surplus, if estimated in comparison with the dividend of stockholders, must depend upon the relation between stocks and bonds and between value and capitalization. In Re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 271, 272.

§34. Terminal Facilities.
See Terminal Facilities.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Terminal facilities, such as team tracks located on an extensive switching system, are entitled to weight in the consideration of the reasonableness of a rate. Maritime Exchange v. Penn. R. R. Co., 21 I. C. C. 81, 84.

(b) A rate cannot be justified as reasonable on the ground that the carrier maintains an expensive terminal at one of the originating points, if the shipper shows that he provides trackage and terminal facilities in his own plant. Keogh v. M. St. P. & Sault Ste. M. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 73, 77.

(c) Terminal expense is considered in determining the reasonableness of a rate. Hughes Creek Coal Co. v. K. & M. Ry. Co., 29 I. C. C. 671, 678.

(d) While the necessity of absorbing terminal charges may affect the earnings of carriers, it does not determine the reasonableness of the rate paid by the shipper. Lumber between Points in Western Trunk Line, Territory, 38 I. C. C. 370, 375.

(e) The Commission has said there is no requirement of law that the rate shall be the same to all points of delivery in the same industrial district, even when the distance is all embraced within the municipal limits of one city instead of comprising two separate municipalities, as the industrial district of St. Louis and East St. Louis does. St. Louis Chamber of Commerce v. B. & O., 57 I. C. C. 639, 647.

§35. Time of Changing Rate.
See Season Rates.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The public is entitled to demand within bounds upon the continuance of rates when they are once established. Western Oregon Lumber v. S. P. Co., 14 I. C. C. 61, 72.

(b) Carriers in changing rates, minima, or other rules which affect the transporation charges on a commodity moving only at a particular season, should give consideration to the shipping and selling seasons for that commodity, and arrange for such changes to become effective at a time when they will not seriously disarrange or unfavorably affect the movement or sale of the season's output. Hartville Celery Growers' Ass'n v. Pacific Express Co., 14 I. C. C. 590, 593.

(c) Higher rate on copper during the months when lake navigation is closed than that applied when competition by lake carrying vessels is in force is not in itself unlawful. American Insulated Wire & Cable Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 415, 416.

§36. Ton-mile Revenue.
See Supra §11; Evidence §36 §58.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The method of testing the freight rates of a railroad by the rate per ton mile cannot be considered a controlling rule in determining the reasonableness of rates. Business Mens Asso. v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co., (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 41; Business Mens' Asso. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 48.

(b) The rate per ton per mile is not always the measure of a reasonable rate, as that measure, rigidly applied, would make distance alone the gauge for transportation charges; but it affords a valuable basis of comparison for relative rate burdens. Farrar v. Southern R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 640.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) The rate per ton-mile rule brings rates down to the narrowest point of scrutiny, and for that purpose is valuable; but it excludes consideration of other circumstances and conditions which enter into the making of rates, no matter how compulsory or imperious they may be, and it cannot, therefore be accepted as controlling in determining the reasonableness of rates. Cedar Hill Coal & Coke Co. v. C. & S. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 387, 393.

(d) Per-ton-per-mile comparisons are often helpful in reaching a conclusion in respect to the reasonableness of rates, but to take that as the sole test would be a scrutiny from the narrowest viewpoint, which would deny consideration to many other potent and frequently controlling forces which must be given due weight in a proper determination. Muskogee Traffic Bureau v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 17 I. C. C. 169, 173.

(e) On no traffic, except it be lumber, are per ton-mile earnings more helpful in the determination of a reasonable rate than on grain. In Re Investigation of Advances in Rates on Grain, 21 I. C. C. 22, 33.

(f) The Commission has often recognized that rates over a two-line haul may properly exceed what would be reasonable rates for same distance and under same conditions over a one-line haul. Maricopa County Commercial Club v. S. P. Co., 22 I. C. C. 429, 431.

(g) It is fallacious to place reliance upon ton-mile earnings as a basis of rate-making. Much profitable freight is carried which yields the lowest rates per ton per mile. In Re Advances on Coal to Lake Ports, 22 I. C. C. 604, 620.

(h) The revenue per ton-mile in itself is not a sufficient basis for a judgment regarding the reasonableness of the rate which yields that revenue. Inquiry must be made regarding the expense incurred in doing the business. Nebraska State Ry. Commission v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 121, 125.

(i) The rate per ton-mile is but one of many influences in rate adjustments; and in the present case its value as a comparison is somewhat impaired. Ashgrove Cement Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co. 23 I. C. C. 519, 524.

(j) The Commission has often had occassion to comment upon the limited value of the ton-mile test as a factor to be considered in determining the reasonableness of rates. Its rigidity excludes consideration of every circumstance and condition which surrounds the transportation and the making of rates upon the particular commodity to which the test is applied. Its rigid application would make distance the sole factor of transportation charges. Excelsior from St. Paul, Minn., 36 I. C. C., 349, 363.

(k) Rates per ton-mile, which may be compensatory in one section of the country and under given conditions, are not necessarily compensatory for transportation of similar commodities in other sections of the country by other carriers and under different conditions. National Wood Growers' Asso. v. B. G. R. R. Co., 48 I. C. C. 587, 588.

(l) While entitled to reasonable rates from its nearest source of supply, proof that rates from some of the points from which blanket rates are maintained, which are made to meet competition from nearer points, yield lower ton-mile earnings, is insufficient to establish that the rates for the shorter distances are unreasonable or unduly prejudicial. Traffic Bureau, Sioux Falls Commercial Club v. G. N. Ry., 50 I. C. C. 610, 611, 612.

(m) Ton-mile earnings alone are not controlling in determining reasonableness of rates, as competition between shippers, cities, and railroads may often force and justify departures from a mathematical decrease in ton-mile earnings as the hauls increase. Decker & Sons v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 67, 69.

§37. Two-line Haul.

See Evidence §59.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A mileage scale of rates ordinarily yields a much higher rate in proportion for a short haul than for the long one; and when two short hauls are combined it is usually unjust to require the two carriers to accept compensation at the rate per mile applied for the entire long haul. To a degree they are entitled to a higher rate in consideration of the fact that their individual hauls are short. In Re Investigation of Alleged Unreasonable Rate on Meats, 23 I. C. C. 656, 661.

(b) It is just and reasonable to charge a somewhat higher rate for a two-line haul than would be deemed reasonable for a single-line haul of equal distance. Meridian Fertilizer Factory v. A. & S. Ry. Co., 33 I. C. C. 160, 163.

(c) The mere fact that one haul is a two-line haul, as distinguished from another haul, which is a one line haul does not in and of itself justify a higher charge for the two line haul. The reasonableness of a higher charge for a two line haul than for a one line haul is a question of fact rather than a question of law, and depends solely on the facts and circumstances made to appear which show an increased cost or some other fact or circumstances which would warrant a higher charge. Seaboard By-Product Coke Co. v. Director General, 62 I. C. C. 317, 325.

(d) Fact that numerous lines were included in a route of movement is a matter of but slight significance in measuring the reasonableness of rates, where such lines were under Federal control and were being operated as one unified system. Melcroft Coal Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 74 I. C. C. 39, 41, 42.

§38. Value of Commodity.

See Classification §11; Evidence §61.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The value of the goods, the cost of the service, the degree of risk to the carrier, among other considerations, have important bearing in the relation of rates on different kinds of traffic as well as the reasonableness of the rate on a specific article. Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. v. S. P. Co., 6 I. C. C. 488, 515.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) An element of importance in the fixing of rates is the value of the article shipped, since it affects the value of the service to the shipper. When, however, the carrier has established a reasonable rate on a given commodity, it cannot be required to change that rate to accord with the differing values of said commodity produced by complaining shippers. Hafey v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 245, 246.

(c) A rate that nearly approaches the value of the shipment is suggestive of error or inadvertence in the adjustment of such. Beekman Lumber Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 274, 275.

(d) The ad valorem principle of rate-making can never be departed from. In Re Advances in Rates—Western Case, 20 I. C. C. 307, 355.

(e) It is a well-established theory of rate-making, and generally approved by the Commission, that raw material should be carried at a lower rate than its finished product, but there are exceptions to it, such as the rate on wheat and flour, which, because of commercial conditions, are ordinarily carried at the same rate. For many years in Official Classification territory petroleum and its products have been given the same rates; although refined oil is more valuable than crude petroleum there are a number of by-products of petroleum which are of small value, and the Commission is not prepared to say in this case that on the whole the practice of charging the same rate on petroleum and its products is improper. National Refining Co. v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 649, 650.

(f) The fact that a commodity is very desirable traffic from a transportation standpoint, loading heavily, and not being liable to loss or damage in transit, can be handled at the convenience of the carrier, and affords a uniform business, and has a very low value at its point of production, are considerations which call for a low rate of transportation. R. R. Com. of Kan. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 407, 410.

(g) Nature of commodity is considered in determining the reasonableness of rates. Rates on Common Brick to Canada, 26 I. C. C. 129, 131; Meridian Fertilizer Factory v. T. & P. Ry. Co., 26 I. C. C. 351, 353.

(h) Value is not the sole criterion of the reasonableness of a rate. Berry Coal & Coke Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry., 38 I. C. C. 347, 348.

(i) The determination of the price of a commodity at certain destinations by adding to the price at a certain market certain arbitraries over the rates to given junction points, is a commercial consideration which cannot be regarded as controlling in determining the reasonableness of the proposed rates to such destinations. New England Lumber Rates, 43 I. C. C. 641, 646.

(j) Value is only one of the elements that must be considered. Other elemental tests must be applied of which a comparison of revenue under the rates attacked with revenue derived by defendants from the transportation of other commodities under similar circumstances and conditions is one of considerable importance. Anaconda Copper Mining Co. v. Director General 57 I. C. C. 723, 732.

(k) Value is an essential factor of a reasonable rate but is only one of the elements that must be considered. Other elemental tests must be applied of which a comparison of revenue derived from the transportation of other commodities under similar conditions is one of considerable importance. Anaconda Copper Mining Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 723, 731, 732.

(ka) Commission has repeatedly condemned rates on raw material higher than on products manufactured therefrom, but that fact does not in and of itself establish unreasonableness of such higher rates. Crown Willamette Paper Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 78 I. C. C. 273, 277.

(l) Value of commodity is only one element to be considered in determining reasonableness of a rate. French Battery & Carbon Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 344, 346.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Rates should bear a fair and reasonable relation to the antecedent cost of the traffic as delivered to the carrier, and to the commercial value of such traffic. Loud v. South Carolina R. Co. (Conn.) 4 I. C. R. 205.

(b) Rates for the transportation of iron and steel articles from one place to another so great as to prohibit the movement of such articles is unreasonable and unjust, where much lower rates to the latter place from other and far more distant point than the former prevail on such traffic, and the carrier's cost of transportation is much less in the former case than in the latter. (a) In the administration of section 15a it becomes necessary to determine the aggregate value of the railway property defined in that section, and in making this determination the Commission is authorized to utilize the result of its investigation under section 19a, but is required to give to the proper investment account only that consideration which under such law it is entitled to, in establishing values for rate-making purposes. Increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C. 220, 228.

§40. Volume of Traffic.

See Evidence §63.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A variety of practical considerations must enter into the making of freight rates by a railroad company, and determine to a great extent in every instance the question whether such rates are reasonable or not. Railroad companies cannot be required to make freight rates upon mere theories or conjectures. They have to deal with business as they find it. Where, from the very sparsely settled country through which the defendant railroad company operates its lines, outside of the through business which is furnished to it at Wallula by the Northern Pacific Railway, and by the Oregon short line at Umatilla, one of the chief articles of freight on which it must depend is the transportation of wheat to Portland; where, as compared with other roads transporting wheat which pass through more populous communities, in addition to the through freights furnished by their connections, they have a greater variety of local and way freights, and are not compelled to depend, as is the defendant, so largely upon what they receive for the transportation of any one local commodity, such as wheat, and can for this reason alone safely make their rates less on wheat than the defendant; where the wheat hauled by the defendant is transported in sacks —a more expensive mode of shipping and delivering than that usually adopted by other roads with which it has been compared, which is in car loads of solid wheat received from and delivered to elevators along their lines; where the volume of through freights forming a large proportion of the business of the defendant fluctuates very greatly, influenced by causes beyond the control of a remote carrier like the defendant; where the expense of frequent hauling empty cars to reach wheat before it can be received for carriage back to Portland, largely affects the question of the reasonableness of the rate upon wheat shipped from Walla Walla to Portland, Oregon, where shortly after the petitions were filed the defendant, as it has a right to do under the statute, reduced its rate on wheat from Walla Walla to Portland from $6 per ton to $5 per ton or twenty-five cents per 100 weight, and made since April, 1887, large and general reductions on a fine line of freight; and as rates are to a considerable extent so related to each other in the manner in which they are laid for the revenue of a railroad, that the instances are very frequent, the present being one, where a change of rate upon one important article of commerce involves a consideration of the relative rates on other articles, and where the defendant's lines are phenomenally well situated in their relation to through transportation facilities, and the large field of growing commerce and agriculture, and upon the statement in the answer of the defendant that further reductions on wheat rates are intended to be made by defendant as soon as this can be done, and upon the general course of dealing of defendant, as shown in the proofs, that the rate for the next season on wheat will doubtless be further modified—it is ordered that on and after the 15th day of December, 1887, the defendant must cease to charge more than 23½ cents per 100 pounds, or $4.70 per ton, on wheat transported by it over its lines from Walla Walla, in Washington Territory, to Portland, in the State of Oregon, during the present grain season. Evans v. Ore. Ry. & Navigation Co., 1, I. C. R. 641.

(b) In arriving at what is a just and reasonable rate on freight transported by a carrier on a short local line having but a small volume of business, where the cost of transportation is exceptionally great, arising from steep grades, sparse population, and light traffic, these are circumstances and conditions of controlling weight in the making of the rates, and can not be overlooked when a question of their reasonableness is involved; and under such circumstances the fact that an independent pipe line from Titusville to Buffalo transports oil between these points at lower rates than the railroad company, constitutes no just reason why the railroad company should be required to reduce its rates to those of the pipe line. Rice, Robinson & Witherop v. Western New York & Pa. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 298, 301.

(c) On complaint of an unreasonable rate on butter in less than carloads from Lincoln, Kansas, to Denver, Colorado, it appeared that defendant's line between those points runs through a sparsely populated country, furnishing comparatively little business to the carrier, and also that the rate is common to numerous towns of importance at an equal or greater distance from Denver, and is maintained by all the roads extending into that territory; HELD, that the charge complained of is not shown to be unreasonable, nor does the evidence furnish sufficient reason for interfering with a rate established by a number of roads and common to many communities. Lincoln Creamery v. Union Pacific R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 794.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) If a rate remains the same and the cost of service continues the same, an increase in tonnage must produce increased revenue. Commercial Club of Salt Lake City v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 218, 223.

(e) Where an article is shipped both in carloads and less-than-carload lots, the carrier must provide a less-than-carload rate, and cannot confine the movement to carloads. Albree v. B. & M. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 303, 320.

(f) The Commission can not say that because tonnage is less than it would be under lower rates, the existing rates are unreasonable. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. v. L. & N. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 558, 563.

(g) The Commission has said in numerous cases that volume of tonnage is an important element in the determination of reasonable rates; but the Commission has repeatedly held that that element is only one of many that must be considered. Southport Mill, Ltd. v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 154, 162.

(h) While volume of tonnage is an important element in the determination of reasonable rates, it is only one of the many elements to be considered. Car loading, value, earnings, similarity of transportation conditions, and general transportation characteristics of the commodities are other items of importance. Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 64 I. C. C. 81, 84.

(i) While volume of movement is, of course, an important element to be considered in arriving at a reasonable rate, an excessive rate can not be justified merely on account of the fact that movements thereunder are infrequent. The maintenance of a rate that is too high may be one of the causes of which a light movement is the effect. United Verde Extension Mining Co. v. U. V. & P. Ry., 66 I. C. C., 377, 379.

See Blanket Rates §4; Evidence §64½.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) From the point of view of public policy and humanity, considerations such as the profits of the operators and the carriers, the wages and standard of living of the miners and the railway employees should not be ignored in the fixing of rates on coal. Boileau v. P. & L. E. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 640, 647.

§41. Weight.

See Evidence §65.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The cost of the movement to the carrier depends upon the weight loaded into the car. The weight of the car must be hauled whether the contents weigh much or little. The expense of transporting a car containing 20,000 lbs. is not much greater than the expense of carrying the same car if it contains but 10,000 lbs. Montague & Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 17 I. C. C. 72, 74.

(b) The minimum carload weight is a factor in the carload rate, and in contention with the rate per 100 lbs., determines the carload earnings. Any reduction in the minimum weight without an increase in the rate per 100 lbs. would therefore reduce the carload earnings of the carrier, and would be equivalent to a reduction in the rate itself. Georgia Fruit Exchange v. S. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 623, 630.

(c) The total disregard of weight existing under the mileage basis of making rates is here manifestly unfair to the carrier and discriminatory as between shippers. The cost of transportation is likely to vary with some degree of directness with the weight of the object to be transported, and in so far as cost is a factor in rate making, weight must likewise be a factor. This disregard of weight existing under the mileage basis was and is fundamentally wrong and should be corrected. In Re Advances on Locomotives and Tenders, 21 I. C. C. 103, 105.

(d) Weight and distance are two universally recognized fundamental factors in rate making. In Re Advances in Rates on Locomotives and Tenders, 21 I. C. C. 103, 109.

(e) In passing upon the propriety of expressing the rates in terms of net tons instead of long tons the convenience neither of carrier nor shipper is to predominate. The net ton basis is plain and unambiguous, and being perhaps more readily applied than the long ton basis and very generally observed, can not be disapproved as in violation of section 1 of the Act. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Director General, 53 I. C. C. 583, 588.

(f) Proposal to fix a rate on crude gas, and fuel oils, not to exceed 89 per cent of the rate on refined oils, HELD, plan gives emphasis to element of weight, and in determining the proper relationship of the rates, relative values and the nature of the commodities should also be taken into consideration. Pure Oil Co. v. Director General, 56 I. C. C. 218, 222.

RECEIVERS

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Charges by receiver of railroad in relation to interstate commerce business must be reasonable and just; and there can be no discrimination as to rates, charges or facilities for or against two connecting steamship lines. Re Mallory (U. S. Ct. Fla.) 1 I. C. R. 294.

(b) Under the Interstate Commerce Act all charges made by the receiver of a railroad, in respect to such business as falls under the head of interstate commerce, for any services in the transportation of passengers or property, or for receiving, delivering, storing or handling property, must be reasonable and just; and such receiver may not discriminate in his rates, charges and facilities for or against either of two connecting steamship lines, but should give to both equal rates and facilities for trade and travel, for equal service, from all points. Re Petition of C. H. Mallory & Co. v. 1 I. C. R. 294.

(c) It cannot be assumed that a receiver operating a railroad had no power to make a contract for rebate to a shipper, where his lack of authority is not shown. Bayles v. Kansas P. R. Co. (Colo) 2 I. C. R. 643.

(d) A receiver is neither a necessary, nor a proper, party to any action, after his discharge, to reform a contract made with him as receiver. Bayles v. Kansas Pacific R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 643.

(e) The authority of a receiver of a railroad company, who is operating the road, to make a contract granting special transportation rates, will be presumed until the contrary is shown. Bayles v. Kansas Pacific R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 643.

(f) The receiver of a railroad company is not, after his discharge, either a proper or necessary party defendant to an action for a rebate of freight under a contract made by him. Bayles v. Kansas P. R. Co. (Colo.) 2 I. C. R. 643.

(g) The fact of a receivership for a defendant carrier subsequent to complaint should not interfere with the progress of a proceeding brought merely for the purpose of railway regulation. Trammell v. Clyde Steamship Co., 4 I. C. C. 120, 123.

(h) The question, whether property of a carrier in the hands of a receiver appointed after the matters complained of before this Commission are alleged to have occurred, is subject to an order of reparation issued by the Commission, is one to be presented to and disposed of by the courts on proceedings therein for the enforcement of such order. Loud, v. South Carolina R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 205, 206.

(i) The fact, that the property and affairs of a carrier have been placed by a United States court in the hands of a receiver, does not affect the jurisdiction of this Commission under a complaint charging such carrier with violations of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Board of Trade v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 4 I. C. R. 348.

(j) Instructions to a receiver of defendant under the Interstate Commerce Act, upon petition and answer in respect to discrimination. Cutting v. Florida R. & Nav. Co., 4 I. C. R. 424.

(k) Advice and instructions to receivers on application to the court, where ex parte are probably binding only upon the receivers; but where there are parties in interest, and they have their day in court, the advice may be decisive. Missouri Pac. R. Co., v. Texas & P. R. Co., 4. I. C. R. 434.

(l) The recommendation of the majority of the receivers of a railroad will not be accepted by the court as conclusive upon the questions of wage schedules, when such majority is not composed of practical railroad men. Ames v. Union Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

(m) When a court of equity undertakes, through a receiver, the conduct and operation of a railroad, the men engaged in conducting the business and operating the road become the employees of the court, and are subject to its orders in all matters relating to the discharge of their duties and entitled to its protection. Ames v. Union Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

(n) When the schedule of wages in force at the time a court assumes the management of a railroad is the result of mutual agreement between the company and its employes which has been in force for years, the court will presume the schedule to be reasonable and just and any one disputing that presumption must overthrow it by satisfactory proof. Ames v. Union Pacfiic Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

(o) When a court of equity undertakes, through a receiver, the conduct and operation of a railroad, the men engaged in conducting the business and operating the road become the employes of the court, and are subject to its orders in all matters relating to the discharge of their duties, and entitled to its protection. Ames v. Union P. R. Co., (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 619.

(p) An injunction will not be granted to prevent the employes of a railroad in the hands of a receiver from interfering with the property or other employes, since such an action is punishable as a contempt. Ames v. Union P. R. Co., (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 619.

(q) It is a contempt of court to interfere with property in the hands of a receiver, or with men in their employ. Ames v. Union Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

(r) Injunction is a proper remedy to restrain threatened acts of employes of a railroad receiver, which would inflict loss upon the property, and seriously prejudice the interests of the public involved in the regular continuous operation of the road. Arthur v. Oakes (C. C. App. 7th C.), 4 I. C. R. 744.

(s) Equity will enjoin any combination or conspiracy among the employes of the receiver of a railroad, which has for its object and intent the physical injury of the property in the receiver's possession, or actual intereference with the regular, continuous operation by him of the railroad. Arthur v. Oakes, (C. C. App. 7th C.), 4 I. C. R. 744.

(t) Employes of a receiver of a railroad may be enjoined from disabling rolling stock or other property in the receiver's possession, from interfering with its possessions or obstructing its management, and from using force, intimidation, threats, or other wrongful methods against the receiver, his agents or employes, or persons seeking employment. Arthur v. Oakes, (C. C. App. 7th C.), 4 I. C. R. 744.

(u) Employes of the receiver of a railroad may be enjoined from combining and conspiring to quit his service, with the object and intent of crippling the property in his custody or embarrasing the operation of the railroad. Arthur v. Oakes (C. C. App. 7th C.), 4 I. C. R. 744.
